Q. And the Everhart heirs had the same interest that they had in the Katydid culm property?—A. The Consolidated Breaker property is upon the very lot, upon the very piece of ground that the Katydid bank is on; and that lot is owned by the interests named herebefore.

Q. Capt. May, I understand it to be claimed, or at least intimated here, that the letters which you received on the 11th or 12th of April, 1912, notifying you of the claim of these other persons were fictitious; that they were made for the purpose of giving a possible reason for your recalling the contract with Bradley, when the real reason was that this investigation was coming on?—A. That is, that I had those made or that I inspired those?

Q. Well, you have heard the examination ?- A. That is a lie. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will confine himself to proper language.

The Witness. I beg pardon; I am sorry; I forgot myself.

I did not mean to do that.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) I want to show you those letters, and put them in evidence here, and find out who the people are who wrote them. Here [exhibiting] is one dated April 11, 1912. Will you look at that and tell me if that was one of the letters in question?-A. (After examining.) That is one of the letters in question.

Q. What day did you receive that?-A. April 12, 1912.

Q. Before or after you saw Bradley at the station and re-called the contract?—A. This was before I recalled the con-

Q. On the same morning?—A. Yes.

Q. I will show you another letter of the same date, April 11, 1912. As to the letter I have just shown you, by whom is that signed?—A. That is signed by Charles P. Holden.

Q. I will show you another letter of the same date signed "James E. Heckel, administrator." When did you receive that?—A. I received that April 12, 1912.

Q. Before or after you met Bradley at the station and recalled the contract with him?—A. Before.
Q. I show you another letter of the same date signed "Walter S. Bevan, attorney for Charles P. Holden." When did you receive that?-A. I received that April 12, 1912.

Q. Before or after you saw Bradley at the station and re-called the contract?—A. Before.

Q. I have here one dated April 13, purporting to be signed by R. M. Saltonstall, per O. When did you receive that?—A. I received that on April 16, 1912.

Q. Finally, I show you one dated April 19, 1912, purporting to be signed by William Rice Taylor. When did you receive that?—A. That I received April 20.

Q. Do you know the bandwriting of these letters-the signatures ?-A. I do not know. I would not want to say that I know them.

Q. Did you see these gentlemen afterwards and have conversation, and did they recognize that they had sent these letters, or did you hear from them?-A. No, sir. I have not seen them

Q. At all events, these are letters you received upon which you recalled the contract-I mean those dated April 11?-A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I offer these letters in evidence. Mr. Manager STERLING. Mr. President, before that is done, I should like to ask the Reporter to read Judge Worthington's question when he began his statement with reference to these letters, or when he began the examination on this subject.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Reporter will read the question desired.

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. Capt. May, I understand it to be claimed, or at least intimated here, that the letters which you received on the 11th or 12th of April, 1912, notifying you of the claim of these other persons were fictitions; that they were made for the purpose of giving a possible reason for your recalling the contract with Bradley, when the real reason was that this investigation was coming on?

Mr. Manager STERLING. I think, Mr. President, that we are entitled to know on what Judge Worthington bases that statement. There was nothing said on our side intimating that we thought they were fictitious. We have never had any idea but that the letters were actually written. I suggested in the examination of this witness yesterday that they might have been written upon the suggestion of somebody connected with the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., but we never did suggest that they were not written by these parties; and they might have been written by these parties in good faith. There is nothing in the record to the contrary.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Perhaps the word "fictitious" not a happy one, Mr. President, and I will withdraw that; but I certainly did understand the claim to be that in some way these letters were concocted and sent for the purpose of giving an ostensible reason for withdrawing the Bradley contract, when the real reason was that this investigation was coming on. Let me read from page 225 of yesterday's proceedings:

Q. Did you get information from anybody or did somebody tell you that a tip had gone out from the office of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. that they wanted an excuse for withdrawing this contract and for that reason had these letters sent in there?—A. No, sir.

Now, if that is not what it means, I do not appreciate the use of the English language.

Mr. Manager STERLING. I submit that that is not what it means, and I do not think counsel is fair with the question when he undertakes to put that interpretation on it. question followed the testimony proving that all these letters came in there on the very same day and just at that peculiar time when they sought to withdraw this contract which they had submitted to Bradley. I say it is a fair inference that these people from some source of other got wind of the fact that this deal might be closed up, and that it was at the suggestion of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. that they began then to make their claims so they could have an excuse for with-drawing that contract from Bradley. We never did say the letters were fictitious or anything of that kind.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I propose to offer these letters in evidence, and then I propose to bring the persons here who wrote them to see whether the scheme which existed in the imagine.

them, to see whether the scheme which existed in the imagination of my learned friend was in existence or whether they were written in good faith.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Chair understand the manager to object to the introduction of the letters?

Mr. Manager STERLING. We do not object to the letters. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What was the objection? Mr. WORTHINGTON. The objection was to my language about them.

Mr. Manager STERLING. My objection was to the language of Mr. Worthington, in which he said we had intimated that the letters were fictitious; that is, that we had intimated that the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. had manufactured the letters, which is not the case at all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Secretary will read the letters.

The Secretary read the letters, marked "Exhibits C. D. E. F, and G," respectively, as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit C.]

THE BELLEVUE-STRATFORD, Philadelphia, April 19, 1912.

Capt. W. A. Max, Vice President and General Manager Hillside Coal & Iron Co.

DEAR SIE: On behalf of my wife, Elizabeth M. Everhart Taylor, I beg to notify you that she claims an interest in the culm piles on lot No. 46, certified Pittston Township, and that she will be obliged if you will advise her of the status of this property, in which your company has a joint interest.

Very respectfully,

WILLIAM RICE TAYLOR,

[U. S. S. Exhibit D.]

W. A. Max, Esq., Vice President and General Manager Hillside Coal & Iron Co.,

DEAR SIR: Please take notice that I claim an interest in the culm dumps on lot 46, certified Pittston Township, Luzerne County, Pa., by virtue of an option given by the E. & G. Brooke Land Co., also on behalf of my wife, Mary E. Holden.

Yours, respectfully,

CHAS. P. HOLDEN. 625 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, Mass.

[U. S. S. Exhibit E.]

SCRANTON, PA., April 11, 1912.

W. A. MAY, Vice President and General Manager Hillside Coal & Iron Co., Scranton, Pa.

My Dear Sir: In reference to the five twenty-fourths interest in the coal in lot 46 and the culm derived therefrom, I beg to notify you, as administrator for the estate of James Everhart, deceased, that we claim ownership of the above amount and not to dispose of same without our consent. Yours, very truly,

JAS. E. HECKEL, Administrator.

[U. S. S. Exhibit F.]

WALTER S. BEVAN, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELOR, Scranton, Pa., April 11, 1912.

Mr. W. A. May,
Smith and Mill Streets, Dunmore, Pa.

Dear Sir: Having learned that you are about to sell and dispose of the interests you represent in lot No. 46, certified Pittston Township, you are hereby notified that Mr. Charles P. Holden, who owns certain interests in said lot, opposes said sale and hereby protests against the same, and he further notifies you that the sale will in nowise change or affect his interests in said lot, and that the said sale will be made without his approval or consent. You will therefore govern yourself accordingly.

Very truly, yours,

Walter S. Bevan,
Attorncy for Charles P. Holden.

SHAWMUT BANK BUILDING, Boston, April 13, 1912.

Capt. W. A. Max, Vice President Hillside Coal & Iron Co., Scranton, Pa.

Vice President Hillside Coal & Iron Co., Scranton, Pa.

Dear Sir: I have been in conference with Mr. Charles P. Holden in connection with mining operations as conducted by your company upon lot 46, Pittston Township, Luzerne County, Pa., and as one of the guardians of the minor children of John F. Everhart, deceased, I should be glad to be advised under what right your company is mining coal from this lot 46.

Mr. Holden informs me that a sale is about to be made of one of the culm piles on this land, and I hereby notify you that Nina D. E. Jones and R. M. Saltonstall, the undersigned, guardians as aforesaid of said minor children of said John F. Everhart, deceased, claim an interest in said culm pile and give you notice of that fact at this time so as to protect our rights in the premises. We should be glad to hear from you in reply to this letter at your early convenience.

Very truly, yours,

R. M. Saltonstall,

Per O. M. SALTONSTALL,

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Who is Mr. William Rice Taylor, who signed the last letter which was written?—A. I do not know him. I think he is the husband of one of the daughters of John F. Everhart.

Q. You do not know anything of your own knowledge about his standing or business?—A. No; I do not.
Q. Do you know Charles P. Holden, who signs one of these letters of April 11?—A. I do.

Q. Who is he?-A. He is married to a daughter of John F. Everhart, deceased.

Q. Where does he live?—A. In Boston.
Q. Do you know anything about his business or standing?—A. I do not.

Q. Who is James E. Heckel, if you know?-A. He lives in Scranton, and is in business in Scranton.

Q. In what business?—A. He is in the brass business.

Q. Do you know him?-A. I will not say positively that I know him.

Q. Do you know who Walter S. Bevan is?-A. I know him by reputation.

Q. Where does he live?-A. In Scranton.

Q. And what is his business?—A. A lawyer.

Q. And, finally, do you know R. M. Saltonstall?—A. No, sir; I am not acquainted with him.

Q. As a matter of fact-I do not want to repeat, but I want to see if I understand clearly-you yourself had no knowledge of this coming investigation until the matter appeared in the Philadelphia North American of the 21st of April?-A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Had you any suspicion that any such thing was pending?—A. No suspicion whatever.

Q. What, so far as you know, had Judge Archbald to do with the making of this Bradley contract or the recalling of it?—A.

He had nothing whatever to do with it, so far as I know.

Q. In that connection, I should like to ask you what foundation there is, so far as you know, for this statement which I read from the proceedings in this case on page 59:

That-

Referring to the contract-

That was sent to Bradley on one day, and the next day Archbald sees Bradley at the depot and asks him to call that off, that some complications have arisen and they had better stop the negotiations, and also writes him a letter to the same effect, in which he tells him the transaction will be withdrawn on account of certain complications. No one knows what complications were referred to, excepting there had appeared in the newspapers in the meantime this scandal about Judge Archbald's relations with persons who had litigation in his court.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, before the witness answers the question I desire to know from what counsel he is reading.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I am reading from the proceedings in the House the statement made by Mr. Sterling, now one of the managers of the House, as to the facts in this case,

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Does the court think that is proper?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is the question that counsel for the respondent is asking in connection with it?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I am asking, so far as the witness knows, whether or not there is any foundation whatever for that statement which was made to the House as one of the rea-that statement which was made to the House as one of the reasons for impeaching Judge Archbald.

Mr. Manager STERLING. May I see it, Mr. Worthington?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Certainly.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. May I be permitted to say that it is a speech delivered in the House of Representatives by Mr. STERLING. I think to bring it here in this way offends several rules. It offends propriety, Mr. President, as well as the rules of evidence. I need not make any further comment, in view of the intimation of the Chair not to allow the question to be answered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the counsel for the respondent desire to be heard?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I do.

Mr. Manager STERLING. Mr. President, I think in this print of what I had to say in the House the name of Judge Archbald is used instead of "May." I think it is purely a mistake. I do not believe there is any controversy about it at all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the counsel for the respondent desire to be heard on the question?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I do.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Counsel will proceed.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. In view of the objection, Mr. President, which I hardly supposed would come from the managers, I will change the phraseology of the question and put it in a different way. I ask you, Capt. May, whether, so far as you know, Judge Archbald met Bradley at the depot and asked him to call the Bradley deal off?

him to call the Bradley deal off?

A. I know nothing of that character at all.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) And whether, as a matter of fact, when you called it off anything had appeared in the newspapers about the charges against Judge Archbald?

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. There is no objection to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What did the manager say?

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I say we have no objection to that question at all. The Chair apprehended the ground of my objection to the other question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question as originally propounded and objected to was withdrawn and it is not necessary for the Chair to rule upon it.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Now, about the sale of the Du Pont Powder Co., Capt. May, you have been asked about your previous testimony on that subject, and I will ask you whether this occurred. I read first from page 760:

Whether this occurred. I read first from page 700;

Mr. Worthington. What was the date of the negotiations about a sale to the Du Pont Powder Co.?

Mr. May. 1908.

Mr. Worthington. 1908?

Mr. Morthington. And you were willing to sell then, I understand?

Mr. Worthington. And you were willing to sell then, I understand?

Mr. May. No; we would consider it.

Mr. Worthington. You told them you would consider it?

Mr. May. Yes.

Mr. Worthington. Just what you said to Williams when you talked to him?

Mr. Worthkofox. Just what you said to whitams when you taked to him?

Mr. Max. Yes.

Mr. Worthkofox. And you were then, in your own mind, ready to recommend a sale in the interest of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. for $2,000?

Mr. May. Yes, sir. That is, that was only a beginning, you know. Doubtless, Mr. Robertson came to me and wanted to know whether I would recommend the sale of whatever equity we had in it for $2.000, and I told him that I would recommend it. Now, that is the sum and substance of it.

Is that right?-A. That is correct.

Q. And the same thing on page 750, where you were asked this question by Mr. Norris:

But the man Robertson must have known how much it would cost to get your interest before he could make a bona fide offer to anybody else to sell?

Mr. May. Yes. Well, he would believe that whatever recommendation I made would go through.

Mr. Norris. Certainly; and you undoubtedly told him you would recommend $2,000?

Mr. May. Yes.

Is that right?

Mr. Manager NORRIS. Mr. President, before the witness answers the question I desire to object to this form of interrogation of the witness. As I understand, we would not be allowed to call his attention to the testimony unless we had first asked him about the same matter and he had testified differently. Counsel has been asking questions of this witness, reading evidence that was taken before the Judiciary Committee, without any intimation that there is anything different in his testimony now. He reads a lot of testimony and asks the witness if that was true. It seems to me that that is not a proper examination of the witness, particularly an examination—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair was of the opinion that it was done by consent.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I was going to say that it is my recollection that we had quite a discussion about that matter the other day, when we very earnestly opposed reading from this testimony by the manager who called the witness. Now we are cross-examining, and I submit that if it is competent for the managers who call the witness to ask him whether he had not testified at some other place so and so, and then ask, "Is not that true?" instead of asking him to testify here without reference to what he testified to anywhere else and give his present recollection of it, it certainly is much more competent for us on cross-examination to ask him. As I understood Capt. May to testify here this morning with reference to that sale to the Du Pont Powder Co., or attempted sale or negotiation with that company, he did not say explicitly as to what I have asked him here what he did say before the Judiciary Committee. I therefore submit that on cross-examination we have the right to ask him or any other witness about any matter as to which he has testified here or anything he said anywhere else which would bring out more fully what his recollection is on the subject or what it was at some prior time.

Of course, it is a very vital matter here. The great contention here on the part of the managers has been, as we see by the articles of impeachment and by what they have said here, that the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., which meant, in the first instance at least, this witness, offered to sell their interest in this Katydid dump to Judge Archbald, or to somebody who was associated with him, for $4,500, and that was a great deal less than that interest was worth. Of course, it is important in that connection to show that in the negotiations with the Du Pont Powder Co. he had offered to sell that same interest for less than that amount. I do not recollect that when Capt. May testified this morning he stated the matter as explicitly as he had stated it twice before the Judiciary Committee. I have already asked him without objection, and he has answered, that on one occasion during his examination before the Judiciary Committee he did say that he had recommended this sale for $2,000 to the Du Pont Powder Co. I asked him on another occasion during his testimony, but he did not repeat it when the objection was made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the counsel through?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Yes.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The previous testimony of this witness can be read to him for two purposes. As the Chair recollects the rule, it can be read for the purpose of contradicting him or for the purpose of refreshing his memory. If counsel examine the witness as to a matter and his testimony is not clear on the subject, the Chair would hold that then, after having attempted to elicit testimony in the usual way without success, he could go further and call attention of the witness to what he had previously testified to by way of refreshing his memory. The Chair thinks that is the correct rank.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. That is entirely satisfactory. The Chair thinks that is the correct rule of law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would suggest to counsel for the respondent that it is perfectly competent for him to put questions as to the particular matters that he desires to have testimony upon without reading from the questions and answers, but in either case the Chair would rule that counsel has the right to bring out the testimony if it is either for the purpose of calling attention to the fact that the witness had previously made conflicting statements or for the purpose of refreshing his memory upon some things in regard to which he is not now clear.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. As the witness distinctly answered when I read the first question and answer from the record, I will not press the second one.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Why was it when you had been willing in 1909—you say it was in that year that the Du Pont Powder Co. transaction occurred--A. 1908 or 1909, do not remember which.

Q. Why was it that when you were willing to sell the interest of your company then for $2,000 you asked Judge Archbald or Williams $4,500? You say prices had gone up.—A. Prices had gone up; we had measured the bank; and we thought the price that I named to Judge Archbald would cover our royalty and any profit that we ought to have.

Q. You were asked, as I recollect, something about how the Du Pont Powder Co. were willing to pay $10,000 for this whole property in 1908 or 1909, and the other parties were going to get it for $8,000, and then it was Robertson that came down on his price and you had gone up on yours?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether or not when Williams first came to you, or when you first talked to him about the price, you fixed any different price than $4,500?—A. I have a distinct recollection that I first named $6,000.

Q. And he did not accept that?-A. No, sir. Q. What would you say now as to that interest after all that has taken place and has led you to investigate this matter?— A. If we were sure of not getting into litigation we would be glad to sell for $4,500.

Q. Your interest in it?-A. Yes, sir; our interest.

Q. To go back one moment, at the time that you received the letters which were read a few moments ago, when you recalled that contract from Bradley, did you consult anybody in reference to that before you took that action?—A. Before recalling it?

Q. Yes,—A. My recollection is that I discussed it with our

Q. Who are the attorneys whom you consulted?-A. Warren, Knapp, and O'Malley. Q. And they are attorneys in Scranton?-A. In Scranton.

Q. Do you remember-

The WITNESS. Excuse me, as to question before the last one that I answered, would you be kind enough to read that question to me again—the one before the last?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Reporter will read as requested.

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. What would you say now as to that interest after all that has taken place and has led you to investigate this matter?

The WITNESS. Now, I want to add to that: I said that if we were free of litigation, and if we were sure that we would not get into any difficulty with the owners of that property, so far as the consolidated breaker and our own holdings upon that lot are concerned. I want to make sure of that.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) You say if that could be fixed, you would now be willing to sell for $4,500?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What value would that Katydid dump be to your company if you had the whole interest-owned it clear and free-and nobody else had an interest of a claim to any part of it?

Mr. Manager STERLING. We object to that as immaterial.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is the question? The Reporter read the question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks that is relevant.

A. I never considered it in that light. I would not feel at liberty now, without careful consideration, to say what it would be worth to us.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Now, in view of that answer, I will ask you, if I may be permitted, about your testimony which was given before the Judiciary Committee in answer to a similar question from a member of the committee, Mr. McCov. Do not answer, Captain, until we see whether there is any objection to the question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The counsel offers this for the purpose of refreshing the memory of the witness?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Page 734; pretty near the top.

Mr. McCoy. Assuming that the title had been perfectly clear and that all the titles could have been gotten into the ownership of the Hillside Co., would it have had any considerable value then as a proposition to be worked?

Mr. Max. The value was doubtful. If you will allow me to explain, we have a breaker called the Consolidated breaker, situated, I would say—well, just about the distance Mr. Rittenhouse said yesterday—and we have next to that breaker a washery that I think was erected since this matter came up.

Mr. McCoy. You mean the Hillside Co. when you say "we"?

Mr. May. Yes; the Hillside Co.—always the Hillside Co. when I say "we"—that is, in this case. We had a culm bank made, or the Hillside I will say, has a culm bank made, from the operations of the Consolidated breaker. As I told you early in the session, the mine is on fire. Our culm bank is right over that fire. Our culm bank is on fire also. Now, it is to our interest to get that coal away from there as quickly as possible. We have been embarrassed for the want of water. We went to a great deal of expense—I wish I had the figures—to get water to wash our own bank, and then we have not enough. We are on the ragged edge there very often. Now we want to get that bank out of the road. We do not care to invest money in another bank that might burn while we were getting our own out of the road, when we could buy it later, probably, when values were more, and when we could get something out of it.

A. That is correct. I remember that now.

A. That is correct. I remember that now.

Q. You remember you so testified; and is that your present opinion about it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the fire still burning? The WITNESS. In the mine? Mr. WORTHINGTON. Yes.

A. It is. No, I beg pardon; we put it out; we just put it out a month or two ago.

Q. When you were having these negotiations with Judge Archbald for the sale of the Katydid culm dump was there any plant for washing at the Katydid dump?-A. Not at the Katydid dump.

Q. How much would it have cost to put a proper plant there to wash the dump?—A. It would cost, I estimated, to wash that bank itself, about $10,000—that is, to erect the plant.

Q. What would the plant be worth as soon as the dump was washed away and the work finished?-A. It would be practically scrap.

Q. Capt. May, something has been said about Mr. Robertson wanting to buy this dump. I think in a letter which has been read here from Robertson to you, written in the summer of 1911, if I remember correctly, he said something about wanting to sell to or buy from the Hillside Co.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember that?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was that?—A. He wanted to know whether we wanted to buy his dump. That is in the letter.
Q. Did you seek to buy?—A. No; we did not seek to buy, for the reasons named that you read from the—

Q. That I read a few moments ago?—A. Yes, sir.

- Q. Had the fact that Mr. Robertson was connected with this proposed sale anything to do with your recommending it?-A. Yes, sir. Q. What was that?

The Witness. You mean which sale?
Mr. WORTHINGTON. The sale you were negotiating with Mr. Williams and Judge Archbald?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew, I presume, that while they were negotiating for your interest they were also negotiating for the Robertson interest?—A. The principal reason that I favored it we because I wanted Mr. Robertson to get his money out of it.

Q. Why? What were your feelings toward and relations with Robertson?—A. They were very friendly.

Q. Now what were the reasons you gave as to why the company sold the Florence dump or sold part of it or its interest in it?-A. We wanted to be free

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I respectfully submit to the Chair that where the counsel for the respondent has gone fully into a matter and the witness has given his testimony at length, it is a useless consumption of the time of the Senate to repeat it.

Mr. SIMPSON. We have not gone into it at all

Mr. WORTHINGTON. It is the first question I have asked him about the sale of the Florence dump.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. You predicated your question by saying to the witness you said so-and-so about it.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. He said something about it when examined by one of the managers. I have not asked him anything about it. I want to elaborate that a little and to show that the conditions surrounding the sale of the Florence dump were almost precisely the same as those which obtained in the case of the Katydid dump.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will answer the question.

- Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) I want to know what were the particular circumstances or what was the situation that induced you to recommend the sale of the Florence dump of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co.?—A. There were conflicting interests
- Q. Conflicting interests as to what?-A. Conflicting interests as to what should be done with the bank, and in order to get out of the trouble ourselves I was glad to recommend its saleour interest in the sale.

Q. You mean your interest in the property?-A. In the bank. Q. You did recommend it, and the sale was made?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long ago was that?-A. In 1910.

Q. About a year before you recommended the sale of the Katydid dump or agreed to recommend the sale of your interest in the Katydid dump?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I notice you said "our company" to Mr. Sterling—"the Hillside Co. has not sold any other dumps." Was there any other particular thing you had in mind when you said "our"?— A. I meant the Hillside Co.

Q. On the letterhead you were using here the other day I noticed that the names of a number of companies appeared on the same letterhead?—A. Yes.

Q. How were they connected with the Hillside? You have all their names on the one letterhead?-A. I am vice president and general manager of three or four companies.

Q. Are they all subordinates of the Erie?-A. They are.

Q. Had these other companies been selling dumps?-A. The Pennsylvania Coal Co. has sold some fills-the old gravity roadbed. They were fills made with culm, and they have been disposed of.

Q. Is there any difference between a fill and a dump in regard to the question whether the railroad company will sell it or not?—A. Each transaction is surrounded with certain circumstances, and I can not remember what they are.

Q. It is a fact, then, that this other company, situated like the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., of which you are an officer, and another subordinate company of the Erie, has sold a number of culm dumps?—A. Has sold gravity railroad fills, but no dumps, as we call them.

Q. When these negotiations with Judge Archbald were going on, and when you agreed to sell to Bradley, what did you know, if anything, about the price that Conn was to pay?-A. I did not know.

Q. Did you know what Bradley was to pay, except what he was to pay to you?—A. No; I did not.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. That is all, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there anything further that the managers desire from this witness?

Mr. Manager STERLING. Yes; Mr. President.

Redirect examination:

- (By Mr. Manager STERLING.) Mr. May, you understood at that time that the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. owned a half interest in the Katydid dump, did you not?-A. That is, not a half interest in the dump; in the coal from which the dump was made.
- Q. Well, you claimed that you owned a half interest in whatever merchantable coal was made or was gotten out of the dump, did you not?—A. We had a royalty interest in the coal to be won out of the dump. I think, Judge, if you will allow me, that I know what you refer to. I did make the statement there-one-half interest in the bank. That was a mistake. I meant to say a half interest-
- Q. Now, wait. You did testify before the committee that you had a half interest in the bank, did you not?—A. I said that; but that was an error.

 Q. How many tons of merchantable coal in that bank did you estimate at that time?-A. That we estimated?

Q. Yes; or your engineers.-A. The estimate that our engineers made at the time that this letter refers to, in April, 1911—they gave the report to me of 55,000 tons of material in the entire bank—that is, in the entire culm bank.
Q. Let me refresh your recollection. This is immediately following what Mr. Worthington read to you. Mr. SIMPSON. Page what?

Mr. Manager STERLING. Page 734. Mr. Thomas asked the question-

Mr. Thomas. I want to ask a question. Capt. May, as I understand, the Hillside owns a half interest in fee simple in the culm bank, does it?

And you answered-

That is right.

A. Yes; but there was the error that I want to speak of-

Q. Then Mr. Thomas asked you-

According to your estimate, how many tons of coal did that bank contain? I do not care for you to go into the buckwheat and other kinds of coal, but what is the total number of tons of coal that the bank contained, according to your estimate?

Mr. Max. Well—my own estimate?

Mr. Thomas. Yes; the estimate you got from your engineers?

Mr. Max. One of the engineers estimated 80,000 tons of material in the bank, and, based upon the test of our general inspector, he found there would be in the bank 556 tons of pea—

Mr. THOMAS. I do not care anything about that. I want the total Mr. May. Forty-five thousand two hundred tons of merchantable

You made that answer, did you not, when you were asked those questions?-A. I made that answer.

Q. I read from the record:

Mr. Thomas. What is the total number of tons of coal that you estimate in that bank?

And did you not reply-

Forty-five thousand two hundred tons of merchantable coal. Mr. THOMAS. Of merchantable coal? Mr. May. Yes.

Those questions were asked you, and you made those answers, did you not?-A. Yes; I made those answers, but 42,000-

O. Wait until I finish .- A. I beg your pardon.

O. I again read:

Mr. THOMAS. And of that amount the Hillside Coal Co. would own one-half in fee simple?
Mr. May. They would.
Mr. THOMAS. That would be 22,500 tons?
Mr. May. Twenty-two thousand six hundred tons.
Mr. THOMAS. Twenty-two thousand six hundred tons?
Mr. May. Yes, sir.

Those questions were asked you, and you made those answers?-A. I made those answers, but

Q. Wait until I finish .- A. All right.

Q. I again read:

Mr. Thomas. Independent of the cost to get it on the market, what was that coal worth on the market?

Mr. Max. I do not know.

Then at the bottom of the page:

Then at the bottom of the page:

Mr. Thomas. I am not asking for the net amount. I am asking you what that coal brings on the market. What would it sell for a ton if it were shipped to Philadelphia or New York? What would it bring on the market there—such coal as there was in this culm bank? How much per ton would it bring on the market there?

Mr. May. I can give you the prices here. I think that will answer your question. This is a copy of the voucher from the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. to the Sterry Creek Coal Co., Scranton, Fa., for the month of August, 1911, paid on the 65 per cent basis, being the price at the breaker: Egg coal, 3.1468; stove, 3.1538; chestnut, 3.3081; pea, 1.7812; buckwheat, 1.4093; rice, 0.70; barley, 0.45.

Those were the prices which you quoted from a statement of Those were the prices which you quoted from a statement of an account which you had with the Sterry Creek Coal Co. at Scranton for coal which your company had sold to them, were they not?-A. I had that statement there giving-

Q. It was the price at which you sold the coal there in Scranton, was it not?—A. I had a copy of the Sterry Creek voucher there, and I read the prices off that voucher. Q. "At the breaker." What does that mean—the price at the breaker?-A. It means just what it says; the price on board cars at the breaker.

Q. That is, at the mine?—A. At the mine.

Q. Was there egg coal in this dump?-A. No, sir.

Q. Any stove coal?—A. No, sir. Q. Any chestnut?—A. There was a mixture of these three sizes in the dump, but not merchantable coal.

Q. Was there any chestnut coal?-A. Not that we could market.

Q. Any pea coal?-A. About one-half the pea coal could be marketed, probably.

Q. Buckwheat coal?—A. The buckwheat could be marketed.

Q. Well, there was buckwheat coal there?—A. Yes. Q. And rice coal?—A. Yes.

And barley?-A. Yes.

O. So that the coal that you would expect to find in that Q. So that the coal that you would expect to find in that dump was pea size, buckwheat size, rice size, and barley size?—
A. Will you repeat that, please?
Q. The grades of coal that you would expect to get out or that were actually there in the dump were pea size, buckwheat size, rice size, and barley size?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And that coal was worth in Scranton the price that you stated there in that examination, was it not?-A. It was worth that price at the consolidated breaker. I would like to explain, if you will allow me, that that was all based upon the theory that we owned an undivided half interest in the bank. That was based upon the theory that Robertson & Law had abandoned the property. I did not say that that was my theory, but based upon that theory that would be the result.

Q. What would be the result?—A. The values that you give there if there were 42,500 tons of coal in the bank.

Q. What difference does it make, Mr. May, as to the price of the coal per ton whether you owned a half interest or whether you owned all in the dump?—A. It would not make any difference as to the price of the coal, but it would make a difference as to the price we would charge for the property. That is, whatever right we had in it would make the price; and that was based upon the theory that the culm bank had been abandoned and that we would have an undivided half interest in the

Q. And your estimate, as you gave it there gave to the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. 22,600 tons of coal?-A. Based upon that theory.

Q. And the kind of coal that was in the dump was worth the prices which you stated there, ranging from $1.78 to 45 cents per ton?-A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. And it would average more than a dollar a ton in value right there at the dump, would it not?-A. No; it would not average that.

Q. Well, what do you think it would be worth, on an average?—A. On an average I could not tell you. I would have to have the proportion of sizes that would come out of the

Q. Even if it were all barley coal, if that is the smallest size?—A. That would be 45 cents.

Q. Barley coal was worth 45 cents. Even if it was all barley coal, at 45 cents, the coal in your half would be worth four or five times as much as you were charging Judge Archbald and Williams for your interest in the dump, would it not?-A. No. sir.

Q. Well, how much would it amout to-22,600 tons?-A. You have not taken out of it at all the cost to put it on cars

Q. How much would it amount to-22,600 tons, at half a dola ton, would be $11,000, would it not?-A. Just about $11,000; yes, sir.

Q. Let us look at these letters here which you received immediately after you sent this contract to Mr. Bradley. On that day, the 11th of April, Mr. Holden came into your office, did he not?-A. He did.

Q. And he gave you verbal notice not to sell his interest in the dump?-A. Yes, he did; I think he did.

Q. Yes; and you told him you were about to sell it?-A. I did

Q. And talked with him about this transaction you were having with Williams?—A. As near as I recall it—

Q. Just answer my question, please. You talked with him about the transaction you were having with Williams?—A. No; not with Williams. I talked with Holden—

Q. I know, but you talked with Holden about the transaction you were about to have with Williams?-A. Yes.

Q. And you told him you had made out a contract and had sent it to Bradley for his approval?—A. No; because the contract had not yet been sent. Q. Had you not made it out at that time?-A. Yes; it had been made out. It was on my desk.

Q. You sent it on the 11th?—A. I sent it on the 11th; yes.

Q. And you had the contract there?-A. Yes.

Q. And even after Holden notified you that he had an interest in there you sent the contract?-A. I did.

Q. Then Holden went to New York that day, did he not?-A. He did.

Q. And he wrote you a letter notifying you not to sell his interest?-A. He did.

Q. That is Exhibit D.-A. Yes.

Q. And then Mr. Bevan, as attorney for Mr. Holden, wrote you a letter the same date, April 11?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which gave you the same notice that Holden had given you when the contract was lying on your desk there, before you had sent it to Mr. Bradley?—A. Yes.

Q. What effect did those letters have upon you in having you recall the contract after you had sent it? If you sent it after Holden had already given you the notice, why did those letters influence you?—A. The very fact that I recalled it showed what effect they had upon me.

Q. Why did not the verbal notice given you by Holden have some effect and thus prevent you from sending it, if these letters from Holden and his lawyer had any influence on your conduct in that transaction?—A. It did have an influence upon That is what made me call it back-those letters.

Q. But you sent it out after you knew Mr. Holden's claim, did you not?-A. Yes; I did.

Q. Here is a letter from James A. Heckel, administrator for the Everhart estate, notifying you they had an interest. You got that, did you?—A. I did.

Q. It did not have any influence on your withdrawing it, did it?—A. It did.

Q. What is the date of that?—A. April 11. Q. You knew before that that the Everharts had an interest and you were paying a royalty right along on their interest?-A. Royalty on sizes above pea, but not on sizes be-

Q. Were you manufacturing any coal in the colliery below pea size?-A. We were.

Q. You knew they had just the same interest in the dump that they had in the colliery, did you not, the dump having been created from the operation of the colliery?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you not know that?-A. They had no interest in the colliery.

Q. Why do you say that they had no interest in the col-They had an interest in the land, did they not, on which the colliery--A. They had an interest in the land.

Q. Yes; and the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. had an interest if the land?-A. Yes.

Q. And the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. based its title to an interest in the dump on the fact that they had an interest in the land?-A. No. sir.

Q. On what did they base it?-A. The interest the Hillside Co. had in the bank was only a royalty interest. I have said that here several times.

Q. It was an interest in the coal, was it not?-A. It was a royalty interest in the coal.

Q. And it arose from the fact that the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. owned an interest in the land, did it not?-A. No; not necessarily.

Q. Not necessarily? Why would it not?-A. Because they also had the right to take the coal from the entire lot, lot 46, in which the Hillside had an undivided half interest. They sublet that to

Q. Why did they not have a right to take the coal from that

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I submit that the witness should not be interrupted in the midst of an answer. Let him finish. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Let the witness finish his

The WITNESS. The Hillside Co. sublet that at an increased royalty to Robertson & Law. Therefore the Hillside only had a royalty right in the coal that could be won from that bank.

Q. (By Mr. Manager STERLING.) It was based on your interest in the land, was it not?-A. No, sir.

Q. How could you lease anything if you did not have an interest in the land?-A. We had an interest. I hate to take up the time, but we had the right from the other interests, by a letter, to mine that coal.

Q. From what other interests?-A. The other undivided half interest. And based upon that we had a right to the coal. Whether it was a fee right or not is for the lawyers to determine. We sublet that to Robertson & Law, and the royalty that we were to obtain from the coal was what we were to get for our right.

Q. And the Everhart interest was based on the same sort of a claim, was it not-that they had an interest in the land?-

A. No. Their interest—yes; that is true in one sense.
Q. Of course it is true. There is no use to try to—
Mr. WORTHINGTON. I object to any such remark being made to a witness

Mr. Manager STERLING. The witness has answered it, and let us stop right there.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Let the witness complete the reply.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. May I ask whether the President heard the remark made by Mr. STERLING to the witness? If not, I should like to have it read, to see whether the Chair rules that it is proper to address the witness in that way.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What was the particular

Mr. WORTHINGTON. It was referring to the witness, practically telling him, as a matter of fact, that what he was saying was not true, as I understood it.

Mr. Manager STERLING. I did not say anything like that to the witness.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I ask to have it read. Mr. Manager STERLING. Let us have it read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The stenographer will read the question or remark of the manager. .

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. And the Everhart interest was based on the same sort of a claim, was it not—that they had an interest in the land?—A. No; their interest—yes; that is true in one sense.

Q. Of course it is true. There is no use to try to—

Mr. WORTHINGTON. "There is no use to try to." you did not finish, but you were telling the witness practically that there was no use in trying to conceal something.

Mr. Manager STERLING. My purpose was that I wanted to insist that the witness had answered the question already.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. At least the manager had not uttered the word which the counsel anticipated he would utter.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I stopped him.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair can not assume what was the intention of the manager.

Q. (By Mr. Manager STERLING). Did this letter from Mr. Taylor have any influence on you in publishing your recall of the Bradley contract?—A. No, sir.

Q. It was not written until the week after the Bradley contract was withdrawn, was it?-A. Yes, sir; it was written afterwards.

Q. On the 19th. This letter from Mr. Saltonstall was written on April 13, and it was received on the 16th?-A. It was afterwards.

Q. That was after you had withdrawn the contract, was it not?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the only notice you had before you withdrew the contract was the one from Holden, and you had that before you sent the contract out—the verbal notice—did you not?—A. Oh, no. I had from Mr. Heckel, the administrator

Q. Wait, now. You had the verbal notice from Holden before you sent the contract out, did you not?-A. That is correct.

Q. Then you got one other letter-and just one-after you had sent it out and before you got it in, did you not?-A. I received three letters.

Q. Listen to my question. After you had sent the contract to Bradley and before you got it back, you received just one letter?-A. No; I can not agree to that.

Q. What three did you get besides the Holden claim?-A. Oh, I only received the Heckel letter outside of the letter from Mr. C. P. Holden and his attorney. Now I understand you.

Q. You do not mean Heckel-that is, the Everhart interest?-A. James Everhart.

Q. Outside the Holden notice you just got the Heckel notice, this administrator of the Everhart estate?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Everhart estate you knew had an interest in it, because you had been paying them a royalty for years, had you not?-A. Not an interest in the land, but in the bank.

Q. Mr. May, as a matter of fact, these notices had not a particle of influence in your action in rescinding that contract with Bradley?—A. Yes; they did.

Mr. Manager STERLING. I think that is all.

Cross-examination:

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) When did you consult your counsel or the counsel of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. about the effect of this notice?-A. I think it was on the morning of the That is my recollection.

Q. Did you state which member or members of the firm you consulted ?-A. Judge Knapp.

Q. Of the firm you mentioned?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he still living?—A. He is.

Q. You said, I understand, that the interest of the Everharts or the relations between you and Everhart were represented by a letter?-A. That is tradition, that it is represented by a letter.

Q. I ask you if this matter is complicated by that letter having become lost?-A. The letter is lost; that is, we can not find it, and therefore it must be lost.

Q. In reference to your testimony before the Judiciary Committee, which has just been read from pages 734 and 735, where you said that you had a one-half interest in this dump, and you say that was a mistake, I want to ask you whether you did not almost immediately correct it before the Judiciary Committee by what you said on page 737? I read from page 737, question by Mr. FLOYD:

If you agree to sell-

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I submit the proper way is to ask the witness if he did correct it, and then, if the witness says he did not correct it, it is proper to read from the That has been the ruling of the Chair, as I underrecord. stand it.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I do not understand that the Chair made such a ruling. It would be very imperfect.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks if the testimony of the witness was read from the book it will be competent for further reading in the same direction. So that the Chair may not be misunderstood, he will state that in the absence of the fact that it had been so done the Chair would rule otherwise.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I read from page 737:

Mr. FLOYD. If you agree to sell it to Mr. Williams for a certain price and Mr. Williams in turn makes a contract to sell it to this railroad company that you had been supplying with fuel, do you regard it as good business to sell it at this reduced price when you might have sold it directly to the railroad company for this advanced price?

Mr. Max. But we did not own the bank. We only had an undivided interest. We only had an interest in the royalty arising from the coal taken out of that bank.

Mr. FLOYD. That does not answer my question.

Mr. Max. We had not the authority to sell that bank, or rather the right, I mean.

Mr. FLOYD. You owned in fee simple an undivided half interest in it, did you not?

Mr. Max. Yes; an undivided one-half interest; but it had been made by Robertson & Law under an arrangement with us, and equitably the bank belonged to Robertson & Law.

[To the witness.] Is that what you testified to there?-A. That is correct.

Q. In reference to what you have been asked about the sale of the Katydid and the value of the different kinds of coal in that dump. I think you said that amount on the cars at the dump would be worth $12,000; was it?-A. That was only a supposition. The judge asked me whether if it were worth 50 cents a ton it would be worth so much on the cars and I said yes.

Q. Then you said something about that not taking into account the cost of putting it on the cars?-A. That is correct.

Q. What would be the cost of putting it on the cars which would bring the figure up to $12,000?-A. If you take the average of our washers, it would be about 45 cents a ton.

Q. That would be the cost of putting it on the cars?-A. Yes,

Q. And if you sold it for 45 cents a ton you would not make anything?-A. No, sir.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. That is all, Mr. President.

Redirect examination:

Q. (By Mr. Manager STERLING.) Just one question. The 45cent coal was the barley size, was it not?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. What proportion of it was barley ?- A. This is a guess. About 31 per cent I should say.

Q. Then more than two-thirds of it was ranging from 70 cents to $1.78 a ton?-A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Manager STERLING. That is all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will retire. The Sergeant at Arms will call the next witness.

Am I excused?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Do the managers desire to have the witness remain in attendance?

Mr. Manager STERLING. I think we are not prepared to excuse him now. If he can see Manager Clayton after adjournment he will probably find whether he can be excused permanently or not.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I may say, Mr. President, I think we will excuse him, but I desire to have a brief conversation with my brother managers before finally determining that matter. I say this for the benefit of Col. Worthington now. I should have said Mr. Worthington, for he stripped himself of his military title yesterday.

COURT OF COMMERCE CALENDAR.

Mr. ROOT. Mr. President, I submit a request and ask that

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New York makes a request, which will be put in the form of an order if it is desired. The Secretary will read it.

The Secretary read as follows:

I ask for the production and identification of the printed trial list or calendar of the Court of Commerce in March and April, 1911.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair suggests that the Senate will act upon it as if put in the form of an order.

Is there objection to the adoption of this order?

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, may I be permitted to make a statement? The managers determined in the preparation of this case to produce the document which the Senate desires. I may say that I do not think an order of the kind is necessary, for we can inform the Chair that it is our purpose and that we will produce the document specified in the request which is preferred by the Senator from New York, Mr. WORTHINGTON. There will be no objection from us, Mr. President. We have been trying ourselves to get that document.

Mr. ROOT. I withdraw the request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The managers will call the next witness.

DEPOSITION OF E. J. WILLIAMS BEFORE WRISLEY BROWN.

Mr. Manager STERLING. Mr. President, when the court adjourned last night the question was pending as to the admission of the examination of Mr. Williams before Mr. Brown at Scranton, Pa. We offered it and Mr. Worthington objected. We desire now to renew the offer and hear from Mr. Worthington if he has anything further to say in regard to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will desire to hear from the counsel for the respondent on that subject and the Chair will also hear the managers.

Mr. Manager STERLING. Mr. President, we believe that this is entirely competent and we believe that it is highly important. The paper which we offered in evidence yesterday and | for which we again renew our offer is Exhibit 7, the examination of Edward J. Williams, at Scranton, Pa., March 16 and 17 of this year, made by Mr. Wrisley Brown, representing the Department of Justice, who was sent there by the Attorney General to investigate this case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will desire the manager to state the ground upon which he offers it, whether it is for the purpose of contradicting the witness; and, if so, upon what ground he claims the right to contradict the witness; or whether it is because of the fact that the managers claim they have been entrapped by the wkness.

Mr. Manager STERLING. We have two grounds, Mr. President, on which we insist that it is competent to have it read to the court. In the examination of Mr. Williams yesterday the counsel for the respondent referred to it at two different times and in two different ways. In one instance he asked the witness if Mr. William P. Boland had not conducted most of the examination and had not asked most of the questions at the time the deposition was taken. The fact is, and the deposition itself will disclose the fact, that Mr. Boland did not ask the questions. I think in only two or three instances did he ask questions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not rule that the questions themselves can not be proven, but, as the Chair stated yesterday, he wants to hear from the managers or the counsel now on the question whether not only the questions but the answers should be put in evidence.

Mr. Manager STERLING. Yes, sir; we desire to have all of it put in. The first reason for it is to rebut the assumption made by the counsel on the other side and to rebut the testimony of the witness in which he answered that William P. Boland had asked the questions. The deposition will disclose that Boland asked three or four questions and suggested in several instances what should be asked the witness.

Now, we think it is competent to have it go in to disprove that fact for the reason that Mr. Worthington's contention in this case largely seems to be that there was a conspiracy in which Mr. William P. Boland was a party to inveigle the judge into this transaction. So we think that it all ought to go in for that purpose. But it is competent on another ground, and it is very important on another ground.

In numerous instances the statements made by this witness, when examined by Mr. Brown, of Scranton, contradict the answers which were drawn out of him on cross-examination by counsel for the respondent. We think this is entirely proper where counsel on the other side draws answers from this witto contradict statements he has made before, and especially statements in an examination on the very same subject and statements made under oath. We think it is perfectly competent to offer the entire deposition for the purpose of contradicting this witness as to those parts of his cross-examination where he contradicted his former statements.

I believe it is the universal rule of evidence that where a witness makes statements on the stand contrary to statements he had made prior to that time his former statements, in whatever form they may be, especially when they are sworn to, when they relate to the same case and are evidence given in the same case, are competent to contradict the statements of that witness. This deposition here is replete with evidence contradicting statements made by Mr. Williams yesterday on cross-examination drawn out of him by counsel for the respondent.

May I call the attention of the court to some of these instances?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the honorable manager will permit the Chair, it may hasten the consideration of the question. The Chair ruled on yesterday that if the managers in offering conflicting testimony to that furnished by their own witness would state that they had been entrapped by the witness-in other words, that they had relied upon his testimony in the confidence that he would testify as he had previously testified—they would be entitled to show that he had sworn differently on a former occasion. But unless the managers do state that, the Chair will hear further argument on it from

Mr. Manager STERLING. I will say further, Mr. President, that in the statement which I just now made I confined myself to the fact that it contradicted many statements made by the witness on cross-examination. It is true that it does contradict many statements he made on the stand before this court in direct examination.

I am aware of the usual rule that we could not put in documentary evidence or a deposition to contradict our own witness. But there is an exception to that rule. I think this is a case where the exception should be applied and where it has already been applied by the ruling of the Presiding Officer in this case, because Mr. Manager Webb was allowed to refer to the examination before the Judiciary Committee. That was before the cross-examination had occurred. He asked the witness if he had not made statements then contradictory to his statements here, and the Chair admitted it for the reason that he was an unwilling and a hostile witness.

Of course, we expected this witness to testify to what he had testified to before. We were deceived in the testimony of this witness. It was on the ground that he was hostile and adverse, as I understand it, that the court permitted Manager Webb to ask him on direct examination as to whether he had not made statements to a contrary effect in his examination before the Judiciary Committee.

So we say now that this is a different examination on the same subject by Mr. Brown at Scranton, and that it contradicts this witness both in the statements he made here on direct examination and in the statements he made on cross-examina-They are entirely different. He made answers that we were not expecting from this witness. He made answers, too, after he had conferred at least twice with the counsel on the other side of this case and after he had made the other deposi-

We submit that it is perfectly proper, and we submit that this court can not get the truth of this case unless it knows what this man Williams said and what he gave out to be the truth before he was called here before this court, when these things were fresh in his mind.

I submit that it ought to be the purpose of every investigation of this kind that the body to determine the rights of this man should know the truth and all the truth, and it is on that ground, to get at the simple, plain facts in this case, so that we may know all, that we ask that the testimony of this witness Williams be read in full as it was taken at Scranton.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President—

Before the counsel pro-The PRESIDENT pro tempore.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I do not wish to offend against the suggestion made by the Chair yesterday—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The manager will permit The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The manager will permit the Chair to make a statement, and possibly it may make the argument unnecessary.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I submit to the suggestion of the Chair very cheerfully.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair simply wishes to know whether it is the purpose or design of the managers to offer this deposition upon the ground that they have been deceived by the witness and entrapped by him?

Mr. Manager STERLING. Yes, sir; that is one of the reasons, will say, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Very well. The Chair stated yesterday if it was offered on that ground, then, in the opinion of the Chair, it would be competent evidence. The Chair still adheres to that, but will hear from counsel for the respondent on that proposition.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I wanted to know if I might be permitted—I do not know whether I can be permitted—to reply to Col. Worthington, I beg his pardon, I should have said Mr. Worthington, after he has concluded, or if I shall submit my observation now. I wish to be directed by the Chair as to the time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has substantially indicated his purpose to rule with the managers, but if the managers desire it they will be further heard on the proposition.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Then I suppose unless the Chair's present mental attitude is disturbed by the argument of the counsel for the respondent he will adhere to his ruling. If he should indicate a change, then I shall ask to be heard.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If after hearing from counsel for respondent the view of the Chair is in any manner changed he will hear further from the managers.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, so far as the order of argument is concerned, as the Chair announced the other day, ordinarily the objector makes his objection, the opposing side answers it, and the objector has the conclusion. I was about making the opening, but the Chair permitted the managers to state what they have to say about it, and I can now reply so far as I am concerned.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The attitude of the Chair is that upon the proposition as presented the evidence would be admissible to the extent that it contradicted the evidence which the witness had given in either direct or indirect examination, upon the distinct ground that relying upon evidence previously given by him they had put up the witness and had been entrapped by him in the fact that he had given evidence to the contrary upon this examination.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Let me, in the first place, recur to what happened which first drew attention to this testimony or deposition, or whatever it may be called, that Williams made to Mr. Wrisley Brown. This is what took place on page 191 of the record of these proceedings:

Q. Who was present when Mr. Brown took your testimony?—A. William P. Boland and Wrisley Brown,
Q. William P. Boland was there all the time, was he not?—A. William P. Boland was the man who asked all the questions.
Q. I was going to ask you whether he did not conduct the examination, largely?—A. Yes; he conducted the inquiry.

My proposition, in the first place, would be that the managers would have the right to show how many questions were asked by Boland and what was the proportion of those to the questions asked altogether. If it is proposed to do that I have no

Now, as to the situation in reference to putting in this deposition en bloc, I certainly submit, Mr. President, it is un-precedented. If the managers wish to show that as to certain matters in his statement before Wrisley Brown under oath he stated things which were contradictory to what he testified here, either on the direct examination or on the cross-examination, for the purpose of showing that he is not to be believed on his oath; if they put a witness on the stand whom they believed to be a credible witness and were surprised by the testimony, and want to show that he has made statements to the contrary elsewhere, for the purpose of showing that he ought not to be believed on oath, they have that right, not to have the whole deposition put in, but such parts of it as they think will have that effect. If they offer it for that purpose we have no objection.

If, on the other hand, the purpose is or it should be intended to use anything that was said there for the purpose of refreshing the recollection of the witness or for the purpose of showing merely that he has made different statements for the purpose of letting the Senate get at the truth of the matter, the first principle of the law of evidence and the first principle, it seems to me, of common justice is that Mr. Williams must be brought here and must be asked whether he did not testify thus and so before Mr. Wrisley Brown, so that he may be afforded the opportunity which every witness is afforded when it is undertaken to show that he made contradictory statements to the court and to see what explanation he has to make of them.

Now, if it is proposed to read the whole deposition without reference as to whether it bears upon anything that was said here or not, or without having Mr. Williams brought here, it seems to me that that can not be done and that it would be very unfair to Judge Archbald, as well as unfair to the witness himself.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the proposition be simply to disprove the statement of the witness as to the number of questions which had been asked by Mr. Boland, the Chair would undoubtedly rule that only the questions themselves could be put in evidence for the purpose of contradicting him to that extent. But the Chair thinks it is a well-recognized rule, which is found in every jurisdiction, that where a witness is put up by a party and where the party who offers him as a witness has had previous information from him as to what his testimony would be, and upon his examination he gives testimony contrary to that former testimony, the party offering that witness can prove the former statements of the witness if he will state in his place that he has been entrapped by him; that relying upon the evidence that he had given and that he would again testify as he had previously done, they have put him up and they have been entrapped and surprised by the fact that he then testified to matters in conflict to what he had previously testified.

The Chair thinks that is a well-recognized rule of law. It is not for the purpose of impeaching the witness, though it might be called one class of impeachment. It is for the purpose of negativing testimony which he had given and which the counsel otherwise would be bound by, they themselves having put him up.

It is upon that ground alone that the Chair made the same announcement yesterday he now makes. If the managers yesterday had stated that they offered the deposition on the ground that they had been entrapped, the Chair would then have ruled that, in the opinion of the Chair, subject, of course, always to the judgment of the Senate, the deposition could be received.

The Chair will add, so far as the bulk of this testimony is concerned, unless it is in the main, generally as well as specifically, upon the particular points in which the counsel have been entrapped, that only such parts of it as do relate to that contradiction in his testimony would be admissible; but on the statement of the counsel, that they have been thus entrapped, the Chair is of the opinion that to that extent it is

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Let me add just one word, Mr. Presient. I concede that, if the managers offer the evidence for the purpose of showing that they had been entrapped, it would be competent, and we would not object, provided it is put in for the purpose of showing that the witness is not to be believed on oath. That is the reason it can be admitted. I submit now, Mr. President, that statements made under such circumstances by any witness in an ex parte examination up there in Scranton, when Judge Archbald was not present and was not represented by counsel, can not be used as evidence of facts testified to here as against him. No evidence can be used as against Judge Archbald except that which was taken when he had an opportunity

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Counsel for the respondent will, of course, have the right to recall the witness and require him to make such explanation of the apparent conflict as is proper and consistent with his information; he is not debarred from that privilege; but the Chair will respectfully suggest to the counsel that the purpose of that rule is not to impeach a witness and establish the fact that he is not to be believed on oath, because, if that were the case, a party could never put up an adverse witness. He is entitled to the testimony of this witness, and he is entitled to have the truth ascertained from the testimony of the witness and from his conflicting state-ments, so far as that can be done by the court. The Chair has said "the court," but he means any court, not simply this one. The Chair thinks that is a correct rule of law and that is the principle upon which it is based.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. That what was said to Mr. Brown in Scranton is evidence against Judge Archbald?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is for the purpose of negativing the testimony which he has now stated in conflict with his previous statements. That is the purpose of it. The counsel will recognize the fact that a party when he puts up a witness is bound by his evidence, and when that witness gives evidence which is adverse to the interest of the party putting him up, but has previously made statements upon which the party relied when he put him up, the party is entitled to introduce that evidence for the purpose of negativing the effect of that unfavorable testimony. That is the extent to which, as the Chair understands, the purpose of the introduction of the evidence is limited.

Mr. SIMPSON. Does not the Chair think that the managers are obliged, even under that rule, to pick out the evidence which they say caused them to be entrapped and not put in in bulk a deposition of 28 pages, for that is what they are undertaking

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair stated that unless the evidence was contradictory of evidence which the witness had given, unless it was either specifically or in the main generally so, of course, that which was not so classified would not be admitted. The Chair is not able to say whether there are matters in the paper which go beyond that limitation. If there are, the Chair thinks the suggestion of counsel is correct and that that additional matter should not be admitted.

Then there is but one way to do. Mr. SIMPSON.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would suggest that as that is a voluminous document, possibly it had better be withheld-there is ample time for it-for the purpose of having counsel examine and determine what part is strictly contradictory and what is not.

Mr. Manager STERLING. There are 53 pages. The evidence which contradicts Mr. Williams's statement is scattered through the entire deposition. Of course we do not care to take the time of the court to read any part of that except that which does contradict it, and, at the suggestion of the president, we will withhold it and pick out those parts that we want to read and submit them at some other time.

Mr. SIMPSON. And advise counsel for the respondent which they are, so that if there is any objection to them it may be brought to the attention of the President.

Mr. Manager STERLING. I did not catch the suggestion.

Mr. SIMPSON. And advise counsel which are the parts which the managers think ought to be read under the rule, so that if there is any objection to their reading any part of them the President and the Senate may know of it and rule upon it in due course.

Mr. Manager STERLING. We will submit it to counsel for the respondent.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, may I inquire when the argument on the admissibility of this testimony will be concluded? The counsel for the respondent yesterday claimed the right to conclude, and the Chair very kindly-and I thank him for it—made a very valuable suggestion, which should guide the counsel. It seems to me that the Chair has been very indulgent and has prolonged the debate between the Chair and counsel for the respondent. I wish to know if the debate upon this proposition is to be continued to-morrow, or if when we indicate, in response to the suggestion of the Chair, what we think is admissible, that will conclude the debate, and the Chair will then declare the deposition or the paper admitted to evidence without any further debate on the question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair did not desire to discriminate against the managers. He decided in favor of the managers, and did not suppose that any further argument would be desired on that side. Of course, if an issue is hereafter raised as to which part of the paper is admissible and which part of it should be excluded, then the same rule will apply as to the continuation of the discussion, and certainly both sides shall have full right to be heard upon it. Chair only now puts it upon the ground that he has decided the paper admissible so far as it contains the matter in ques-

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I so understand. I think that so far as the matter now stands the argument has been concluded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempere. It has been.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, the other day, in the opening of this case, Mr. J. A. Richardson was subpensed as a witness on behalf of the managers of the House of Representatives, and service was made upon him, according to the return, as I have been informed, by the Sergeant at Arms of the A telegram has been received here at Washington-I have forgotten exactly by whom, but it was called to my attention-containing a request on the part of Mr. Richardson that he be notified when his presence would be required. He was notified yesterday by wire. I had the clerk of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives send, at my instance, a wire to Mr. Richardson informing him that he must be here to-day. He is not here; and we wanted to examine him at this time for the orderly conduct and presentation of the case. I shall, therefore, ask for an attachment. First, I will ask if the Chair-and I rather think in a matter of this sort that is the proper course-if service has been made upon Mr. Rich-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed by the Assistant Sergeant at Arms that this witness is ill and in a hospital in New York, consequent upon a stroke of paralysis, and that the officers have not been permitted to serve him.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I should not insist upon an order of attachment if that statement could be made to the Senate under oath, that from reliable information the deponent believes-and he will state the facts upon which he founds that belief-that this witness is ill and detained by the circumstances which have just been stated by the Chair. shall not, however, now ask for the order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair suggests that the application for the order be postponed until to-morrow, as the officer from whom this information has been secured and who endeavored to make the service is not now immediately in the Capitol Building, but the information will be definitely given the managers to-morrow.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I can say, then, that the managers will adopt the suggestion made by the Chair and will let it take that course.

Mr. Manager STERLING. Mr. President, in the event the witness is sick and can not appear, we shall offer the deposition of his evidence that was made before the Judiciary Committee in lieu of his testimony here. I do not know whether or not there will be any objection to that by counsel.

Mr. SIMPSON. When we get that far we will decide that,

Mr. STERLING.

I may say, Mr. President, there will be no necessity to call the stenographer who took the testimony. If we agree that it shall be read, it may be read from the printed book. disagree, we shall still agree that the printed book shows it with substantial accuracy, so that you may have no more trouble about it.

Mr. Manager NORRIS. May I ask the counsel whether, since we have another witness who is in the same condition, that will apply to Witness Watson?

Mr. SIMPSON. That will apply to any witness whatsoever.

Mr. Manager STERLING. It will not be necessary to call the stenographer in any case where we can agree that the printed testimony shall be subject only to such objections as the stenographer's testimony would be subject to.

Mr. SIMPSON. Precisely so, sir.

The manager in examining a witness has the right to confine him within the limits of the interrogation which he desires to submit, but the witness certainly must have the opportunity either before the direct examination concludes or under cross examination to explain fully any answer which he may make.

Q. (By Mr. Manager HOWLAND.) Mr. Brownell, are you acquainted with Judge Archbald?—A. Slightly, sir.

Q. Where did you first meet the judge?—A. I first met Judge

Archbald in Washington shortly after the organization of the Commerce Court, when I was present in the courthouse, and together with other members of the bar was presented by the Chief Justice to Judge Archbald in common with the other justices of the Commerce Court.

Q. Did you have any correspondence or have you received any letters from Judge Archbald?—A. On the first day of August, 1911, I received a note from Judge Archbald, bearing date of July 31, to which I made a reply on the date of its receipt. I have had no other correspondence with him.

Q. I hand you a paper writing and ask you whether or not that is the note which you received from Judge Archbald on the date you mention?-A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Manager HOWLAND. I will ask to have the letter read by the Secretary, and then I will offer it in evidence. I do not know what exhibit it will be, but it will be the next consecutive number

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read the paper marked "Exhibit 19," as follows:

DECEMBER 6.

DEAR SIR: Permit me to inquire whether you are to be in your office on Friday of this week and at what hour other than between 2 and 3 it would be convenient for you to see me. I am to be in New York that day and may desire to call and see you for a few minutes.

Yours, very truly,

R. W. ARCHBALD.

The Secretary. On the front page is the stamp:

Erie Railroad, August 1, 1911. Vice president and general solicitor.

Mr. Manager HOWLAND. Mr. President, I offer that letter in evidence and ask to have it marked.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The letter just read is in evidence.

Q. (By Mr. Manager HOWLAND.) Did you reply to that letter from Judge Archbald, Mr. Brownell?-A. Yes, sir; on August 1.

Q. I will hand you a paper writing and ask you to identify it if you will. [The paper was handed to the witness.] What is that paper writing?—A. It is a carbon copy of the letter I wrote to Judge Archbald on the date of August 1, in reply to the one which has just been read.

Q. Written by you or dictated by yourself in reply to that?-A. It was dictated by myself. It bears the initial of my stenographer, and the original was signed by me.

Mr. Manager HOWLAND. I now ask to have the letter

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the letter.

The Secretary read the letter, marked "Exhibit 20," as fol-

[U. S. S. Exhibit 20.]

AUGUST 1, 1911.

Hon. R. W. ARCHBALD, Scranton, Pa.

Dear Sir: I have just received your favor of yesterday. Unless prevented by something now unforeseen, I will be at my office all day Friday and shall be glad to see you at any time convenient for you which you may designate. If equally convenient for you, I would suggest some time between 10 and 12 a. m., or, if you have no other engagement for that hour, I would be very glad to have you lunch with me at the Railroad Club, which is in this building, at 1 o'clock.

Yours, very truly,

Mr. Manager HOWLAND. I now offer the letter in evidence and ask to have it marked the proper number as an exhibit.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That will be done. Q. (By Mr. Manager HOWLAND.) Mr. Brownell, did Judge Archbald keep the engagement which you made with him in this correspondence?-A. I do not understand that I made an engagement by the correspondence.

Q. Did Judge Archbald meet you at your offices at the time which you suggested?-A. I did not receive any further word or message from Judge Archbald, but he called at my office during the forenoon of Friday, August 4.

Q. What did Judge Archbald say to you when he called?—
A. I can only give you my best recollection of the substance. I can not undertake to state the language of the conversation.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, do I understand the counsel to assent to this proposition as being the law-it is the law in some of the States of the Union, if not in all of themthat where a witness has appeared before a court, has been duly sworn, examined, and cross-examined by the person accused or by the person entitled to cross-examine him, if the witness is dead or is beyond the jurisdiction of the court it is quite competent to introduce his testimony given in the former court proceeding? I understand that proposition to be agreed to.
Mr. WORTHINGTON and Mr. SIMPSON. No! No!

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Of course, the testimony is subject to legal exceptions. That rule applies only to legal testimony.

to legal exceptions. That rule applies only to legal testimony.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will rule on that question when such evidence is offered.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I was not asking the Chair to rule upon it. I was only asking, for information, if the counsel for the respondent assented to that proposition.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I will state to the managers that I have assent to it. It may be that as to any testimony they do not assent to it. It may be that as to any testimony they may offer we will not object to its going in, but if we do, it will be on the ground that we do not object to the testimony getting before the Senate because we think it states the facts; but if the question of law should arise as to whether they have any right to use testimony taken before the Judiciary Committee, we shall probably want to have that matter settled by the Presiding Officer or by the Senate.

The managers will call their The PRESIDENT pro tempore.

TESTIMONY OF GEORGE F. BROWNELL.

George F. Brownell entered the Chamber.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (to the witness). Give your name and address to the Secretary.

The Witness. George F. Brownell, 50 Church Street, New

The witness having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager HOWLAND.) Mr. Brownell, where do you reside?—A. New York City. Q. What is your business?—A. I am a member of the New York bar and am a railroad official.

Q. What railroad are you connected with?-A. Principally with the Erie Railroad Co.

Q. What official capacity do you have with the Erie Railroad Co.?-A. Vice president and general solicitor of the Erie Railroad Co.

Q. Where are your offices in New York City?-A. 50 Church Street

Q. What relation does the Erie Railroad sustain to the Hillside Coal & Iron Co.?—A. That of stockholder.

Q. What relation does it sustain as to whether or not it is a majority stockholder or controls all the stock?—A. It is the owner of substantially all of the capital stock.

Q. How about the officers of the Hillside and the Erie; are they interlocking officers?—A. A number of the officers of the Erie Railroad Co. are also officers of the Hillside Co.

Q. On or about August 4, 1911, did the Erie road have any litigation in the Commerce Court of the United States?—A. At that time there were two cases on the docket of the Commerce Court. I will say

Mr. Manager HOWLAND. That answers the question. Mr. SIMPSON. The witness has a right to explain it so as to make it clear. Mr. Manager HOWLAND. The manager is asking the questions just now. There will be plenty of opportunity to explain all of these questions in due order. Mr. SIMPSON. I submit, Mr. President, when a witness is answering a question he has a right to complete his answer so as to make it clear to the Senate what his answer is, and the manager has no right to interrupt him in making a clear statement as to what his answer is. If the witness gets beyond that point, of course, the manager has the right to interrupt him.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I desire to make a remark, with your permission. If the counsel wishes to arrest the examination, if counsel objects to the question asked by the manager or to the conduct of the manager, the rules of the Senate, as I understand, and of this court require him to address the Chair, and through the Chair make known his objection, and not by injecting these "side-bar" remarks that are common to a courthouse, but, I am glad to say, are uncommon in the practice of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will rule that the manager has the right to conduct his examination in his own way and confine it within the limits of his questions if he desires to do so, and that then the witness shall, before he leaves the stand, have full opportunity to explain any answer he has made. Q. What did he say, to the best of your recollection?—A. Judge Archbald said, in substance, that he was interested in an endeavor to clear up the title to certain coal property near Scranton or Moosic, Pa.; that the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. had or claimed some interest or claim, as I understood, of a disputed fractional character to this property; that negotiations had been had with Capt. May, the then general manager of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., for the acquisition of this claim or interest of the Hillside Co.; that no reply had been receivedno final reply-and that he understood that the matter had been referred to the New York offices; that he was in the city, I understood him to say, in connection with other matters than court duties, and that he had called for the purpose of ascertaining where the matter was. My recollection is that he said-

Mr. Manager HOWLAND. Go ahead, if he said anything

The Witness. My recollection is that he said that he did not know any other of the New York officers of the company except myself, and so had taken the liberty of asking me if I could tell him who would have charge of the subject matter.

I said to Judge Archbald-

Q. Wait a minute. I was about to ask you what you said to Judge Archbald in reply to this preliminary statement of his. Now, go ahead .-- A. I said to Judge Archbald that while I was counsel for the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. I was not an executive officer of that company and had nothing to do with its business operations; that Mr. G. A. Richardson was the sole vice president at that time of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., and was the official to whom Capt. May reported; that Mr. Richardson would probably know of the matter or at least would know who would have it in charge.

Q. That is what you told him?-A. In part. I further said to him, according to the best of my recollection, that if he desired I would introduce him to Mr. Richardson. The best of my recollection is that I volunteered that myself, and that it was not asked.

Q. Now, if you will allow me to ask you another question, Mr. Brownell: After you had at some considerable length explained to Judge Archbald the fact that you were not an executive officer, what did you do?—A. I offered to introduce him to Mr. Richardson if he so desired. He said that he would be glad for me to do so. I went with him into the office of Mr. Richardson.

Q. If you will allow me, did you introduce him to Mr. Richardson?—A. I introduced him to Mr. Richardson.

Q. What took place in your presence after you had introduced him to Mr. Richardson?—A. Very little; I left almost immediately afterwards. I did not remain during the conversation. I had a slight conversation-

Q. I think that answers the questionconversation with Mr. Richardson at the time I introduced the

Q. I ask you to relate what took place while Judge Archbald, Mr. Richardson, and yourself were present after you had introduced him to Mr. Richardson?—A. To the best of my recollection I said to him, in substance, that Judge Archbald said that he had had, or that some one had had, negotiations with Capt. May in regard to some coal property or this coal property-I do not remember whether or not at the time I had a description of it-and that he desired to know who had the matter in charge and to obtain some definite answer. Mr. Richardson said that he recalled having had a conversation with Capt. May upon the subject and that he would talk with Judge Archbald. Thereupon I left, and I do not know at all of the conversation that occurred between them.

Q. And Mr. Richardson was the man who had charge of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. matters and was the immediate superior to Capt. May in that company?—A. He was the sole vice president, his superior, and did have charge under the president.

Q. Oh, under the president?—A. Yes. Q. Will you kindly give us, Mr. Brownell, the title of the two suits which you say were pending in the Commerce Court on or about August 4, 1911?—A. As nearly as I can recollect, without referring to monographs the title of the two out referring to memoranda, the title of one of the cases was "The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. et al."—the "et al." meaning a number of other railroad companies—"against the Interstate Commerce Commission."

Q. Do you remember the number? Was the number 38? Does that suggest anything to you?-A. The one to which I now refer to identify it was the one commonly known as the Differential Fuel Coal rate case, and was not an appeal from a decree of the commission, as I now recall, and there were no intervening parties. In that way I may distinguish it from the other.

Q. What was the other ?-A. The other was The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. et al. against the Interstate Commerce Commission, and there had intervened, in addition to the railroad companies as petitioners, Arbuckle and Jamison as two partners under the name of the Jay Street Terminal and the Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal Co. There also intervened—and it appeared in the title in the Supreme Court and in the Commerce Court—one other party—— Q. Now, Mr. Brownell, those two cases

Mr. WORTHINGTON. He has not finished describing the

Mr. Manager HOWLAND. Excuse me, I thought he had

The WITNESS. You asked me for all the parties and I was trying to the best of my recollection to give them. There was simply one more intervenor, the Federal Sugar Co.

Q. You had immediate charge of these matters in the Commerce Court and argued the cases there?-A. There were, I think, six attorneys of record, but I bore the laboring oar there in that case and in the Supreme Court.

Q. There and in the Supreme Court, both?-A. Yes, sir; for the railroad company. Other counsel represented in argument the intervening parties.

Q. When was the argument submitted in the Baltimore & Ohio case?-A. The differential coal-rate case, which was argued by counsel for the Baltimore & Ohio Co., was argued in the Commerce Court in May, probably the 15th or 17th of May, upon the motion of the Government and the Interstate Commerce Commission to dismiss the complaint for want of equity and the motion on the part of the petitioners for a temporary in-

Q. Was that in May, 1911?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Federal Sugar Co. case was the other case, was it not?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is sometimes referred to in common parlance as the Lighterage case?-A. I have heard it in these proceedings referred to as such, but whenever so referred to it is the same that I refer to as the Federal Sugar Refining Co. case.

Q. Have you, since you introduced Judge Archbald to Mr. Richardson and retired from the room, had any correspondence with Judge Archbald, or have you had any conferences or conversations with him?-A. No correspondence or communication, written or oral.

Mr. Manager HOWLAND. I think the counsel for the respondent may take the witness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness is with the counsel for the respondent.

Cross-examination:

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Can you tell, Mr. Brownell, when the case which Mr. HOWLAND referred to as the lighterage case was first taken into the Commerce Court-when the petition there was filed-and there could have been anything of that case to get on the trial list?-A. My recollection would be the 1st or shortly before May, 1911.

Q. At all events, there was no such case there on the 31st of March, 1911?-A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether in the conversation you had with Judge Archbald, either when he was with you or when you and he were with Mr. Richardson, anything was said about Capt. May in reference to complaints against him, or the reverse?-A. I have no recollection of anything in the nature of a complaint against Capt. May, sir.

Q. Do you remember anything complimentary to him being said?—A. To the best of my recollection, in Mr. Richardson's office, a remark was made by Judge Archbald, or some reference to Capt. May, which was in the nature of a complimentary remark.

Q. Do you remember——A. I can not recall what it was,

Q. At any time when you were with Judge Archbald, when you were either in Mr. Richardson's office or your office or on the way there, can you remember whether there was any reference to Judge Archbald's position in the Commerce Court?— A. No. sir.

Q. Or to any cases that were pending or might be pending there?-A. I have not the slightest recollection of any.

Q. Did Judge Archbald ask anything of you except to tell him who was the man who had charge of the matter he was inquiring about?-A. That is all, sir.

Q. Had you heard this case, which we now speak of as the lighterage case, referred to by that name before you heard it was so called in these proceedings?—A. I do not recall having

Q. It was not the common name of it?-A. Among counsel and those interested we have been accustomed to speak of it as the Federal Sugar Refining Co. case. It has had some discussion under that title.

Q. So far as you know were there any papers in it which were backed "lighterage case" or in which the word "lighter-age" was used in the title?-A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall whether you saw that case on the trial list of the Commerce Court at any time?—A. I have no recollection of it. I am not at all clear, sir, that I have ever seen the trial list of the Commerce Court. I think that would be attended to by some of my office force.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. That is all, Mr. President. Mr. Manager HOWLAND. That is all, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there any further ques-

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I submit the question I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska asks that a question be propounded to the witness. The Secretary will read it.

The Secretary read as follows:

Q. Did Judge Archbald, when he called at your office, represent himself as a partner in the proposed purchase of the coal property or as a friend or attorney for the purchaser?

A. No, sir; he did not represent himself in either of those specific characters. He stated, as I recall it, that he was interested in the clearing up of this property, and, to that end, in the acquisition of the interest or claim of the Hillside Co., concerning which negotiations, he stated, had been under way with Capt. May. The nature or extent of that interest on his part was not stated; I mean the nature or extent of the interest which he stated he had.

Mr. Manager HOWLAND. No further examination.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness may retire.
Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, this witness may e discharged finally. We do not apprehend that we will have be discharged finally. We do not apprehend that we will have any occasion to recall him.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He is discharged. The managers will call the next witness.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON, Call Mr. W. L. Pryor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Sergeant at Arms will call Mr. Pryor.

TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM L. PRYOR.

William L. Pryor, being duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager NORRIS.) Where do you reside?-A. Seranton, Pa.

Q. What is your occupation ?-A. Manager of the Scranton Autopoise Co.

Q. How long have you resided in Scranton?-A. Twenty-six years.

Q. Are you acquainted with Judge Archbald?-A. I am.

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. E. J. Williams?-A. I am,

Q. How long have you been acquainted with Mr. Williams?-A. Probably not more than two years; two years or two and a half.

Q. Where were you, Mr. Pryor, and in what business were you engaged on or about the 5th day of September, 1911?-A. I was engaged as accountant for the Marian Coal Co. in preparing their case before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Q. In preparing what?-A. In helping to prepare their case before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Q. In what capacity? Were you an atterney?-A. No, sir; I was preparing the statistics.

Q. You were an accountant, then?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were an accountant, then ?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You were working for them at that time?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you see E. J. Williams on or about the 5th day of September?—A. I did. He was a daily visitor.
Q. I hand you exhibit No. 7, Mr. Pryor, which has been referred to in the evidence here as the silent party agreement, and I ask you if you have seen that before?—A. Yes; I have.

Q. When and where ?-A. In the office of W. P. Boland; about the date, the fore part of September.

Q. Who was present at that time?—A. Mr. E. J. Williams, Mr. W. P. Boland, and the stenographer, Miss Mary Boland, and myself.

Q. The instrument bears your name, does it not?—A. It does.

Q. Did you sign your name to it?—A. I did. Q. As a witness?—A. I did.

Q. To the signature of Mr. Williams?—A. Yes, sir. Q. Did you see Mr. Williams sign it?—A. I did.

Q. Were you there when the instrument was prepared?—A. was in the room; yes, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Williams there?-A. He was.

Q. By whom was the instrument dictated?-A. It was prepared, I believe, jointly by Mr. E. J. Williams and Mr. W. P. Boland; dictated to the stenographer.

Q. You mean each one dictated parts of it?-A. Yes, sir. Q. After it was written out by the stenographer what was done with it?-A. A copy of it was handed to E. J. Williams and it was read to him.

Q. Who read it to him?-A. I believe it was Mr. W. P. Boland.

Q. He read it over in the presence and hearing of all of you?-A. Yes. Q. And then what was done with it?-A. Mr. Williams sat down at a table and signed two copies, if not three. Q. Mr. Pryor, are you sure he signed more than one copy?-A. I am almost sure that I signed two copies, and therefore it would signify that he signed two.

Q. How many copies were taken?-A. That I am not prepared to state.

Q. They were carbon copies, taken on the typewriter?-The original and a carbon; yes, sir.

Q. What did Mr. Williams do with the copies he took?-That I could not say.

Q. Did he leave them there?-A. That I could not answer. Q. Do you know whether he took them away with him or not?-A. No, sir.

Q. I hand you respondent's Exhibits A and B, Mr. Pryor, and ask you to examine them, which you can do in connection with the original exhibit, and tell me whether they are the copies the carbon copies—that were kept by Mr. Williams?—A. (Examining.) That I could not answer.

Q. Mr. Pryor, what was said, if anything, there in the presence of Mr. Williams and in his hearing by anyone in regard to who was the silent party referred to in this instrument that Mr. Williams signed?—A. I believe—
Mr. WORTHINGTON. One moment.
Mr. Manager NORRIS. Just wait, Mr. Pryor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. One moment.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, I believe you held, and the Senate has held, that this paper itself is competent evidence, notwithstanding that it was not shown, and there is not any evidence tending to show, that Judge Archbald had anything to do with it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Counsel will please speak

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I say, as I recollect, it was held by the Senate, by the vote, on the first day of our taking testimony here, that this silent-party paper was admissible in evidence, or at least should be introduced here, although no evidence was offered tending to show Judge Archbald knew of it or authorized it. But I do not understand that that ruling went so far as to hold that the parties who may have made statements about Judge Archbald would be competent witnesses against him, or that any statement made against Judge Archbald by Williams or Pryor or perhaps other persons who were in Boland's office would be competent and proper evidence in this matter.

Mr. Manager NORRIS. Mr. President, you will remember what the testimony of Mr. Williams was in regard to this silent party, and a great deal of time was taken up trying to have him admit certain testimony that he had given before the Judiciary Committee. If this witness heard him state there or in his presence who the silent party was, it seems to me it is perfectly proper and competent for the witness to tell it as explaining not only the instrument itself but Williams's testimony, wherein we claim he contradicted himself in his testimony here.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will inquire whether the testimony before the Judiciary Committee was in conflict with what the witness testified to here on that subject?

Mr. Manager NORRIS. I think the testimony there—at least, parts of it—were in conflict with each other, and it was certainly in conflict with the testimony here. I think the Chair will remember that in the examination conducted by Mr. Webb, Mr. Webb called the witness's attention to some of the testimony on that subject which he had given before the Judiciary Committee. At least, it is in dispute, as I understand it, as to just what was intended by the reference here, and we have a right to show, I think, by those who drew the instru-ment and by the man who signed it, what was intended when a term was used that on its face shows that some explanation is necessary.

The instrument itself says that the silent party is known to certain persons, who are named, and, as I remember it, I think this witness is one of them. I now have the paper before me.

The language is: "and the silent party whose name for the present is only known to Edward J. Williams, William P. Boland, John M. Robertson, and Capt. W. A. May, superintendent of the Hillside Coal & Coke Co." It therefore seems that this witness is not one of the names mentioned; but if this witness was present and heard the man Williams make the statement as to who the silent party was, or heard some one else make it, in the conversation and in the hearing of Williams, then it is proper for us to show who the silent party was.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, I have only to suggest this illustration: If a man is on trial for murder and a paper is produced which was prepared in an office where he was not present, and at a meeting of which he had no knowledge, and a paper was drawn up reciting that he and somebody else had committed that murder, would that paper, or anything with reference to the execution of that paper, be evidence against him to show that he did commit the murder?

It is true that we admit in the answer and admit here that Judge Archbald agreed with Mr. Williams that they would together undertake to buy and to sell this coal dump; but he is charged here with the crime of attempting to use his influence as a judge of the Commerce Court with the Erie Railroad people to get them to sell that dump to him on favorable terms; and as a part of the evidence against him it is said that he agreed that his name should be concealed in that transaction because he knew he was doing wrong. Here were some other people concealing his name and preparing a paper which was concealing it, and the talk among them as to who he was and why he was concealing his name is sought to be introduced in a court of justice as affecting him.

I do not see how I can say anything more. It is against all rules of evidence under which I have been accustomed to practice, and it seems to me there is no rule in justice or equity why it should be introduced.

Mr. Manager NORRIS. Mr. President, I want to make a suggestion I omitted to make, if the President will allow me. It is at least the theory of the managers on the part of the House, and for the purpose of passing on the evidence I think it will be consided that the Chair will take the chair. it will be conceded that the Chair will take the theory, that Mr. Williams and Judge Archbald were partners, and I think that ought to be called to the attention of the Chair before the Chair passes upon it, because what he said there or did there in carrying out the purposes of whatever plans they had would certainly be proper from this witness.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I suppose, Mr. President, in the case I have supposed if the paper had been prepared and recited the manner in which the murder was to be committed, that would make it competent against the man on trial charged with the

Mr. Manager NORRIS. Oh, no; that is not a similar case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The paper has been admitted as a legitimate piece of evidence. The Chair is of the opinion that everything that is necessary for a proper explanation of the meaning of that paper is competent. What effect it would have upon the respondent is a question of law that would afterwards be determined. But as to the question of the admis-sibility of the evidence, the Chair is of the opinion that whenever there is an ambiguity in an instrument, which itself is admitted in evidence, it is competent to show what those who made the paper intended. How far that would be binding upon the respondent is an altogether different question, and the Chair does not mean in the ruling to rule on that point. That would be a question for the Senate to determine when it comes to consider the weight of the evidence. As to whether or not a partnership has been proven, and whether the respondent should be bound by statements made by one who is alleged to be his partner, is a question to be determined by the Senate sitting as a court.

Upon the naked question as to whether or not the paper which is proven to have been executed and which the Senate has decided to be proper evidence shall have any ambiguous term explained by showing what the parties to it said it meant, the Chair is not in any doubt whatever.

Mr. Manager NORRIS. I would like to have the stenographer read the question to the witness.

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. Mr. Pryor, what was said, if anything, there in the presence of Mr. Williams and in his hearing by anyone in regard to who was the silent party referred to in this instrument that Mr. Williams signed?

A. The mention of Judge Archbald's name was brought up by Mr. Williams, as being interested in the transaction, and was to be known as the silent party.

Mr. Manager NORRIS. I think that is all. You may cross-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness is with the counsel for the respondent.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. We have no questions to ask. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness may retire.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I should like to have the witness reminded that he is under subpœna by us on another matter, and that he is not to consider himself discharged.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will not consider himself discharged.

We do not anticipate that we will Mr. Manager CLAYTON. need him any more, so that hereafter if he desires to get away he may apply to counsel for the respondent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Call the next witness.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Please have Charles F. Conn called as a witness. Mr. Davis will conduct the examination of this witness.

TESTIMONY OF CHARLES F. CONN.

Charles F. Conn, being duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) Where do you live?—A. Scranton, Pa.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Vice president and general manager of the Lackawanna & Wyoming Valley Railroad Co.
Q. What is the character of that railroad?—A. It is an electric railroad operating between Scranton and Wilkes-Barre. Q. Does it sustain any business relationship, by traffic agreement or otherwise, with the Erie Railroad?—A. It does. Q. From what source has your railroad company been purchasing its fuel supply ?- A. From the Erie Co. or some of its subsidiary companies.

Q. Including the Hillside Coal & Iron Co.?-A. I can not say which of the companies have rendered the bills.

Q. Do you know Judge Robert W. Archbald?—A. I do.
Q. How long have you known him?—A. Four or five years.
Q. Do you know Edward J. Williams?—A. I do.
Q. How long have you known him?—A. I think it was in September, 1911, when I first met him.

Q. Have you, in your capacity as manager of the Lackawanna & Wyoming Valley Railroad, had any transactions with those gentlemen, or either of them, for the purchase of any coal property?—A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. When did you have such transaction; and if with both, when and where?—A. My recollection is that the transaction began in September of 1911.

Q. Who of those first introduced the transaction to your notice?-A. Judge Archbald.

Q. When and where?—A. On the street in Scranton.
Q. What conversation had you with him at that time?—A.
He stated that he would like to present a culm bank for my consideration.

Q. Was that the entire conversation?-A. That is the substance of it.

Q. To what culm bank did he refer?-A. My recollection is that he did not refer to any specific bank by name.

Q. Did he tell you by or through whom he proposed to present it?-A. I think not.

Q. What was your next connection with the transaction?-I received a letter. Mr. Williams brought a letter to my office introducing him and referring to the culm bank.

Q. From whom was that letter?—A. From Judge Archbald. Q. Please look at the paper [presenting letter] I hand you, which is identified as Exhibit No. 10, and state whether that is or is not the letter to which you referred .- A. (After examining letter.) That is the letter.

Mr. Manager DAVIS. The letter is in evidence, but in order that the Senate may understand the document I will ask the Secretary to read it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the letter.

The Secretary read as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 10.]

(R. W. Archbald, judge. United States Commerce Court, Washington.) SCRANTON, PA., September 20, 1911.

Scranton, Pa., September 29, 1911.

My Dear Mr. Conn: This will introduce Mr. Edward Williams, who is interested with me in the culm dump about which I spoke to you the other day. We have options on it both from the Hillside Coal Co. and from Mr. Robertson, representing Robertson & Law, these options covering the whole interest in the dump. This dump was produced in the operation of the Katydid colliery by Robertson & Law and extends to the whole of the dump so produced. I have not seen it myself, but, as I understand it, this dump consists of two dumps a little separate from each other, but all making up one general culm or refuse pile made at that colliery. Mr. Williams will explain further with regard to it if there is anything which you want to know.

Yours, very truly,

R. W. Archbald.

Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) That letter was brought to you by Mr. Williams in person, was it?—A. It was.
Q. On the date given in the letter—the 20th of September?—

A. I could not say as to that.

Q On or about that day?-A. About that time.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Williams on the subject at that time?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. State the substance of your conversation .- A. I asked him as to the location of the dump and the approximate amount of material in it. He gave me that information, and I stated I would investigate it and inform Judge Archbald of my conclusion.

Q. Did you investigate it?—A. I did; yes, sir.
Q. When?—A. Within a week or 10 days. I went to the dump and looked it over. I had with me the engineer of our power plant.

Mr. THORNTON. Mr. President, I request that the witness be instructed to speak just a little louder. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will please raise his voice.

Q. (Mr. Manager DAVIS.) Was anyone else there with you?—A. I think on that trip I met Mr. Williams and Mr. Pryor at the bank.

Q. In addition to your personal inspection of the bank at that time did you have it inspected by any other person in your behalf?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. By whom?—A. By Mr. Rittenhouse.

- Q. Who is Mr. Rittenhouse?-A. Civil and mining engineer in Scranton.
- Q. Did you employ him for the purpose of making an inspection of the bank in your interest?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did he make a report on it to you?—A. He did.

Q. Verbally or in writing?-A. He gave me a written report of the quantity of material.

Q. After your receipt of the report from Mr. Rittenhouse, when did you next see either Judge Archbald or Mr. Williams?-A. At Judge Archbald's office a short time after that. Mr. Williams was present at that time.

Q. How did you come to go to Judge Archbald's office?-

To see him in connection with this matter.

Q. Will you detail the conversation you then had with either or both those gentlemen?-A. I stated to them that I did not care to purchase the bank for a lump sum, but that if they cared to sell it on a royalty basis I would be glad to consider it further.

Q. Had they made a proposition of a lump-sum price prior to that meeting?-A. I think so-$25,000.

Q. When was that proposition made to you?-A. My impression is that that was the price named by Mr. Williams when he presented this letter.

Q. And after your conversation at Judge Archbald's office, at which you refused to consider it at a lump sum and desired a royalty, did you receive any further proposition from them?-A. Yes; I had a letter from Judge Archbald making a proposition.

Q. Look at the paper [presenting paper] which I hand you, which is identified as Exhibit No. 3, and state whether that is the letter to which you refer?-A. (After examining paper.) That is the letter.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Mr. President, I should like to ask one question of the witness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama desires that the following question be propounded to the witness. ness, and the Secretary will propound it to the witness.

The Secretary read as follows:

Did Judge Archbald in any interview with you tell you that he had any personal interest in the dump?

The WITNESS. I do not know that he did in those words, but I gained the impression from my conversation with him and the letters which I received from him that he had an interest in the dump.

Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) Did he at the conference you had at his office, to which you have just referred, tell you what the condition of the title was and how much of title he and Mr. Williams controlled?—A. I think no reference was made to the title.

Mr. Manager DAVIS. We have identified a letter from Judge Archbald, under date of November 6, 1911. It is already in evidence, but I shall ask that the Secretary read it at this

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The letter will be read. The Secretary read as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 3.]

(R. W. Archbald, judge United States Commerce Court, Washington.) SCRANTON, PA., November 6, 1911. C. F. CONN, Esq.

DEAR Sin: On behalf of Mr. Edward J. Williams and myself I offer you the so-called Katydid culm dump, in the vicinity of Moosic, on a royalty basis at a flat rate of 30 cents a ton for all sizes, with the understanding that a minimum of 20,000 tons a year shall be taken or paid for, you to pay us $12,000 on account as advance royalties and to be entitled to take 40,000 tons without further payment therefor. In washing or screening the coal, if any of the prepared sizes are found there will be an additional charge of 5 cents a ton on such prepared sizes, payable to the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. It will be satisfactory to us if you desire to remove the material from time to time in quantity without screening or washing it on the ground, with the idea of screening or washing it elsewhere, provided we can be sufficiently protected and informed with respect to the actual number of tons taken, for which you would be accountable. In the execution of a formal agreement there may be other minor details in order to make a complete working contract, but the above will give you the substance of what we are ready to do.

Trusting that you will find these terms acceptable. I remain ady 10 do.

Trusting that you will find these terms acceptable, I remain,
Yours, very truly,
R. W. ARCHBALD.

Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) Did you reply to that letter, Mr. Conn?-A. I did.

Q. Have you a copy of your reply in your own possession?—A. My copy was left with the committee.

Q. Look at the paper [presenting paper] I hand you and state whether this is the office copy of your reply.—A. (After examining paper.) That is my reply.

Q. At the top of the letter there is a pencil notation, "closed, as below, November 29, '11." In whose handwriting is that In whose handwriting is that notation?—A. It is mine.

Mr. Manager DAVIS. Will you hand that to the Secretary that it may be read? We offer it in evidence.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be read.

The Secretary. Notation in pencil at top:

Closed, as below, November 29, '11. The letter is as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 21.]

NOVEMBER 29, 1911.

Hon. R. W. ARCHBALD, Scranton, Pa.

Hon. R. W. Archeald, Scranton, Pa.

My Dear Judge: In reference to your proposition for the purchase of the Katydid bank at Moosic, I beg to say that I have had figures made of the investment necessary for us to prepare this coal and get it to our road, and I find that the cost per ton will be somewhat larger than I anticipated. I still feel, however, that it may be possible for us to handle this proposition on a basis which will enable us to reduce our cost of ccal a little and have submitted the matter to our people for their advice.

I believe that I can close the matter with you on the basis of a royality of 21s cents per gross ton for all coal shipped, with a minimum of 20,000 tons per year, and if you care to accept this proposition, will arrange to pay $10,000 as advanced royalties on the signing of the papers.

arrange to pay $10,000 as advanced loyalities of the papers.

As it is our plan to erect a washery adjacent to our tracks it will be necessary for us to purchase some land for this purpose and for the disposition of the waste material, and I should wish to have it understood that the waste material belonged to this company, so that it might be used for filling, etc., if desirable to do so. I have made no effort thus far to obtain any land, so would be glad to have no mention made of this transaction until this has been accomplished.

If my proposition is satisfactory, the matter can be closed up at once. Yours, truly,

V. P. & G. M.

Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) You signed the original of that and transmitted it to Judge Archbald in due course of mail, did you?-A. I did.

Q. What did the pencil notation, "closed, as below, November 29, '11," mean?—A. Judge Archbald came to my office on that day after his receipt of the letter and accepted the proposition. I made that notation and considered it was closed.

Q. What conversation occurred between yourself and him at that time?—A. I only recall that I stated this was subject to the approval of our attorneys as to title, and that I would ask them at once to investigate it.

Q. Was there any discussion with reference to the formation of the contract or the reduction of the agreement to writing? A. Yes, sir. I think Judge Archbald asked if we should exchange letters confirming this arrangement and I said that it was immaterial.

Q. When did you next see Judge Archbald with reference to the matter?-A. I met him in our attorney's office a few days after that, within three or four days I should say.

Q. What occurred at that conference?-A. Our attorneys had advised that the title was not satisfactory, and that statement was made in Judge Archbald's presence. I think that is the substance of the conversation.

Q. Who were your attorneys and where was their office?-

Welles & Torrey, in the Connell Building, Scranton.

Q. What was Judge Archbald's contention with reference to the title? What response, if any, did he make to their criticism, in other words?-A. My recollection is that he said he would look up the question raised by Wells and Torrey. It was of the Everhart interest.

Q. Was anything said as to some form of indemnity to you as the purchaser against their claim?—A. I think something of that kind was brought up at that interview, the question of Judge Archbald giving us a bond to protect us against any other claimant.

Q. Was such a bond given?-A. No, sir.

Q. That interview took place within what length of time after your letter of November 29, 1911?—A. My recollection is that it was within a week.

Q. Had you any further connection with the transaction?-A. I received a letter from Mr. Williams subsequently.

Q. Do you remember the date of that subsequent letter?-

A. In March, I believe.

Q. Look at the paper [presenting paper] I had you, identified as Exhibit No. 4, bearing date the 13th of March, 1912; and signed E. J. Williams. State if that is the letter to which you refer.—A. (After examining paper.) That is the letter.

Mr. Manager DAVIS. The Secretary will read the letter.

It is already in evidence.

[U. S. S. Exhibit 4.]

CHARLES F. CONN, Esq., Scranton, Pa., March 13, 1912.

CHARLES F. CONN, Esq., Scranton, Pa., March 13, 1912.

Dean Sir: Regarding the culm bank located at Moosic, Pa., which you have been negotiating for, would say this matter has been hanging fire for some time, and the party who has been dealing with you is desirous of your having the bank. He believes that the title to this property is not a complicated one.

You as a business man understand the conditions under which the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. are operating under this lease. For any coal which they, their successors or assigns, take from this bank larger than pea coal they are to pay to the Everhart heirs a royalty of 20 cents per ton. Now, I think you do not intend preparing any of the larger sizes of coal; and if not, the Everhart heirs a royalty of 20 cents per ton. Now, I think you do not intend preparing any of the larger sizes of coal; and if not, the Everhart heirs et al. would have no interest in the bank.

The Hillside Coal & Iron Co. and Mr. John M. Robertson, the only recognized owners of this bank, have agreed to sell me their interest, and I would be glad to have you let me know at your earliest convenience what you intend doing in the matter, as other parties are anxious to negotiate for it. I may say that should you have any doubts you could deposit one-half or two-thirds of the royalty in the bank or retain it for a reasonable time as a guaranty against any claims. I am making this at the suggestion of the party who has been dealing with you to assure you of our desire that you should sustain no loss.

Very truly, yours,

Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) Did you receive that letter by mail or was it delivered in person, Mr. Conn?-A. I could not say. Q. Did you see either Mr. Williams or Judge Archbald after its receipt?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you next see either of those gentlemen?-A. I do not recall the date. Judge Archbald came to my office a short time after that letter came to me, and I showed him the letter.

Q. He read the letter, did he?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was the purpose of his visit to your office at that time?—A. To discontinue the negotiations with us for the sale of the bank.

O. What was said? What conversation took place between yourself and him?—A. In substance, that he was unable to clear up the Everhart matter, and that the proposition made to us was withdrawn.

Q. Was he still desirous that you should purchase the bank at that time?-A. I do not know as to that.

Q. What did you gather from his conversation?-A. I do not think there was any conversation on that end of the subject. The negotiations closed at that visit.

Q. You yourself told him at that time that you could not take it with the title in that condition?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he told you, in substance, that he could not meet the demands which had been made by your attorneys?-A. That is my recollection.

Q. And that ended the negotiations, so far as you were concerued?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you invited him to your office at that time?—A. No, sir. Q. Your last previous interview with him had been in the month of November, had it not, immediately after the writing of your last letter at the office of your attorney?-A. I should not want to say that I had not seen him in the interim, but I do not recall any meeting with him.

Q. You had not had any discussion of this proposal with him in the meantime, had you?—A. Not so far as I recall.

Q. You had not invited him to your office on the 29th of March?-A. No. sir.

Q. On the 13th of March, I believe it was. He came there of his own volition?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. And again brought up with you the question of this transaction?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. The manager assumes that the witness had said that he saw Judge Archbald on the 13th of March. He said it was soon afterwards.

Mr. Manager DAVIS. I admit the correction. The letter of Williams is dated the 13th.

Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) How long was it after the receipt of the Williams letter of the 13th of March that Judge Archbald came to your office?-A. I can not say.

Q. Had he any other business with you at that time?-A. I think not.

Q. The only matter which you discussed was this transaction?-A. So far as I recollect.

Q. Was any written form of contract submitted to you at any time during the negotiations?-A. There was,

Q. By whom?-A. By Judge Archbald.

Q. Do you have that paper?—A. No, sir.
Q. Who has it?—A. I think Col. Worthington has it.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. I will say to the manager that I have it in my pocket, and it is at his disposal if he wishes to see it or use it

Mr. Manager DAVIS. I should like to see it, if you please. Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) When did you deliver it to Col. Worthington?—A. I did not deliver it to him.

Q. From whom did you receive it?—A. From Judge Archbald.
 Q. And when?—A. Soon after the 29th of November.

Q. And where was it delivered to you?-A. I think by mail. Q. What did you do with it?-A. I made some notations on it and sent it to our attorneys, I think, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Did you ever redeliver it to Judge Archbald?-A. I do not know

Q. Did you ever receive it back again from your attorneys?-A. I can not say.

Q. Do you know where that paper has been since you delivered it to your attorneys?-A. I do not know that.

Q. Is it or is it not a fact that at your last interview with Judge Archbald, had in the month of March after the receipt of the Williams letter, he asked you to redeliver that contract to him?-A. I do not remember that.

Q. Have you no recollection at all on that subject?-A. None at all.

Q. You say that he came there that evening to close the negotiations?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or to withdraw the negotiations?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you not remember that at that time he asked you for the redelivery of this draft?—A. I do not remember that.

Q. Do you remember that he did not?—A. No, sir; I could not say that.

Q. Can you say whether this paper was or was not at that time in your possession or in the possession of your counsel?— A. I can not. Q. Do I understand you to say that you have no recollection whatever of this paper after you delivered it to your counsel in December?—A. None whatever.

Q. Can you account in any way for its possession from that time until this?-A. I can not.

Q. Did you ever instruct your counsel to redeliver it to Judge Archbald or to any of his representatives?—A. I did not.

Q. You do not assume that they would have done so without your consent, do you?-A. I should not expect them to.

Q. So far as you know, they did not deliver it to Judge Archbald?—A. So far as I know.

Q. Are you willing to state positively that you did not deliver it to him?-A. I am not.

Q. Then it is possible, so far as the present state of your recollection is concerned, that Judge Archbald did ask you for this paper at your final interview with him in March, and you did redeliver it to him at that time?-A. It is possible.

Q. Will you look at the paper which was just handed to me by counsel and see whether that is the document to which you refer?

The WITNESS (examining paper). That is the one. Mr. Manager DAVIS. Mr. President, I should like to offer that document in evidence in connection with the testimony of

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the manager desire that it be now read?

Mr. Manager DAVIS. Not at this instant. Mr. WORTHINGTON. I might ask, before doing that, that the handwriting be identified?

Mr. Manager DAVIS. I was just about to do that. Mr. WORTHINGTON. There are some interlineations in handwriting.

Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) On that paper there are certain pencil notations and interlineations. Do you know by whom those were made, Mr. Conn?—A. Yes, sir; they were made by me.

Q. When?-A. I presume shortly after this contract was placed in my hands.

- Q. Before or after its submission to your counsel?-A. Before,
- Q. Are there any notations on there in any handwriting other than your own?-A. It has just been marked "Exhibit"-
- Q. Leaving that out, of course.-A. No, sir; they are all
- Mr. Manager DAVIS. Now, Mr. President, I shall ask to have the document read without the notations, unless counsel prefers to have them read also.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. They can be read later.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read the paper, marked "Exhibit 22," as fol-

[U. S. S. Exhibit 22.1

This agreement made this — day of December, A. D. 1911, by and between Edward J. Williams and R. W. Archbald, of Scranton, I'a., of the one part, and the Erie & Wyoming Valley Railroad Co., a corporation of the State of Pennsylvania, of the other part, witnesseth:

Whereas the said parties of the first part are the owners of a certain culm dump or bank of waste coal and refuse, produced in the mining operations of the late firm of Robertson & Law, at the so-called Katydid mines and colliery, which dump or bank is located in the vicinity of Moosic, Pa., and known and called the "Katydid" culm dump; and, whereas, the party of the second part is desirous of purchasing the same;

Now, this agreement witnesseth that for and in consideration of the terms and conditions hereinafter mentioned the parties of the first part do hereby grant, bargain, sell, and convey unto the party of the second part, its successors and assigns, all of the said culm dump, with the right to take, remove, and dispose of the same, subject always as follows, that is to say:

1. It is the purpose of the said party of the second part, and it hereby undertakes and agrees, at some convenient place along the line of its railroad to erect and construct a so-called washery or building with suitable screens, rolls, chutes, and other appliances for the handling, screening, sorting, cleaning, and preparing for use the coal and material obtained from the said culm dump, with or without the use of water; and the same to equip with proper scales to the end that an accurate record may be kept of the weight and quantity of the said coal derived from the material taken from the said dump or bank; all of which material, excepting rock, shall be taken and be passed through the said washery, and afterwards weighed at the said washery in the cars when ready for use, or, in default thereof, shall be accounted and paid for according to the gross ton of material removed from the said dump.

2. For each ton of coal of 2,240 pounds obtained from the said dump as afor screen being regarded as dirt or waste, for which no payment is to be required;

Provided however, that in the screening, sorting, cleaning, washing, or preparing the said material it shall not be broken down or crushed by the said party of the second part, so as purposely to make any such dirt or waste; and Provided further, that any such waste material that is used or sold by the said party of the second part for steam or fuel purposes shall be paid for at the same rate as though of the size aforesaid.

3. The said party of the second part shall render monthly statements of the number of tons passed through, or cleaned and prepared at the said washery, which statements, in duplicate, shall be mailed to the said washery, which statements, in duplicate, shall be mailed to the said marties of the first part, severally, on or before the 10th day of each calendar month for the month then next preceding; and on the 20th day of each month shall make payment therefor, one half to each of the said first parties, which the said parties of the first part shall severally receipt for by signing and returning proper youchers therefor.

half to each of the said first parties, which the said parties of the first part shall severally receipt for by signing and returning proper vouchers therefor.

4. The said party of the second part agrees to pay at the rate per ton aforesaid for at least 20,000 tons per annum, in equal monthly installments, whether that quantity shall have been removed and obtained from said dump or bank and washed and prepared or not, until all the said material other than rock composing the said dump shall have been removed and disposed of, or all the coal to be derived therefrom shall have been paid for. When royalties have been paid in advance, and, in the opinion of the party of the second part, payment has been made at the rate aforesaid for all of the coal capable of being obtained from said dump, if there is any dispute between the parties hereto with regard to the same, the matter shall be submitted to three arbitrators; one of whom shall be chosen by the parties of the first part, one by the party of the second part, and the two arbitrators so chosen shall agree on the third arbitrator, and the decision of any two of them shall be binding and conclusive. In case of the neglect or refusal of either party to appoint an arbitrator, the appointment may be made at the instance of the other party by the Court of Common Pleas of Lackawanna County.

5. Where, in the screening, sorting, cleaning, and preparing the said material, any coal above the size of pea coal is obtained the party of the second part, in addition to the royalty of 27½ cents per ton to be paid to the parties of the first part, shall pay to the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. on account of the owners of lot No. "46," from which the said coal was originally mined, the sum of 5 cents per gross ton, in accordance with the terms on which the said culm dump is sold to the parties of the first part, by the said Hillside Coal & Iron Co.

6. The party of the second part shall pay to the parties of the first part, on the execution and delivery of this agreement, the sum of thereof.

7. In case of the failure of the party of the second part for 30 days to make the payments herein provided for, or to otherwise for a like period comply with any of the terms of this agreement, the parties of the first part may forfeit this agreement on 30 days' notice in writing of their intention so to do.
8. This agreement shall take effect as of December 1, 1911, from which date the minimum herein provided for shall begin to run.

9. When this agreement shall have been fully complied with by the party of the second part the parties of the first part, at its request, shall execute an acknowledgment, releasing and discharging the said party of the second part from any further obligation thereon.

10. The terms and conditions of this agreement shall be binding upon and operate in favor of the executors, administrators, and assigns of the parties of the first part and of the successors and assigns of the party of the second part as though in each instance severally and expressly mentioned.

In witness whereof the parties of the first part have hereunto set their hands and seals, and the party of the second part has hereunto affixed its corporate seal, attested by the signature of its president and secretary on the day and year first above written.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I desire to make an inquiry. The Senate has some important business to transact, and I wish to ask the managers and the counsel for the respondent if it would be agreeable to have the court adjourn at the present time, shortening the session a few minutes for the day

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, on behalf of the managers, I may say that the suggestion is entirely agreeable.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Likewise to us, Mr. President.
Mr. THORNTON. Mr. President, before adjournment, I desire to have a question propounded to the witness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana desires to have a question propounded to the witness. question will be read by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

Q. Why did you say in the examination that you thought Col. Worthington had the document?

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, may I ask that that question be read again. My attention was diverted.

The Secretary again read the question.

The WITNESS.

The Witness. I knew that it was in his possession. Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) How did you come by that knowledge?-A. I went to his office when I first came to Washington and asked to see it.

Q. How did you know that you would find it at his office?-A. It was sent to my office in Scranton in my absence so that I might see it.

Q. Who sent it to your office in Scranton?-A. It came from Welles & Torrey.

Q. Who are Welles & Torrey?—A. Attorneys for my railroad.

Q. When did they send it to your office that you might see it?-A. One day last week.

Q. How did it get from your custody to Mr. Worthington?-A. It was not left at my office. It was sent there in my absence, and the messenger took it away with him.

Q. What did the messenger do with it?-A. That I can not

Q. Had you made a request that you might see it?—A. I had. Q. Of whom had you made that request?—A. I think I asked Judge Archbald if I might see it.

Q. Judge Archbald had it, then, in his custody?-A. I so understood it.

Q. And you do not know even now where he got it?-A. Not of my own knowledge.

Q. What is your best information on that subject?-A. I do not think I understand your question.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, we shall desire to continue the examination of the witness in the morning. Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment adjourn.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Is not the hour for ending the session of the court fixed by order of the Senate?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is, and it can be changed only by unanimous consent unless there is an order formally passed by a majority of the Senate.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Unless the managers on the part

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Unless the managers on the part of the House or counsel for the respondent desire an adjournment at this time, I would prefer to go on.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. To relieve the situation of any embarrassment, if I may I move that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment do now adjourn until to-morrow.

Mr. CULBERSON. Can that motion be made by the managers or counsel?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not think it can go further than a suggestion from the managers or counsel. Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Then I modify it and suggest that course.

Senator GALLINGER. That is agreeable. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be a question whether the Senate will pass an order to that effect in view of the fact that there is objection. The Chair understood the Senator from Georgia to object. Is the Chair correct?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Yes. I think unless there is some reason why the court should adjourn at this time we should adhere to the order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New Hampshire desire to have an order passed to the effect that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment shall now adjourn?

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will not insist upon my motion at all if there is objection.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Counsel for the respondent has just suggested, and I agree with him in the suggestion, that both the managers and the respondent desire that the court take a recess at this time until to-morrow at the usual hour an adjournment or a recess, whichever is the proper form.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Georgia still object? [After a pause.] The Chair awaits the response of the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I do not desire to be captious. I will withdraw my objection, but—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It was impossible for the Chair to hear the latter part of what the Senator from Georgia said.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I will not insist upon my objection. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Very well. It is moved that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment do now adjourn. Unless there be objection it will be so ordered. The Chair hears none, and the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment stands adjourned until the usual hour to-morrow.

Thereupon the managers on the part of the House, the respondent, and his counsel retired.

PROPOSED EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Georgia makes the point that there is no quorum present. The Secretary will call the roll of the Senate.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Gallinger Gore Hitchcock Johnson, Me. Johnston, Ala, Smith, Ga. Smith, S. C. Martine, N. J. Myers Overman Page Bacon Bristow Bryan Smoot Stephenson Crane Page Penrose Perky Pomerene Root Shively Culberson Cullom Curtis Stone Swanson Thornton Townsend Warren McCumber Martin, Va. Fletcher Foster

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the call of the roll 36 Senators have responded to their names. A quorum of the Senate is not present.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I move that the Senate adjourn.
The motion was agreed to, and (at 5 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, December 7, 1912, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, December 6, 1912.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

We approach Thee, Almighty God, our heavenly Father, in prayer, that we may renew our spiritual life and thus be enabled to resist evil and strengthened to do the right as the duties of life unfold themselves to us moment by moment. Hear us and thus bless us, that Thy kingdom may come in all its fullness and strength and possess our hearts as it possessed the heart of the Master. And blessing and honor and praise be Thine for ever. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of House ын 26680.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (II. R. 26680) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, with Mr. GARNER in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 26680, which the Clerk will report by title.

The title of the bill was read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Wherever the words "during the session" occur in the foregoing paragraphs they shall be construed to mean the 211 days from December 1, 1913, to June 30, 1914, both inclusive.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSON] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 19, line 23, strike out the word "eleven" and insert

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The only purpose of the amendment is to correct the total number of days.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I notice here that this provides for the session from December 1, 1913, until June 30, 1914, both inclusive. I got the impression somehow that in this short session the appropriation ended March 31.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We are now making appropriations for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1913, and ending June 30, 1914.

Mr. FOSTER. I understand.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSON].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Copyright Office, under the direction of the Librarian of Congress: Register of copyrights, $4,000; assistant register of copyrights, $3,000; clerks—4 at $2,000 each, 3 at $1,800 each, 7 at $1,600 each, 1 $1,500, 8 at $1,400 each, 10 at $1,200 each, 10 at $1,000 each, 18 at $900 each, 2 at $800 each, 10 at $20 each, 4 at $600 each, 2 at $480 each, 4 at $600 each; 2 at $480 each; 4 $1,200 each; 2 at $1,200

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the last paragraph. On line 3, page 25, I see there are three clerks, at $1,800 each, a creation of one new clerk. line 4 four new clerks are provided for by the bill, at $2,000, a creation of one new clerk. I desire to ask the chairman of the committee what cause there is for these two additional clerks.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the Copyright Office has work devolved upon it by law. The work increases year by year. During the last fiscal year the receipts of the Copyright Office aggregated $116,000. The total amount paid for the services of those employed in the Copyright Office was, in round figures, $96,000, leaving a surplus of $20,000.

Mr. FOWLER. Ninety-six thousand nine hundred and eighty dollars last year.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. In round numbers, I say, leaving a net surplus of $20,000 over and above the operating expenses. The work of the Copyright Office is not now current and can not be kept current unless we increase the force. We therefore gave them two additional men. But the work that these men do will bring in more than enough to pay their sal-

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Chairman, may I add a word? Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Certainly. Mr. GILLETT. This $2,000 clerk is the head of a division, the index division, which is the largest division in the Copyright Office. The other heads of divisions are all getting $2,000, whereas he is now getting but $1,800, so that this is to put him, the head of really the largest division of all, on a par with the others in the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I am requested to read from the hearings with respect to the copyright

office:

Mr. PUTNAM. The total number of registrations was, roughly, 121,000, and the total fees received $116,000; the expenditures for service and for stationery and sundries amounted to $96,000, leaving the net margin of receipts about $20,000. Now, the register, who is here, explains to me that these three additional positions are particularly to undertake certain indexing and cataloguing work that the law contemplates shall be done, but which it is impossible for them to do without neglecting the current work which must be kept up; and if the committee desires to go into the situation which requires that, or to have any details about the situation in the Copyright Office or its organization, the register is here at my suggestion, and of course he can answer with the experience of daily contact.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Cierk read as follows:

Distribution of card indexes: For service in connection with the distribution of card indexes and other publications of the Library, including not exceeding $500 for freight charges, expressage, traveling expenses connected with such distribution, and the expenses of attendance at meetings when incurred on the written authority and direction of the Librarian of Congress, $30,000.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on that paragraph. I believe in the last session there was inserted in the District of Columbia appropriation bill a provision in reference to paying the expenses of attendance at meetings. suppose the latter part of the paragraph which has just been read is designed to meet that former legislation and to authorize attendance upon meetings as stated in the paragraph. I do not know that there is any objection to that.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. That is the purpose of the language inserted. The librarian stated that there were many meetings of the librarians of the country, and this library undertakes to cooperate with all other libraries in this scientific work, and it is necessary for him to send experts to the national meetings of the librarians. He asks permission to do so, and he says the cost will not in any year exceed $500, and it does not increase the appropriation in any sum whatever.

Mr. MANN. I do not know whether this item increases the appropriation, but the total is increased by $6,500. Is this authorization in this item, which is under the head of "Distribution of card indexes," supposed to cover only traveling expenses in attendance upon meetings which relate to card indexes or any meetings to which the librarian may send delegates?

Mr. GILLETT. I think it relates simply to card indexing. There is another appropriation for the general library work.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It applies only to meetings that are held in relation to that one subject.

Mr. MANN. Then I should like to ask the gentleman if he has any information generally concerning the effect of the operation of that provision in the District bill, which I think was not very well understood in Congress when it went through either body. I do not believe anybody woke up to it much, unless it was the members of the committee who reported it, until after it had received the signature of the President.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. All the governmental departments are awake to it now.

Mr. MANN. Yes; and I notice that there are a number of places in this bill where it is proposed to allow the expenses of attendance upon meetings. Have the Committee on Appropriations changed their views upon this subject, they having reported the original provision in very drastic form, which for-bade the payment of any expenses for attendance upon any meetings:

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We have inquired very particularly why it was necessary to send anybody to these meetings, and we have ascertained that no part of the money was to be paid for annual dues or initiation fees in joining any societies; and only in the cases where it was made to appear to the committee that it was necessary for the Government to send its experts have we permitted this language to go into the bill, and in every case we have ascertained about how much money would be used for that purpose.

Mr. MANN. I am frank to say that I doubt the advisability of the provision which went into the District bill last year, and therefore I withdraw the point of order on this item.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

For commissioner, acting as president of the commission, $4,500; 2 commissioners, at $4,000 each; chief examiner, $3,000; secretary, $2,500; assistant chief examiner, $2,250; chiefs of division—3 at $2,000 each; examiners—1, $2,400, 3 at $2,000 each, 4 at $1,800 each; clerks—5 of class 4, 25 of class 3, 32 of class 2, 42 of class 1, 32 at $1,000 each, 20 at $900 each; messenger; assistant messenger; skilled laborer, $720; 4 messenger boys, at $360 each. Custodian force: Engineer, $840; general mechanic, $840; telephone-switchboard operator; 2 firemen; 2 watchmen; 2 elevator conductors, at $720 each; 3 laborers; 2 charwomen; in all, $248,950.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask the chairman of the subcommittee if in providing for the Civil Service Commission expenses there were increases made by reason of the new order issued on the 15th of October, by which the President placed a number of fourth-class postmasters under the classified service. I was not present at the hearing, but I have the testimony of Gen. Black, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, in which it appears that he insisted that the expenses of the Civil Service Commission would be increased by reason of that fact. I would like to inquire if there has been any increase in the appropriations made to the Civil Service Commission by reason of that

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, as I stated yesterday when the bill was taken up for general debate, one of the items of increase in the bill is for the Civil Service Commission. It was contended by the commission that the effi-ciency law of the last Congress imposed upon the commission additional labors. It was further claimed by the commission that the order of the President placing a number of fourth-class post offices in the classified service would greatly increase the labor of the Civil Service Commission. In order that there might not be even the appearance of an attempt to evade the civil-service law, either in letter or in spirit, the subcommittee and the full committee reported to this House considerable increases for the Civil Service Commission. In the particular paragraph now under consideration the increase over the current year is $19,000.

Mr. BARTLETT. Occasioned by that order?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Occasioned by the additional work caused by the efficiency law and the order of the President placing the fourth-class post offices in the classified

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman, I made this inquiry for the purpose of placing in the Record, which I shall do, the regula-tions which have been adopted by the Civil Service Commission and the Post Office Department in the appointment of fourthclass postmasters. I call the attention of the House to the fact, and the information I elicited from the gentleman from South Carolina, because in the hearings before the subcommittee it was stated by the chairman of the Civil Service Commission and by the witnesses that there would be an increase in the expenditures of that office.

I want to read and place in the RECORD this order. It is as

[Form 1752, November, 1912.]

UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

REGULATIONS GOVERNING THE APPOINTMENT OF POSTMASTERS OF THE FOURTH CLASS.

(Approved Nov. 25, 1912.)

EGULATIONS GOVERNING THE APPOINTMENT OF POSTMASTERS OF THE FOLETH CLASS.

(Approved Nov. 25, 1912.)

All positions of postmaster of the fourth class, except in Alaska, Guam, Hawali, Porto Rico, and Samoa, having been by the Executive order of October 15, 1912, placed in the competitive classified service and made subject to the civil-service laws and rules, the following regulations shall govern appointments to such positions:

1. Appointment to offices having an annual compensation of as much as $500 shall be made in the same manner as provided by the civil-service law and rules for other positions in the competitive classified service, except as may hereinafter be provided.

2. Appointment to offices having an annual compensation of less than $500 shall be made in the following manner: When a vacancy has occurred or is about to occur in any such office, the Postmaster General shall direct a post-office inspector to visit the locality and make selecting of the post-office inspector to visit the locality and make selecting and the control of the sultability of the applicant of the applicant of the post-office inspector for locality and make selecting in the property of the sultability of the applicant and his shill onto be based solely upon the sultability of the applicant and his shill onto to be based solely upon the sultability of the applicant and his shill onto the based solely property in duplicate and accompany each duplicate with a list of all applicants. Such report shall include a statement of the qualifications of each applicant and of the reasons for the selection and recommendation. The Post Office Department shall transmit to the Civil Service Commission one copy of such report, showing its action thereon.

3. Whenever persons who are property taxpayers and patrons of a post office having an annual compensation of less than $500 submit to the Civil Service Commission and to the Post Office Department sworn statements in duplicate, over their own signatures, that an applicant, he shall not be furth in the competitive classified service. A postmaster of the fourth class having an annual compensation of as much as $500 may, in accordance with law and the civil-service rules, be transferred to a position of rural carrier at the same post office after having passed the examination prescribed for original appointment as rural carrier or its equivalent; and he may be transferred under like restrictions to any other position in the competitive classified service after having served three years in such sarvice.

the competitive classified service after naving served three years in such service.

6. When the annual compensation of an office is increased to as much as $500 the incumbent of such office shall be given all the rights and privileges of persons appointed to offices with annual compensation of as much as $500.

Approved, November 20, 1912.

FRANK H. HITCHCOCK, Postmaster General.

Approved by direction of the United States Civil Service Commission, November 21, 1912. JOHN C. BLACK. President.

THE WHITE HOUSE, November 25, 1912.

Approved.

I also have here the questions that are to be submitted. They are as follows:

UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, Washington, D. C.

INFORMATION TO APPLICANTS FOR EXAMINATION FOR THE POSITION OF FOURTH-CLASS POSTMASTER.

The examinations for the position of fourth-class postmaster are as follows:

(a) For positions the annual compensation of which amounts to $500 or more.

The examination for positions under (a), for which not to exceed four hours will be allowed, will consist of the subjects mentioned below, weighted as indicated: SUBJECTS.

Elementary arithmetic and accounts (simple tests in addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division of whole numbers and decimals, and a statement of a postmaster's money-order ac-

Penmanship (the handwriting of the competitor in the subject of letterwriting will be considered with special reference to the elements of legibility, neatness, and general appearance)
Letterwriting (a letter of not less than 125 words on a topic suggested by facts furnished)
Copying addresses (a simple test in copying accurately addresses given)
Facilities for transacting postal business (based on the location of the post-office site, the convenience of office arrangements, etc., as shown in the application form)

According to the testimony of Gen. Black there will be quite a number of offices, a majority of them in which the salary is less than $500. I will read from the hearings: less than $500. I will read from the hearings:

Gen. Black. Fourth-class post offices. They are divided into two classes by a horizontal line, those that are above $500 and those that are below $500. Those that are above $500 are 4.457, besides 3,411 that were already included; and those that are below the $500 line are 31,799, added by the order to 10.575 who already were in the service, and that makes a total of fourth-class postmasters of 50,222 places, 36,236 having been added, as I said before, on the 15th of October. Now the men that are below $500 are appointed primarily upon an inspection made by the post-office inspectors under certain regulations, but there is not one of those appointments that may not at some time or another come within the purview of the commission and present facts that may require an investigation.

So that by this order, out of 36,000 offices that are to be filled, there are 31,799 that are to be filled upon the report of a postoffice inspector. As far as I am concerned, a majority of the fourth-class post offices in the country I come from are in the same condition that they are in other parts of the country; the salaries are less than $500. So that hereafter we are to dave under this Executive order, if it shall remain, if Congress does not undertake to do anything to suspend or revoke it—there will be nearly 32,000 fourth-class post offices in which the postmaster is to be selected by a post-office inspector. As far as I am concerned, I do not relish, nor do I approve of that Executive anxiety for the civil service of the country which waited for four years and more, until a very few days of election, before it thought proper to place 36,000 post offices under the civil service, and of that number 31,799 will receive appointment only on the recommendation of the post-office inspector.

As far as I am concerned, I have no hesitancy in uttering my disapproval of that order. If it was necessary during the previous administration that this service should have been so nonpartisan, should have been covered within the provisions of the civil-service law, why was it not done before? Why did he wait until they were used—if it is true they were used, and it has been charged that they were used in advancing the political aspirations of the candidate for President. I know that in my State, in the section from which I come, they have not heretofore been appointed on the indorsement of the patrons of the office.

They have been appointed generally upon the recommenda-tion of men who did not reside within the districts where they were appointed. In the State of Georgia there were three referees to whom the application was made, and no Member of Congress from the district in which these offices were situated. no Member from the State of Georgia, and no Senator could change or alter the result where the recommendation for the postmastership was made by the referee. That applied to all post offices of the fourth class as well as to post offices of the first, second, and third classes. I say that it is not a proper administration of affairs in the appointment of postmasters to have post-office inspectors, many of whom-in fact, most of whom-are not familiar with the people of the particular locality, have the determining voice in who shall be the postmaster in these 31,797 offices. I trust, Mr. Chairman, that if Congress shall not see fit to do something which will alter it the incoming administration will not permit that order which has been put into effect at the end of a Republican administration to remain. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

So far as I am concerned, I stand ready here and now to provide, if I can get the indorsement of the Members of this House, that not one dollar of the money appropriated in this section shall be paid to inspectors who are sent into my State and my district and in your State and your district to find out whom they shall recommend for the office of postmaster, and if I could, without violating the rule respecting new legislation. or if I could get past the point of order, I would offer an amendment which I have ready here now to repeal the order of October 15, which put under the civil service something over 36,000 post offices in this country. I do not say this because I am a spoilsman. I do not say this because I am anxious or bungry for office for my people, but I say so because I know what the people where I come from have endured for all the 16 years in which this system of permitting men to be appointed to the fourth-class post offices and other offices upon the recommendation of referees, and not upon the recommendation of men who represent those districts or States, the referee being selected by reason of his political affiliations.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I am not in favor of the proposition which the gentleman from Georgia has stated to the House, but I can suggest to him a method by which he can bring it before the House if he so desires. All he needs to do is to move to strike out this paragraph, leave out the appropriation for one messenger at $360, and reduce the total appropriation from $248,950 to $248,590, which makes a reduction of the amount carried by the bill, and add his provision repealing the order and permitting no other order to be made. Under the Holman rule that would make it in order.

Mr. BARTLETT. I have it ready. Mr. MANN. I would like to see that side of the House vote upon it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Field force: District secretaries—2 at $2,400 each, 1 at $2,200, 4 at $2,000 each, 5 at $1,800 each; clerks—1 of class 4, 1 of class 3, 1 of class 1, 7 at $1,000 each, 6 at $900 each, 5 at $840 each; messenger boy, $480; in all, $45,680.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against that paragraph. There are three new clerks provided for there at $1,800 each. It is new legislation, and I insist upon the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman make the point of order against the entire paragraph?

Mr. FOWLER. I do; under the rule that where there is new legislation in a paragraph the whole paragraph goes out.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I do not think the item in the bill is subject to the point of order. There is no law fixing the number of people that can be employed in the Civil Service Commission's office.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, is the point of order up for discussion?

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order has been made against the entire paragraph on page 30, lines 19 to 23, inclusive, for the reason that the provision for three of the five clerks at $1,800 each is new legislation. Do I state the point of order correctly?

Mr. FOWLER.

Mr. FOWLER. Yes; that is correct.
Mr. FITZGERALD. It does not necessarily follow, because a place is additional to those already provided for for the current year, that the provision therefore is subject to a point of order. That happens only under certain contingencies.

The CHAIRMAN. The principal thing the Chair would like to know is whether these five offices are authorized by law.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to call the attention of the Chair to section 169 of the Revised Statutes of the United States:

Each head of a department is authorized to employ in his department such number of clerks in the several classes recognized by law, and such mossengers, assistant messengers, copyists, watchmen, laborers, and other employees, and at such rates of compensation, respectively, as may be appropriated for by Congress from year to year.

There are a number of rulings under this particular provision that in the various departments of the Government, unless the organic act specifically enumerates the positions to be created, that there can be carried in the acts appropriating for the service such clerical or other force as Congress may recommend.

Mr. FOWLER. May I interrupt the gentleman?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Certainly.
Mr. FOWLER. In this case these new positions are district secretaries. Prior to that there were only two district secretaries, and here it is attempted to create three new district secretaries. Does that fall under the gentleman's contention?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York desire to argue the point further?

Mr. FITZGERALD. No; I have concluded what I have to

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, if the Chair will permit, I would like to make an observation in reference to the rule. Mr. Chairman, the rulings in regard to matters of this sort are so arbitrary and artificial that sometimes it is necessary to restate them. The rulings are uniform for many years that so far as the salary is concerned the salary in the current law fixes the salary for the bill. In other words, an increase in the salary of an official when that salary is covered by the current law can not be made over a point of order. This is a purely artificial ruling, because there is no salary fixed by law for these places, but long ago some Chairman held that current law fixed the salary, because without that the House was in confusion. Now, there is also no law fixing the number of these places, but there is a uniform ruling that where the position was authorized at all you could increase the number of places in that position unless the law fixed the number. Take, for instance, the most common illustration, which is the Post Office Department. The number of clerks and carriers in the Post Office Department is not fixed by law except the current law. They have to be increased every year. It is impossible as a matter of practice to pass a law definitely fixing for future years the number of clerks or carriers in the Post Office Department. The same is true of clerks in the different departments in Washington, but where a certain number is carried in the current law, say, two at $1,800, while the salary fixed is in the present bill and current law the number is not governed by the current law, and in this case the Civil Service Commission, being authorized to do this work and have these employees, the number of employees in the current law does not control the House in fixing the number in the bill each year, although the salary is controlled by the current law. Now, these officers being authorized by the law, the number may be increased by Congress from time to time without being subject to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FOWLER] desire to be heard further on the point of order?

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, according to the rules of this House no new position can be created in an appropriation bill without being subject to a point of order. This has been the holding of the Chair almost universally since I have been a Member of this House. It was the holding of the Chair during the last session of Congress, and only in a few instances, where the Chairman had been called from the body of the House, was that ruling digressed from. In fact, Mr. Chairman, in this instance there is a creation of three new positions at $1,800 each. The contention of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] that where the work of a department is authorized and the number of servants fixed by law might not control in that decision upon the point of order is not, in my mind, borne out by the rulings of this House in the past. There are three distinct and important positions created here known as district secretaries, and prior to this time there were only two district secretaries. They received each $1,800. Now it is proposed by this bill to create two additional district secretaries at $1,800 each.

It is just as much new legislation in this instance as though it had created three assistant district secretaries at a salary of $1,800 each. And there is no difference, and there is no getting away from the rules of this House which have been the controlling force in passing upon questions of this character.

I had an occasion during last session to present this question and recite the authorities which had been given by former rulings of the Chair. I have not those authorities before me now. But I say, Mr. Chairman, that this is new legislation, and under the rules of this House it is subject to a point of order, and we can not escape it however much the gentlemen who are in charge of this bill may desire to do so.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. It seems to the Chair that the first question for the Chair to ascertain is whether or not section 169 of the Revised Statutes authorizes these clerks or whether the head of a department has the right to employ these five clerks. In 1906 Mr. Hull, of Iowa, was in the chair, and this identical question came up and was decided by him on a point of order made by Mr. Tawney upon clerks of a similar nature in the War Department. Mr. Hull held at that time, quoting section 169, that where the statute had authorized the heads of the department to employ clerks and other laborers that it was in order, and he overruled the point of order. He used this language:

The first question is. What law authorizes this appropriation? The only law referred to is that contained in section 169 of the Revised Statutes, which is as follows:

Here he quotes the statute. This is a similar case, where the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] cites the statute, section 169, as authority for this legislation. Mr. Hull made this comment.

The next question, of course, is whether these clerks referred to in the items to which objection has been made are to be employed by the head of a department and in his department. The gentleman from Iowa, Mr. Hull, is quite correct in his statement of the ruling made by the occupant of the chair, Mr. Hopkins, as referred to on page 2404 of the Record, third session Fifty-fifth Congress, but it appears that at that time the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole was not familiar with the ruling of the Attorney General, which has been submitted to. submitted to.

And he went on and held that these clerks were to be employed as contemplated in section 169 of the Revised Statutes. The Chair is of the opinion that section 169 would apply to the clerks in this item, and therefore overrules the point of order.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. Rubey having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill of the following title:

H. R. 20287. An act to amend section 5 of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Red Cross," approved January

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 7531. An act to authorize the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to purchase certain land required for lighthouse purposes at Port Ferro Light Station, P. R.

The message also announced that the President pro tempore had appointed Mr. Clarke of Arkansas and Mr. Burnham members of the Joint Select Committee on the part of the Senate as provided for in the act of February 16, 1889, as amended by the act of March 2, 1895, entitled "An act to authorize and provide for the disposition of useless papers in the Executive departments," for the disposition of useless papers in the War Department.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. George H. Utter, late a Representative from the State of Rhode Island,

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate a copy of these resolutions to the House of Representatives and to the family of the de-Representatives whose deaths have been announced, the Senate do now adjourn.

Also:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. RICHARD E. CONNELL, late a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved. That as a further mark of respect to the memory of those Representatives whose deaths have been announced the Senate do now

Resolved. That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of the Hon, Carl Carly Anderson, late a Representative from the State of Ohio.

Resolved. That as a further mark of respect to the memory of those Representatives whose deaths have been announced the Senate do now adjourn.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The Clerk read as follows:

Expert examiners: For the employment of expert examiners not in the Federal service to prepare questions and rate papers in examinations on special subjects for which examiners within the service are not available, $2,000.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to that paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Bart-LETT] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 31, line 11, after the figures "$2,000," insert the following: "Provided, That no part of the amounts appropriated under this paragraph or in this bill shall be used to pay for inspectors of the Post Office Department for expenses incurred in making selections and recommendations for the appointment of fourth-class postmasters."

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina, Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against that amendment. It changes existing law and seeks to regulate Executive orders.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson | makes the point of order that this changes existing law and Executive orders made under existing law.

Mr. BARTLETT. But, nevertheless, Mr. Chairman, under the rules of the House under which we operate we can change existing law if it reduces expenses. And the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] has stated in this House that the increase in the expenditures of the Civil Service Commission in its operations during the coming fiscal year was due to the fact of the Executive order issued on October 15. It will appear from the testimony which I called attention to which was taken before the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, of which the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] is the chairman, that the increase in the expenditures was due to the fact that examiners would have to be appointed especially and their expenses paid by reason of this order. I will not undertake to reread that which I have read upon the subject from the hearings, but if the Executive order is law—and it is—we can at all times, even when we are not operating under the Holman rule, limit that expenditure, even though that expenditure were provided for by law. It is a simple limitation of the expenditure, and I need not, I apprehend, call the Chair's attention to the frequent ruling that, while you can not change the existing law, you can limit an expenditure under the existing law.

Mr. TRIBBLE. Mr. Chairman, I desire to join my colleague from Georgia [Mr. Babtlett] in his protest against civilservice examination for fourth-class postmasters. I feel that I am especially justified in raising my voice against this Executive order, because if there ever was an official negro-ridden town it is the city of Athens, Ga., where I live. I have seriously considered the civil-service proposition as applied to post offices, and I see danger in the proposition. If you will analyze this order and its requirements you will find that the examination under the civil-service order will place in the fourth-class post offices in the South, as well as those in the other parts of the United States, many negroes. They will stand the examinations and take their places at the windows of small country and village post offices. I want to say to you here to-day that the people of this country will not stand for it. Gentlemen from all sections, let me say to you, your constituents in the West, in the East, or in the North will not stand for it. In my district there is a negro rural carrier. How would your constituents like that? It is not fair to my people; it it not just to the South. I shall not sit quietly in my seat and permit an order placing post offices under civil service, knowing that negroes will have the way open to stand behind the windows and deliver mail as postmaster, and not protest with all the earnestness of

This order becomes odious to my people the very moment negroes stand examination for post-office positions. Every man in this House would join in this fight to defeat this order if it placed you in the situation it places me. I know from experience the humiliation of negro officeholders, and I warn you here to-day of danger in the enforcement of that order. years, since my sojourn in Athens, there have been negroes in the post office of that classic city, and during 12 years of that time there was a negro postmaster. In this city the State university is located, and there are over a thousand students. Today nearly every carrier in that city is a negro. White people will not stand the examinations and compete with these negro carriers. When an examination is held the negro is there.

The city carriers are not so objectionable as the rural carriers. A rural carrier goes among the country people. He meets the lady of the house at the door. She may be alone. She may be a widow, a sister, or an only daughter; to her he sells stamps. and she has to deal with this negro in all postal affairs. It is not fair to my constituents; they are law-abiding citizens and have submitted unwillingly. I repeat, it is not fair to any section of this country to place the holders of fourth-class post offices under a civil-service examination, especially the rural districts in the South, This Executive order places fourth-class offices alongside the rural carrier and city carrier examinations, and you add to the negro carrier list a long list of negro postmasters in the South.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield? Mr. TRIBBLE. Yes.

Mr. GILLETT. Does the gentleman from Georgia know of any cases where these negro carriers that he speaks of have abused their positions? Mr. TRIBBLE, Yes.

Mr. GILLETT. Where?

Mr. TRIBBLE. I have made two fights since I have been in Congress before the Post Office Department against an official rural carrier who has been shown to be incompetent, ignorant, old, and offensive to the patrons, and yet he has been retained on that route. I made one fight on him before I was elected to Congress and I never expect to let up until a white man succeeds him. He can not read and write well enough to read the addresses on the pieces of mail, and yet the Post Office Department has refused to dismiss him.

Mr. GILLETT. Has there been any abuse of women? Mr. TRIBBLE. I made no such charge as that in the

I made no such charge as that in that case. Mr. GILLETT. Have there been any charges of that kind in these cases?

Mr. TRIBBLE. None in the case of which I have spoken. Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, when I entered Congress 18 years ago there were 167 post offices, according to my recollection, in the fourth district of Connecticut. About 32 of those were presidential and the rest were fourth-class offices. Now. I do presidential and the less were loading any benefit whatever to gentlemen who are coming into full and absolutely complete control of the Government for the next four years. You notice limit it to four years. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. Make it two years.
Mr. HILL. No; I will not limit it to two years. I will limit it to four years. By Executive order all but 32 of these post offices were taken from my jurisdiction, and the happiest time of my political life has been since they were taken away.

Make no mistake about that. I am a firm believer that not only the fourth-class offices but the presidential offices as well should be put under civil service. There is nothing in my experience that is so distasteful as a post-office fight, unless it is school-district fight or a church fight, one or the other, and am still in doubt as to which is the most distasteful. believe that the wisest thing for you gentlemen is to have the recent Executive order go into effect and remain in operation.

I realize the conditions in the South to which the gentleman has referred, and that, as he says, the South will not stand it. I notice that you do stand it, so far as your house servants are concerned, and you do stand it in a great many other respects. I do not believe it is any worse for a colored man to hand you a letter through a general-delivery window than it is for a house servant to hand you your food at your meals. going into that discussion at all. I am simply looking at it from my standpoint. From my standpoint, the wisest thing that can happen to you gentlemen is to be divested of the responsibility of naming postmasters.

I want to say another thing to you: A determined effort is doubtless being made to have that order revoked. Since I have been a Member of the House of Representatives from Connecticut no Democrat has ever been removed from a postmastership in my district, and there is to-day one presidential postmaster there appointed by Grover Cleveland still serving. Why? Because I never felt it my duty to go around the district and hunt up some man to take his place and no Republican ever asked to have him removed, and there are several fourthclass postmasters appointed, as I recollect, by Grover Cleveland. who are still serving there or who were when President Roosevelt put them in the classified service.

May I ask the gentleman a question? Mr. BARTLETT.

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. BARTLETT. What would the gentleman do if ninetenths of the patrons of an office should ask him to have a particular person appointed to a fourth-class office, and there was no one else who objected to it? Would you not think that man ought to be appointed?

Mr. HILL. My rule has been this, that every man should serve out his time, and then if there was a Republican who made application, indorsed unanimously by the Republican town committee, I made it my business to see that the Republican was appointed, and I assume that every one of you would do the same thing.

Mr. BARTLETT. I know I would. The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Connecticut has expired.

Mr. HILL. I ask unanimous consent for five minutes more. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut asks unanimous consent that his time be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BARTLETT. The gentleman did not answer my question. There are innumerable cases where appointments have been made to post offices where the applicant did not receive the indorsement of any of the patrons of the office, but was appointed solely upon the recommendation of some Republican referee who did not live in the town or in the district.

Mr. HILL. Of course I can not appreciate that condition. My rule has been this: If the Republican town committee were unanimous in behalf of any man, I recognized that committee as the official representative of the party in the town and carried out their wishes.

Mr. BARTLETT. I think the gentleman did right.

Mr. HILL. If they were not unanimous, I felt that the burden rested upon me, and looked at it always as a burden resting upon me to determine the case. Now, gentlemen, leaving out the question of the peculiar conditions in the South to which the gentleman has referred, and which I think are magnified in some respects, you will be better off to have that responsibility lifted from your shoulders than to carry the burden.

Mr. TRIBBLE. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HILL, Yes.

Mr. TRIBBLE. I should like to know if this Democratic postmaster in the gentleman's district has not been voting the Republican ticket lately?

Mr. HILL. Possibly so; I do not know, and I do not care how he has voted. He has made a good postmaster, and no Republican in that town has ever asked for his removal. If they had united in asking for it, I should have removed him. I am frank to say that. I think you are entitled to the legitimate patronage of this office to which you have elected Dr. Wilson. The responsibility is going to be a terrific burden upon you, and you are just beginning to realize that. But I want to say to the gentleman from Georgia just one other thing, that there is a feeling in the North that you can not absolutely take away from the colored man in the South all of the privileges of citizenship if you hold him to its responsibilities. You can not always have representation on this floor by counting him as a citizen and absolutely ignoring him as a vital living factor in this Republic, and the time will come—I say it frankly to you—when the present system must be changed. You can not seat eight men on this floor with an aggregate of 23,000 votes and at the same time find each one of the Members on this side representing 35,000 to 40,000 votes. I do not know the best way to meet the situation, but it is one which you have got to face in the next four years, for it is not fair to us in the North.

But let that go as it is. I give it to you as my experience that when the hundred or more fourth-class post offices were taken out from under my responsibility by order of President Roosevelt it was the happiest time of my political career. [Applause.]

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to address the House on this question.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, some years ago, at the time of the famous Machen case, which the House will remember, this question as to the repeal of all appropriations for the Civil Service Commission came up. During the debate I opposed the repeal and quoted from the utterances of some very distinguished statesmen who had been perfectly familiar with the abuses which existed prior to the enactment of the civil-service

I will read from my speech in that debate what Gen. Garfield said in an article in the Atlantic Monthly, and also what other distinguished men said in the Senate and on the floor of the

One-third of the working hours of Senators and Representatives is hardly sufficient to meet the demands made upon them in reference to appointments in office. * * * Impairs the efficiency of the legislators; * * * it degrades the civil service; * * * it repels from the service those high and manly qualities which are so necessary to a pure and efficient administration; and, finally, it debauches the public mind by holding up public office as the reward of mere party zeal.

To reform this service in one of the highest and most imperative duties of statesmanship.

On the floor of the House, Gen. Garfield said, on the 4th of March, 1870:

We press such appointments upon the departments; we crowd the doors; we fill the corridors; Senators and Representatives throng the offices and bureaus until the public business is obstructed; the patience of officers is worn out, and sometimes, for fear of losing their places by our influence, they at last give way and appoint men, not because they are fit for their positions, but because we ask it.

President Grant, speaking in 1870 of the great evils of the spoils system, said:

There is no duty which so much embarrasses the Executive and heads of departments as that of appointment, nor is there any such thankless labor imposed on Senators and Representatives as that of finding places for constituents. The present system does not secure the best men, and often not even fit men, for the public places. The elevation and purification of the civil service of the Government will be halled with approval by the whole people of the United States.

Senator Vest, a very distinguished Democrat from Missouri, said:

When I entered the Senate I became chairman of the Committee to Examine the Several Branches of the Civil Service, and for two years I was engaged with the rest of that committee in taking testimony upon the subject of civil-service reform. That very great evils exist there can be no sort of question—evils so monstrous, so deadly in their effects that men of all political parties have come to the conclusion that some remedy must be applied.

That evils exist there can be no sort of question. Money has become the great factor in the politics of the United States.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I will read only one more quotation. It is from an equally distinguished Democrat, who served the Nation with distinction in the Senate and afterwards in the diplomatic service at the Court of St. James, Senator Bayard, of Delaware.

Senator Bayard said:

No man obtained an office except he was a violent partisan, and the office was given to him as a reward for party services; and so things went on until the offices generally were filled under that system, which was false and dangerous in the extreme—a system which, as my friend from Ohio said, is absolutely fatal to the integrity of republican institutions, I care not what party or under what name it may be organized and carried on.

Mr. Chairman, that is the testimony of witnesses of unimpeachable character and of the highest ability-statesmen, Democrats as well as Republicans-depicting the evils and abuses then in vogue, and speaking for the betterment of the service. [Applause.]

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for two minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to address the House for two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Cooper] a question, if he will permit me. I agree substantially with all that Senator Vest said, and I agree generally with the doctrine of an orderly and permanent agree generally with the doctrine of an orderly and permanent civil service. My misgivings with reference to it have grown out of the fact that in my judgment every time that you strengthen the civil service you increase the army of pension beggars, and at last you will have a horde of them supported by pensions. If the President, for whom I have great respect, wanted to be perfectly fair, should he have waited until the close, or nearly the close, of his administration, when practically every office in the South had been filled with Republicans, and then put this blanket of civil-service protection over them and then put this blanket of civil-service protection over them and deny the people in a large section of this country the right to be represented by men whom they want in office?

Mr. HILL. Mr. Cleveland did the same thing.

Mr. HILL.

Mr. SLAYDEN. If he did the same thing, I will say that he did what I do not approve.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. I desire to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that a large number of the fourthclass posmasters were covered into the civil service under Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Surely the gentleman does not expect me to approve of what President Roosevelt did.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. But the gentleman has stated that all these postmasters-

Mr. SLAYDEN. Oh, no; I have reference to this last order, issued October 15, by the present incumbent of the Executive Office. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin think that it was fair and proper?

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman's interrogatory consists of two branches.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Answer the last one first, please. Mr. COOPER. The first one was whether the establishment of a civil service did not look to the establishment of a civil pension list. That is a non sequitur. I do not see how one fol-

Mr. SLAYDEN. It does.

Mr. COOPER. I do not consider that men in office on salary are pensioners while they are discharging the duties of office. It is a misuse of words to apply the term "pensioner" to such a person. That answers that part of the interrogatory. To the next part of the question I would say this: It always has seemed to me that one of the greatest evils in our political life is the old-fashioned spoils system, under which men think that they have discharged their political duties when they have voted for a man who has appointed a postmaster to suit them. Then they become quiescent for four years, caring nothing about public affairs except who is postmaster.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Does the gentleman think he was fair in that order?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to address the committee for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Chairman, it is passing strange to me that gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber did not become conscious of their agony until after they were relieved of their pain. Usually men suffering under an intolerable burden, like men suffering from a bunion, complain of it at the time, but we have heard nothing of the woe of these gentlemen who have been forced to name these fourth-class postmasters under an antiquated spoils system until after the power to appoint them was gone, and then we are overwhelmed with jeremiads. Their pity for us in enduring and assuming this great burden is appreciated, but we would feel, down in our hearts, still greater gratitude and we would attribute to them greater sincerity if we had heard this tale of woe at an earlier date. For 16 years they have been in power and they have not spent 16 minutes of all that time in complaining of the monstrous iniquity of being forced to name fourth-class postmasters. Is it possible that these men could have understood-these able gentlemen-what a monstrous thing it was to be forced to fill fourth-class offices with postmasters most agreeable to their constituents; that that was altogether an inquitous procedure, and that a President, 1,000 miles away, could perform the job much better? They are guilty of nonaction, of a conspiracy of silence akin to misfeasance, in keeping still so long. It is, the poet has said, a noble thing to suffer and be silent and strong. They have certainly borne their agony with amazing fortitude as long as they were called upon to endure it. [Laughter and applause.] If it was such a righteous thing-and God knows they were in dire need of having a President perform righteous acts for the last year or two-why did not some one of those gentlemen, so conscious of the iniquity of this system, whisper it a year or two earlier into the willing ear of the President of the United States? Years ago they might have been relieved, years ago they might have been happy, even as the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Hull] is happy; years ago they might have danced around this Chamber with the heavy load off their shoulders, with nothing to do but to consider great constitu-tional questions, with these letters about petty jobs off their desks and off their minds, if they had but spoken the word. But, Mr. Chairman, they forget the capacity for labor of a Democratic Congressman; they forget our willingness to suffer. [Laughter and applause.]

They forget how we love the people; they forget we worship that God who sees the sparrow's fall; that humble as we are, not so accustomed as those we succeed to the consideration of great constitutional questions, new in office, we are willing to listen to the plaintive cry of the humble postmaster and to take some time even from our more pretentious duties to attend to his claims and see that the will of the people in small communities is met and satisfied. [Loud applause on the Demo-

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] made a point of order against the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia upon the ground that it changed existing law and limited Executive authority. A careful examination of the amendment will reveal the fact that it does not in any respect change existing law, but does place a limitation upon this particular appropriation and in a way limits the Executive authority. The rules of the House provide that you may place a limitation upon appropriations, and there are a number of rulings to the effect that you may place a condition upon an appropriation as to even limit the Executive authority.

One quotation I have from Chairman Watson, of Indiana, will convince the House of that ruling. In passing upon what is known as the "canteen" amendment he made this statement:

It has been repeatedly held in this House and is an invariable precedent that the House may provide that no part of an appropriation shall be used except in a certain way even though the Executive discretion be thereby restricted.

It seems to the Chair this is clearly a limitation on the appropriation and a possible limitation on the Executive discretion, and is in order under the rules of the House. The Chair overrules the point of order, and the Clerk will report the amendment.

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, a few moments ago the gentle-man from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY] became very eloquent in defending the patronage system as to fourth-class post offices, and enunciated the doctrine, which I take it I agree with him on, that that side of the House is much more competent to seek jobs than it is to determine constitutional questions. [Applause on the Republican side.] The gentleman seemed to assume, however, that this side of the House has been enjoying in recent years the naming of fourth-class postmasters. It is very natural gentlemen on that side of the House should assume that because they have not had any connection probably with fourthclass postmasters

Mr. BURLESON. Nor experience.

Mr. MANN. But a great majority of this side of the House for years have had nothing whatever to do with the appointment of fourth-class postmasters, because it was during the Roosevelt administration that fourth-class offices east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio River were placed in the classified service, and that rule was in fact applied to most of the other Northern States.

Mr. BARTLETT. May I interrupt the gentleman?
The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois yield to the gentleman from Georgia?

I do. Mr. MANN.

Mr. BARTLETT. Of course, I was aware of the fact that President Roosevelt placed the fourth-class post offices in a certain territory under the civil service a few years ago, but can the gentleman suggest any reason why the President withheld from its operation the other portions of the country south of the Potomac?

Mr. MANN. Mr. MANN. I can suggest a very good reason. It was not practicable with the limitations of the civil service to cover the entire country into the classified service at one time. Before these offices were covered into the classified service the rule had already been announced by the Post Office Department that it would not remove a fourth-class postmaster in office for the purpose of appointing a new one without charges and cause. These offices have not been patronage offices for many years to the extent that gentlemen on that side of the House assume. It is the fact that when the civil-service law was passed it was in contemplation at the time that as administrations were retired the President would issue orders covering new offices into the classified service, and most of the classified service now is composed of offices which were covered into that service under the civil-service law by retiring Presidents. I came to Congress with the McKinley administration, following the Cleveland administration.

President Cleveland, shortly before he went out of office, covered into the classified service most of the offices not then in which amounted to anything. I listened for some years to arguments and speeches on this side of the House, in the majority under the McKinley administration, much like those I have listened to on that side of the House. This side of the House, in control, had the nerve to stand against the demand of the few office seekers as compared with the many people to be served, and resisted the attempt to return to the undesirable spoils system of the offices of the country. [Applause.] You are now in a position where I hope you will have nerve to vote and not dodge. If you vote for this provision in the law it will be vetoed by the President, but you will be on record before the country as favoring the spoils system instead of the merit system. [Applause.] And when your own President goes into the White House he will not permit you, in the light of the history of his career, to return to the demoralizing spoils system those offices which are at the beginning of his administration under the merit system.

I dare you to vote this amendment into the bill. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. CULLOP. Mr. Chairman, I will say, in reply to the gentleman from Illinois, that for one I shall vote for this amendment, and when I am voting for this amendment I am voting to tear down a rotten spoils system. These men who have had their life tenure fixed by this order secured their offices by the spoils system, and you want us to ratify it now. It is in bad taste for any administration as it is going out of power and there is a change of party to undertake to fasten upon the country officeholders of its own political faith when that party has been repudiated at the polls. [Applause on the Democratic side. l

What does this extension of the civil-service class mean? It means to increase the power that is being brought to bear on Congress to-day to create a civil pension list. To-day the power of patronage in the hands of the Executive of this Nation, it matters not of what political faith, is one of the things that menaces the welfare of the country. Five hundred thousand men are subject to appointment, removal, promotion, or demo-tion in office by the order of the Chief Executive of this Republic. Behind them is a great sum as the annual pay in salaries. A most powerful leverage is brought to bear by virtue of this system to continue the administration in power. And the abuse of this patronage by the former President of the United States and the present Chief Executive brought about the downfall of the Republican Party in the last election. The present Chief Executive was nominated through the official patronage of the former President of the United States. He was renominated at Chicago last June by virtue of the Federal patronage and not as the choice of a majority of the Republicans in this country. It has been used as a political asset and created a great power.

It is time to eliminate it. It has been the subject of political abuse, and to-day these offices are filled by the appointees as Republicans, and they have not come into office by virtue of the civil service, but it is proposed they shall retain their office by virtue of it and feed for the remainder of their lives at the public crib. For one I shall oppose the proposition in whatever form it presents itself. Life tenure of office I deny is advantageous to the public service. It nullifies inspiration and ambition in the holder, because there is no inducement for him to exert himself and elevate the service. Service under it should be for a fixed period of duration, not to exceed four years, with opportunity of reappointment. Then there would be inducement for improvement of service, but as it now is there is none. He is fixed for life, and because of that fact he becomes indifferent in the discharge of his duties and careless as to public sentiment. Both of these are not likely to improve the service, and the public suffers in consequence thereof.

The civil-service law as administered has become a great political machine, and it is no surprise in view of this condition that nearly all appointees are of one political faith. It is no surprise in view of this fact that it has become a powerful factor in the Republican machine and plays an important part in every campaign. It was said many years ago by Roscoe Conkling, of New York, that it would become a "snivel service" instead of a civil service. Has it not practically become so now as administered? Does not everyone know that its administration for some years has been partisan, and as such it has manifested itself throughout every department of the service in which it is known? It needs attention and changes should be made or its beneficial purposes will all be nullified. We all favor good public service, but we know this law as now administered does not produce such a result, and we all deplore that fact. Changes in the law and its administration should be made in order to promote the service and secure to the people and the country the very best service possible.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the particular item in the bill to which the amendment of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARTLETT] has been offered, provides for the employment of technical men to prepare examination questions upon scientific subjects. There is not a dollar carried in this bill to pay post-office inspectors to carry out the Execu-The post-office inspectors are provided for in the Post Office appropriation bill. This proposed amendment can have no effect in law. It limits no appropriation that is necessary to carry on the work under the last Executive order. If gentlemen want to come upon the floor and vote to repeal the civil-service law, let them do it in a proper manner, on a proper bill, from a committee having jurisdiction of that subject. Under the original law the Executive is authorized by Executive order to extend the civil service from time to time. You may by this vote express your disapproval of President Taft's order, but he could renew it to-morrow. You may by a vote upon an amendment that can have no legal effect put yourselves and your party in an embarrassing attitude before the country. After the 4th of March there will be another President. He will consider with great care whether or not the recent order of the President shall stand. He may modify it or he may, in spite of any amendment we put here in this bill, extend it beyond it present scope.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I hope that we will not put ourselves in the attitude of making the country believe that we intend to evade either the letter or the spirit of the civil-service law. [Applause.] I believe that the committee acted wisely and justly when it increased the appropriation for the Civil Service Commission, in order that that commission might have ample force to carry on its work. So, now, what is the use of voting for this amendment to this particular paragraph of the bill? It carries $2,000, with which to employ experts to prepare questions on scientific subjects-chemistry and things of that kind. The original law puts it in the power of the President to extend the civil service. You can not control the Executive unless you repeal the law, and for my part I do not want to repeal the law.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I hope that the amendment will not be adopted. If the purpose be to prevent the use of certain appropriations to defray the expenses of post-office inspectors who are assigned to make investigations in connection with the appointment of fourth-class postmasters under the recent Executive order, it has not been drawn with the usual care and skill of the gentleman who presents it.

The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] has said there are no appropriations in this bill available for the pay of post-office inspectors or for their expenses. But if there were, Mr. Chairman, this amendment would not only prohibit the payment of money to post-office inspectors detailed to select persons to fill fourth-class post offices under the recent Executive order putting them in the classified service, but it would prevent the expenditure of money to defray the expenses of such inspectors to do that work if that Executive order were rescinded, suspended, or revoked. It provides that no part of the amounts appropriated under this paragraph or in this bill shall be used to pay inspectors of the Post Office Department for expenses incurred in making selections and recommendations for the appointment of fourth-class postmasters. Prior to the issuance of the recent Executive order the post-office inspectors were detailed for that very work. This would prevent, regardless of whether they were in the classified service or in the unclassified service, appropriations being utilized for such a purpose.

Moreover, Mr. Chairman, I do not believe it is proper to attempt to penalize an employee for discharging the functions of his office under orders of his superior. The post-office inspectors would have no discretion. If they were directed to make the investigation, even if Congress prohibited the payment of their salaries or expenses when engaged on certain work, they could not assign as a reason for not making it that a particular appropriation could not be utilized to pay them. They would have to do it, and Congress would be attempting to penalize a subordinate for discharging the duties of his office under the direction of his superior. Regardless of the merits of the controversy as to the wisdom or propriety of the order of the President placing fourth-class postmasters in the classified service, I feel quite confident that gentlemen on this side of the House do not wish to enact such a provision as this, that makes it impossible to utilize the post-office inspectors to investigate applicants for fourth-class post offices under any conditions or to penalize them if they do so, at the direction of their superiors. I hope the amendment will not prevail.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARTLETT]. The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the "noes" seemed to have it.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 11, noes 67.

So the amendment was rejected. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Establishment and maintenance of system of efficiency ratings for initial year: Clerks—1 (in charge) of class 3, 2 of class 2, 3 of class 1, 1 (stenographer and typewriter), $1,000; 5 temporary clerks, at $900 each, needed for one year during the installation of the system; in all

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against this paragraph. It is new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from Illinois point out in what particular it is new legislation?

Mr. FOWLER. It is not authorized by law, neither has it been carried in any previous appropriation bill. It is entirely No part of it has ever been enacted heretofore. is no provision for any of the positions created in this paragraph, and it is entirely new legislation.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the last legislative bill provided that a system of efficiency ratings should be kept by the Civil Service Commission. This appropriation is made to enable the commission to carry out the duties imposed upon it by the law. I do not think it is necessary to say anything more.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will ask the gentleman if he has before him the provision in the last legislative bill. If the Chair understands the position of the gentleman from Illinois, it is that this is not authorized by law.

Mr. FOWLER. I desire to call the attention of the Chair to the note to Rule XXI in the Manual, beginning with the last

An appropriation for an object not otherwise authorized does not make authorization to justify the continuance of the appropriation another year, and a mere appropriation for a salary does not create an office, so as to justify appropriations in succeeding years, it being the general rule that propositions to appropriate for salaries not established by law or to increase salaries fixed by law are out of order.

Citing authorities heretofore passed upon.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will ask the Clerk to read a portion of section 4 of the last appropriation act which the Chair has marked in brackets.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 4. The Civil Service Commission shall, subject to the approval of the President, establish a system of efficiency ratings for the classified service in the several executive departments in the District of Columbia, based upon records kept in each department and independent establishment, with such frequency as to make them as nearly as possible records of fact.

The CHAIRMAN. It must be very clear to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fowler] that this authorizes the creation of a system of efficiency ratings. To create such a system there must necessarily be employees to perform the work. This point of order would probably have been good against this provision in the former appropriation bill on the ground of being new legislation. The provision in the present bill is clearly within the authority authorized in the last appropriation bill, which the Clerk has just read from the desk. The Chair thinks the point of order is not well taken, this authorization having been fully made in the last appropriation bill.

Mr. FOWLER. But, Mr. Chairman, in that bill there was no creation of certain offices, which this bill purports to do. If the Civil Service Commission has the authority to discharge certain duties, there is no need, then, of specifying and limiting that Civil Service Commission to any certain line of duty by naming just the specific work, through certain offices, which shall be done. In other words, the Civil Service Commission law does not create the offices which are created in this paragraph, and it has been the universal holding, so far as I have been able to find, that an appropriation bill creating new positions and fixing new salaries is subject to a point of order, and that is just what I read from the book of rules of this House.

The CHAIRMAN. There is no question that the gentleman is correct, except where there is a specific provision authorizing certain work. Where you have a specific authorization there must necessarily be carried with it the power to do that work, and the Committee on Appropriations at this session is appropriating for clerks, and so carrying out the provision of law carried in the last appropriation bill. The point of order is overruled. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For necessary traveling expenses, including those of examiners acting under the direction of the commission, and for expenses of examinations and investigations held elsewhere than at Washington, and including not exceeding $1,000 for expenses of attendance at meetings of public officials when specifically directed by the commission, $12,000.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against at least a portion of this paragraph—that part which appropriates $1,000 for the purpose of attending public meetings. It is new legislation, and in my opinion it is not warranted by any authority in the civil-service act.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will ask the chairman of the committee in charge of the bill whether that is new legislation.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the Chair to section 8 of the appropriation bill in which that law was first enacted.

No money appropriated by this or any other act shall be expended for membership fees or dues or any officer or employee of the United States or of the District of Columbia in any society or association, or for expenses of attendance of any person at any meeting or convention of members of any society or association, unless such fees, dues, or expenses are authorized to be paid by specific appropriation for such purpose or are provided for in express terms in the appropriation act.

That covers the exact language that we have followed here. Mr. COX of Indiana. What is the gentleman reading from? Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I am reading from the law limiting the expenditure of money for these purposes.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Section 8?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Section 8 of the District of Columbia appropriation act for the current year.

Mr. FOWLER. But that is only for the District of Columbia. Mr. BURLESON. But it was made to apply to all the departments

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. That was where the law came from that limited it.

The CHAIRMAN. Has the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fowler] anything further to suggest?

Mr. FOWLER.

Mr. FOWLER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. It strikes the Chair, from the language read by the chairman of the committee having the bill in charge, that it was contemplated that the Committee on Appropriations should have authority and that it does have authority to make this specific appropriation, if they see proper, and the Chair thinks the point of order is not well taken. The point of order

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. BARTLETT. A new independent paragraph at the end of page 31.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Executive order of October 15, 1912, issued by the President of the United States, placing in the competitive classified service postmasters of the fourth class, is hereby repealed.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have the amendment again reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will again be reported.

There was no objection, and the Clerk again reported the amendment. Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against that as being legislation.

Mr. CULLOP. Mr. Chairman, the point of order comes too late; action had already been taken.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina raises the point of order against the amendment, and it occurs to the Chair that the gentleman from South Carolina is a little late, because the Chair looked around to see whether anybody rose, and then the gentleman from Illinois requested that the amendment be again reported.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I did not at first understand the reading of the amendment. The gentleman from Illinois asked for the reading a second time, and then I made the point of order as soon as I knew what it was.

Mr. BURLESON. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from South Carolina was laboring under the apprehension that it was the same amendment that had been heretofore offered and to which the point of order had been made and overruled, and consequently he did not make it at first, but did as soon as he understood the purport of it,

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, while I think the point of order was made too late, I did not make a point of order that it was too late.

The CHAIRMAN. It seems to the Chair that as to this question of a point of order being made too late it ought to be liberally construed, so that the House may have the benefit of the point of order if it is well taken, and the Chair in this case will hold that the point of order was made in time. The Chair does not pass upon the validity of the point of order, but holds that it was in time.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman, I did not make the point that the point of order came too late, because I understand how those things occur, and sometimes in the confusion Members do not understand the purport of the amendment offered. I admit frankly that it is legislation, and the purpose of it is to repeal that which is now law under the order of the President. I do not know, but I think it will reduce expenditures. So far as I am now concerned, Mr. Chairman, I am free to say that it is legislation upon this bill. There is no question about it, and I intended it to be legislation.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, Rule XXI provides in effect that an amendment is in order which shall retrench the expenditures by the reduction of the number and salary of the officers of the United States, by the reduction of the compensation of any person paid out of the Treasury of the United States, or by the reduction of the amounts of money covered by the bill.

While it is clear that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia is subject to a point of order, still if the gentleman from Georgia will offer an amendment reducing the $12,000 of this appropriation to $11,999, provided, etc., his proposition will be in order under the Holman rule and under the repeated decisions of the Chair. I would like very much to aid the gentleman from Georgia in getting the proposition clearly before the House. I would like to know whether gentlemen on that side of the House who for the next few years will be engaged in telling applicants for office that they would appoint them if they could, but a cruel President forbids them the opportunity of recommending any man for these offices, will have the nerve when they have the chance given them of becoming job hunters instead of statesmen.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman, if I may be heard for a moment, I do not speak for anybody but myself, and I stand here to say right now that if the point of order is withdrawn I am ready to vote for this amendment. I offered it with the hope that I might have an opportunity to vote for the amendment to revoke and repeal this order which was enacted or passed on the 15th of October, 1912, about 15 days before the election, placing the fourth-class postmasters under the civilservice law. Now, I have not been a job hunter since I have been a Member of Congress.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Georgia has been and is a distinguished statesman, and I hope we will enable him to preserve that attitude.

Mr. BARTLETT. I have not been a distinguished statesman, and I have not aspired to that category. I have endeavored during the 18 years of service, two of which were during the last Democratic administration, to do the best in my ability, but then I was not a place hunter.

But, Mr. Chairman, we have this as the history of placing fourth-class postmasters under the civil-service law. It is a well-known fact in this country that the delegates to the Republican presidential nominating conventions from the South are composed, generally, of the postmasters and the United States officeholders in that section of the country, and a roll call of the delegates at any presidential convention of the Republican Party for the past few years would have been like calling the roll of the postmasters in the South. We believe they were placed in the classified service for political reasons and we believe that they were covered recently into the civil service in order to take care of political favorites, and I for one am ready to vote to repeal an order passed as this was done, for the purpose for which it was passed, to give the people I represent and the section from which I come an opportunity for once in 14 or 16 years to have some voice in the selection of the fourth-class postmasters, which they have not had for that period of time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. It is not contended by anyone that this puts a limitation on appropriations or that it comes within what is known as the Holman rule. It is a clear change of existing law and is therefore subject to The Chair sustains the point of order, and the point of order. the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of chief clerk and superintendent: Chief clerk, including $300 as superintendent of Treasury Building, who shall be the chief executive officer of the department and who may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury to sign official papers and documents during the temporary absence of the Secretary and the Assistant Secretaries of the department, $4,000; assistant superintendent of Treasury Building, $2,500; clerks—4 of class 4, 1 of class 3, 2 of class 2, 2 of class 1, one $1,000, one $900; 2 messengers; 3 assistant messengers; messenger boy, $360; storekeeper, $1,200; telegraph operator, $1,200; telephone operator and assistant telegraph operator, $1,200; chief engineer, $1,400; 3 assistant engineers, at $1,000; each; 8 elevator conductors, at $720 each, and the use of laborers as relief elevator conductors during rush bours is authorized; 8 firemen; coal passer, $500; locksmith and electrician, $1,400; captain of the watch, $1,400; two lieutenants of the watch, at $900 each; 65 watchmen; foreman of laborers, $1,000; skilled laborers—2 at $840 each, 2 at $720 each; wiremen—1, $900; electrician, $1,200; 34 laborers; 10 laborers, at $500 each; 1 plumber and 1 painter, at $1,100 each; plumber's assistant, $720; 85 charwomen; carpenters—2 at $1,000 each; 1, $720. For the Winder Building: Engineer, $1,000; 3 firemen; conductor of elevator, $720; 4 watchmen; 3 laborers, 1 of whom, when necessary, shall assist and relieve the conductor of elevator; laborer, $480; 8 charwomen. For the Cox Building, 1709 New York Avenue; Two watchmen-firemen, at $720 each; one laborer; in all, $170,960.

Mr. FOWLER, Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on the provision in line 10, page 35. I notice this bill carries a provision for an electrician, which is a new office. I would be glad to have the chairman explain the reason for this new office.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the current law provides for one wireman at $1,000 a year. The testimony before the committee was that the man was a very efficient one. They desire to promote him from $1,000 a year to $1,200 a year because he is an expert, and to change his designation. In view of the fact that the Treasury Department has reduced its force by several hundred employees, the committee felt that when that department came before the committee and requested that a man's salary be advanced, giving good reasons therefor, we ought to do something for them. If the gentleman from Illinois desires to assume the responsibility of keeping this workman up here in the Treasury Department, who is now receiving the salary of $1,000 and is very efficient and worthy, from having an increase to $1,200 we shall have to submit.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I will be very glad to know why the committee did not increase the salary of the two skilled laborers who are receiving a salary of $840 a year and the two at $720 a year?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Because there was nothing brought before the committee. There was no request that their salaries be increased, and no testimony given to the committee which would have justified the committee in increasing

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I will be very glad to leave the $1,200 as it stands, if the committee would increase the salaries of these two skilled laborers,

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, we can not do that. The gentleman understands there are 30,000 employees in the city of Washington, and the committee can have no knowledge of the efficiency and worth of any particular man unless it is brought to the attention of the committee. We do not know who these men are. They are presumably getting what they are worth.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I will be very glad to say that I am in favor of increasing the salaries of these lowsalaried people. They have been working for a long time at a bare subsistence on a very economical basis, and I have no disposition to hold down the salary of any of these low-salaried men; but I am going to insist that whenever there is an increase it shall cover at least a portion of the low-salaried men, and if it can not be applied to them, whenever there is an attempt to increase the salary of a high-salaried man I shall make the point of order. Inasmuch as this man is a low-salaried man, I shall refrain from making the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois withdraws the point of order and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants: Chief of division, $3,500; assistant chief of division, $2,700; estimate and digest clerk, $2,500; 2 principal bookkeepers, at $2,100 each; 12 bookkeepers, at $2,000 each; clerks—14 of class 4, 6 of class 3, 6 of class 2, 3 of class 1; messenger; 3 assistant messengers; messenger boy, $480; in all, $87,180.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on that paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois reserve the point of order to the paragraph?

Mr. FOWLER. No; to that portion of the paragraph which creates the office of messenger boy. I would be glad to ask the chairman of the committee what necessity there is for a new messenger boy, when the bill carries one messenger and three assistant messengers, the same as has been carried in the bill heretofore?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants is unquestionably the most important division in the Treasury Department. It has intimate relations with every other division. It has more intimate and close relations with the Committee on Appropriations than any other division. It is through that division that estimates are all transmitted to the Congress. The work of this office are all transmitted to the Congress. The work of this office increases from year to year, and we have given them one messenger boy only at $480 a year. That is the only increase we allowed them, notwithstanding the great volume of work and the great responsibility. The situation is simply this: If we do not give them this messenger boy at $480 it will be necessary to take some other person who is employed as a clerk or in some other capacity to do the work of carrying papers to the different departments that a boy would do if we allow him.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, if a messenger boy is absolutely necessary, I have no objection to it; but I desire to ask the chairman if the committee unanimously agreed to insert this new legislation?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I do not remember there was any opposition whatever in the committee.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Division of Appointments: Chief of division, $3,000; assistant chief of division, $2,000; executive clerk, $2,000; law and bond clerk, $2,000; clerks—3 of class 4, 4 of class 3, 5 of class 2, 6 of class 1, 4 at $1,000 each, 1 $900; messenger; 2 assistant messengers; in all, $42,180.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of getting some information from the chairman of the committee. The Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department last summer had considerable investigation in sifting out the contingent funds which Congress appropriated and gave to the Secretary of the Treasury for the purpose of improving conditions in the department. With a part of those funds the Secretary employed a firm in Chicago, I believe by the name of Young & Co., if I recollect correctly. They went through the Treasury Department rather carefully, and that committee recommended the abolishment of this Appointment Division, and I am not sure but what some committee formulated and prepared by the Secretary himself-I mean the employees of the department who were made members of the committee-recommended the same thing. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee now whether or not the committee of which he is a member has investigated that question, with a view of seeing whether or not there is any necessity for the maintenance of this bureau in the Treasury Department, or, in other words, whether it can be abandoned without crippling the service'

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. This division is a very important one, I will say to the gentleman from Indiana. A great number of the people who are employed by the Government are bonded. A large number are under heavy bond. Now, this division not only appoints, sifts out in the various bureaus, and makes these formal appointments, but it keeps the bonds of all these officials. I would say frankly, while we have not directed any special investigation toward the abolishment of this particular division, the Treasury Department has shown such a determination to do away with useless employees and to abolish useless divisions that we have felt inclined to grant them within the bounds of reason what they did ask for. I them within the bounds of reason what they did ask for. I think that the Treasury Department has reduced the force something like 700 people.

Mr. COX of Indiana. That is true.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I do not know how many divisions have been abolished and consolidated, but no information has been brought to the committee that would justify the curtailing of any force for which they have asked.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Well, I desire to know whether or not the committee has made any inquiry along that line?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We have not made any specific inquiry as to whether this division should be abolished, and particularly for the reason that the department shows such earnest efforts to do away with useless places.

Mr. COX of Indiana. One of the chief objections that I have observed to this division, as far as I am personally concerned, is, it seems to me, it serves as a rather circuitous route through which employees are procured for the department. If I understand the workings of the machinery in this bureau, if an application is made for an employee that application is made to the appointment division. The appointment division then calls upon the Civil Service Commission, and the Civil Service Commission makes its recommendations to the appointment division, and the appointment division fills the place that may be requested by the department. I was under the impression, while our committee had that matter under investigation, that so far as that part of the work was concerned it could be better served by the heads of the departments themselves than to have it go through the circuitous route that it now takes.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX of Indiana. I do. Mr. MANN. Is not it a fact that the appointment division keeps the roster of the employees of the whole department, and that all promotions and every change in position goes through the appointment division?

Mr. COX of Indiana. That is true; and for that very reason before our committee last summer there was some very stringent criticism on it.

Mr. MANN. That may be.
Mr. COX of Indiana. And the criticism that seemed to our committee pertinent was, as I recall it now—it has been some time since I refreshed my memory on it—that the appointment division did not know the employees who really were entitled to promotion as well as the chiefs of bureaus themselves did.

As I understand, the chiefs of the bureaus make their recommendations, the matter is taken up by the appointment division, and questions in reference to efficiency are considered, and the appointment division lays those matters before the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury who has charge of those matters. The gentleman knows that Mr. Lyman, who is at the head of this division, was formerly Civil Service Commissioner under Mr. Cleveland?

Mr. COX of Indiana. And that very reason is what brought on some considerable criticism.

Mr. MANN. No doubt there has been a good deal of criticism of the appointments of the division, but I think it was because it was not responsive enough in the opinion of certain gentlemen to political pressure.

The criticism was that when a recommendation was made to the chief of the bureau to this appointment division for promotion, sometimes the recommendation would be turned down by the appointment division, and that brought about some considerable criticism before our com-

Mr. MANN. The gentleman understands that in many of these places it is almost impossible for the head of the division to determine in reference to the appointment without its going through somebody else's hands, of course. I do not know whether the appointment division is necessary or not. I do not see how the appointment division could be maintained in control of that part of it without having control of the calling upon the Civil Service Commission for original appointments.

Mr. COX of Indiana. That is what I recollect as being the chlef criticism so far as that was concerned. This appointment division, if I recollect, has something to do with the collec-This appointtion of internal revenue or the payment of salaries in the internal-revenue department. Is that correct?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The division of appointments under the order of the Secretary of the Treasury audits the accounts of the customs service, which amount to $10,000,000 a year.

Mr. COX of Indiana. When you speak of the auditing of the accounts, that is the auditing of the salaries of the employees in the service?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. And other expenditures, The total expenditures of the customs service, amounting to $10,000,000, are audited in this division.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Did the gentleman have any thought in this connection, whether this particular branch of that work would not be better served by turning it over to the customs department of the Government?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. During the last Congress the question of auditing the claims against the Government received very careful consideration at the hands of the Committee on Appropriations, because we found in many of the disbursing offices of the Government an auditing system had In other words, disbursing officers had gathered around them a sufficient force to transpose an ordinary disbursing office into an auditing office. So we went into the question of administrative audit with the departments of the Government, and in the last legislative bill provided there should be an administrative audit and that the disbursing officers should discharge the functions of disbursing officers. And we think we saved a great deal. And this since the last session of Congress has been the division that gives the administrative audits of the customs service.

Mr. COX of Indiana. I will state to the Chairman what was said. I do not know anything about it. I am simply asking for information. The criticism came from Mr. Young, expert accountant, that it should be abolished, and that it would effect an economy of $40,000. And then another criticism came because of the circuitous route through which these appointments were made, and that the auditing in the payment of accounts growing out of the Internal-Revenue Service was in the customs service itself, but I do not know. I am stating now my recollection that some of the committee down there—I think a committee of five, or two out of three-reported at one time that it should be abolished, but I think the gentleman is right in saying that the Secretary himself did not approve of that committee of three. At least, if I recall correctly, his spokesman, if I remember right, Mr. Wilmeth, said it would not bring about any economy. So I simply wanted to get the gentleman's opinion about it, and as to whether they had looked into it with the view of abolishing it.

The Clerk read as follows:

The services of skilled draftsmen, and such other technical services as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem necessary, may be employed only in the Division of Revenue-Cutter Service in connection with the construction and repair of revenue cutters, to be paid from the appropriation "Repairs to revenue cutters,": Provided, That the expenditures on this account for the fiscal year 1914 shall not exceed $3,400. A statement of the persons employed hereunder, their duties, and the compensation paid to each shall be made to Congress each year in the annual estimates.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] reserves a point of order on the last paragraph read by the

Mr. MANN. I do not expect to make the point of order. This provision, apparently, is contemplated to remain as permanent law, except the proviso. I do not know, but ordinarily a provision of this sort in the bill would apply only to the fiscal year in which the appropriation is made, and you limit that to $3,400. That is all right. Then you go ahead with a provision that is at right. Then you go ahead that the that it a statement of the persons employed hereunder, their duties, and the compensation paid to each shall be made to Congress each year in the annual estimates." That would seem to contemplate a permanent provision of law, without any limitation in it at all, because the limitation of amount applies only to the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914. Do you want to make a provision of this sort, which has no limitation in it at all?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I would say that that contemplates an annual appropriation under the Chief of Engineers.

Mr. MANN. I understand that. They have some work.

They are constructing some revenue cutters.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. They have some construction work to do in connection with the Revenue-Cutter Service. The gentleman who appeared before the committee whether an Army officer or otherwise I am not sure

Mr. MANN. He is not an Army engineer. I suppose it was the chief of the Revenue-Cutter Service.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. He said that the plans must be made.

Mr. MANN. I am calling the attention of the gentleman from South Carolina to this proviso, limiting the amount to be expended to $3,400. But if this is a permanent provision of law, then there is no limitation hereafter.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It is just like the provision that has been in the bill for 25 years. It is a lump-sum appropriation, and we require them to specify in each bill how much they have. Mr. MANN. Is this in the current law?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. A similar provi found elsewhere in the bill under the Chief of Engineers. A similar provision is

Mr. MANN. Here is the point about this: An item similar to this occurs in various branches of the service, where it is nece sary to have it every year; but it is not necessary to have this every year in the Revenue-Cutter Service, I think.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. If they do not ask for it, we shall not appropriate it.

Mr. MANN. You do not have to appropriate at all. You have that permanent provision of law here, which does not require any appropriation. That is what I am calling to the gentleman's attention—that it is whally outside the control of the Committee on Appropriations. If the policy of the committee is to expect to cover this every year, it is immaterial to me; but if you do not put this item in every year, mind you, and there were any appropriations for the repair of revenue cutters, they could transfer just as much as they pleased, because there is no limitation upon it.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I will read to the gentleman what Mr. Allen said about it. He said:

In January, 1912, we abolished an office in Baltimore in which we had a draftsman, an assistant draftsman, and a clerk. They were handling the drafting work connected with repairs of revenue cutters. We thought we could do without them, but after trying it we find we can not. This new provision is drawn to correspond with one which appears in the naval appropriation bill each year. It will permit us to pay not to exceed $3,400 for drafting and other services in connection with resenue-cutter work.

pay not to exceed $3,400 for drafting and other services in connection with revenue-cutter work.

Mr. JOHNSON. There is no increase in the appropriation?

Mr. ALLEN. No increase. It simply enables us to expend from the appropriation for repairs this amount of money, which is required in making blue prints and kindred work. I do not think the work will be continuous or that we will have to spend $3,400. We ask that because it was what it approximately cost us in Baltimore.

Mr. MANN. Well, he says he does not think the work will be continuous. Mr. Allen did not explain to you the real reason. I will. Probably he did not think about it, or was not aware of it; I do not know. But under the law appropriations for the construction of revenue cutters can not be used for the payment of employees in the District of Columbia for this kind of work. The money could be used over in Baltimore and the office was over in Baltimore. Then they brought the office over here, and it is very proper that the amount necessary for the repair of vessels of the Revenue-Cutter Service should be used for that purpose. But under your provision that goes into the permanent law. They do not have to ask you for it hereafter.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The clerk to the committee, who understands these matters thoroughly, says that this item is identical with a number of others that we carry every year, and of course the gentleman from Illinois understands that this item will be carried from year to year, because, as I stated, this work was hitherto done in Baltimore and paid for out of appropriations for the Revenue-Cutter Service.

If we are going to use the money for the Revenue-Cutter Service in the District of Columbia there must be a specific authorization to that effect in order to make it law. Now, if they determine to dispense with the services of anybody in the city of Washington hereafter, then the estimates that come down to the Congress will not contain that item.

Mr. MANN. I think I will try to make myself more clear to the committee. Two or three years ago we made an appropriation for two new revenue cutters, with a limitation of cost. That limitation of cost is supposed to cover all of this work. The office was maintained outside of the District of Columbia, and there was no authority to maintain anybody inside of the District of Columbia for that work, except by specific authority of Congress. Now, under this provision hereafter, if it remains permanent law, whatever the Committee on Appropriations may do, the limit of cost will not cover the services of skilled draftsmen and other technical services in connection with the con-struction of these new revenue cutters, but that will be paid out of the appropriation for repairs to the revenue cutters. That is not a very desirable thing to do. However, I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from the point of order. The Clerk will read. The gentleman from Illinois withdraws

The Clerk read as follows:

Division of Mail and Files: Superintendent of Mail, $2,500; registry clerk, $1,800; distributing clerk, $1,400; clerks—1 of class 2, 1 of class 1, 1 $1,000; mail messenger, $1,200; 2 assistant messengers; messenger boy, $360; in all, $12,300.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. I desire to inquire of the chairman of the committee why you increased the mail messenger's salary from

$1,000 to $1,200

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. His salary was $1,200. In submitting the estimates for the present fiscal year, by a mistake made by somebody, the estimate was made to call for a salary of only $1,000. We provided in the law for the present year that his salary should be $1,000, thereby reducing the salary $200 on account of the mistake in the estimates.

Mr. FOWLER. But it is increased $200 in this bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. As I have said, his salary for last year was $1,200. The Treasury Department, in sending the estimates to Congress, called for a salary for this man of $1,000, reducing the salary $200 by inadvertence. The committee made the appropriation for the current year only $1,000. It was purely a mistake, and we are simply putting the salary back to what it formerly was and to what it was intended to be. Mr. FOWLER. I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois withdraws

the point of order, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

the point of order, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of the Supervising Architect: Supervising Architect, $5,000; executive officer, $3,250; technical officer (in lieu of chief, technical division, transferred from salary roll, sundry civil act), $3,000; drafting division—superintendent (in lieu of chief constructor), $3,000; drafting division—superintendent (in lieu of chief constructor), $3,000; assistant superintendent (in lieu of assistant constructor), $2,750; superintendent, computing division (in lieu of chief computer), $2,750; mechanical engineering division—superintendent (in lieu of chief mechanical engineering division—superintendent (in lieu of chief mechanical and electrical engineer, etansferred from general expenses, sundry civil act), $2,760; structural division—superintendent (in lieu of chief structural engineer, transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), $2,400; structural division—superintendent (in lieu of chief structural engineer, transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), $2,400; structural engineer, transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), $2,400; superintendent, in lieu of assistant chief structural engineer, transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), $2,500; superintendent, accounts division (in lieu of architectural draftsman, acting as chief, repairs division (in lieu of architectural draftsman, acting as chief, repairs division), $2,500; superintendent, maintenance division (in lieu of chief of accounts division), $2,500; superintendent, maintenance division (in lieu of chief of maintenance division), $2,500; files and records division—chief, $2,500; assistant chief (transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), $2,500; inspectors—5 at $2,300 each (transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), $2,500; inspectors—5 at $2,500 each (transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), at $1,500 each, 13 o salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act); skilled laborers—4 at $1,000 each (transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), 7 at $960 each (transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), 1 $900 (transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), 1 $840 (transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act); laborers—1 $660, 1 $600 (transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act); in all, $235,920.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. FOWLER. I desire to reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fowler] reserves a point of order.

Mr. MANN. Perhaps we had better dispose of the point of order first. Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Does the gentleman make the point of order?

Mr. FOWLER. No; I do not make the point. I reserve it. Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It is not subject to a point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The gentleman from Illinois has not The CHAIRMAN. stated the ground of his point of order.

I reserved the point of order. I did not Mr. FOWLER. want to take the floor away from the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is no longer seeking the floor, and the Chair was trying to settle the point of order. What is the point of order?

Mr. FOWLER. I desire to know the reason for the increases of various salaries in this paragraph.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is not an increase of a salary in the paragraph. Heretofore a certain part of the force in the Supervising Architect's Office has been paid out of appropriations made in the legislative bill and another part of his force was paid out of appropriations made in the sundry civil bill. The last sundry civil act required that hereafter all persons who were paid out of the lump sums in the sundry civil bill shall be appropriated for in the legislative bill. So we have simply consolidated the two forces, as we are required to do by law. Not a single additional person has been provided for and not a single salary has been increased. They asked us to do both, both of which we refused to do.

Mr. FOWLER. In line 19, page 38, I see that the salary of the drafting superintendent is $3,000, and it was carried in the last bill at $2,750.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman will find, if he examines that item, that the superintendent carried in this bill is the chief constructor, who was paid $3,000.

Mr. FOWLER. Yes; but there was a drafting division, and the superintendent thereof in the last bill was paid a salary of

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The amount that is carried here at $3,000 is carried in the last bill at $3,000 under the words "chief constructor."

Mr. FOWLER. Then on the same page, line 21, under a heading of "General expenses," there was transferred from the salary roll one of the assistants who was drawing $2,500, and under this appropriation in this bill he is given $2,750.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. He was carried in the last bill as an assistant constructor at $2,750, just what we have given him here.

Mr. FOWLER. In the other bill it was an assistant superintendent, and he only drew $2,500. Now it is proposed to give him $2,750.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is the law on page 202, assistant constructor, $2,750.

Mr. FOWLER. And here he is assistant superintendent.
Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. He was carried in the last bill under the words "assistant constructor." We call it assistant superintendent instead of assistant constructor, but I state to the gentleman from Illinois that we have not changed a single salary in the paragraph. Mr. FOWLER. Then how does the gentleman account for the increased appropriation?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is no increase. Mr. FOWLER. In the last bill it was $228,620 and now it is $235,920, according to this bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I thought I had explained to the gentleman that there were two forces in the Supervising Architect's Office; one part of the force was paid out of appropriations in this bill—the legislative bill—and the other part of the forces was paid out of appropriations in the sundry civil bill. The last sundry civil bill required that these forces should be consolidated, and that hereafter they should all be carried specifically in the legislative bill. So that this bill now before the committee carries two forces that have hitherto been carried in that office under the two appropriations. But I state to the gentleman that not a single dollar is added to any salary and not a single person is added to the force.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, with the explanation given, I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, as a matter of information I want to ask the gentleman a question or two. On page 39, at the end of line 3, commences the item "Structural division superintendent (in lieu of chief structural engineer transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), $2,750." As a matter of fact, that man is not transferred from the sundry civil roll, is he? Is he not the same as the structural engineer carried in the appropriation bill?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. They were paid out of a mp sum. They were specifically appropriated for in the lump sum. sundry civil bill while a great many were paid out of a lump

Mr. MANN. But we specifically provided for them in the legislative bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Not in this particular. Mr. MANN. I do not know where you will find anybody that corresponds to the chief structural engineer carried in the legislative bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. He is paid out of a lumpsum appropriation, outside of these two rolls, and he is brought into this bill.

Mr. MANN. Who draws a salary of the present chief structural engineer and the assistant structural engineer?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I do not know any individual in the Supervising Architect's Office.

Mr. MANN. I do not mean the individual. We have here a chief structural engineer at $2,750 and an assistant structural engineer at $2,400, and these are the identical places carried in your bill, under the head of "Structural division—superintendent (in lieu of chief structural engineer transferred from salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), $2,750, and assistant superintendent (in lieu of assistant chief structural engineer transferred from the salary roll, general expenses, sundry civil act), $2,400." You say they are transferred from the sundry civil list when they are not.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that the estimates that came down from the Treasury Department in regard to the consolidation of these two forces was the most complicated thing I ever saw, and the most competent man in Washington-and the gentleman knows to whom I refer-spent several days in unraveling it and getting all the men fixed.

I am perfectly satisfied, and I state it without any hesitation, that this bill as it is now written provides for every man who is provided for in the previous bills and does not provide for any more.

Mr. MANN. I think that is correct. I am not disputing that, but while a very competent man-the competent man-has been over this, still I take the liberty of making a correction even to him. This bill erroneously states that these two places are transferred from the salary roll of the general expense under the sundry civil act, whereas, as a matter of fact, they are both provided for by the current legislative appropriation bill and are not paid out of the sundry civil general expense account

Mr. Chairman, I understand that the point of order was withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order has been withdrawn. Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. As I understand, this, to a certain extent, remodels the office of the Supervising Architect. Of course, it is true it only brings together men who are paid out of different rolls. What information is the gentleman able to give the House with reference to the progress which the Supervising Architect's Office is making concerning that highly mooted question of the construction of public buildings heretofore authorized? I think it is due to the House that we be informed now what progress is being made by the Supervising Architect's Office, because I take it that we will soon again be up to the question of whether it is necessary for the House, in order to aid the public business in other matters, to pass a new bill providing for additional public

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, in the interest of my friends who are concerned in public buildings, I inquired of the Supervising Architect, or of some other authority, what progress they were making under the new regulations in regard to using old plans in part, and he stated that without increasing the force they would be able to get out plans much more rapidly than they had hitherto.

Mr. MANN. How many buildings have been already authorized, plans for which have not yet been prepared or begun?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I can not answer that question, but quite a number of buildings have been authorized for which no plans have been begun.

Mr. MANN. Are there as many as several hundred?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I think there are probably 200 or more.

Mr. MANN. Is the gentleman able to say whether, with the appropriation that is made here, the Supervising Architect's Office will be able to prepare the plans for the buildings already authorized within the next fiscal year?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No. He stated that they had been preparing about 90 plans a year, but that under the changed conditions they would be able to get out about 110 with the same force.

Mr. MANN. I take it, then, that the gentleman does not consider it absolutely necessary at this time to authorize the construction of new buildings, except those that may be in the nature of emergencies?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I think there are many things of far more pressing importance to this country than the construction of new buildings

Mr. MANN. I was in hopes that we might get some observation from some member of the Committee on Public Buildings, but I suppose they are so busily engaged in attending to the ordinary duties of that committee, at the committee room, that they are not able to be present on this floor at this time, because I do not see any of them here.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of Comptroller of the Treasury: Comptroller of the Treasury, $6,000; Assistant Comptroller of the Treasury, $4,500; chief clerk, $2,500; chief law clerk, $2,500; nine law clerks revising accounts and briefing opinions—one $2,100, eight at $2,000 each; expert accountants—six at $2,000 each; private secretary, $1,800; clerks—eight of class four, three of class three, one of class two; stenographer and typewriter, $1,400; typewriter-copyist, $1,000; two messengers; assistant messenger; laborer; in all, $73,460.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on that portion of the paragraph touching the salary of the Comptroller of the Treasury, $6,000. My recollection is that the law creating the office fixed that salary at $5,500, and that his salary was increased, probably at the close of the Sixty-first Congress, by an appropriation committee. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee whether or not he thinks a salary of $6,000 is really due that office?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I believe the salary is fixed by law at $5,500. It has been increased not by this committee but by some former Congress

Mr. COX of Indiana. At the close of the Sixty-first Congress, think, it was increased.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. This committee is simply carrying the amount, that has been carried. The man who is at the head of that department is a very important man. He is one of the most powerful men connected with the Government so far as the expenditure of the public money is concerned. He must pass upon and construe every act of Congress that authorizes public expenditure, and this committee did not feel justified in undoing what a former Congress had done.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Was the gentleman from South Carolina a member of the Appropriations Committee when this increase was given him?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Simply followed the current law of the previous year. That is my understanding of it.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. COX of Indiana. What does the gentleman really feel as to whether or not the office is worth $6,000?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Well, I think it takes one of the best lawyers connected with the Government service to fill it well.

Mr. COX of Indiana. I quite agree with the gentleman on It is a very responsible position, but I do not agree with the plan of increasing the salary in this way on an appropriation act.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We have not increased it; we took it as we found it. Of course, it is subject to the point of order.

Mr. COX of Indiana. And I agree the gentleman's committee has not increased it, but it has been increased. Does the gentleman feel it ought to be $6,000?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Well, I think that the man in that place now has certainly earned $6,000. I do not know who the next man will be. It is a very responsible position.

Mr. COX of Indiana. What I am trying to get at—perhaps I am not putting it to the gentleman in a fair way and manner—is whether or not he feels the salary of $6,000 is commensurate with his responsibility.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Well, certainly a man filling an office of that responsibility ought to have that amount of salary, and I should not care to fill it at all; the responsibility is too great.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I will withdraw the point of order, then.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of Auditor for War Department: Auditor, $4,000; assistant and chief clerk, $2,250; law clerk, $2,000; chief of division of accounts, $2,500; chief of division, $2,000; 2 assistant chiefs of division, at $1,900 each; chief transportation clerk, $2,000; clerks—22 of class 4, 49 of class 3, 62 of class 2, 50 of class 1, 9 at $1,000 each, 3 at $900 each; skilled laborer, $900; messenger; 5 assistant messengers; 10 laborers; messenger boy, $480; in all, $307,470.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on this paragraph. I desire to inquire of the chairman of the committee, on page 42, line 1, what is the necessity for two assistant chiefs of divisions at $1,900 each, and also chief transportation clerk at $2,000? All three of these positions are new. Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Those are new positions.

Mr. Chairman, I want to say, if the gentleman desires to make a point of order against this item, that it is subject to the point of order; but I also want to call his attention to the fact that the appropriations for this particular office were reduced in the last year from $336,750 to $310,070, or a reduction in round numbers of $26,700, and 21 people were dropped. There was a saving of $26,000 and the services of 21 people were dispensed with. Now, as I have said on this floor before, and I repeat now, this department has shown such a commendable zeal in trying to reduce expenditures and to do away with useless employees that when we find them coming back here and asking us for a small increase of salary we feel like giving it to them.

Mr. FOWLER. Well, Mr. Chairman, I commend the gentleman's committee for its great work of retrenchment, but I thought that the work had been done by the force that is already provided for in the last legislative bill. Now here is an increase of three new positions over that of the last bill.

Mr. MANN. Is not there a reduction in this bill from two chiefs of division at $2,000 to one chief of division?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes; we drop out one man. We only have one in this bill.

Mr. MANN. There are two in the current law and one in this bill. Mr. FOWLER. But in this bill there are two assistant chiefs of division. Mr. MANN. There were two in the current law at $2,000-that is, chiefs of division-and there is only one in this bill. Mr. FOWLER. This is current law

Mr. MANN. In the current law there are two chiefs of division at $2,000 and in this bill there is only one.

Mr. FOWLER. I am speaking of assistant chiefs of division, Mr. MANN. At $1,900? I say they had two chiefs of division and they cut out one and there is only one additional office.

Mr. FOWLER. There were two transportation clerks? Mr. MANN. No; there were two chiefs of division, and instead of that they drop one and make two assistant chiefs. would like to say a word about the transportation clerks; do not know anything about this item.

Mr. FOWLER. I wanted to ascertain the use for this transportation clerk. It seems to be an entirely new position.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman will permit, for several years, at different times, I have taken up with the War Department the question of the railroad rates paid by that department for transportation. Of course, it is a very complex matter to figure out the railroad rates so as to get the best where you are shipping stuff throughout the United States. I have called the attention—because, I suppose, of my connection with the Commit-tee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce so long on railway matters-of the War Department a number of times to the fact that in some cases the rates that were being paid for freight were probably higher than ought to be paid to secure transportation between two points, although I will say that the transportation branch of the War Department is, I think, exceedingly efficient. But the War Department is shipping both personnel and freight in very large amounts throughout the United States. It becomes extremely important to know whether we get the best rate that is practicable. When these items are passed upon by the War Department they must be audited in the Office of the Auditor for the War Department, and it is extremely important that we have a very efficient force in the auditor's office so that, if improperly or unnecessarily, the War Department starts in to allow a higher rate of transportation or ships freight over a route where the expense is greater, they will be called down by the auditor's office.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Will the gentleman yield for a ques-

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. COX of Indiana. I do not know whether the gentleman has investigated this phase of the subject or not, nor do I know whether my information is accurate or not, but I have received information to this effect: For instance, the War Department would buy a carload of salt in New York City and ship it to Fort Sam Houston, Tex., where the freight during that haul would actually cost as much or more than the salt would cost; have you ever had occasion to investigate that question?

Mr. MANN. I think that is not the case, but I think this has happened: For instance, when the troops were ordered to Texas a year or two ago, or whenever it was, I ascertained that there was considerable freight shipped from the various Army posts to Texas, where probably the expense of the freight, together with the original cost, were far greater than would have been the expense of purchasing the material in Texas. Here was the case: The War Department had contracted to purchase, perhaps, hay to be delivered to Fort Sheridan, Chicago. They had purchased a lot of hay, and they had a lot of hay on hand. They had a contract agreeing to take a certain amount of it. Now, that was transferred in various ways to Texas, certainly at some higher expense than would have been the case if they had purchased the hay in Texas, but relieving the Government from responsibility under its contract for failure to carry it out and dispose of the material, which otherwise might have had to be sold at second hand. I investigated that matter in the Quartermaster General's Office, and have been over this freight matter with his office a number of times. It is a very complicated proposition.

Mr. FOWLER. Who has been discharging the duties of this transportation clerk heretofore?

Mr. MANN. Really I am unable to furnish my colleague information on this subject concerning the auditor's office. do not know. My communications and work have been in con-nection with the Quartermaster General's Office, which incurred the original liability, but these accounts all have to be audited in the auditor's office. I say it is extremely important that there be an efficient force there, because any mistake that may be made in the Quartermaster General's Office will be corrected in the auditor's office. I do not know who occupies the place, nor am I familiar with the force in the office which has to do with that subject.

Mr. FOWLER. I can not understand the use of a transportation clerk in this department.

Mr. MANN. Well, this transportation clerk, I supposetainly of the office-has to audit all the freight bills of the War Department, an extremely complicated proposition. If the War Department wants to ship freight from Chicago to Omaha, or from Chicago to Texas, or anywhere else throughout the country, first you have the land-grant railroads that have to be taken into consideration, where you get a cheaper rate of freight. Then perhaps it is cheaper to ship by one route than Then there is a quarrel all the time as to classification of freight, and the War Department succeeds every once in a while in having the classification changed in the interest of the Government, and, on the other hand, the railroads are frequently seeking to change the classification of freight so as to put freight in a higher classification and charge more. Now, all these cases have to be figured out by the auditor's office as well as by the Quartermaster General's office, because the auditor has to audit these claims.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I will give the gentleman in concrete form just what the difference is between the proposed bill and the current law. In the office of the Auditor for the War Department an assistant and chief clerk, at $2,250, is provided for instead of a chief clerk and chief of division at the same salary; a chief of division, at $2,000; two assistant chiefs of division, at $1,900 each; and a chief transportation clerk, at $2,000, are provided for instead of two chiefs of division, at $2,000-that is one of these men who is taken care of under another designation-and two clerks, at $1,800 each; and a reduction is made of one clerk, at $1,000, and two clerks, at $900 each, so that the appropriation in this bill is $307,470, while in the current law it is $310,070.

Mr. FOWLER. I know. Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We reduced that office $26,750 this year below the figures of last year, and notwithstanding these slight changes here we are reducing it this year about $3,000.

Mr. FOWLER. You reduced the number of clerks in class 4 from 24 to 22?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina, Yes. They get $1,800 each.

Mr. FOWLER. And you reduced from 10 to 9 the number of clerks drawing $1,000 each, and from 5 to 3 the number of clerks drawing $900 each?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes, sir.

Mr. FOWLER. I congratulate the gentleman on the good service, but I could not understand the reason for this chief transportation clerk especially, and I do not yet.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] has explained to his colleague that the transportation question is a very large question with the United States Government, and particularly with the War Depart-

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order. The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For compensation on a piece-rate basis, to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, of such number of employees as may be necessary to tabulate by the use of mechanical devices the accounts and vouchers of the postal service, $166,960.

Mr. MANN. I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] reserves a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. MANN. I understand we authorize the Auditor for the Post Office Department to employ the piecework system in that office at least to a certain extent. How far is it expected that the piecework system is to be inaugurated in the auditor's office and other branches of the Government service, and what is the occasion for departing from the principle that the Government has maintained, as a rule, at least certainly in Washington, of employing competent people to work a certain number of hours a day, without starting in on the principle which is condemned generally by people of having people do work on the piecework basis?

Mr. FOSTER. May I inquire of my colleague whether under this a lump sum is given?

Mr. MANN. Yes.
Mr. FOSTER. And then the Auditor for the Post Office Department or the Secretary of the Treasury fixes the amount that should be paid for this piecework?

Mr. MANN. Of course they fix the amount. As I understand, this is done with machinery now. This is the work of tabulating money-order returns and money orders, I suppose. But is there a good reason for our starting in to establish the piecework system in the Government service? I think we have not done it in the Census Office, although the work there is very similar.

Mr. FOSTER. Is it the gentleman's idea, then, that in operating these machines they should be operated by persons who are employed on a yearly salary instead of by the piecework system?

Mr. MANN. Yes; that is on one side of it, and the piecework system is on the other side.

Mr. FOSTER. Is it possible that these machines are not operated continuously, and for that reason it might be more convenient and economical to use the piecework system?

Mr. MANN. Oh, no. These machines are operated just as continuously as machines in any other branch of the service are operated. This is the operating work, I understand, of the money-order division, work formerly done by hand under a very poor and long-drawn-out system. This introduces the machine-tabulation system, a very desirable thing to do. why is it necessary to introduce the piecework system simply because we introduce the machines?

Mr. FOSTER. Like my colleague, I am trying to get some information. As I understand it, they use these tabulating machines in the Census Office.

Mr. MANN. They do not use these machines, but they do use tabulating machines

Mr. FOSTER. Machines of this kind.

Mr. FOSTER. Machines of this kind.
Mr. MANN. They use tabulating machines.
Mr. FOSTER. Are they on a piecework basis?
Mr. MANN. I think not. I do not know whether any of them are. Personally, I doubt the desirability of introducing the piecework basis in the departmental service.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the objection?

Mr. COX of Indiana. What is the objection to putting them on a piecework basis?

Mr. MANN. We have had discussed here and elsewhere, for instance, the Taylor efficiency system.

Mr. COX of Indiana. This does not apply to the Taylor efficiency system, does it?

Mr. MANN. No; but this applies the Taylor efficiency system to us. The inevitable result, where people work upon a piece basis, is that they strain themselves in doing the work, or many of them do, and, as a rule, work that can be fairly measured and compensated by day work is not put on the piece basis and ought not to be.

Mr. COX of Indiana. I take it when the genfleman says they strain themselves in doing piecework that they do it because the more work they do the greater is their pay?

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I do not believe that is the objection to piecework among mechanics. The objection that labor organizations have had to the piecework system has been that after the rate per unit had been fixed, especially skillful men, who are known as pacemakers, are able to earn what the people in control of the establishment consider to be more than a man in their position of life ought to be paid, and they regulate the rate per unit upon the ability of the pacemaker, so that the average man and the man a little below the average is unable to earn reasonable compensation for his work. That is the objection that mechanics and labor unions usually have to the piecework system. Mr. MANN.

The gentleman is correct, but I did not quite finish my statement. Some people absolutely strain themselves under a piecework system, and through that and through personal adeptness are able to turn out a large amount of work. Others are told that they ought to be able to do as well. they do as well, the result is a decrease in the compensation per piece, and if they do not do as well they are apt to be fired from the service.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I should like to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill, When did the Government establish a piecework system of this sort and why was it done?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Piecework has been going on in this particular department for two or three years, I think.

When the Auditor for the Post Office Department was before the Committee on Appropriations he was asking that annual leave be extended to people engaged in this piecework, and this bill extends it to them. This question was asked Mr. Kram:

Mr. Gillett. Has this piece system worked well?

Mr. Kram. It has been very satisfactory. An analysis of the pay rolls shows that the average compensation paid employees transferred from the salary roll to the piece-rate basis has been increased 15 per cent as a result of the transfer. On the other hand, the increased output of work has reduced the cost of key-punching cards from 24 cents per hundred to 15 cents per hundred, resulting in a net saving to the Government of approximately 36 per cent.

Mr. Bailey. There was a decrease of $100,120 last year in that office.

So that under the piecework system, as it is in operation in the auditor's office, the employees have increased their earnings 15 per cent and the Government has had a saving of 36 per cent.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Is there any other reason? Is it due to the piecework system that this result has been obtained? hardly see how the compensation of employees could be increased to that extent and the cost of the work reduced to that extent as a result of the piecework basis. It must be due to some new methods of doing the work or something of that kind.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The labor-saving devices I have never seen, but these people are not complaining.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I am opposed to the Government establishing a piece-rate system without there is some special reason, because a piece-rate system, as a general thing, has proved to be to the disadvantage of the working people. Wherever it has been changed from piecework to day wages the employees as a rule are satisfied, and it has been at their request.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I will call the gentleman's attention to the fact that we are not inaugurating the system.

Mr. BUCHANAN. There can be no good results from the piecework system.

Mr. FITZGERALD. This does not set a precedent. Government pays on the piece-rate system in a number of departments. In the Government yards in a number of lines the mechanics were paid on a piece-rate basis. At first they were reluctant to have it established, but now they are heartily in favor of it. The reason is that the same changes and conditions were not common in Government employment that has been common in private establishments. It seemed to the committee that this was one of those exceptional cases in the auditor's office and the Post Office Department. This applies only to those employed on the auditing of the money-order The result has been that instead of taking nine months from the time the money order was issued to complete the audit they are now completed in about three months.

do not understand that there is any objection whatever on the part of the employees

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We have heard no complaint whatever from any employee who is working on a piecework basis. There are many people so employed in the Government Printing Office, in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, in the navy yard, and all through the Government service, and we have had no complaint.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

The Secretary of the Treasury may, during the fiscal year 1914, in his discretion, diminish the number of positions of the several grades below the grade of clerk at $1,000 per annum in the office of the Auditor for the Post Office Department and use the unexpended balances of the appropriations for the positions so diminished as a fund to pay, on a piece-rate basis, to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, the compensation of such number of employees as may be necessary to tabulate, by the use of mechanical devices, the accounts and vouchers of the postal service.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask the chairman for information in relation to tabulating machines, whether it is intended to purchase them or whether they are to be used by the Government for an annual rental?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We buy some and we rent others. We are carrying in this bill—and have been carrying for a number of years—an item under the Census Office authorizing them to make experiments in developing calculating ma-In the taking of the last census we purchased outright and acquired many machines at very much less expense than 10 years before it had cost us to rent them. In 1900 it cost about $400,000 to rent the machines that were used in the tabulation of the census returns. In 1910, under this system of appropriating from year to year a small amount of money for developing these tabulating machines, we are able, for something over $300,000, to develop and buy the machines that were

The machines that are used in the Census Office for the purose of enumerating the population will be used in the Auditor's Office for the Interior Department in auditing pension checks.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the gentleman know about the value of those machines?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No; I am not familiar with their value. I believe where we can not buy and must rent that the rental is excessive, and that is why the Government is trying to develop and improve machines.

Mr. FOSTER. The hearings show that $480 was paid as an annual rental for certain machines and $240 for others. the committee get any information as to the value of those machines?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No; we have not the information to enable us to state accurately what one of these machines would be worth on the market if sold. Unfortunately they are not sold; they are protected by patents; and the owners refuse to sell and the Government is obliged to rent. In these cases I am satisfied that the rental is excessive.

Mr. FOSTER. Are there no other tabulating machines except these that they rent that are successful?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There are many devices. I am not familiar with them, but all the time improvements are in progress

Mr. FOSTER. There is no particular competition in reference to renting these machines, but the department, I suppose, selects the kind that they believe best adapted to the purpose.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. They select the machines best adapted to the purpose in hand.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Cierk read as follows:

Office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue; Commissioner of Internal Revenue, $6,000; deputy commissioner, $4,000; deputy commissioner, $3,600; chemists—chief $3,000, 1 $2,500; assistant chemists—2 at $1,800 each, 1 $1,600, 1 $1,400; heads of divisions—4 at $2,500 each, 5 at $2,250 each; superintendent of stamp vault, $2,000; private secretary, $1.8(0; clerks—3 at $2,000 each, 31 of class 4, 27 of class 3, 41 of class 2, 40 of class 1, 32 at $1,000 each, 42 at $900 each; 4 messengers; 21 assistant messengers; 16 laborers; in all, $359,990.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on this paragraph. I shall confine it to some specific parts. I desire to ask the chairman of the committee the necessity for creating a chief chemist and an assistant chemist?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. They are simply brought from another place.

Mr. FOWLER. But the chemist in the last appropriation bill drew only $2,500 a year. Then there was another chemist.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. If the gentleman will look at the copy of the law he has in his hand, he will find that last year there were three short paragraphs providing for that force, and if he will look in the second paragraph he will find a chief chemist provided for at $3,000. It is simply a consolidation of all of them, and they are merged into one para-

Mr. FOWLER. That may be true. I am inclined to think the gentleman is correct about that. I desire, however, to further ask why it is that there is an increase in the force.

The bill provides for "heads of divisions, four at $2,500 each." Last year there were provided only three at $2,500 each.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We increased the force in that office by one clerk at $2,000, one clerk at $1,800, one clerk at $1,600, and the salary of the head of one division was increased from $2,250 to $2,500.

Mr. FOWLER. What was the occasion for that increase? Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The occasion for the increase in the office of the Internal Revenue Commissioner is that he has charge of the collection of many millions of revenue. The commissioner stated before the committee that within reasonable limitations for every dollar that we gave him he could increase the revenues many dollars.

Mr. FOWLER. Could he not increase it with a salary of $2,000 the same as with a salary of $2,500?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We gave one man an increase of $250. Outside of that there is no increase in any-body's salary. We simply gave him an increase of force. Mr. FOWLER. I see there is an increase of the force all

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We have not increased the force in the same proportion that the work has been increased.

Mr. FOWLER. There is an increased appropriation of $23,990 over that of last year.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes; and the work in that office is very rapidly increasing. Which one of the clerks received an in-

Mr. FOWLER. creased salary of $250?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It is the clerk that passes on technical matters in that office relating to the collection of over $150,000,000 a year. He is certainly a man of very great ability. He passes upon the technical matters in that office involved in the collection of $150,000,000 a year, and we thought he was certainly entitled to the salary that we provide.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make the point of order against the increase in the salary of that clerk. The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman withdraw the other point of order?

Mr. FOWLER. I desire to make the point of order against the increase in chief of division. I think there is the creation of a new clerk under the item "Heads of divisions." There were three in the last appropriation bill and four in this at

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. But we have the right to increase the number of men to do the work from year to year. The current law is taken as fixing the salary, and an increase in salary is subject to the point of order. But to give six clerks instead of four is not subject to a point of order; otherwise the governmental service could never grow with the growth of the country.

Mr. FOWLER, Mr. Chairman, I think the whole paragraph is subject to the point of order. If the gentlemen are not willing to point out those increases where there can be a specific point of order made against the increase of salaries, I desire to make the point of order against the whole paragraph. This bill came in at such an hour that it gave no one of the Members of the House an opportunity to make an examination of it in order to point out specifically all of the increases.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, there is, I believe, authority under the statutes for the appointment of heads of division or chiefs of division. chiefs of division. Of course if there be no such authority as that, there is no authority for appropriating for any of these heads of division. Now, what has been done in this case? In the current law there are three heads of division carried at $2,500 each and six heads of division carried at $2,250 each. It is quite competent for Congress to increase that to four heads of division at $2,500 and seven heads of division at $2,250, because the number of heads of division is not limited by any act of Congress. The Treasury Department having authority under the law to have heads of division, the number is wholly within the control of Congress, and we are not limited by the existing appropriation act as to the number. Now, what has been done by this bill is, in fact, to increase the number of heads of division at $2,500 by one and decrease the number of heads of division at $2,250 by one, and it is assumed by gentlemen that there was some one individual who is increased!

from $2,250 to $2,500. On the centrary, it may be that the Treasury Department proposes to abolish one of the heads of division now existing, which it has the right to do, and provide for a new head of division, which it has a right to do. The items must be considered entirely apart from each other, so far as the bill is concerned. Private information which gentlemen may have which leads them to assume that a particular individual or a particular head of division is to have an increase of salary is not shown on the face of the bill and is not information for the use of the Chairman of the committee on the point of order. We could make this four heads of division at $2,500 if we can provide for one at all, hence the item is not subject to the point of order.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Allow me to interrupt the gentleman. In 1866 Congress specifically authorized seven heads of divisions, at an annual salary of $2,500, for the Internal-Revenue Office, so we are within the law.

Mr. MANN. Well, if the law fixes seven at $2,500, four certainly comes within the law.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman from South Carolina to make the statement that the organic act itself authorizes seven of these heads of divisions.

That is my understanding.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The statute passed in 1866 authorized seven heads of divisions at $2,500. We put in this bill only four at that amount.

The CHAIRMAN. It seems to the Chair it is quite clear that if the statute authorizes seven of these heads of divisions it is mere matter of discretion with Congress as to how many they will create in the different divisions; and if the statute does authorize it, the point of order will not be considered as being well taken.

Mr. FOWLER. Well, Mr. Chairman, there is an increase in the various positions subordinate to the chiefs of divisions.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fowler] to make the point of order upon the ground that on page 48, line 1, the word "four" was inserted instead of the word "three."

Mr. FOWLER. I say I made the point of order against the paragraph and was trying to pick out the specific instances wherein there was an increase, but the bill is so drawn that it is difficult to get at the specific increases at a glance. It has certainly increased the appropriation, which is patent on its face. For instance, in the case of clerks there are three at $2,000 each, wherein there was only a provision for two. Another class of clerks of the fourth grade are increased from 29 to 31, of the third grade from 25 to 27, and of class 2 from 37 to 41, and of class 1 from 37 to 40. Then, there is an increase of messengers from 3 to 4, which makes it patent upon the face of the bill there is an increase.

The CHAIRMAN. It is the understanding of the Chair there is an increase in the total appropriation on this item, but the point I understood the gentleman from Illinois to make was that he made the point of order that the committee had no right to make these increases.

Mr. FOWLER. No; I am making the point of order against the entire paragraph because of the fact of these increases; there is an increase in the appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule on that ques-Congress is authorized by the organic act to provide heads of divisions and clerks. It is a mere matter of discretion of the committee as to the number they will carry under each one of these heads. The point of order is overruled.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of Surgeon General of Public Health Service: Surgeon General, $6,000; chief clerk, $2,000; private secretary to the Surgeon General, $1,800; assistant editor, $1,800; clerks—3 of class 4, 2 of class 3, 6 of class 2, 1 of whom shall be translator, 7 of class 1, 3 at $900 each; messenger; 3 assistant messengers; 2 laborers, at $540 each; in all, $43,780.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against this paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois r point of order against the paragraph—line 23, page 50. The gentleman from Illinois makes a

Mr. FOWLER. In line 18 the salary of the Surgeon General is increased from $5,000 to $6,000, which is an increase of $1,000. There is also an assistant private secretary at $1,800 and then an assistant editor at $1,800. The assistant editor is a new office. I desire to ask the chairman of the committee the reason for increasing the Surgeon General's salary?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I was going to ask the gentleman from Illinois if he did not vote for an act approved August 14, 1912, which passed this House on a Calendar Wednesday, specifically increasing the salary of the Surgeon General from $5,000 to $6,000 a year?

Mr. FOWLER. I will ask the gentleman if that was not in an appropriation bill and not in a general bill?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It was a special act that came from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.
Mr. MANN. I have the act here.

Mr. FITZGERALD. It came up one Saturday afternoon when nobody anticipated it would come up.

Mr. FOWLER. What have you to say about the editor? Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I probably can answer the question of my colleague from Illinois in reference to the editor, unless the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] happens to have the act. The act of Congress changing the name of the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service to the Public Health Service, which was approved August 14, 1912, contained this language:

There may be employed in the Public Health Service such help as may be provided for from time to time by Congress.

Mr. Chairman, that language has been inserted in laws on several occasions for the express purpose of leaving it to Congress to determine the number of employees, and has been held to be sufficient authority for an item in a bill over a point of order, and that was the purpose of putting it in the law.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. And the only increase of force that we gave this office under that law was this assistant editor, against which the gentleman's colleague desires to make the point of order.

Mr. MANN. Yes

Mr. FOWLER. Where is the editor? You have an assistant editor here

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. One of the commissioned officers in charge of the publication division-

Mr. FOWLER. This is an assistant editor. Where is the editor?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. He is probably an Army officer.

Mr. MANN. He is a commissioned officer. Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. He is a commissioned officer of this service.

Mr. MANN. One of the medical doctors. They are carried in the sundry civil appropriation bill and not in this.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fowler] withdraw his point of order?

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, in view of the explanation made by the gentlemen on the question of the Surgean Genern's increase of salary, I withdraw the point of order so far as that is concerned, and desire to make it apply to the creation of an assistant editor, at $1,800.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is not well taken, for the reason that the organic act authorizes Congress to create such help in this department as it may seem proper. It is not a question of the right of the committee, but it is a question of the wisdom of the committee. The point of order is overruled.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as folllows:

Contingent expenses, Teasury Department: For stationery for the Treasury Department and its several bureaus and offices, $50,000, and in addition thereto sums amounting to $76,000 shall be deducted from other appropriations made for the fiscal year 1913, as follows: Contingent expenses, Independent Treasury, $6,000; contingent expenses, mint at Philadelphia, $350; contingent expenses, mint at San Francisco, $200; contingent expenses, mint at Denver, $200; contingent expenses, assay office at New York, $350; materials and miscellaneous expenses, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, $3,300; suppressing counterfeiting and other crimes, $200; expenses of Revenue-Cutter Service, $1,600; Public Health Service, $1,800; Quarantine Service, $500; preventing the spread of epidemic diseases, $200; Life-Saving Service, $1,900; general expenses of public buildings, $6,000; collecting the revenue from customs, $37,300; miscellaneous expenses of collecting internal revenue, $14,000; and for expenses of collecting the constitute, together with the first-named sum of $50,000, the total appropriation for stationery for the Treasury Department and its several bureaus and offices for the fiscal year 1914.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina, Mr. Chairman, I offer

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 51, in line 4, strike out the word "thirteen" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fourteen."

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The purpose of the amendment is to correct a typographical error.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amend-

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For purchase of labor-saving machines, including the purchase and exchange of registering accountants, numbering machines, and other machines of a similar character, including time stamps for stamping date of receipt of official mail and telegrams, and repairs thereto, and the purchase of supplies for photostat, $8,000.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to that paragraph, to strike out the word "photostat" and insert in lieu thereof the words "photographic reproduction machines," so that it will read "Supplies for photographic reproduction machines." With a word of explanation I can make that clear. With a word of explanation I can make that clear.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman wait until the amendment is reported?

Mr. BORLAND. Certainly.
The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Borland]. The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 54, line 6, by striking out the word "photostat" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "photographic reproduction machines."

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, the word "photostat" is the name of a particular kind of patented machine used for the purpose of photographing documents, making reproductions by the use of photography instead of by typewriting or otherwise. The name "photostat" is not, as might be supposed from this wording, a generic term, but the name of a particular machine. There are other machines in the market; some of them called "cameragraphs" and other names in a general way designating the kind of machines they are, which are used for the same purpose—that is, to make photographic copies of documents. It happens that there are a certain number of photostats in this particular department. I believe the auditor has ruled that the supplies for photostats may be stationery, and, possibly, might be included in the general appropriation for stationery. But in order to make the thing perfectly safe he advised that they put into that particular clause for contingent expenses the phrase "supplies for photostats." They now have in contemplation the purchase and employment of other machines besides the photostat, and will probably have them in operation during the life of this bill, so that the wording should be broad enough to include supplies of any kind of a photographic reproduction machine, whether called a "photostat" or not. That is the idea of the amendment.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, they have in certain departments of the Government a machine called a "photostat." We are making appropriations for that. called a "photostat." We are making appropriations for that. If other machines should be purchased hereafter, I think it would be early enough then to change the language of the appropriation bill.

Mr. BORLAND. I do not believe it would be for this reason

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. For instance, we have given the Treasury Department no money out of which they can buy any other machines, so far as I am aware. They have a photostat already installed.

Mr. BORLAND. Under this appropriation, Mr. Chairman, they can buy labor-saving machinery, and under that designation they could buy any other machine for the same purpose that was not called a "photostat." They could buy a machine not called a "photostat," which is a labor-saving machine, and if they undertook to buy it under this item authorizing the purchase of labor-saving machinery they would need some supplies for it, and probably would need some supplies for it, and probably would need some supplies for it during the current year. It is just as easy as not to make that language broad enough to include supplies in labor-saving machinery whether called "photostats" or otherwise.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I suggest that the gentleman withhold his amendment.

Mr. BORLAND. I have the amendment here.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GARNER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 26680) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

SENATE BILL REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bill of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee, as indicated below:

S. 7531. An act to authorize the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to purchase certain land required for lighthouse purposes at Port Ferro Light Station, P. R.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. CRAVENS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 20287. An act to amend section 5 of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Red Cross," approved January 5, 1905.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL (S. DOC. NO. 965).

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the House that yesterday there came in a short message from the President of the United States, transmitting a report of the commission on the Lincoln Memorial, and the Chair ordered the message to be printed according to the usual formality, but did not include in the order the printing of the report. Unless there is objection, by unanimous consent the Chair will order it printed for the information of the Members.

Mr. MANN. It would be printed with illustrations, I presume. I do not know whether there are any illustrations, but I presume there are

The SPEAKER. If there are illustrations, they will be printed, too.

PANAMA CANAL (H. DOC. NO. 965).

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed and referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, in pursuance of the requirements of chapter 1302 (32 Stats., p. 483), "An act to provide for the construction of a canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans," approved June 28, 1902, the Annual Report of the Isthmian Canal Commission for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1912.

WM. H. TAFT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 6, 1912.

FISCAL, JUDICIAL, MILITARY, AND INSULAR AFFAIRS (H. DOC. NO. 1067).

The SPEAKER laid befor the House a message from the President of the United States, which was read, ordered to be printed, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

[For text of message see Senate proceedings of this day.]

At the conclusion of the reading of the message there was applause on the Republican side.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 27 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, December 7, 1912, at 12 o'clock noon.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, December 7, 1912.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D. The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. Culberson and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

UNITED STATES COMMERCE COURT (H. DOC. NO. 1081).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (Mr. Bacon) laid before the Senate a communication from the Attorney General, transmitting, pursuant to law, a statement of the expenditures of the appropriation for the United States Commerce Court for the year ended June 30, 1912, etc., which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

MARITIME CANAL CO. OF NICARAGUA (H. DOC. NO. 1944).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Maritime Canal Co. of Nicaragua, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals and ordered to be printed.

YORKTOWN CELEBRATION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Yorktown Historical Society, which was read and ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

YORKTOWN HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES, London, September 28, 1912.

The honorable the Secretary of the Senate of the United States of America, Washington, D. C., U. S. A.:

The Yorktown Historical Society of the United States requests the honor of the presence of the honorables the Members of the Senate of the United States of America at the annual celebration of the surrender of Gen. Lord Cornwallis to Gen. Washington, to be held at Yorktown on the 19th day of October, 1912, and also on the same date in the year 1913.

R. S. V. P. to the secretary of the society, Mrs. Carroll Van Ness.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. GRONNA. I present petitions signed by sundry citizens of Buxton, Valley City, Drayton, Inkster, and Casselton, all in the State of North Dakota, praying for the passage of the Kenyon bill, No. 4043, providing for the ratification of an interest of ligner law. Lask that the heavy of one of the petitions terstate liquor law. I ask that the body of one of the petitions may be printed in the Record in full.

There being no objection, the petitions were ordered to lie on the table, and the body of one of the petitions was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

To the Hon. A. J. Gronna, United States Senator, Washington, D. C.:

The undersigned, citizens and residents of the State of North Dakota, realizing the evil effects of the liquor traffic and the difficulty of enforcing the prohibition law of this State under the present interstate-commerce law, earnestly request you as our representative to use all legitimate means within your power to secure the passage of the bill known as the "Amended Kenyon bill," No. 4043, which will come up in the United States Senate on December 16 next.

Mr. CLAPP. I present a petition relative to the payment of the balance due the depositors in the Freedmen's Savings & Trust Co. I ask that the statement on the front page be printed in the RECORD and that the rest of the petition be filed.

There being no objection, the petition was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, and the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

dered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

This petition is indorsed by the National Baptist Convention, representing two millions and a half communicants; the African Methodist Episcopal Church, representing 800,000 communicants; the Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, representing 600,000 communicants; the National Negro Business League, representing the colored business men throughout the United States; and sundry other citizens and organizations, praying for the enactment of legislation to pay the balance due the depositors in the Freedmen's Savings & Trust Co.

R. James L. White.

BRISTOW presented a petition of sundry citizens of Scandia, Kans., praying for the enactment of an interstate liquor law to prevent the nullification of State liquor laws by outside dealers, which was ordered to lie on the table.

CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS.

Mr. CLAPP. I introduce a bill and ask that it be read. The bill (S. 7647) to limit the use of campaign funds in presidential and national elections was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

title and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation, association, or committee, or any officer or agent of any person, firm, corporation, association, or committee to send any money or other thing of value from any State or Territory of the United States to any person, firm, corporation, association, or committee in any other State or Territory of the United States to any person, firm, corporation, association, or committee in any State or Territory of the United States to any person, firm, corporation, association, or committee in any State or Territory of the United States, including the District of Columbla, to be used or expended for and on behalf of the nomination or election of a President or Vice President of the United States, or of any Member of the House of Representatives or any Member of the United States Senate: Provided, That this act shall not apply to the payment of bills incurred by a national campaign committee in the fitting out and maintenance of speaking campaigns by a candidate for the office of President or Vice President where a train is fitted out and maintained by the national committee; nor shall it include the transportation and hotel expenses of speakers sent out by a national committee, the expenses of literature distributed by a national committee, or campaign funds raised for and sent to a national committee, or campaign funds raised for and sent to a national committee properly reported as required by law.

SEC. 2. Any person violating the provisions of the foregoing section shall, upon conviction therefor, be guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by imprisonment of not less than six months nor more than one year.

Mr. CLAPP. I ask that the bill be referred to the subcommittee of the Committee on Privileges and Elections created under resolutions 79 and 386 of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so referred, without objection.

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President, I simply desire at this time to say that the bill is aimed to meet the vice of gathering funds in large centers and in sending them to distant States to influence presidential, congressional, and senatorial elections.

It recognizes the continued existence of the national committee. It recognizes the right of the national committee to receive money from any portion of the country and to use those funds in the maintenance of speakers, literature, and advertising.

It would seem, of course, as though there were many exceptions to the general prohibition. These exceptions are included so as to leave it in the hands of the committee to use the funds for these specified purposes and at the same time to prevent the gathering of large sums in money centers and sending those sums to distant States and Territories.

I have no pride of opinion in the expressions of the bill. have introduced it, and those who take an interest in the sub-ject may consider the bill, and perhaps as the result of consideration and discussion the bill may be materially perfected.

AMENDMENT TO DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CLAPP submitted an amendment proposing to pay the balance due the depositors of the Freedmen's Savings & Trust Co., intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed.

OMNIBUS CLAIMS BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning business is closed.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I ask that the Senate may resume consideration of House bill 19115, known as the omnibus claims hill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 19115) making appropriation for payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims, reported under the provisions of the acts approved March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and the Tucker Acts.

Mr. OLIVER. I offer proposed amendments to the pending

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments will lie on the table until they are reached in order.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I desire to offer an amendment to the pending bill, to be inserted after line 22, page 264.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that there is now a pending amendment. The Senator from Michigan will withhold his amendment until that is disposed of. The pending amendment is the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Johnston].

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. I ask the Senator from South Dakota if he has had an opportunity to examine amendment?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I understood the Senator to say that he offered it with a view to having it printed, so that we might examine it, and I expected the printed copy to be here this morning. I understand that it proposes to repeal a general statute, and is hardly within the scope of this bill.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. It is exactly within the scope of the bill, because it repeals the statute as to longevity pay only. But if the Senator from South Dakota desires to wait until the printed amendment comes in I shall be perfectly content with that course.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment has been printed.

inted. There is a copy of the amendment at the desk.
Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. The Senator from South Dakota asks that the amendment be again printed?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is now in print.

Mr. CRAWFORD. This amendment was proposed by the Senator from Alabama, I think, before the close of the last session. Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. And at that time it was printed. I presume the copy offered yesterday was one of the old copies, printed last spring. The committee in charge of the bill never considered the amendment as printed and offered at the last session. They had no opportunity to do that, because, as I recollect it, the bill had gone through consideration by the committee and the report was all made up and printed, if not actually made when the Senator from Alabama offered the amendment; so it was never considered by the committee. I had not even remembered that it had been proposed until the Senator offered it again yesterday. Whether we have enough old copies to go around I do not know, but the committee have lost track of it. It did not come into their possession until after they acted on the bill and made their report. I suggested yesterday that it be again printed, so that copies could be furnished to the Members, and I expected to find a copy on my desk this morning, but have not done so.

I do not feel that under those circumstances the committee as a committee can accept the amendment. It has not been considered by the committee. Its purpose is to repeal some statute that has not been considered at all, and it seems to me it would be better to have it presented as an independent proposition and considered as such.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Independent of this bill?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Independent of this bill.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. It is directly in line with this bill. It carries a repeal of that section so far as the items preceding it in this bill are concerned.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What I am seeking to do is to avoid, so far as it is possible to do so, subjects that may involve us in differences and in debate. If we get many such questions in here in connection with the consideration of the bill, I shall have a good deal of doubt about our getting it through.

I do not express any opinion whatever as to the merits of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Alabama, but I do say that it repeals an existing statute. I have not had an opportunity to see that existing statute. It could, it seems to me, more properly be considered if it was presented as an independent proposition to repeal that statute, and it should be considered as an independent bill. Otherwise I do not know how much discussion it may provoke or what it may open up in the way of debate. On that account, I do not feel like consenting.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Mr. President, I want to say that this is a modified repeal of section 3480. It has been heretofore passed twice by the Senate as an independent proposition; first, on the 8th of March, 1907; and, again, on the 1st of April, 1908. So the Senate has fully considered the matter in a broader sense than it is offered here to-day, because it is only offered to-day in connection with this longevity pay.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, would the Senator from Alabama kindly state in a few words the nature of the amendment and just what it is intended to repeal?

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. I shall be glad to do that. Section 3480 requires the accounting officers to refuse to audit the claims that arose prior to April 13, 1861, which covered all the longevity pay of officers of the Army. Amongst those officers of the Army were a number who went South on the breaking out of hostilities. This amendment simply proposes to repeal that section so far as those officers are concerned. It has no operation upon any others.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I will ask the Senator from Alabama if, as to every officer who was in the Confederate Army and who taken the military course at West Point, it would not establish the precedent that all of them should come in and receive what we call the longevity allowance, and if it would not involve an expenditure, according to my recollection as to what the Senator from Alabama stated yesterday, of $100,000?

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Something like that.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, that simply means that we are opening the door to the allowance of claims amounting to at least $100,000. It is a matter of conjecture whether it would be $100,000 or a good deal more than $100,000. Without saying one word against the merit of the proposition-it may be that this should be done-I do not believe that, without the matter having been considered by the committee and without its coming in under any existing law, we ought, in considering this bill, to repeal a statute of that kind. If the Senate has acted on it once or twice it may act upon it favorably again; but it seems to me that it would be better to have an independent bill dealing with that repeal standing alone and have it acted upon by this body.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Mr. President, the Senator from South Dakota has properly said that this amendment applies only to officers of the Army who resigned and went South to take part in the war between the States. This bill opens the door to all those who remained in the Army. question of loyalty has long since passed out, and most of those officers are dead and the money will go to their children. It involves a small amount of money—a little over $100,000—and applies to no other class in the world. I do not see why we should hesitate here to grant to these officers for the services they rendered the United States before they retired from the Army the pay that was due them under the laws of the United

Mr. CULLOM. I have amendments for two longevity claims at the desk, not from the South, but from the North.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WORKS in the chair). There is an amendment pending at the present time.

Mr. CULLOM. I supposed that amendment had been objected to for the present.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. I am willing for it to lie over for the present until the printed amendment comes in. I shall then insist upon the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois [Mr.

CULLOM] offers an amendment, which will be stated.

Mr. CULLOM. I suppose there will be no objection to these longevity claims.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I hope the Senator from Alabama [Mr. JOHNSTON) will not urge his amendment in connection with this bill. I say that not as one unfriendly, but because I do not think it is fair to the committee, the matter never having been before the present committee in any form. The former bills on this subject were not before the committee and never have been considered by it. I do not think it is fair to the committee to have the amendment put in with this vast number of claims, upon which we have acted at the expenditure of a great deal of time and labor. If the amendments proposed by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Cultom] cover longevity claims that have been reported by the Court of Claims

Mr. CULLOM. Both of them have been so reported.

Mr. CRAWFORD. If they are exactly the same as those allowed yesterday, I shall not object to them.

Mr. CULLOM. They are exactly the same.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I ask that they be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois will be read.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I desire also that the findings of the Court of Claims be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois will first be stated.

The Secretary. On page 263, after line 9, under the heading "Illinois," it is proposed to insert:

To Susan Dye Baylies, daughter and only surviving child of William McEntire Dye, deceased, late of the United States Army, and Pearl Walter Dye, widow and sole legatee of John Henry Dye, deceased, who was a son of said William McEntire Dye, $1,616.72, to be proportioned

To Susan Dye Baylies, of Chicago, Ill., $1,077.81. To Pearl Walter Dye, $538.91.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I ask that the findings of the Court of Claims be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. The claimant Susan Dye Baylies is the daughter and only living child of William McEntire Dye, who died intestate in November, 1899, and Pearl Waiter Dye is the widow and sole beir under the will of John Henry Dye, a deceased son of said William McEntire Dye, Said John Henry Dye, died in April, 1903, leaving a will by which he bequeathed all his property, real and personal, to his widow. Pearl Waiter Dye, who is still living. He left no children. Annette M. Dye, the only other child of said William McEntire Dye, died intestate in March, 1904, never having been married and leaving as her sole heir her sister, the said Susan Dye Baylies. The widow of said William McEntire Dye died in 1901.

II. Claimant's decedent, William McEntire Dye, was during his lifetime an officer in the United States Army, having entered the Military Academy as a cadet July 1, 1849. He graduated therefrom and was appointed brevet second lieutenant of Infantry July 1, 1853; was promoted to second lieutenant, Eight Infantry, November 9, 1854; first lieutenant, February 1, 1856; captain, May 14, 1861; and major, January 14, 1866, and was discharged at his own request September 30, 1870. He served as colonel Twentieth Iowa Infantry from August 1, 1862, to July 26, 1865.

III. Said decedent was paid his first longevity ration from July 1, 1858, and one additional ration for each five years subsequent thereto, and third 10 per cent increase from July 15, 1870.

Under the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80) said decedent would be cnitited to additional longevity allowances, as reported by the Auditor for the War Department, amounting to $1,616.72, which would be divided two-thirds ($1,577.81) to Susan Dye Baylies and one-third ($538.91) to Pearl Walter Dye.

ARCHIBALD HOPKINS, Chief Clerk Court of Claims.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is satisfactory. The amendment comes within the rule.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Cullom], which has just been read.

The amendment was agreed to.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois will be stated.

The Secretary. It is also proposed, on page 263, after the amendment just adopted, to insert:

To Thomas J. Medill, of Rock Island, administrator de bonis non of the estate of Thomas J. Rodman, deceased, $2,113.54, as reported by the Court of Claims in House Document No. 850, Sixty-second Congress, second session.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Now I desire that the Secretary read the findings in that case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

ARCHIBALD HOPKINS, Chief Clerk Court of Claims.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The committee will accept that amendment, Mr. President.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I now ask that the amendment which I proposed be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Michigan will be stated. The Secretary. On page 264, after line 22, under the head of "Michigan," it is proposed to insert: To Sophie M. Guard, executrix of Alexander McCook Guard, deceased, late of the United States Army, $1,499.58.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the findings in that case.

The Secretary read as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. The claimant, Sophic M. Guard, is a citizen of the United States, residing in Chippewa County, State of Michigan, and is the widow and executrix of Alexander McCook Guard, late an officer in the United States Army.

II. Said decedent, Alexander McCook Guard, entered the United States Military Academy as a cadet July 1, 1866. He was graduated therefrom June 12, 1871, and was appointed second lieutenant, Nineteenth United States Infantry, but did not take the oath of office until August 10, 1871, at which time he was still on graduating leave. He was promoted to be first lieutenant March 20, 1879; captain, February 20, 1891; was placed on the retired list with the rank of major September 8, 1899, and died July 19, 1905.

III. Said decedent was paid his first longevity increase from June 12, 1876, and each subsequent longevity increase was made to commence at intervals of five years following that date. In a settlement by the accounting officers of the Treasury June 29, 1885, he was allowed longevity increase under the Morton and Tyler decisions counting his cadet service from February 24, 1881, and no longevity increase for cadet service prior to that date was allowed by said officers.

IV. Claimant's decedent was paid the difference between the pay of a captain and major, amounting to $784.03, for exercising the command of a major by reason of seniority from June 12, 1898, to March 29, 1899, and this amount would not now, under the act of March 3, 1911 (36 Stats., 1039), be deducted by the accounting officers of the Treasury from any amount found due on account of longevity pay.

V. If the accounting officers of the Treasury now had jurisdiction to settle this claim for longevity allowances there would be deducted from any amount found due the following sums, to wit:

Difference between pay as second lieutenant and cadet errone-ously paid from June 15, 1871, to Aug. 9, 1871, 1 month 25

Difference between pay as second lieutenant and cadet erroneously paid from June 15, 1871, to Aug. 9, 1871, 1 month 25
days, at $65.88 per month

Half pay on longevity pay for 5 years' service as second lieutenant, not mounted (Brodie decision), from Oct. 8, 1871, to
Jan. 31, 1872, 3 months 23 days, at $5.83

First longevity increase of 10 per cent for 5 years' service as second lieutenant, not mounted (Brodie decision), while absent without leave on Mar. 1, 1874 . 39

Making a total of 143. 14

VI. Under the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80) said decedent's longevity periods should begin on the following dates: First period, July 1, 1871; second period, July 1, 1876; third period, July 1, 1881; fourth period, July 1, 1886; and the difference between the amounts actually paid to him and the amounts to which he would be entitled under said decision is $1,642.72, from which would be deducted the $143.14 referred to in Finding V, leaving a balance of $1,499.58.

If the amount paid to decedent for difference in pay of a captain and major for exercising higher command by reason of seniority, amounting to $784.03, as set forth in Finding IV, should be deducted from any amount found due on account of longevity pay, the balance would be $715.55.

VII. In June, 1908, a claim was filed with the accounting officers of the Treasury for longevity pay for the period prior to February 24, 1881, in accordance with the decision in the Watson case, but same was not considered for the reason that a previous settlement had been made. The claim was presented to the Sixtieth Congress, and Senate bill 6998, for the relief of the claimant herein, was by resolution of the United States Senate referred to this court under the provisions of the Tucker Act, and said claim was given docket No. 13318, congressional, and was afterwards consolidated with the present claim.

Except as above stated, the claim was never presented to any officer or department of the Government prior to its presentation to the Sixty-second Congress and reference to this court as hereinbefore set forth, and no evidence is adduced to show why claimant did not earlier prosecute said claim.

CONCLUSION.

CONCLUSION.

Upon the foregoing findings of fact the court concludes that the claim herein, not having been filed for prosecution before any court within six years from the time it accrued, is barred. The claim is an equitable one against the United States in so far as they received the benefit of the services of said decedent while a cadet at the Military Academy, which service the Supreme Court, in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80), decided was service in the Army.

JOHN RANDOLPH, Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Mr. CRAWFORD. There is no objection to that amendment. The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The Secretary. On page 263, after line 20, it is proposed to

To George Lemuel Turner, of Portland, Me., $654.61.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What is the last paragraph of the findings of fact in that case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read.

The Secretary read as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. The claimant herein was officer in the United States Army, having been appointed a cadet at the United States Military Academy July 1, 1870. He graduated therefrom and was appointed second lieutenant Eighteenth United States Infantry June 17, 1874, promoted to be first lieutenant January 16, 1884, and was dismissed November 20, 1890.

JI. In the settlement of said claimant's account by the accounting officers of the Treasury he was paid first longevity increase from June 17, 1879, and he was also paid longevity increase for the period from February 24, 1881, to June 30, 1884, and thereafter, but said officers refused to count the service of said claimant as a cadet at the Military Academy in computing longevity pay and allowances for service prior to February 24, 1881.

JII. Under the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80) said claimant's first longevity increase should begin July 1, 1875, and the difference between the amounts actually paid to him and the amount to which he was entitled under said decision is $654.61.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The committee will accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. At the request of the junior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN], I offer the amendments which I send to the desk, being claims for longevity pay, together with the findings of the court.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I ask that the amounts be read and then the findings, without all the details.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first proposed amendment will be stated.

The Secretary. On page 209, after line 4, it is proposed to insert:

To Frank H. Fletcher, $61.52.
To Octavia Cavendy, widow of Joseph S. Cavendy, $73.44.
Mr. CRAWFORD. There are two cases there?
The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are two cases.
Mr. CRAWFORD. Are they both longevity claims or are they overtime claims for work in navy yards? I inquire if the Senator from Maine knows.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. The information I have is that they are all for longevity pay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that they are for longevity pay.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I ask that the findings of the court be read.

The Secretary proceeded to read from the findings of the Court of Claims

Mr. CRAWFORD. I think this is an overtime navy-yard claim, but it has the same merit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will continue to read the findings, as requested.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading, as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT. I. Between the 21st day of March, 1878, and the 22d day of September, 1882, the claimants herein or their decedents, and each of them, were in the employ of the United States in the navy yard at Brooklyn, N. Y., during which time the following order was in force:

Circular No. 8.

Circular No. 8.

Washington, D. C., March 21, 1878.

The following is hereby substituted, to take effect from this date, for the circular of October 25, 1877, in relation to the working hours at the several navy yards and shore stations:

The working hours will be—
From March 21 to September 21, from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m.: from September 22 to March 20, from 7.40 a. m. to 4.30 p. m., with the usual intermission of one hour for dinner.

The departments will contract for the labor of mechanics, foremen, leading men, and laborers on the basis of 8 hours a day. All workmen electing to labor 10 hours a day will receive a proportionate increase of their wages.

crease of their wages.

The commandants will notify the men employed, or to be employed, of these conditions, and they are at liberty to continue or accept employment under them or not.

R. W. Thompson,

ployment under them or not.

R. W. Thompson,
Secretary of the Navy.

II. Said claimants and each of them or their decedents while in the employ of the United States as aforesaid worked on the average the number of hours set opposite their respective names in excess of 8 hours a day and at the wages below stated, to wit:

No. 89. Frank H. Fletcher:

150 hours at $1.76 per day.

131 hours at $1.76 per day, and 2\(\frac{5}{2}\) hours less than 8 hours a day at $1.76 per day.

132 hours at $1.76 per day.

No. 101. Joseph S. Cavendy:

132 hours at $2.76 per day.

77 hours at $2 per day, and 2\(\frac{5}{2}\) hours less than 8 hours a day at $2.76 per day.

78 hours at $3 per day, and 2\(\frac{5}{2}\) hours less than 8 hours a day at $2.76 per day.

111. If it is considered that 8 hours a day constituted a day's work during the period from March 21, 1878, to September 22, 1882, under said Circular No. 8, then the claimants or their decedents have been underpaid as follows:

Frank H. Fletcher, $61.52.

Octavia Cavendy, widow of Joseph S. Cavendy, $73.44.

IV. The claims herein were never presented to any department or officer of the Government prior to the presentation to Congress and reference to this court as hereinbefore set forth, and no evidence is adduced to show why said claimants did not earlier prosecute their claims.

CONCLUSION. Upon the foregoing findings of fact the court concludes that the claims herein are not legal ones against the United States, and are equitable only in the sense that the United States received the benefit of the services of said Frank H. Fletcher and said Joseph S. Cavendy in excess of 8 hours a day as above set forth.

"To Henry Catley, of Syracuse, $2,351.29, as reported by the Court of Claims in House Document No. 801, Sixty-second Congress, second seed on "

Mr. CRAWFORD. What are the findings of the court? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read: The Secretary read as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. Claimant served as enlisted man, United States Army, from July 3, 1855, to December 31, 1864. He was mustered in as first lieutenant, First Oregon Infantry, January 2, 1865, and mustered out February 9, 1866; was appointed second lieutenant, Sixteenth United States Infantry, February 23, 1866; accepted the appointment May 31, 1866; promoted first lieutenant August 5, 1866, and transferred to the Second Infantry April 17, 1891; promoted captain June 22, 1882, and retired April 17, 1891.

II. In the settlement of claimant's accounts by the accounting officers of the Treasury, he was paid on account of longevity periods as follows: First period, from April 23, 1870; second period, from April 23, 1875; fourth period, from June 18, 1878. September 19, 1883, he was paid longevity increase under the Tyler decision (105 U. S., 244) without taking into account his service as an enlisted man from July 3, 1855, to December 31, 1864.

III. Under the principle of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80), and the decision of this court in the case of Stewart v. United States (No. 20810, 34 C. Cls. R., 553), claimant's longevity periods should begin on the following dates: First period, May 31, 1866; second period, December 3, 1866; third period, October 25, 1870; fourth period, October 25, 1875; and the difference between the amounts actually paid to him and the amounts to which he was entitled under said decisions for said periods is as follows:

First additional ration from May 31, 1886, to Dec. 2, 1866_—Second additional ration from Dec. 3, 1866, to July 14, 1870_—Second 10 per cent increase, July 15, 1870, to Oct. 24, 1870_—Third 10 per cent increase from Oct. 25, 1870, to Oct. 24, 1875_—Fourth 10 per cent increase from Oct. 25, 1875, to June 18, 1875

_ 3, 440, 09

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. Claimant's decedent, George Thatcher Balch, was during his lifetime an officer in the United States Army, having entered the United States Military Academy as a cadet July 1, 1847. He graduated therefrom and was appointed second lieutenant July 1, 1851; promoted to be first lieutenant July 1, 1854; captain, November 1, 1861; and resigned to take effect December 1, 1865.

II. In the settlement of his accounts the accounting officers of the Treasury allowed said decedent his first longevity ration from July 1, 1856, and one additional ration for each subsequent five years, and made no allowance in computing his longevity allowances for his services as a cadet at the Military Academy.

III. Under the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80) said decedent would be entitled to additional allowances, as reported by the Auditor for the War Department, amounting to $1,137.96, from which would be deducted the sum of $120.30 due by him to the United States, leaving a balance of $1,017.66.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to. Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I present a similar amendment for longevity pay, together with the findings of the court.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The Secretary. On page 263, after line 2, it is proposed to insert:

To the Washington Loan & Trust Co., administrator of the estate of James W. Cuyler, deceased, of Washington, $2,431.89.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I ask that the findings of fact be read. The Secretary read as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. The claimant, the Washington Lean & Trust Co., of the District of Columbia, is the duly appointed administrator of the estate of James W. Cuyler, deceased, who, during his lifetime, was an officer in the United States Army, having entered the Military Academy as a cadet July 1, 1860. He graduated therefrom and was appointed first lieutenant of Engineers June 13, 1864; was promoted to be captain March 7, 1867; major, July 17, 1881; and died April 16, 1883.

II. Said decedent was paid his first longevity ration June 13, 1869, and one additional ration for each five years subsequent thereto, and by settlements of the accounting officers of the Treasury, in 1884 and 1885, he was allowed longevity increase under the Tyler and Morton decisions.

Under the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80) said decedent would be entitled to additional allowances, as reported by the Auditor for the War Department, amounting to $2,444.67, from which would be deducted overpayment of $12.78, leaving a balance of $2,431.89.

III. The claim was presented to the accounting officers of the Treasury at various times and was disallowed in 1883, 1884, 1885, and again in 1910. Except as above stated, the claim was never presented to any officer or department of the Government prior to the presentation to Congress and reference to this court as hereinbefore set forth.

CONCLUSION.

Upon the foregoing findings of fact the court concludes that the claim herein, not having been filed for prosecution before any court within six years from the time it accrued, is barred.

The claim is an equitable one against the United States in so far as they received the benefit of the services of said decedent while a cadet at the Military Academy, which service the Supreme Court, in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80), decided was service in the Army.

III. If it is considered that eight hours constituted a day's work during the period from March 21, 1878, to September 22, 1882, under said Circular No. 8, then the claimant has been underpaid the sum of $292.38

IV. The claim was never presented to any officer or department of the Government prior to the presentation to Congress and reference to this court as hereinbefore set forth, and no evidence is adduced to show why claimant did not earlier prosecute his said claim.

CONCLUSION.

Upon the foregoing findings of fact the court concludes that the claim herein is not a legal one against the United States, and is equitable only in the sense that the United States received the benefit of the services of said claimant in excess of eight hours a day as above set BY THE COURT.

[Court of Claims. Congressional, No. 15062: Simon Lyon, administrator of the estate of John A. Campbell, v. The United States.] STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case for arrears of increase of pay due on account of the services of John A. Campbell in the United States Army was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 12th day of January.

Claims of the House of Representatives on the 12th day of January, 1912.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 1st day of April, 1912.

Lyon & Lyon appeared for the claimant and the Attorney General, by George M. Anderson, his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the United States.

The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

That he is a citizen of the United States and a resident of the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, and is the administrator of the estate of John A. Campbell, who died while serving in the United States Army on the 29th day of October, 1875.

That the aforesaid John A. Campbell, deceased, entered the military service of the United States as a cadet at the Military Academy on the 29th day of October, 1863; appointed second lieutenant June 17, 1867, Second United States Artillery; first lieutenant July 24, 1874, which grade he held until his death on the aforesaid date, and by reason of such service is entitled to longevity pay, computing the time he served at the Military Academy as a cadet, in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States as laid down in the case of United States v. STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case for arrears of increase of pay due on account of the services of Ethan Allen Hitchcock in the United States Army, was transmitted to the court by order of the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 30th day of January, 1911.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 1st day of April, 1912.

Lyon & Lyon appeared for the claimant, and the Attorney General, by George M. Anderson, his assistant and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the United States.

The claimant in her petition makes the following allegations:
That she is a citizen of the United States and at this time residing in the city of Washington in the District of Columbia, and is the widow and executrix of Ethan Allen Hitchcock, who deceased August 5, 1870.

That the aforesaid Ethan Allen Hitchcock, deceased, entered the military service of the United States as a cadet at the Military Academy on the 11th day of October, 1814; promoted third lieutenant, Corps Artillery, July 17, 1817; second lieutenant, Eighth Infantry, February 13, 1818; first lieutenant, October 31, 1818; regimental adjutant, July, 1819, to June 1, 1821; transferred to First Infantry, June 1, 1821; regimental adjutant, July 16, to September 16, 1821; captain, December 31, 1824; major, Eighth Infantry, July 7, 1838; lieutenant colonel Third Infantry, January 31, 1842; colonel Second Infantry, April 15, 1851; resigned October 18, 1855; major general, Volunteers, February 10, 1862; honorably mustered out October 1, 1867; died August 5, 1870, and by reason of such service is entitled to longevity pay computing the time he served at the Military Academy as a cadet in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States as Iaid down in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S. Rept., p. 80) and United States v. Typer (105 U. S. Rept., p. 244), which has never been paid to the deceased officer or his heirs.

That application for such ary 24, 1881," contrary to the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States in the cases of Watson and Tyler above stated.

Application was again made for same longevity increase pay in accordance with the decision of the Comptroller of the Treasury in the case of Alexander O. Brodie (14 Comp. Dec., p. 795), but this application was disallowed on the 20th day of April, 1909, on the ground that there was no authority of law to reopen an adverse settlement made by a predecessor, irrespective of the fact that the law now favors the settlement of this class of cases.

That there is due the claimant under the law as decided by the Supreme Court of the United States in the cases of United States v. Watson and Tyler above stated, the following amount of longevity increase pay:

increase pay:

That the deceased officer was loyal to the United States throughout the War of the Rebellion, he having served in the United States Army through the entire period of said rebellion, and the claimant was born subsequent to said War of the Rebellion.

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel upon both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. Claimant's decedent, Ethan Allen Hitchcock, during his lifetime was an officer in the United States Army, having entered the United States Military Academy as a cadet on October 11, 1814. He graduated therefrom and was appointed a third lieutenant, Corps of Artillery, July 17, 1817; promoted to be second lieutenant, February 13, 1818; first lieutenant, October 31, 1818; captain, December 3, 1824; major, Eighth Infantry, July 7, 1838; lieutenant colonel, January 31, 1842; colonel, April 15, 1851, and resigned October 18, 1855.

II. In the settlement of said decedent's longevity pay and allowances the accounting officers of the Treasury refused to count the time he served as a cadet at the Military Academy.

III. Under the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80) there would be due to said decedent the sum of $754.79.

LETTER FROM THE ASSISTANT CLERK OF THE COURT OF CLAIMS, TRANSMITTING A COPY OF THE FINDINGS FILED BY THE COURT IN THE CASE OF LOUIS J. GRAESCHÉ, ADMINISTRATOR OF J. P. GARESCHÉ, DECEASED, AGAINST THE UNITED STATES.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE, Washington, May 31, 1912.

Hon. CHAMP CLARK, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Sir: Pursuant to the order of the court, I transmit herewith a certified copy of the findings filed by the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883, known as the Bowman Act.

I am, very respectfully, yours,

JOHN RANDOLPH

JOHN RANDOLPH,

[Court of Claims of the United States. Congressional, No. 15529.

Louis J. Garesché, administrator of Julius P. Garesché, deceased, v.

The United States.]

STATEMENT OF CASE,

The United States.]

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case for longevity pay, alleged to be due on account of the service of said decedent in the United States Army, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 18th day of Angust, 1911, under the act of March 3, 1883, known as the Bowman Act.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 8th day of May, 1912.

Richard R. McMahon, Esq., appeared for the claimant, and the Attorney General, by George M. Anderson, Esq., his assistant and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:
That he is a citizen of the United States, residing in Washington, D. C., and is the duly appointed administrator of Julius P. Garesché, late a lieutenant colonel, United States Army.

That said Julius P. Garesché entered the United States Military Academy as a cadet July 1, 1837; was appointed second lieutenant Fourth United States Armillery July 1, 1841; first lieutenant June 18, 1846, and served as such until February 14, 1856; brevet captain and assistant adjutant general May 14, 1861; major and assistant of the United States of the Incompany of the States of the Transury of the States of the Transury of the States. That during the period of the service of said Julius P. Garesché the following statutory provision respecting longevity pay was in force:

"That every commissioned officer of the line or staff, exclusive of general officers, shall be entitled to receive one additional ration per diem for every five years he may have served or shall serve in the Army of the United States." (A officers of the Treasury for a settlement of the longevity pay and allow-ances due claimant's decedent in accordance with said decision, and, under the rulings then in force, said claim was disallowed October 18,

That upon the revocation of the ruling of the comptroller that service as a cadet could not be counted in computing longevity pay and allowances, May 18, 1908, the claimant made application to the accounting officers of the Treasury for settlement of the longevity pay and allowances due under the act of July 5, 1838, but, January 14, 1909, the Auditor for the War Department refused to reconsider the settlement of 1890.

That by this action of the accounting officers there has been withheld from claimant's decedent the sum of $1,500 which is justly due.

That the claim has not been assigned or transferred, in whole or in part, and that claimant has all his life been loyal to the Government of the United States.

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. The claimant is the duly appointed administrator of the estate of Julius P. Garesché, late an officer of the Army of the United States.

II. Claimant's decedent entered the United States Military Academy as a cadet July 1, 1837; was graduated therefrom and appointed second lieutenant Fourth Artillery July 1, 1841; first lieutenant, June 18, 1846; brevet captain and assistant adjutant general, November 9, 1855; brevet major and assistant adjutant general, May 14, 1861; major and assistant adjutant general, August 3, 1861; lieutenant colonel and assistant adjutant general, July 16, 1862; and was killed at the battle of Stone River, Tenn., December 31, 1862.

III. In the settlement of said decedent's accounts by the accounting officers of the Treasury he was paid on account of longevity periods as follows: First period, from July 1, 1856; fourth period, from July 1, 1851; third period, from July 1, 1856; fourth period, from July 1, 1851; third period, from July 1, 1856; fourth period, from July 1, 1851; third period, from July 1, 1850; and accounting officers under their then existing ruling, refused to count the service of said decedent at the Military Academy in computing his longevity pay and allowances after he became a commissioned officer.

IV. Under the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80), said decedent's longevity periods should begin on the following dates: First period, July 1, 1852; fourth period, July 1, 1852; fifth period, July 1, 1862; and the difference between the amounts paid him and the amounts to which he was entitled under said decision for said periods is as follows:

First longevity ration, July 1, 1847; third period, 1851 - - $292, 20

First longevity ration, July 1, 1842, to June 30, 1846	$292. 20
Second longevity ration, July 1, 1847, to June 30, 1851	292. 20
Third longevity ration, July 1, 1852, to June 30, 1856	292, 20
Fourth longevity ration, July 1, 1857, to June 30, 1861	438. 30
Fifth longevity ration, July 1, 1862, to Dec. 31, 1862.	55. 20

Mr. OLIVER. I offer three amendments, accompanied by the findings in each case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be stated. The Secretary. On page 266, after line 19, insert:

To Joseph Fornance, executor of the estate of James Fornance, deceased, of Norristown, $1,186.74.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I will say the same in reference to these claims. I will not detain the Senate by asking to have the find-I will ask that the findings in each case be printed, and I will accept the amendments on behalf of the committee with the understanding that after the findings are printed, if, on looking them over, I find any error, I reserve the privilege of calling up the matter.

Mr. OLIVER. That is entirely satisfactory.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The findings of fact will be printed in the RECORD.

The findings of fact are as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. Claimant's decedent, James Fornance, was during his lifetime an officer in the United States Army, having entered the United States Military Academy as a cadet September 1, 1867. He graduated therefrom and was appointed second lieutenant, Thirteenth United States Infantry, June 12, 1871; promoted to be first lieutenant June 29, 1872, and captain December 16, 1889.

II. In the settlement of said decedent's accounts the accounting officers of the Treasury refused to allow for the time he served as a cadet at the Military Academy in computing his longevity pay and allowances.

III. Under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80) there would be due in addition to the amount already paid to said decedent the sum of $1,186.74, as reported by the Auditor for the War Department.

To the Union Trust Co., of the District of Columbia, administrator of the estate of William Hemphill Bell, deceased, $2,717.60.

The amendment was agreed to. The findings of fact are as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. The Union Trust Co., of the District of Columbia, claimant herein, is the administrator of the estate of William Hemphill Bell, deceased, who during his lifetime was an officer in the United States Army, having entered the Military Academy as a cadet July 1, 1853. He graduated therefrom and was appointed brevet second lieutenant, Third Infantry, July 1, 1858; was promoted to be first lieutenant, May 14, 1861; captain, June 17, 1862; major and commissary, August 14, 1883; lieutenant colonel and assistant commissary general, December 27, 1892; colonel and assistant commissary general, June 10, 1896; brigadier general and commissary general, November 15, 1897; and retired January 28, 1898. He died October 17, 1906.

II. Said decedent was paid his first longevity ration from July 1, 1863, and one additional ration for each five years subsequent thereto. Under the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80) said decedent would be entitled to additional longevity allowances, as reported by the Auditor for the War Department, amounting to the sum of $2,717.60.

The amendment was agreed to. The findings of fact are as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. The claimant herein, Benjamin Dwight Critchlow, is a citizen of the United States, residing in the State of Colorado, and was at the times hereinafter stated an officer in the United States Army, having entered the United States Military Academy as a cadet July 1, 1861. He graduated therefrom and was appointed first licutenant, Thirteenth Infantry, June 23, 1865, and resigned as such January 21, 1869. II. In the settlement of claimant's account the accounting officers of the Treasury refused to count his service as a cadet in computing his longevity pay and allowances for services prior to February 24, 1881.

III. Under the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80) there would be due claimant, as reported by the Auditor for the War Department, the sum of $331.65.

The findings of fact are as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. The claimant, the regents of the University of Kansas, is a corporation created under the laws of the State of Kansas, and was such corporation on the 17th day of February, 1897, and is a State institution for the higher education of young men and women of the State of Kansas who are sufficiently prepared for university work. It has no commercial features and is supported in the main by appropriation made by the Legislature of Kansas. It has also a small income from an endowment fund, receives the proceeds of sale of certain public lands, and has some income from small fees paid by the students of the university.

commercial reatures and is supported in the main by appropriation made by the Legislature of Kansas. It has also a small income from an endowment fund, receives the proceeds of sale of certain public lands, and has some income from small fees paid by the students of the university.

II. On the 21st day of May, 1856, the New England Emigrant Ald Co. was a corporation duly organized and existing by virtue of an act of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts and was the owner in fee simple of lots 21 and 23 on Massachusetts Street, city of Lawrence, Territory of Kansas, on which it had theretofore receted and then owned a certain hotel structure with necessary outbuildings, known as the Free State Hotel, or Eldridge House, which building, exclusive of its furniture and exclusive of the land upon which it stood, was reasonably worth the sum of $20,000.

III. On the 5th day of May, 1856, Judge Lecompte convened the United States district court at the town of Lecompton, State of Kansas, and delivered a charge to the grand jury of that court, a portion of which was as follows:

"This Territory was organized by an act of Congress, and so far its authority is from the United States. It has a legislature elected in pursuance of that organic act. This legislature, being an instrument of Congress, by which it governs the capital territory, has passed laws. These laws, therefore, are of the United States authority and making, and all that resist these laws resist the power and authority of thines of the states, and are therefore guilty of high treason. Now, gentlemen, if you find that any persons have resisted these laws, then you must, under your oaths, find bills against such persons for high treason."

After having been charged by the judge as aforesaid, the grand jury made the following presentment on the said 5th day of May, 1856:

"The grand jury, sitting for the adjourned term of the first district court in and for the county of Douglas, in the Territory of Kansas, beg leave to report to the honorable court tha

"OMER C. STEWART, Foreman."

A search of the records of the said district court, as they have been preserved, was made by one of the witnesses during the year 1906, but said search failed to disclose that any warrant or process of any kind was issued against the said Free State Hotel by reason of said presentment or indictment so found by the grand jury.

PROCLAMATION.

To the people of Kansas Territory:
Whereas certain judicial writs of arrest have been directed to me by first district court of United States, etc., to be executed within the county of Douglas; and
Whereas an attempt to execute them by the United States deputy marshal was violently resisted by a large number of citizens of Lawrence; and as there is every reason to believe that any attempt to execute these writs will be resisted by a large body of armed men:

Now, therefore, the law-abiding citizens of the Territory are commanded to be and appear at Lecompton as soon as practicable and in numbers sufficient for the proper execution of the law.

DEAR SIR: The undersigned are charged with the duty of commu-nicating to your excellency the following preamble and resolutions adopted at a public meeting of the citizens of this place at 7 o'clock last evening, viz:

Whereas we have the most reliable information from various parts of the Territory and the adjoining State of Missouri of the organization of guerrilla bands, who threaten the destruction of our town and its citizens: Therefore

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,

Lecompton, Kans. T., May 12, 1856.

GENTLEMEN: Your note of the 11th instant is received, and in reply I have to state that there is no force around or approaching Lawrence, except the legally constituted posse of the United States marshal and sheriff of Douglas County, each of whom, I am informed, have a number of writs in their hands for execution against persons now in Lawrence. I shall in no way interfere with either of these officers in the discharge of their official duties.

If the citizens of Lawrence submit themselves to the Territorial laws and aid and assist the marshal and sheriff in the execution of process in their hands, as all good citizens are bound to do when called on, they or all such will entitle themselves to the protection of the laws. But as long as they keep up a military or armed organization to resist the Territorial laws and the officers charged with their execution I shall not interpose to save them from the legitimate consequence of their illegal acts.

LAWRENCE, May 14, 1856.

Dear Sir: We have seen a proclamation issued by yourself, dated 11th day of May, and also have reliable information this morning that large bodies of armed men, in pursuance of your proclamation, have assembled in the vicinity of Lawrence.

That there may be no misunderstanding, we beg leave to ask respectfully that we may be reliably informed what are the demands against us. We desire to state most truthfully and earnestly that no opposition whatever will now or at any future time be offered to the execution of any legal process by yourself or any person acting for you. We also pledge ourselves to assist you, if called upon, in the execution of any legal process.

We declare ourselves to be order-loving and law-abiding citizens, and only await an opportunity to testify our fidelity to the laws of the country, the Constitution, and the Union.

We are informed also that those men collecting about Lawrence openly declare that their intention is to destroy the town and drive off the citizens. Of course we do not believe that you give any countenance to such threats; but in view of the exciting state of the public mind we ask protection of the constituted authorities of the Government, declaring ourselves in readiness to cooperate with them for the maintenance of the peace, order, and quiet of the community in which we live.

Very respectfully.

Robert Morrow. we live.

Very respectfully,

ROBERT MORROW, LYMAN ALLEN, JOHN HUTCHINSON,

J. B. Donelson.

United States Marshal for Kansas Territory.

To said letter last above, dated May 14, 1856, said United States marshal replied by letter, in which, after making certain charges against the citizens of Lawrence, he used the following language:

"But I must take the liberty of executing all processes in my hands as the United States marshal in my own time and manner, and shall only use such power as is authorized by law."

On the 17th day of May, 1856, the following letter was sent by a committee of the citizens of Lawrence to the United States marshal:

I R DONELSON.

J. B. Donelson, United States Marshal, Kansas Territory.

United States Marshal, Kansas Territory.

Dear Sir: We desire to call your attention, as citizens of Kansas, that a large force of armed men have collected in the vicinity of Lawrence and are engaged in committing depredations upon our citizens, stopping wagons, arresting, threatening, and robbing unoffending travelers upon the highway, breaking open boxes of merchandise and appropriating their contents, have slaughtered cattle, and terrified many of the women and children.

We have also learned from Gov. Shannon that there are no armed forces in the vicinity of this place but the regularly constituted militia of the Territory. This is to ask you if you recognize them as your posse and feel responsible for their acts. If you do not, we hope and trust you will prevent a repetition of such acts and give peace to the settlers.

On behalf of the citizens.

C. W. BABCOCK. LYMAN ALLEN. J. A. PERRY.

To this letter there was no reply by the marshal.

On said 17th day of May, 1856, a letter as follows was presented to by. Shannon by the proprietors of the aforesaid Free State Hotel:

LAWRENCE, KANS. T., May 17, 1856.

Gentlemen: Having learned that your reason for assembling so large a force in the vicinity of our town to act as posse in the enforcement of the laws rests on the supposition that we are armed against the laws and the officers in the exercise of their duties, we would say that we hold our arms only for our own individual defense against violence and not against the laws or the officers in the execution of the same. Therefore, having no further use for them than our protection is otherwise secured, we propose to deliver our arms to Col. Sumner so soon as he shall quarter in our town a body of troops sufficient for our protection, to be retained by him so long as such force shall remain among us.

Very truly, etc.,

Many Citizens.

Very truly, etc.,

His Excellency Wilson Shannon, Governor, and J. B. Donelson, Esq., United States Marshal for Kansas Territory.

V. That on the 21st day of May, 1856, said United States marshal, J. B. Donelson, having in his hands a writ for the arrest of certain persons then residing in said city of Lawrence, organized a posse of several hundred armed men under the pretense of needing the same for making said arrests, and proceeded to said city of Lawrence and camped with said posse near said city; and on the forenoon of said day, leaving said writ. That on the afternoon of said day, while the marshal was present, a man went through said posse and dismissed it with the statement that the marshal had no further use for its services, thanking the men and telling them to make out the number of days they had served and that they would be paid. This same man immediately summoned the same men as the posse of Sheriff Jones, the sheriff of Douglas County. That on the afternoon of said day said posse, under the command of the said sheriff, proceeded in a body into said city and destroyed the Free State Hotel by fire, said marshal appearing to give countenance to the same by his presence at the time, and said sheriff announcing immediately prior to the burning of the hotel, while the United States marshal was present, that he was a deputy United States marshal and that he was acting under an order of the United States marshal and that he was acting under an order of the United States marshal and that he was acting under an order of the United States for does not appear that the said sheriff had any official connection with the United States.

VI. On the 22d day of May, 1856, a committee of said town of Lawrence, Territory of Kansas, set forth all of the foregoing facts concerning the conduct of said governor, marshal, deputy marshal, and posse in a memorial addressed to His Excellency Franklin Pilerce, President.

VII. During the said period of time from May 5, 1856, to and including May 21, 1856, there was no armed force in said town of Lawrence making resistance to the laws of the United States, and there was no concerted

Mr. OVERMAN. I offer an amendment on behalf of the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. WATSON]. I will say that this is a case which does not fall within the rule adopted by the committee. I do not suppose the Senate, in view of the course adopted, will agree to the amendment. I hope at another time we will get this and similar amendments adopted, because they have merit in them. But just at this time the committee have ruled out all cases of this kind. I want to be frank with the Senate and say that. But on behalf of the Senator from West Virginia, who is not here, I offer the amendment.

The Secretary. The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Over-MAN], on behalf of the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. WATson], offers an amendment, on page 216, after line 18, to insert:

To the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Ravenswood, W. Va., $300.

To the county court of Randolph County, $2,000.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, to accept those two amendments would simply mean that we would change the entire character of the report and admit a whole class of claims that the committee declined to insert in the bill, and the Senate has already sustained the committee in that respect. On that account the committee can not accept these amendments, and I shall feel obliged to oppose them.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I should like to ask the chairman of the committee if he is willing to state to the Senate why, on what ground, for what reason, the committee rejected all these claims—these church claims—the justice of which everybody concedes. They ought to be paid. I should like to have the chairman state

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, if the Senator from Alabama will do the committee the honor to read their report, in which they have very fully reviewed these claims, he will find exactly what is the position of the committee.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President— Mr. CRAWFORD. I will simply say this, if the Senator will permit me to conclude my statementMr. BANKHEAD. Certainly; I will be glad to have the Senator do that.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The Committee on Claims decided that they would follow the rule which has been followed since the first report was made, by Senator Hoar, in regard to educa-tional institutions destroyed during the war, and allow the claims, according to the findings, for all educational institutions, eleemosynary institutions, and churches that were destroyed by the armies of the United States or the military authorities during the war, where the destruction was not the result of war necessity, in battle; and all claims of that character are reported favorably in this bill.

Mr. President, there are a great many claims in the bill as it passed the House that are not for churches destroyedclaims which are not within the rule laid down by Senator Hoar in the case concerning the William and Mary College-but are cold-blooded claims for rent. There is nothing in the rule pertaining to the conduct of war in this country or in any other country, under the rule laid down by Senator Hoar, or in the rules that have been declared since his great report in regard to the college of William and Mary was made, that furnishes any basis whatever for distinguishing a mere commercial claim for the rent of a church from a claim for the rent of a warehouse or the rent of a store.

Now, here is a large class of claims for the rent of churches, and, Mr. President, in the large majority of these cases the findings do not show even when the churches were occupied. The findings do not show whether a church was occupied 24 hours or 4 years. The findings do not show that it was damaged one dollar in the occupation. The findings do not show what kind of church building it was, whether it was 75 years old or 1 year old, whether it cost $20,000 or $500. The findings are absolutely silent with reference to any of these details or any information of that kind and character.

And, Mr. President, that is not all. Oftentimes the men who claim to represent church organizations and are asking for appropriations here are representing church organizations that have been out of existence for years. Some man has himself appointed a trustee 45 or 50 years after the war, and presents an old claim for the rent of a church, and does not even state the year in which it was occupied, does not even state the length of time it was occupied, does not even undertake to specify what kind of building it was; but, claiming to be an elder or trustee of a defunct organization, he brings in a coldblooded commercial claim here for dollars and cents.

Now, that opens a big question here. The House passed such claims, and we have rejected them. They will have to be considered in conference. The conference committee will have to thrash out these differences and decide which of them they will allow and which they will not allow.

I will say this to the Senator from Alabama: There are some of those claims that personally I would not be adverse to allowing, not because they relate to churches, but because the parties have given us evidence which we ought to have and which we ought to require from them just as we require it from the owner of a store or a warehouse. They have described the building. They have said it was a substantial church building, erected just before the war, 40 feet long, so many feet wide, with a gallery inside, and have described how it was furnished. They have shown that it was occupied, it may be, by the troops of Gen. Sherman as a hospital from the 1st of January of such a year down to the 1st of January of such a year; that the building was worth so much money, that its use and occupation was reasonably worth so much. There we have some facts.

But to throw a lump collection upon Congress, saying that during the war the military forces of the United States occupied a church building at Culpeper or Washington Court House, or in some county somewhere, without saying what kind of a building it was, and not even showing that the organization is now in existence, and appropriate for such claims, is a reckless way to dispose of money out of the United States Treasury.

That is the class of cases and claims that are in dispute, and if we open the door to discuss them here-and there are hundreds of them-this bill will never pass the Senate. If the Senator sustains the committee, and lets the conference between the two Houses take up these cases and thrash them out, sifting each case, and the conferees can come to a conclusion that in this case the Senate amendment ought not to be sustained and in that case it ought to be sustained, we can bring some conclusion back to the Senate and perhaps pass this bill. So I ask the Senator to assist others in sustaining the policy that is followed by this committee.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I do. Mr. BANKHEAD. The Senator, the chairman of the committee, has been discussing a question that is not in this proposed amendment at all. It is simply a proposition to pay the Presbyterian Church of Huntsville, not for use and occupation of the church during the war, or anything like that, but for destruction of the church. This church had just been completed, at the beginning of the war, at a cost of $30,000. The Army came into Huntsville and did not occurr this church but delib. came into Huntsville and did not occupy this church, but delib-erately tore it down and used the brick and material in building chimneys, bake ovens, and other necessary matters around the camp. That is this case.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the Senator call my attention to the particular case that he is now mentioning?

Mr. BANKHEAD. It is the Presbyterian Church at Huntsville. I have sent for the papers and the findings of the court. Mr. CRAWFORD. Was it in the bill as it passed the House? Mr. BANKHEAD. No. I want to put it in the bill in the Senate.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is a different thing. Was it ever submitted to the committee?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No. Mr. CRAWFORD. That is an altogether different thing. If a church at Huntsville, Ala., was destroyed for the purpose of using the material to build a bridge

Mr. BANKHEAD. It was not to build a bridge.
Mr. CRAWFORD. Or for the construction of winter quarters or for any purpose of that kind, we have allowed claims of that character; but I do not think we should be asked here, after the bill is made up and our report has been presented, to consider such claims which were not submitted to us and which are presented after the bill was made up. There is another time for claims of that character, without bringing such claims in at this time when there is no opportunity on the part of the committee to examine them.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I recognize the force of the suggestion of the chairman of the committee. This claim is 4 or 6 years old-I am not quite sure which-and doubtless it would have been presented to the House but for the fact that the Member representing that district was in very poor health and was unable to attend the sessions of the House when the bill was made up. It never came to my knowledge until within the last few days. I know I ought not to insist on making an exception in this case, but it is a meritorious one if there are merits in any of these

Mr. CRAWFORD. I would not pass judgment upon a report of that kind, but I will simply say to the Senator that we must have a point at which to stop in deciding on the items which shall go in one of these bills. At a later date important matters can be taken up which we have had no opportunity whatever to examine.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I thought from the nature of the Senator's argument the committee, especially the chairman of the committee, had made up their minds that none of these church claims were of much merit and perhaps it was the policy of the committee to reject them at all times. I thought if that was the case we had as well settle it in the Senate now as at any other time. But it appears that I misconstrued the attitude of the chairman of the committee, and in view of the suggestion he has made and in view of the further fact that there will he has made and in view of the further fact that there will be another Congress in session after this one, I will not ask the Senate to vote on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Over-

MANT.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President—
Mr. CRAWFORD. The amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina was an item for West Virginia. He was offering it for the Senator from West Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It was offered by the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The committee can not accept that amend-ment, and it was obliged to oppose it because of the rule we have followed in making up this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio desire to speak to the amendment?

Mr. BURTON. No; I was not aware that any amendment was pending, the Senator from Alabama having, as I under-stood him, withdrawn his amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment had been previously offered by the Senator from North Carolina, and it has not been acted upon. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina. The question is on agreeing The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BURTON. I desire to offer an amendment which I think will not cause any discussion.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What is it? Mr. BURTON. It is a claim for longevity pay. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The SECRETARY. On page 266, after line 6, insert:

To J. Nelson Caldwell, administrator of the estate of James N. Caldwell, deceased, of Cincinnati, $2,096.82.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The committee can accept that amendment. I have here the finding of the court sustaining it, and it is exactly the same as the other. I will ask that the finding be printed in the RECORD in connection with it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The finding will be printed in the RECORD, without objection, and the amendment adopted.

The matter referred to is as follows:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

well, administrator de bonis non of the estate of James N. Caldwell, v. The United States.]

STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled cause for arrears of increase of pay due on account of the services of James N. Caldwell in the United States Army was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 3d day of Angust, 1911.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 8th day of May, 1912.

Lyon & Lyon appeared for the claimant and the Attorney General, by George M. Anderson, his assistant, under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the United States.

The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

That he is a citizen of the United States and a resident of the city of Cheinnati in the county of Hamilton, in the State of Ohio, and is the administrator de bonis non of the estate of James N. Caldwell, who died while serving in the United States Army on the 12th day of March, 1886.

That the aforesaid James N. Caldwell, deceased, entered the military service of the United States as a cadet at the Military Academy on the 1st day of July, 1836; brevetted second lieutenant, Second Infantry, July 1, 1840; second lieutenant, First Infantry, Angust 5, 1840; first lieutenant, March 31, 1847; captain, October 25, 1860; major, Eighteenth Infantry, February 27, 1862; retired December 29, 1863, which grade he held until his death on the aforesaid date, and by reason of such service is entitled to longevity pay, computing the time he served at the Military Academy as a cadet, in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States as laid down in the case of The United States v. Watson (130 U. S. Rep., p. 80), which has never been paid to the deceased officer or his heirs.

That application for longevity increase pay was made to the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, but said claim was disallowed on the 11th day of November, 1890, on the 4round "service as a cadet, application was again d

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. The claimant, James Nelson Caldwell, is a citizen of the United States, residing in Cincinnati, State of Ohio, and is the administrator de Ionis non of the estate of James N. Caldwell, deceased, who during his lifetime was an officer in the United States Army, having entered the United States Military Academy as a cadet July 1, 1836. He was graduated therefrom and appointed brevet second lieutenant, Second Infantry, July 1, 1840; promoted to be second lieutenant, First Infantry, August 5, 1840; first lieutenant, March 31, 1841; captain, October 26, 1850; major, Eighteenth Infantry, February 27, 1862; and was retired December 29, 1863. He died March 12, 1886. He was on active duty from December 29, 1863, to January 18, 1866; from May 25, 1867, to December 31, 1867; and from August 19, 1868, to February 28, 1869.

II. Suid decedent was paid his first longevity ration from July 1, 1845, and one additional ration for each five years subsequent thereto, and the accounting officers of the Treasury refused to count his service at the Military Academy in computing his longevity pay and allowances. III. Under the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of United States e, Watson (130 U. S., 80), there would be due said decedent additional longevity allowances, as reported by the Auditor for the War Department, amounting to $2,096.82.

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I offer an amendment, which I ask may be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read. The Secretary. On page 8, after line 7, insert:

ARIZONA.

To John T. Brickwood, $14,950; Edward Gaynor, $29,000; Theodore Gebler, $10,600; Lee W. Mix, $5,100; Arthur L. Peck, $5,560; Thomas D. Casanega, $900; Joseph de Lusignan, $6,125; and Joseph H. Berger, $4,000, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, in full compensation for the losses incurred by the destruction in 1899 of their buildings and other property and their removal by the United States authorities from the premises severally owned and occupied by them on what is commonly called the International Strip, in the town of Nogales, Ariz.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Mr. President, from the date mentioned in the amendment up until now these men have been struggling to recover the property that they lost by the act of the Government in removing from the international boundary line in the town of Nogales 60 feet of property then owned, controlled, and occupied by the residents of the city whose names appear in the amendment. This property in the town of Nogales had been on what was known or believed to be a Mexican land grant. These owners had purchased from the Mexican authorities and after it was decided that this particular part was not within the grant, the city applied for a town-site patent. Every resident in that city obtained a patent to his land except those on this international boundary on the 60 feet from which their houses were taken and their property utterly destroyed, and the land dedicated to public use. They were the only men in the city who lost by it. In fact, those abutting on them gained by it. The town site went to patent, and these men have been left from that day to this without any relief whatever.

A hearing was had as to the value of this property and it was submitted to the Court of Claims. The Court of Claims, in its findings, said they had no title to the land, which was true enough, and that they had no title whatever to any recovery, but suggested what improvements were on the land and intimated that it would not be altogether wrong to pay for those.

I did not have time to have this placed as a charter amendment in the bill. I made application to go before the committee on my advent to this body in order to present these claims to that committee. This is a question which is going to involve the findings of the court, and at this time, in the present condition of the Senate, I do not wish to delay the proceedings nor to retard the consideration of the pending bill, because it would take me at least an hour to show the Senate that these men are entitled to every cent they claim. I have no doubt that the chairman will inform me whether or not he expects within a reasonable time to bring before the Senate another of these claims bills.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, of course I can not answer upon that point, because there will undoubtedly be a new chairman of the Committee on Claims after the 4th of March and the personnel of the committee will change. The Senator from Arizona was very courteous and very considerate about these claims. He came to the chairman of the committee about it last year after he came here. I appreciate his situation in relation to it. The committee has investigated it, however. For instance, in the Brickwood case, here is the finding of the court :

VI. Claimant never had any title to the real estate upon which said buildings and improvements were situated.

And their conclusion is:

Upon the foregoing findings of fact the court concludes that the claim herein is neither a legal nor an equitable one against the United States, and payment rests in the bounty of Congress.

That is practically the situation with reference to the other claims. It would take some time if the Senator from Arizona and myself were to undertake to review each of these cases. I simply desire to say that there was before the committee this report from the Court of Claims, to which the claims had been referred, and the committee investigated the findings in each case, and came to the conclusion that the claims should not go into this bill. Of course I feel obliged to adhere to that conclusion of the committee and to resist the adoption of an amendment which would incorporate the claims in the bill at

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. But, Mr. President, I can not permit the case to leave the present consideration of the Senate without some explanation of the findings of this court. In the Potomac Flats case of this town, reported in One hundred and seventyfinits case of this town, reported in one infinited and seventy-fourth United States, under exactly the same conditions, the Supreme Court of the United States held that while they did not have a legal title to the land they held it under a color of title and made improvements in good faith on it and were entitled to recover the value of their improvements, and they did recover in the Potomac Flats case in this city under exactly similar conditions.

The finding of the Court of Claims that these people had no title is technical and unjust, because the record proof in the case shows that most of those people for 25 years had been residents in good faith of that property, one of them receiving a rental of from five to seven hundred dollars a month on his property, and they allow him $2,300 for that. The proof in this record shows that the holdings were worth $20,000, and it is proved by every neighbor he had and every real estate expert there in that part of the country. Though he did not have a valid title from the United States he had lived on this ground under its grace, with the right to claim title ultimately when it gave patents, as it did to every one of his neighbors except him, and they dedicated this to public use.

The Court of Claims say that these people had no legal or equitable title to that ground, in the face of the fact that they gave to every other man in the city a direct Government title to his land and withheld it from these claimants. The Court of Claims come in to tell Congress that the claimants here have no legal or equitable title to anything and that it is a matter merely for the grace of Congress to give them some compensation for this injury done them.

I shall attempt, I think, a shorter cut. At the very first opportunity I shall introduce a bill to relieve these men directly and avoid any questions that can be raised on the Court of Claims finding, for I appreciate the attitude the chairman is in and the difficulties his bill is already giving, not only to himself, but to the Senate and to the House.

So I will for the present withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona is withdrawn.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, yesterday I presented an amendment, which has been printed. It is for longevity pay, and I have here the court findings.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey offers an amendment, which will be read.

Mr. CRAWFORD. It is a claim for longevity pay growing out of the service of an Army officer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. On page 265, after line 9, insert:

To Jane W. Laidley, widow, and Jane A. Oberly, daughter and only child, of Theodore T. S. Laidley, deceased, late of the United States Army, $2,057.95, to be proportioned as follows:

To Jane W. Laidley, of Elizabeth, N. J., $685.98.

To Jane A. Oberly, of Elizabeth, N. J., $1,371.97.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. The court findings I have sent to the desk

Mr. CRAWFORD. Let the Secretary read the conclusion of the findings.

The Secretary read as follows:

CONCLUSION.

Upon the foregoing findings of fact the court concludes that the claim herein not having been filed for prosecution before any court within six years from the time it accrued is barred.

The claim is an equitable one against the United States in so far as they received the benefit of the service of said decedent while a cadet at the Military Academy, which service the Supreme Court in the case of United States v. Watson (130 U. S., 80) decided was service in the Army.

ARCHIBALD HOPKINS, Chief Clerk Court of Claims. Mr. CRAWFORD. The committee accepts the amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to. Mr. SMITH of Maryland. I offer the following amendment, and I also send to the desk the findings of the Court of Claims. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The Secretary. On page 50, after line 9, insert: To the rector of St. Augustine's Roman Catholic Church, of Williamsport, Md., $425.

Mr. CRAWFORD. This amendment was proposed by the Senator from Maryland, as I recall it, at the last session. claim was considered in the committee, and the findings of the Court of Claims were considered by the committee, and the amendment was not adopted by the committee. It is a case in a class. If it is allowed, a great many others of the same character and kind ought to be allowed.

It was the decision of the committee that the facts as reported with reference to the use and occupation of the church did not bring it within the rule laid down by the late Senator from Massachusetts in the Williams and Mary College case for the destruction of educational buildings or buildings used for religious purposes, but it is a purely commercial claim for rent. Without a finding as to the period during which it was occupied, showing how long it was occupied, with no specification as to the damages, not discriminating at all, I will say to the Senator, against his State or his claim, it is a part of a class which the committee decided adversely upon.

Mr. SMITH of Maryland. Do I understand the Senator from South Dakota to say that claims shall be rejected, regardless of the recommendation of the Court of Claims? It will be seen by the finding of the Court of Claims that this amount has been recommended as due. I take it for granted that the court investigated the matter and found that it was due by the Government, for they have so stated.

It certainly seems to me that the Court of Claims is of very little use, when after a proper investigation they recommend a claim as a just claim and one that should be paid by the Government, if their recommendation is to be ignored. It does seem to me that their finding ought to be recognized by the Senate. The claim is recognized by the Court of Claims as a proper one, and recommendation is made for its payment.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I will say to the Senator from Maryland that that is hardly a fair statement as to what the Court of Claims has done. The Court of Claims renders no judgment in these cases. The Court of Claims simply reports the facts which they find, and those facts are sent here for the enlightenment of Congress in determining whether or not it will appropriate money.

In many, many of the reports from the Court of Claims they make no recommendation. They find no judgment; they simply report certain facts; and oftentimes they do not report facts which are sufficient to give to Congress the information that is necessary and which ought to be reported before the money is paid out of the United States Treasury.

For instance, with reference to the rent, I think if the Senator as a successful business man were asked to make a payment in the absence of any lease, in the absence of any specific contract to pay for the use and occupation of some building somewhere in his vast business, which he may have had no personal knowledge of but which is reported to him by one of his employees, before he would consent to pay a specific sum of money for the use and occupation of the building he would at least require the claimant to show him how long he had occupied the building. He would simply require the claimant to show him what sort of a building it was, and if the claim was made that his men were occupying it and had done damage to it he would certainly require some specifications as to what the

I am not discussing this particular case so much as I am cases that come within the class we have acted upon, where, for instance, a claimant puts in a blanket claim for the rent of a church. Claimants do not tell us the year when it was occupied; they just use the general language "during the war"; and they do not tell us what kind of a building it was. I presume you could sell some of these negro churches for $25, and yet they bring in claims here for use and occupation of their build-Whether they were 100 years old or new and substantial buildings, there is absolutely nothing in the findings to show.

I have absolutely no prejudice about this matter. I was only 2 years old when the war began, and there is none of the old feeling about it, so far as I am concerned; but I do insist that when we are paying money out of the Treasury of the United States on these claims, the claimants or their attorneys ought at least to present us the essential facts that are necessary, and would be required between business men when they are asked to pay an obligation. I think the trouble is due to the incompetency and the recklessness of attorneys, who themselves have practically no faith in these claims, but who are just taking a snapshot at them, thinking "we may get something and we If they were trained lawyers they certainly ought to have known how to draw up findings that would cover the necessary facts in a case upon which they were asking an appropriation of money. Over and over again what purport to be findings coming here from the court do not furnish the facts which should be required as the basis for appropriating money out of the United States Treasury.

Mr. SMITH of Maryland. Mr. President, I would say to the Senator from South Dakota that I have no idea that he has any prejudice whatever in this matter. I am quite sure that he is inclined to do his duty as he sees it; but in regard to his suggestion that in many instances no special church was specified. will say that in this instance the church was specified; the name of it was given and the location was given.

Mr. CRAWFORD. If the Senator will permit me, he is right about that point. I wish to say to him that there are only a few such cases; but there are some claims for church rent where they did describe the building, give its size, and give us some information. I regard those as rather in a class by themselves.

Mr. SMITH of Maryland. I will say to the Senator that this claim is one of that class. This church has been specified— Mr. CRAWFORD. And we treated them all alike, if the Senator please.

Mr. SMITH of Maryland. And the Court of Claims has decided that this is an equitable claim and that the money is due for rent. Inasmuch as the Government has appointed a Court of Claims to investigate these matters, I assume they have investigated this case; I assume that they found that this church was occupied; I assume that they found that the damage to the church was equal to the amount asked for; and they have made a report here stating that this amount of money is due to this church. It does seem to me that the Court of Claims amounts to nothing if, after they have investigated and reported upon a case, their report should be turned aside.

I would not for a moment question the Senator's feelings in regard to the matter; I am sure he wants to do what is right; I know he does; but it is a matter of judgment as to what is right. I feel that this is a proper claim; I feel that it has been properly adjudicated; that it has been properly examined and reported upon by the Court of Claims; and they say in their report that it is an equitable claim and should be paid.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, this is one of the very late findings; I think it was made in January, 1912. There are some claims of a similar character in the bill which have been rejected and will have to be determined in conference.

I hope the Senator from Maryland will be satisfied to allow this claim to remain out of the bill and have these cases which belong to a similar class determined between the two Houses. If they should then decide to allow them, it would give the Senator from Maryland a precedent for his claim; if they should decide against them, the Senator would then know what to expect with reference to his claim. The findings are very recent— January, 1912, as I recall. That is 50 years after 1862. These findings come here in relation to the rent of a church 50 years after the war began. I think the Senator ought to allow this claim to rest in the class with the others.

Mr. SMITH of Maryland. I have no disposition to do anything that would cause confusion, but at the same time I feel that this is a just claim and that it should be allowed. I have no disposition whatever to interfere with the working of the committee; but this is certainly a claim which should be allowed, and so I feel that it is my duty to press it to the furthest extent.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, I ask that the amendment be rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I have an amendment here which I desire to offer in regard to a Philippine claim. I send the amendment to the desk. I will say to the Senator from South Dakota that it will take some little time, as I wish to say something about it, and I do not think we have the opportunity to consider the amendment now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The Secretary. It is proposed to insert:

D. M. Carman, representing the estate of Luis R. Yangko, for rent and repairs of 10 cascos used by the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army in Manila Bay, $2,876.42.

Mr. LODGE. The amendment has not been adopted by the committee, but the committee, I notice, does not say anything in the report in condemnation of it.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The trouble is that it was not submitted to us until after our main report was made up. I should not want to accept the amendment in behalf of the committee, because the committee never acted upon it. If the Senator from Massachusetts will permit me, the facts reported here are the facts which I reported as a little addendum to the report authorized by the committee, simply for the information of the

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, there is no time to go on with the consideration of the amendment now, but I know about this claim because it came before the Philippine Committee, of which I was chairman for many years. We investigated it carefully and reported it favorably, I think, at least once. I be-lieve it is a thoroughly good claim and that it ought to be paid. It has been held equitable by the Court of Claims; it has been approved by the Quartermaster General and by the Secretary of War, and I should like the opportunity to lay it before the Senate because I think it will be adopted by the Senate. Committee on Claims has not acted upon it. It has simply come in too late for them to embody it in their report. I ask that the amendment may go over now, as it is within a minute of half past 1 o'clock.

Mr. SANDERS. On behalf of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Bradley], I offer the amendment which I send to the desk. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The Secretary. It is proposed to insert, under the heading

"Kentucky," the following:

To the wardens of Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, Bowling Green, $300.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I will ask that that amendment be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. LODGE. I did not intend to withdraw my amendment. I thought the bill was going over, and I wanted it to go over with my amendment pending, as it is an amendment which I wish to take a few moments to explain, and we have no time

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It was understood that the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts was to go over temporarily.

Mr. LODGE. To go over with the bill and be the pending amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. With the bill, exactly.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is entirely satisfactory. I ask that the amendment submitted by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Sanders] on behalf of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Brad-LEY | be printed and lie on the table so that I may have an opportunity to examine it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be so ordered.

TESTIMONY OF CHARLES F. CONN-CONTINUED.

Charles F. Conn, having been previously sworn, was further examined, and testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) Mr. Conn, when the Senate adjourned last evening we were discussing the draft of the agreement submitted to you by Judge Archbald and produced by Mr. Worthington. You stated that you had made a request of Judge Archbald that you might be permitted to reinspect that paper. When did you make that request?

The WITNESS. Did I make that statement?

Mr. Manager DAVIS. I think I quoted you in substance. Shall I refresh your memory from the RECORD?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. What page? I have the RECORD here.

Mr. Manager DAVIS. I will read from the Congressional Record of this morning. The question was asked you:

Had you made a request that you might see it?

And you answered:

I had. Q. Of whom had you made that request?—A. I think I asked Judge Archbald if I might see it.

Now, the question is, When did you make that request of Judge Archbald, and where?-A. A short time after I testified in the proceedings here I met Judge Archbald on the street in Scranton, and he stated to me that "You were in error in saying that you had not seen the draft of contract"; and he stated that it was in his possession and that I might see it.

Q. Do you remember approximately the date of that interview?-A. I do not.

Q. Have you stated before the Committee on the Judiciary that no draft of such an agreement had ever been submitted to you?-A. I so stated.

Q. You were in error, were you not, in making that statement?

ent?—A. I was in error. Q. How long after that tender on the part of Judge Archbald was it before the paper was exhibited to you?—A. I saw the paper Tuesday morning of this week.

Q. In the city of Washington ?- A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you wait that length of time before asking for the paper or going to see it?-A. I do not know that I can give any reason.

Q. At the time Judge Archbald told you of his possession of the paper, did he tell you when and how it had come into his possession?-A. I think not.

Q. Did you ask him how it came to be in his possession?-A.

I do not think I did. I think I did not.

Q. Was there nothing said which would refresh your recollection as to the manner in which that paper had got out of your custody and again into his?-A. I think not.

Q. You say you think not, Mr. Conn. Can you not be sure as to whether there was or was not any information of that sort communicated to you?—A. No; I can not be sure.

Q. Have you no recollection whatever touching that matter?—A. My recollection is that nothing was said at that time, but I am not positive.

Q. Have you any better recollection than you had yesterday as to the manner in which that paper, having been submitted to you by Judge Archbald, was by you redelivered to him or some representative of his?—A. Not of my own knowledge.

Q. Has anyone refreshed your recollection about it?-A. Not since yesterday.

Q. Well, has anyone refreshed your recollection about it at any time?-A. After Judge Archbald made this statement to me that I was in error in my testimony I went to Wells & Torrey's office, attorneys for the railroad company, and asked Mr. Wells about this contract. My recollection is that he stated that the contract had been given to Judge Archbald's attorneys by him or by the firm.

Who were Judge Archbald's attorneys?-A. Mr. Martin and Mr. Price.

Q. And when had it been given to them by him?-A. That I do not know.

Q. Had it been given to them by him before or after your testimony before the Committee on the Judiciary of the House?— A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know whether it had been given to them by your attorney, Mr. Wells, before or after this inquiry began?-A. I do not.

Q. Do you know when Messrs. Martin and Price first became the attorneys of Judge Archbald?-A. I do not.

Q. They were his attorneys, were they not, and present at the time of the examination had before the Committee on the Judiciary?-A. They were.

Q. And was it not after the beginning of that inquiry that your counsel, Mr. Wells, delivered this paper to them?-A. I do

Q. Does that not refresh your recollection about it? I will withdraw that question and put it in another form. Were Messrs. Martin and Price counsel for Judge Archbald at any time in connection with your purchase of this culm bank and your negotiations with him about it?—A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. In all that transaction Judge Archbald, of course, ap peared as his own representative?—A. He did.

Q. Was there any matter, so far as you know, in which they were Judge Archbald's attorneys other than this proceeding?— . Not so far as I know.

Q. In this contract itself, Mr. Conn, I observe that your company is described as the Erie & Wyoming Valley Railroad Co. Is that a correct designation?-A. No, sir.

Q. What is the corporate name of your concern?-A. The Lackawanna & Wyoming Valley Railroad Co.

Q. It does, however, have a physical connection with the tracks of the Erie Railroad Co., does it?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a traffic arrangement with that railroad company?A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were to pay for this coal, according to the proposition you made, 27½ cents per ton royalty? That is correct, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was your estimate of the cost of the coal to you after that royalty had been paid and the coal had been won from this bank?-A. About 65 cents.

Q. You were at the time purchasing coal from the Erie Railroad Co. and its subsidiaries?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were you paying to them per ton at that time?-

A. $1. Q. Did you have any knowledge of the price which had been fixed by the Eric Railroad Co. upon its holdings in the option given to Archbald and Williams?-A. I had.

Q. Before the negotiations were concluded?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the time the negotiations were begun had you that knowledge?—A. Not at the beginning of the negotiations; no, sir.

Q. When did you acquire that knowledge?—A. Soon after I received the first letter introducing Mr. Williams I went to Capt. May's office to get information concerning the culm bank and there learned the price of the Hillside interest.

Q. Did Capt. May at that time tell you anything about Judge Archbald's connection with the transaction?-A. I think not.

Q. Will you fix for us again, if possible, the exact date when your attorneys advised you that they would not recommend the title to this property?—A. I can not state that date positively.

Q. You had a conversation with Judge Archbald on the 29th day of November, 1911, in which you and he agreed as to price and terms. How long after that date was it, approximately, when your attorneys gave you this advice?—A. Within a week.

Q. How long was it after they gave you this advice before you communicated it to Judge Archbald?—A. I think that was also within a week.

Q. And after that you heard nothing further from Judge Archbald until you had received the letter from Williams on the 13th of March, 1912, and he came to your office within a few days thereafter. Is that correct?-A. I think I had heard from him during that period, either in conversation, meeting him on the street, or by telephone.

Q. With reference to this transaction?-A. That he was attempting to negotiate for an option from the Everhart heirs.

Q. When did he make the statement to you?-A. I have no way of fixing the time.

Q. How often during that interval did he communicate with you on the subject?-A. Perhaps two or three times.

Q. When was your attention called to the fact that you had made an error in your testimony before the committee with reference to the existence of this paper?-A. I can not fix the

Q. Was it before or after you left the city of Washington?

A. It was in Scranton, after I had left Washington.
Q. After you had left Washington. Was Judge Archbald present at your examination before the committee in the city of Washington?

Mr. WOR'THINGTON. It is admitted that he was.
Mr. Manager DAVIS. Let me refresh the witness's recollec-

The Witness. At the examination of this contract? Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) Yes. Was Judge Archbald present at your examination before the Committee on the Judiciary in Washington?-A. He was; yes, sir.

Q. Were Messrs. Martin and Price, his counsel, present at the same time and place?—A. They were.

Mr. Manager DAVIS. You may inquire, gentlemen.

Cross-examination ·

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Mr. Conn, when this former contract, which is Exhibit No. 22, was read yesterday, the interlineations were not read. We all understood they were not to be read. I wish you would now read them and state in what lines they occur and what they are, so that the record will show the contract and the interlineations.

And I would like to suggest, Mr. President, that this contract be reprinted in the record of this trial to-day with the interlineations, showing where they occur. Otherwise there will be no means by which the Members of the Senate can tell about these interlineations without going to a great deal of trouble.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. There is no objection to that, Mr.

We want all the facts as they are to appear. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it will be so ordered. The matter referred to is as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 22.]

[Words in brackets stricken through and words inserted in lieu thereof in italics.]

[Words in brackets stricken through and words inserted in lieu thereof in fiallics.]

This agreement, made this — day of December, A. D. 1911, by and between Edward J. Williams and R. W. Archbald, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, of the one part.

And the [Erie and Wyoming Valley Railroad Company] Lackawanan & Wyoming Valley Power Co., a corporation of the State of Pennsylvania, of the other part, witnesseth:

Whereas the said parties of the first part are the owners of a certain culm dump or bank of waste coal and refuse, produced in the mining operations of the late firm of Robertson and Law, at the so-called Katydid mines and colliery, which dump or bank is located in the vicinity of Moosic, Pennsylvania, and known and called the "Katy-did" culm dump; and whereas the party of the second part is desirous of purchasing the same:

Now, this agreement witnesseth, that for and in consideration of the terms and conditions hereinafter mentioned the parties of the first part do hereby grant, bargain, sell, and convey unto the party of the second part, its successors and assigns, all of the said culm dump, with the right to take, remove, and dispose of the same, subject always as follows; that is to say:

1. It is the purpose of the said party of the second part, and it hereby undertakes and agrees, at some convenient place along the line of [its] the L. & W. V. railroad to erect and construct a so-called washery or building, with suitable screens, rolls, chutes, and other appliances for the handling, screening, sorting, cleaning, and preparing for use the coal and material obtained from the said culm dump, with or without the use of water; land the same to equip with proper scales to the end that an accurate record may be kept of the weight and quantity of the said coal derived from the material taken from the said dump or bank; and a half for according to the gross ton of material removed from the said dump.

2. For each ton of coal of two thousand two hundred and paid for according to the gross ton of material removed f each of the said first parties, which the said parties of the first part shall severally receipt for by signing and returning proper vouchers therefor.

4. The said party of the second part agrees to pay at the rate per ton aforesaid for at least twenty thousand (20,000) tons per annum, in equal monthly installments, whether that quantity shall have been removed and obtained from said dump or bank and washed and prepared or not, until all the said material, other than rock, composing the said dump shall have been removed and disposed of, or all the coal to be derived therefrom shall have been paid for. When royalties have been paid in advance and, in the opinion of the party of the second part, payment has been made at the rate aforesaid for all of the coal capable of being obtained from said dump, if there is any dispute between the parties hereto with regard to the same, the matter shall be submitted to three arbitrators, one of whom shall be chosen by the parties of the first part, one by the party of the second part, and the two arbitrators so chosen shall agree on the third arbitrator, and the decision of any two of them shall be binding and conclusive. In case of the neglect or refusal of either party to appoint an arbitrator, the appointment may be made at the instance of the other party by the court of common pleas of Lackawanna County.

5. Where, in the screening, sorting, cleaning, and preparing the said material, any coal above the size of pea coal is obtained, the party of the second part, in addition to the royalty of twenty-seven and a half cents (27½e) per ton to be paid to the parties of the first part, shall pay to the Hillside Coal and Iron Company, on account of the owners of lot No. "46," from which the said coal was originally mined, the sum of five cents (5¢) per gross ton, in accordance with the terms on which the said culm dump is sold to the parties of the first part by the said Hillside Coal and Iron Company.

G. The party of the second part shall pay to the parties of the first part, on the execution and delivery of this agreement, the sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) as advance royalties, for which the party of the second part, without further payment, shall be entitled to such number of tons of coal, at the rate of twenty-sevon and a half cents (27 st) a ton, as shall be the equivalent thereof.

7. In case of the failure of the party of the second part for thirty days after the same are due to make the payments herein provided for, or to otherwise, for a like period, comply with any of the terms of this agreement, the parties of the first part may forfeit this agreement on thirty days' notice, in writing, of their intention so to do.

8. This agreement shall take effect as of December 1, 1911, from which date the minimum herein provided for shall begin to run.

9. When this agreement shall have been fully complied with by the party of the second part, the parties of the first part, at its request, shall execute an acknowledgment releasing and discharging the said party of the second part from any further obligation thereon.

10. The terms and conditions of this agreement shall be binding upon and operate in favor of the executors, administrators, and assigns of the party of the second part, as though in each instance severally and expressly mentioned.

In witness whereof the parties of the first part have hereunto set their hands and seals, and the party of the second part has hereunto affixed its corporate seal, attested by the signature of its president and secretary, on the day and year first above written.

The Witness. The words "Eric and Wyoming Valley Railroad Company" are crossed out and the words "Lackawanna & Wyoming Valley Power Co." are substituted. That is on the first page, second paragraph.

In section 1 the word "its" is stricken out and "the L. & W. V." substituted.

In the margin of the second page "scales of R. R. Co. at Scranton" are inserted.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. After what word is that insertion? Mr. WORTHINGTON. It is not after any word. It is in the margin.

The WITNESS. It is in the margin of the page, intended to take the place of these words:

And the same to equip with proper scales to the end that an accurate record may be kept of the weight and quantity of the said coal derived from the material taken from the said dump or bank.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. That gives me the information that I desire.

The WITNESS. In section 7 the words "after the same are due" are inserted after these words:

7. In case of the failure of the party of the second part for 30 days.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Are those all?-A. All except two interrogation marks which are in the margin of the paper.

Q. Are all those interlineations which you have just read in lead pencil?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the body of the paper is in typewriting, I believe? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are all those interlineations in your handwriting?-A. They are.

Q. And how about the interrogation marks? Are you able to identify them?-A. I think they are mine.

Q. Since you have seen that paper and recognized your handwriting, do you now recall having had the paper in your possession and suggesting those changes in the contract in that way?-A. I know, of course, that the paper was in my possession, but I have no recollection of it.

Q. You do not recognize making those changes?—A. I do not. Q. Or having the paper at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. About how the paper got out of your possession, if I can refresh your recollection, do you not recall that when you saw Judge Archbald in Scranton immediately after the 13th of March last, when you showed him that letter of March 13—that is, since you refused to go on with the contract or consider it any further-he asked you to return that paper to him and you then did so?-A. I have been told I did so. I have no recollection of it.

Q. You have no recollection of it?-A. I have no recollection of returning that paper.

Q. As to the paper being sent around Scranton and sent to your office—you said it was sent to your office while you were away, and by your attorneys, I think you said—Messrs. Wells & Torrey?—A. One of the junior partners of Wells & Torrey brought the paper to my office.

Q. Did you not learn at the same time that the object of that was to find out in whose handwriting these pencil memoranda are?—A. No, sir. Q. You did not know what the purpose was?—A. No, sir.

Q. When you saw that paper last Tuesday, in whose hands was it?—A. Mr. Archbald, jr.

Q. You said Wells & Torrey were the attorneys for the railroad company. What company did you mean?-A. The Lackawanna & Wyoming Valley Railroad Co.
Q. Mr. Martin and Mr. Price, I believe, are members of the bar of Scranton? That is their residence?-A. They are.

Q. You know them very well, and I presume that they know

Judge Archbald?—A. Yes, sir. Q. When you saw Judge Archbald just after the 13th of March last and showed him the letter of that date from E. J. Williams, did the judge say whether or not that was the first he knew of that letter being sent?-A. Not in those words.

Q. What is your recollection now as to what he did say about it when you exhibited that letter to him?-A. That he had no knowledge of the letter.

Q. If that letter of yours of September 30, 1911, to Judge Archbald, which is in evidence, was photographed at some time, do you have any knowledge as to how it came to be photographed?-A. None whatever.

Q. Was it out of your possession or custody from the time you received it until it was given to the Judiciary Committee?—

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did Judge Archbald ever ask you to return any of his letters to you relating to this matter?—A. I think not. He did

Q. And, as a matter of fact, you had them in your possession until they were turned over to the Judiciary Committee?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. When Mr. Williams came to your office on or about the 30th of September, 1911, with the letter of that date from Judge Archbald, did you know that he was accompanied by another man, who sat just outside the door where you and Williams were, and was listening to your conversation?-A. I do not think I noticed that there was anyone with him.

Q. Do you know Mr. Pryor, who was examined as a witness here yesterday?-A. I do.

Q. Do you know whether or not he came with Mr. Williams and sat just outside the door while you were talking with Pryor?-A. I could not say.

Q. And listening to your conversation?—A. I do not know. Q. Had Mr. William P. Boland had any conversation with you about this culm bank before you had any conversation with Judge Archbald about it?-A. He had spoken to me of a culm bank a short time before these negotiations began, but I am not sure whether he identified this particular property or not. Q. When you say "shortly before these negotiations began" what do you refer to?-A. The receipt of the letter introducing

Mr. Williams.

Q. What was your conversation with Mr. Boland about a culm bank, whether he mentioned the particular bank or not?— A. He asked if we would be interested in the purchase of a culm bank which could be reached from our own tracks, and I answered that we would be.

Q. Did you have any knowledge at the time of this transaction that the letter of Judge Archbald to you was the result of a suggestion that Mr. William P. Boland made to Williams, after his talk with you?—A. None whatever.

Q. You did not know it?—A. No, sir.

Q. If I understand about the price you were paying or were to pay if you had taken this Katydid bank, you were to pay 275 cents per ton of coal?-A. Of coal.

Q. It was not for material in the bank, but only for the coal, was it?-A. Coal shipped.

Q. Was the price you were to pay the estimate you had made of the quantity of it? Did you make any computation as to how you would come out as compared with how you would stand when buying the same quantity of coal from the Eric Railroad or its subsidiaries?—A. I figured that we would save 30 or 35 cents a ton.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. Secretary, will you show the witness the letter of March 13, 1912? I have not the number of the exhibit

Mr. SIMPSON. Exhibit No. 4.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON [exhibiting paper].) you to designate that the top of the paper on which that letter was written appears to have been cut off. I wish to ask you whether or not that was done while the paper was in your possession?-A. It was not.

Q. It is in the same condition now as when you received it?-

A. Precisely.

Q. Was any suggestion made to you at any time by Judge Archbald that his connection with this matter was to be kept quiet and covered up in any way?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was any such suggestion made to you by anybody?—A.

No, sir.

Q. Was there, in fact, any concealment of his connection with the matter, on your part or on the part of anybody, so far as you know ?-A. There was not.

Q. As a matter of fact, did you not tell Mr. Rittenhouse when you engaged him to look at the bank and tell you what the quantity of coal was, or estimate it for you, you sent him to Judge Archbald to get information about the title or something else connected with the bank?-A. I do not recall doing

Q. You do not remember that?-A. No, sir.

Q. You were asked yesterday by one of the Senators as to whether Judge Archbald told you he had a personal interest in this matter. You recollect that in his letter of September 30 he said that he and Mr. Williams were the parties interested?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he at any time limit or alter the statement he had made to you in that way in the letter which opened the negotiations?-A. No. sir.

Q. In this connection, do you recollect whether or not in the contract as it was submitted to you and as prepared by him, coming from him, it said:

This agreement made this — day of December, A. D. 1911, by and between Edward J. Williams and R. W. Archbald, of Scranton, Pa., of the one part—

And so on?

Mr. Manager DAVIS. The agreement itself is the best evidence of the contract.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Perhaps that is true; but I want to have that appear in this connection.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Do it when the argument comes to

Mr. WORTHINGTON. That is all, Mr. President.

Redirect examination:

Q. (By Mr. Manager DAVIS.) Mr. Conn, you say you were informed by some person unnamed that you had redelivered this tentative draft to Judge Archbald at the time of his interview with you in March, 1912. By whom were you so informed?—A. I think Mr. Archbald, jr., made that statement when I saw the paper on Tuesday.

Q. On Tuesday last in the city of Washington?—A. Yes, sir. Q. That is, Mr. Archbald, who is one of the counsel at the table?—A. Yes, sir.

table?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was that statement confirmed to you by any other per-

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, this witness may be discharged.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. We agree.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness is discharged.

DEPOSITION OF E. J. WILLIAMS BEFORE WRISLEY BROWN.

Mr. Manager STERLING. Mr. President, we now propose to read such portions of the deposition of E. J. Williams taken at Scranton by Mr. Brown as we think contradict his statement on the examination here. I will ask the Clerk to read the part we have marked.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Let me say, Mr. President, that we have gone over this with the manager and we agree that the passages which he has marked and which are about to be read come within the ruling which you made yesterday and they may be read for the purpose indicated, not, of course, withdrawing our contention that they are not competent. We also, of course, reserve the right, if after reading the whole deposition, we think that something else which is in it should go in in connection with it, to then offer it ourselves to make it complete.

Mr. Manager STERLING. There is no objection, I think, to reading from the printed copy.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Not at all. I should like to have the original, if it is here, to follow the reading with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will proceed

The Secretary. Reading from the printed copy of hearings before the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives, page 218:

SCRANTON, PA., March 16-17, 1912.

SCRANTON, PA., March 16-17, 1912.

Mr. Brown. Will you please state to me the circumstances under which a promissory note for $500, signed by Judge Archbald, was presented to Mr. W. P. Boland for discount while Mr. Boland was involved in litigation then pending before this judge?

Mr. WILLIAMS. We had an option on 1,000,000 acres of land, and I went to see Judge Archbald about it, and talked to him about it, and he says to me, "Could I see the option?" I said, "Yes, sir"; and brought the papers there, and he looked them up. I said to him. "What do you think of them?" "They are all right, first class."

"Would you like to pay some money in this, Judge?" "Yes, sir; I will tell you what I will do, I will give you a note to discount for $500." I says to him then, "I will take this note to the Bolands." "All right," he says.

Mr. Brown. Did this suggestion to take the note to the Bolands come from Judge Archbald?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No; I suggested that to him.

Mr. Brown. What was his reply?

Mr. WILLIAMS. He said, "Yes; you can take it to them."

Mr. Brown. Up to the time you suggested taking the note to the Bolands for discount Judge Archbald had made no suggestions relative to the party by whom the note should be discounted?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No; he did not.

Mr. Brown. So that the idea of having the Bolands discount the note was your own?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I suggested it, as I told William to-day about that.

Mr. Brown. The judge approved of it?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir; he approved of it.

Mr. Brown. To whom was the note made payable?

Mr. WILLIAMS. To John Henry Jones.

Mr. Brown. Was Jones a partner in the Venezuelan transaction?

Mr. Brown. Each of us owned one-third.

Mr. Brown. Each of you invested $500?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Each of you invested $500?

Mr. WILLIAMS. He and the judge invested the money,

Mr. Brown. What part has Jones in the deal?

Mr. Brown. He contributed his services?

Mr. Brown. You and Judge Archbald contributed the money?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. Did you know at the time you presented the note to Boland that he was a party defendant in a case pending before Judge Archbald?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. Mr. Williams, will you please state to me, in detail, the

Mr. Brown. Did you know at the time you presented the note to Boland that he was a party defendant in a case pending before Judge Archbald?

Mr. Williams. Yes, sir.

M. Brown. Mr. Williams, will you please state to me, in detail, the circumstances which led up to the Katyrdid culm-bank transaction? I calm bank, but at the time he did not know it was in two parts. He calm bank, but at the time he did not know it was in two parts. He knew that I knew that Robertson owned one part.

Mr. Brown. What do you mean by one part? You mean one-half interest in the whole bank?

Mr. Brown. System of the word one-half interest in the whole bank, I got a verbal option from Robertson, and then we went to the judge, and Robertson asked him, "Who is your partner in this?" I said.

"Mr. Brown. Just a moment. State what occurred when you went-to the judge the first time.

Mr. Brown. Just a moment. State what occurred when you went-to the judge the first time.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I went over to the judge; I said to him: "Now, I can get one-half from Capt. May." He says: "I will give you a good recommendation to get it." I went to see Capt, May, and he did not give it to me on the first time, but the second time he did.

Mr. Brown. Jou said you went to Capt. May with the letter from Judge; I will say the substance of that letter? Mr. WILLIAMS. He recommended me as a man that could handle it all right.

Mr. Brown. At this time had you agreed with the judge that he should have a part interest in this deal?

Mr. Brown. At this time had you agreed with the judge that he should have a part interest in this deal?

Mr. Brown. He didn't tell you to tell Capt. May that he was interested?

Mr. Brown. He didn't tell you to tell Capt. May that he was interested in the transaction?

Mr. Brown. He didn't tell you to tell Capt. May refused to grant the option?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes: at first.

Mr. Brown. He didn't tell you to tell Capt. May that he was interested in the transaction?

Mr. Brown. He didn't have a didn't want to sell at any price?

Mr. Brown

final?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; I went to the judge right away.

Mr. Brown. What did the judge say?

Mr. WILLIAMS. The judge says, "I know their lawyer, Mr. Brownell, I will see him about it. You go back to him again and see him about it to-morrow." I went back to him, and in the meantime, as I remember, the judge met him and spoke to him about it.

Mr. Brown. What did the judge say to you? Give me a complete statement of just what occurred when you went back to the judge after having seen May.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I don't remember exactly. The judge got excited, and he says, "Well, I will go and see Brownell; I am well acquainted with him, and I might hurt him for his refusal to give such a small thing."

and he says, "Well, I will go and see Brownell; I am well acquainted with him, and I might hurt him for his refusal to give such a small thing."

Mr. Brown. Is that all he said?

Mr. Williams. That is all. He told me, "I got some cases here now for them that I have just decided."

Mr. Brown. Cases for whom?

Mr. Williams. The Erie Co.

Mr. Brown. What else did he say?

Mr. Williams. I took ahold of the brief and looked at it.

Mr. Brown. Of what brief?

Mr. Williams. Of the lighter brief. Some overcharges that they had made on the lighters. I asked him what is a lighter. "It carries the railroad cars over the river," he says.

Mr. Brown. You say the judge was preparing a brief at the time for the Erie Co.; you saw the brief?

Mr. Williams. The brief was there.

Mr. Brown. In what form; printed or typewritten?

Mr. Williams. Printed.

Mr. Brown. It did not appear that the judge had written the brief?

Mr. Williams. It was there.

Mr. Brown. Did he tell you that he had prepared it?

Mr. Williams. No; he had some cases there then, and he said, "Here is one brief," and I took ahold of it.

Mr. Brown. When he told you that he had some cases there then, what was your understanding of his statement? I want to know whether he was preparing or completing a brief for the Erie, or had he before him a case for adjudication in which the Erie was a party?

Mr. Williams. He was passing on the case and the brief had been prepared and filed by the lawyers for the Erie Co. Is that your understanding?

Mr. Williams. It was a printed matter.

Mr. Brown. He was passing on the case and the brief had been prepared and filed by the lawyers for the Erie Co. Is that your understanding?

Mr. Williams. It was a printed matter.

Mr. Brown. Your understanding was he was passing on a case in which the Erie Co. was a party, and this brief was a brief filed by the attorney for the Erie Railroad in that case?

Mr. Williams. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. Did the judge allude to this brief or refer to it in any way?

Mr. Williams. I asked him what did that mean.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I asked him what did that mean.

Mr. Brown. He defined what the term "lighterage" meant?

Mr. WILLIAMS. He said he had passed upon a couple of cases for them before. He said there are more cases.

Mr. Brown. You refer to the lighterage case? What did he say about it? Did he connect the lighterage case with the culm-bank transaction? It is not necessary that you should give me the exact words of the judge, but I want the purport of his remarks to you at that time.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I said that he passed on two cases for them before. He did not tell me how he decided them.

Mr. Brown. What did he say about the lighterage case pending before him then?

He did not tell me how he decided them.

Mr. Brown. What did he say about the lighterage case pending before him thea?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Here is some cases yet. That is all he said.

Mr. Brown. What inference did you draw from this remark?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Well, I have no right to draw any inference; you can draw your own inference.

Mr. Brown. I want to know what is your understanding of his remarks regarding this lighterage case. What did he mean to imply when he said he had a case pending before him, according to your understanding?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Well, I suppose he meant he had a chance to do something for them or against them.

Mr. Brown. Were his remarks susceptible of any other construction?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No, sir.

Mr. Brown. What did he say about Brownell?

Mr. WILLIAMS. He said he was well acquainted with their lawyer. I did not know him. I never heard the name before.

Mr. Brown. Did he say he would see Brownell about the option?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. Try to remember whether he saw him or not?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I don't remember.

Mr. Brown. Try to remember whether he saw Brownell or not.

Mr. Brown. Can you remember whether he saw Brownell or not.

Mr. Brown. Can you remember whether he said he was going to New York to see him?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. What happened the second time you went?

Mr. Brown. Can you remember whether he said he was going to New York to see him?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. What happened the second time you went?

Mr. WILLIAMS. He gave it to me—the option.

Mr. Brown. His attitude seemed to have changed completely? You say only one day intervened between your first and second conference? Had the judge done anything other than speak to May personally?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No, sir; because he didn't have time.

Mr. RROWN. State what happened next.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I got the option. I could not say how many days after that I went to see Capt. May again, but I know the judge had met him and talked with him. I don't remember if he saw Brownell. He told me to go and see May again.

Mr. Brown. You went to see May. Do you remember how many days had elapsed?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I could not say.

Mr. Brown. The next time you went to see Capt. May his attitude was entirely changed?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. What took place at the second conference?

Mr. WILLIAMS. He gave me the option.

Mr. Brown. Did May give you any explanation for changing his decision?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No: not a word.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. Did May give you any explanation for changing his decision?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No; not a word.

Mr. Brown. You did not ask for any explanation?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No, sir; the judge told me before I went that I could get anything from him.

Mr. Brown. How was the purchase price that you paid for the Erie equity in the culm bank fixed?

Mr. WILLIAMS. $4,500.

Mr. Brown. How did you arrive at that amount? Did you discuss it with May?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. What was the purport of your conversation regarding the price to be paid for this option?

Mr. Williams. I talked to him about the amount and the quantity of coal with their own engineers. I told him that I got the other half for $3,500. He brought it down. He had it up to $6,000; then he brought it down to $4,500.

Mr. Brown. At the time did you think that $4,500 was a reasonable price for the Eric interest in the culm bank?

Mr. Williams. If the other was reasonable, it must be more than reasonable.

price for the Erie interest in the culm bank?

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the other was reasonable, it must be more than reasonable.

Mr. Brown. Did you think at that time it was a reasonable price to pay for the Erie interest?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I thought I had some advantage.

Mr. Brown. How great an advantage? What did you honestly believe was the value of the Erie interest in the culm bank at that time?

Mr. WILLIAMS. It was worth $10,000.

Mr. Brown. Yet you have practically completed negotiations for selling the property for between $30,000 and $40,000? How do you account for the large discrepancy in your estimate?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I suppose it was through his influence that done a good deal of it.

Intermission.

Mr. Brown. Mr. Williams, I would like to resume your examination relative to the fixing of the purchase price to be paid to the Erie for their equity in the culm bank. You stated that you saw Capt. May, the first time he refused absolutely to negotiate with you relative to this deal; you went back to Judge Archbald and told him what happened, and the judge, as I understand it, indicated displeasure at the actions of May, and intimated to you that he would go over May's head and force him to talk business with you, and at that time he was passing on a case involving lighterage charges.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Something about lighterage, I don't remember what it was.

Mr. Brown. In which the Erie was a party in interest?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I did not understand what lighterage was.

it was.

Mr. Brown. In which the Erie was a party in interest?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I did not understand what lighterage was.

Mr. Brown. You do remember the Erie was a party in this case pending before him at that time?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; I seen it, I had the paper book in my hand.

Mr. Brown. Judge Archbald, according to your theory, saw or communicated with somebody higher up than May in this corporation, and then he told you to go and see May again, and the second time May's attitude had entirely changed, and he was willing to talk business with you.

Will you give me, to the best of your recollection, just the substance of the conversation with May, on the second visit, with especial reference to the method whereby the price to be paid for the culm bank was arrived at.

ence to the method whereby the price to be paid for the culm dain was arrived at.

Mr. Williams. He figured it up at 12 cents a ton, then he figured it at 6 cents. I told him, why should you ask any more than Robertsen; he only asked $3,500. I think your price is high.

Mr. Brown. What did he say

Mr. Williams. Well, he figured it down to $4,500.

Mr. Brown. At what rate per ton?

Mr. Brown. At what rate per ton?

Mr. Brown. Isn't that a very low price for culm, in place?

Mr. Williams. Yes; we could get from the Laurel line 27½ cents.

Mr. Brown. Has the price materially increased since you put through the deal with May?

Mr. Williams. It has increased some.

Mr. Brown. To what extent?

Mr. Williams. I could not tell you.

Mr. Brown. Well, give me an estimate Has it increased, say, 25 per cent in value or 50 per cent, or is the increase comparatively small?

Mr. Williams. It has increased, maybe, from 5 cents to 6 cents a ton.

Mr. Brown. So that you estimate that at the time you purchased the

Mr. Williams. It has increased, maybe, from 5 cents to 6 cents a ton.

Mr. Brown. So that you estimate that at the time you purchased the Erie interest in this culm bank the culm was probably worth about 20 cents a ton?

Mr. Brown. I want to get your estimate of the value, per ton, of that culm at the time you got this option from May, as contradistinguished from the present value of the culm.

Mr. Williams. He estimated we could get nearly $40,000 to lease it by the ton.

Mr. Brown. You understand, Mr. Williams, I am trying to get at the reasonable value of that culm per ton in place at the time that you put through this eption with May?

Mr. Williams. Well, I have leased 1,000,000 tons at 10 cents per ton.

Mr. Brown. You mean you have purchased culm at that rate?

Mr. Williams. I leased it. I leased all he owned from Forest City to Moosic.

to Moosic.

Mr. Williams. I leased it. I reased air ne owned from Forest City to Moosfe.

Mr. Brown. It is not material what you leased culm for. I want to know what it was worth in the market, according to your best judgment, at the time the option was granted. A moment age you stated that the value of culm has increased from 5 cents to 6 cents a ton since this transaction occurred. The Laurel line was willing to pay 27½ cents per ton for this culm. Now, the logical inference is, according to your best judgment, at the time you secured this option this culm was worth about 20 cents per ton.

Mr. Williams. I suppose.

Mr. Brown. I want a little more definite answer than that. What is your best judgment?

Mr. Williams. Conn told me he was paying 70 cents per ton for culm at that time. Yes; he told me that.

Mr. Brown. That evidently was higher than the prevailing market price?

Mr. Williams. Yes, sir. He was paying the Eric 70 cents.

Mr. Brown. For the same quality of coal?

Mr. Williams. It was fresh culm from the breaker.

Mr. Brown. What difference in the value of culm would that make?

Mr. Williams. I don't know. There might be more carbon in it.

Mr. Brown, You have had a great deal of experience in coal trans-

Mr. Brown, for have had a great deal of experience in coal transactions?

Mr. Williams. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. Do you think it is probable that Mr. May could have, in a deal involving as much money, made an honest mistake in the appraisal of the value of this bank that he was about to sell for the corporation he represented?

Mr. Williams. I don't know. I believe he said the estimate was of their engineers. Robertson said that the estimate of their engineers was 140,000 tons.

Mr. Brown. Whose engineers?
Mr. WILLIAMS. The Erie's engineers.
Mr. Brown. Then you think Capt. May knew at the time that this culm was worth more than he was charging you for it? He knew that the Erie interest in the bank was worth a good deal more to the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. than he was charging for the option?
Mr. WILLIAMS. I couldn't say. I don't think he was ignorant; he handled so much of it.
Mr. Brown. He was an old, experienced coal man, and was a good judge of coal values?
Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.
Mr. Brown. Who told you that the Erie engineers had estimated there was 140,000 tons in the bank?
Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Robertson.
Mr. Brown. Where did he get it?
Mr. WILLIAMS. From their engineers.
Mr. Brown. Who were their engineers.
Mr. Brown. Who were their engineers?
Mr. WILLIAMS. I don't know. May told me that day that they estimated it, but I think he told me at first that it was 140,000.
Mr. Brown. What made him change the amount?
Mr. WILLIAMS. I don't know; I think he told me the same as Robertson told me.
Mr. Brown. Told you when?

Mr. Williams. I don't know; I think he told me the same as konertson told me.

Mr. Brown. Told you when?

Mr. Williams. In the office.

Mr. Brown. At what time?

Mr. Williams. When I was there the second time.

Mr. Brown. That at the time he granted the option there was 140,000 tons? I understood you to say a moment ago that he admitted the amount of coal to be only about—

Mr. Williams. There is a difference in the amount of coal and culm, altogether.

Mr. Brown. I mean the amount of culm, we are referring to culm. His estimate was based on the amount of coal, and the estimate of the engineers was based on the amount of culm?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. What is the usual basis of valuation on a culm bank, the amount of coal or culm?

Mr. WILLIAMS. The amount of coal.

the amount of coal or culm?

Mr. WILLIAMS. The amount of coal.

Mr. BROWN. Then what was the purpose of the estimate of the engineers that there was 140,000 tons of culm?

Mr. WILLIAMS. We know pretty near how much the percentage of coal is. We knew by the estimate of culm the percentage of coal, after we get the estimate of culm.

Mr. BROWN. Let us get a common basis of computation. You say May's estimate was based on the amount of coal, the engineers' estimate was based on the amount of culm. How does the engineers' estimate of the amount of culm tally with May's estimate of the amount of coal?

Mr. WILLIAMS. The estimate of coal would not run less than 75 per

Mr. Brown. Seventy-five per cent of the 140,000 tons of coal? You think that is a fair estimate?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. May must have known that at the time the option was made?

made?

Mr. Williams. He ought to know; he had so many washeries themselves that would give more percentage than that.

Mr. Brown. What I want to get at is just this, whether or not there was a reasonable possibility of May having made an honest mistake in calculating the amount of coal or culm in this bank at the time he granted the option to you?

Mr. Williams. I can not see how he could make a mistake—a man of his experience. With his experience and the report of the engineers of his company to inform him, I can't see how he could make a mistake.

Mr. Brown. Your theory is that he deliberately miscalculated the amount of coal or culm in the bank?

Mr. Williams. It looks that way to me.

Mr. Brown. Has any other action been taken with respect to this Hillside property? You are waiting the consummation of the deal with respect to the Katydid bank before taking this other property under consideration; so that in view of these conditions you believe that the price that you have put on this culm, of 27½ cents per ton, in the prospective contract with Conn, is less than you ought to be able to get for the property.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I think we ought to get 40 cents.

Mr. Brown. You think 40 cents is a conservative estimate of its value to the Laurel line?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. In other words, you think that the Eric Railroad Co., or rather the Hillside C. & I Co., could have sold their interests in this bank direct to the Laurel line, if they had wished to do so, at a rate of at least 27½ cents.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. Brown. I am speaking of their equity in the property. They could have disposed of that to the Laurel line on that basis of valuation?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; very likely.

Mr. BOLAND. The Eric controlled the bank on account of owning the land and the tracks, and Mr. Robertson had no right in the culm at all. He had a switch and scales, for his good will, and what he had was the personal property and improvements, so that he was claiming $3.500.

Mr. WILLIAMS. At first Capt. May doubted his equity in the bank to me, but I would not make any dispute about it. After that the judge said he did not think Robertson had any equity; then May came to the conclusion that he did, and so did the judge.

Mr. Brown. At the time you got your option from the Hillside C. & I. Co., Mr. May did not believe there was any interest vested in Robertson?

Mr. Williams. No, sir. He did not know whether he had an interest or not, but after he came to the conclusion that he had.

Mr. Brown. Just explain your idea of Robertson's interest, just what its limitations were, its nature and extent.

Mr. Williams. One-half interest.

Mr. Brown. As I understand it, it had certain qualifications to it?

Mr. Williams. Robertson owned one-half of the culm, outside of chestnut. They did not own any chestnut in one-half of it.

The most of the coal he mined came from other property. Even the Erie had not control of that property.

TESTIMONY OF RICHARD BRADLEY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The managers will proceed with their next witness.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I would call Mr. Richard Bradley as the next witness.

Richard Bradley entered the Chamber.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Give your name and address to the stenographer.

Mr. Bradley. Richard Bradley, Peckville, Pa. Richard Bradley, having been duly sworn, was examined, and testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager CLAYTON.) Mr. Bradley, I believe you stated that your name is Richard Bradley?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that your residence is at Peckville, Pa.?-A. Yes, sir. Q. What business are you engaged in ?-A. I am in the coal business at present.

Q. How long have you been engaged in the coal business?-

A. It will be seven years the 19th of this month.

Q. And in that coal business have you had anything to do with the operation of culm dumps or culm banks?-A. Yes, sir. The only way that I have operated coal was through culm banks.

Q. How many culm banks have you owned or operated within the time that you have named in nearly the last seven years?-A. I have been interested in two.

Q. Are you familiar with the Katydid culm dump at Moosic, Pa.?-A. Yes, sir. I have been there and looked the bank over.

Q. How many times have you been there and looked the bank over?-A. I think I make the third trip there.

Q. Did you make a careful inspection of the Katydid culm dump?—A. I can not say that I inspected it very close.

Q. You inspected it close enough to form what you think a pretty accurate idea of its size and its probable contents?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was your estimate of its worth to the Eric Railroad Co., or to its subsidiary, the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., or its market worth?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I object to that question, Mr. President. I do not know how Judge Archbald is to be affected by the opinion that this witness may have had as to what this culm bank was worth to somebody else. Of course, Judge Archbald is to be judged by the knowledge that he had when he entered into this transaction; and how it can be affected by what the witness's judgment was as to the value of the dump to the Erie Railroad Co. I can not conceive.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Please propound the question again, or let the stenographer read it, which perhaps would be better.

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. What was your estimate of its worth to the Eric Railroad Co., or to its subsidiary, the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., or its market worth?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. If the question is confined to its market worth I have no objection.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Very well, Mr. President; I thought counsel's objection to the question was broader than that. I have no objection to putting it in that way.

Q. (By Mr. Manager CLAYTON.) What was the market value

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I should like to say here, Mr. President, that we do not concede that the opinion of anybody as to what the value of this dump was or is is competent testimony unless it is shown to have been communicated to Judge Archbald. But we are not making that objection, because that is a matter that can be considered when we come to the argument.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I will not stop to tell the President or the Senate why I am seeking to elicit this information; that will appear in the argument; and I think it will then be shown to be perfectly competent testimony. It harmonizes with other testimony in the case which has already been adduced.

Q. (By Mr. Manager CLAYTON.) What is your answer to this question: What was the market value or worth of the Katydid culm dump?—A. How do you mean, Judge? Do you mean to get that coal out and load it on cars, or do you mean right where it lies?

Q. I want to know what it was worth there.-A. You mean on a royalty basis that this coal was worth for a man who-

Q. You can use your own way in answering it. I want your estimate, in other words, of that culm dump.—A. Well, in that culm dump is different sizes of coal and every size carries a different price.

Q. How much did you offer for that culm dump? That will, perhaps, enable you to answer the question better.—A. I offered

Mr. Williams the first time I walked over the dump—
Mr. CIARK of Wyoming. We can not hear the witness.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore (to the witness). Speak louder.

A. The first time I walked over the dump with Mr. Williams I offered him $16,000 for it.

Q. Then, afterwards, did you offer him another amount?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much was the other amount which you offered -A. $20,000. him?-

Q. When was it you offered him $20,000 for the Katydid culm dump?--A. It was on the same day.

Q. What was the worth of that Katydid culm dump at the time you offered Mr. Williams $20,000 for it?-A. Well, a man could have paid $20,000 for that, Judge, and yet could have made a little money on it. That was my idea.

Q. How much in addition to the $20,000 could he have made on it?-A. I thought he ought to make about ten.

Q. After having paid all operating expenses?—A. Yes, sir. Q. Mr. Bradley, did you meet Mr. Williams in Scranton at any time in 1912 and have a conversation with him about this Katydid culm bank; and, if so, what did he say to you?-I met him there in Scranton, and he said to me that he had the dump for sale.

Q. What all did he say and what all did you say?—A. I do not know as I could repeat it all.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. May I refresh the witness by referring to his previous testimony, Mr. President?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks the witness had better state as much of it as he can recollect, and then if he fails

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I am trying to get him to do so. The WITNESS. I should like to go along the line as much as I can of the last evidence.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I did not hear your answer, Mr. Bradley. Please repeat it.

The WITNESS. I say I would like to go along the line as nearly as I can with the last evidence I gave before.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Certainly. Well, state in your own way the transaction you had with E. J. Williams with reference to the purchase of the Katydid culm dump, beginning with the beginning and stating it all in your own way.—A. Well, I went with him to the dump, and from the dump we came back to Scranton. On my way down at the dump I offered $16,000, and after I got back to Scranton we talked it over at Mr. Boland's office and I offered him $20,000. I can not remember that there was a great deal said more than making the proposition and going to see Mr. May to have the contract drawn up for the dump.

Q. Mr. Bradley, prior to your offer of $16,000 for the Katydid culm dump, did Mr. Williams say anything about another offer that he had made to him for the purchase of that dump?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say in respect to that offer?—A. There was a party-Tom Starr Jones, I think, he spoke of as the name of the party-that had offered twenty-five thousand. Q. Twenty-five thousand what?-A. Twenty-five thousand dollars. Q. For what?-A. For the Katydid culm dump. I think that is somewhere near the line.

Q. Did you and he leave each other without having come to any conclusion after you had offered him the $16,000?-A. No, sir; we did not. When I left him, you know, I had offered him the twenty thousand.

Q. Where was it that you offered him the twenty thousand?-A. In Mr. Boland's office.

Q. In Scranton?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, why did you offer him the $20,000 for the culm dump? Was it because you expected to make money on it by its operation?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was said in reference to Mr. May by Williams or by you in the conversation with Williams touching the sale and purchase of the Katydid culm dump?—A. Well, there was not anything said very particular about that, I do not think, until we reached Mr. May's office next morning.

Q. How did you find out that May was a necessary party to consult in the transaction?—A. Mr. Williams told me that he got the option from Mr. May.

Q. Did you and the witness go together to see Capt. May?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?-A. I do not know as I can tell you the day and date for that.

Q. Was it in March or April, 1912?—A. I think it was in May.
Q. Do you remember, if I may refresh your recollection, that you were down here testifying in May, and therefore this transaction was before you testified here in Washington?—A. Yes, sir. It might have been the latter part of April. I can not say just when.

Q. What happened when you and Mr. Williams went to see Capt. May? What did Williams say, what did you say, and what did Capt. May say?—A. Mr. Williams introduced me to Capt. May and said to him that I was the man who was going to buy the dump from him, if Capt. May was satisfied to let me have it-somewhere in those lines.

Q. What else was said, if anything?-A. I never had met Capt. May before; we were strangers, and he wanted me to give him some reference. He wanted to find out whether I was responsible enough to take hold of such a thing or pay for it, or something like that.

Q. After you saw Mr. May, or when you saw Mr. May, was there anything said or considered as to the matter of the title to the Katydid culm dump?-A. No, sir.

Q. Did you consider the title to the dump satisfactory to you?—A. I could not tell until I got the contract from Mr. May, and then I was going to take it to my lawyer and let him look up that point for me—the title.

Q. Do you not remember that before the Judiciary Committee this question was asked you:

After you saw Mr. May the matter of title was satisfactory to you, was it?

And you answered:

Well, Mr. May—yes. Mr. May explained it—how much of the bank they owned and how much Mr. Robertson and Mr. Law owned.

The Chairman, Will you please state in your own way, as nearly as you can, what Mr. May said and what you said?

Mr. Bradley. Well, there was not but very little said—very little. Of course, me and Mr. May were strangers to each other there, and he wanted to know of me who would I get—that is, for reference of whether I was responsible, you know, of taking the obligation; and I referred him to a gentleman in Scranton there, and he was satisfied, and we made an agreement that he would go with me down to the bank at 1.20 in the afternoon.

* * So we went down together, Mr. May, Mr. Williams, and myself.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. From what page of the record is that?
Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Page 859.
Q. (By Mr. Manager CLAYTON.) Do you remember, Mr.
Bradley, having testified before the Committee on the Judiciary in the House of Representatives last spring in the manner and in the substance to that which I have just read?—A. Yes, sir; that is right.

Q. Is that a correct statement?—A. Yes, sir.

That is the truth?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the truth now?-A. Yes, sir.

And it was the truth then?—A. Yes, sir; that is right. Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I wish you would give me, Mr. Secretary, the letter from W. A. May, vice president and general manager of this concern, addressed to Mr. Richard Bradley.

The Secretary handed a letter to Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Q. (By Mr. Manager CLAYTON.) What happened, Mr. Bradley, between you and May and Williams after you three went down to the culm bank?-A. Mr. May and I went over the culm bank and he showed me what banks were there that he meant would be sold under this option. There was one bank there; it was a coarse bank, and he claimed that that bank did not go in with the rest.

Q. You did not understand that you were buying the one that May pointed out as not going in with the rest when you offered the $20,000 for the Katydid culm dump?-A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Bradley, what else; were there any further negotiations that day by you and Williams in respect to the purchase of the Katydid culm dump? Have you stated all that occurred at the time of the visit of yourself and Williams and May to the Katydid culm dump?-A. I can not say; I do not know that I have left out anything.

Q. After your visit, to which I have just referred, did you get a copy of the letter or contract, one or both, from Capt. May, the vice president and general manager?—A. Yes, sir; I got the contract. The letter I never could remember. But it seems the letter came to me, but I never could recall what it is.

Q. Have you a copy of the original of that letter which you say came to you?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you looked for it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know where it is?—A. No, sir. Q. I show to the witness, now, the exhibit U. S. S. Exhibit 8, which is a copy of a letter dated April 13, 1912, addressed to Mr. Bradley, written by Capt. May.-A. Capt. May spoke of the letter before. It seems when I gave him the contract back this letter was somewhere in with the contract, and I had never seen it.

Q. What was it that you remarked? We did not hear it .-A. It seems that that letter was in with the contract.

Q. You received this letter and the contract in the same envelope through the mails?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that what you mean?—A. It seems that way to me. Mr. May had the letter, and claimed it was in the contract after I sent it back.

Q. That is the reason why you think you have not the original letter?-A. I have not got any.

Q. Now, Mr. Bradley, I wish you would pay attention to the reading of this letter. It is already in evidence, but I desire, in order to correctly interrogate the witness, to have it reproduced in the record at this juncture.

The Secretary read as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 8.]

APRIL 13, 1912.

Mr. RICHARD BRADLEY, Peckville, Pa.

DEAR SIR: Further in the matter of the interest of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. in the Katydid dump, referred to in mine of the 11th instant

Because of the complications brought to your attention yesterday at the Laurel Line station our attorneys believe that it will be best for you not to do anything whatever in connection with the matter until you hear further from me.

Yours, very truly,

W. A. MAY,

Vice President and General Manager.

Yours, very truly,

Vice President and General Manager.

(Copy to Mr. E. J. Williams, 626 South Blakely Street, Dunmore, Pa.) Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Will the Secretary please find the contract which is referred to in that letter?

The Secretary handed Mr. Manager CLAYTON a paper. Q. (By Mr. Manager CLAYTON.) You have just heard the letter read. Do you think you would recognize the contract which accompanied that letter if you were to see it? Look at this [exhibiting paper] and state whether or not you think that is the paper which was inclosed with the letter. I am now referring to United States Senate Exhibit 5.

The Witness (after examining paper). Yes, sir; I think that is it.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I will not ask to reproduce this in the evidence, but merely repeat what I said just now, that it is marked "United States Senate Exhibit 5," so that in the argument of the case we can very readily find it. It is a tentative deed from the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., a corporation of the State of Pennsylvania, party of the first part, and E. J. Williams of the horough of Dominion Property of the learning of the horough of Pennsylvania. liams, of the borough of Dunmore, Pa., party of the second part.

Now the letter which you examined a few moments ago and which has been read from the Clerk's desk you say you re-ceived, and this contract which you have looked upon, through the mail?

A. Yes, sir; but it seems the letter was with the contract.

It does not seem that the letter came by itself.

Q. When you say "it seems," you mean to say that that is your best recollection?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what became of that letter and that contract?—A. 1 gave it to Capt. May.

Q. When did you hand that letter and contract to Capt.

-A. I think it was either on the 12th or 13th.

Q. Of what month and of what year?-A. April, I think.

Q. What year?-A. 1912.

- Q. Did I correctly understand you to say that the 12th or 13th day of April, 1912, is your recollection of the time when you delivered that letter and that form of a contract back to Capt. May?-A. Yes, sir; I think so. I think it is somewhere around
- Q. Is it your best recollection that it was either on the 12th or 13th day of April, 1912, that you delivered those papers back to Capt. May?-A. I think so; yes, sir.

Q. Where was the delivery had, Mr. Bradley?-A. To the Laurel line station in Scranton.

Q. The Laurel line station is what sort of a building? What is it? Is it a railroad station?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. What railroad?-A. The Laurel line, going from Scranton into Wilkes-Barre.

Q. That is an electric railroad, is it?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. How did you happen to meet Capt. May there at the Laurel line railroad station at the time of the delivery of this letter and contract back to him?—A. Well, I wanted to go down to the dump again to look the dump over. There were some to the dump again to look the dump over. There were points there I wanted to see before I signed the contract.

Q. And you happened to see Capt. May at the station. Did he know before that that you were going down again to the - culm bank?—A. No, sir. I do not think he knew it.

 Q. Do you know how it happened that he went to the railroad station at the particular time that you met him on this day that we have talked about?-A. He is there quite frequently each day. I think that is the way he goes to his office in
- Q. Did you approach him first on the day that this letter and form of a contract were surrendered by you back to Capt. May or did he first approach you?—A. He first approached me,

Q. Please narrate as nearly as you can exactly what he said and what you said.—A. There were but very few words passed between the two of us about the subject. He said to me, "I sent you a contract," I think he said, "yesterday." I said to him, "Yes, sir; I received it." He said, "I wish you would mail me that contract back again." I did not ask him any questions in the said, "I wish you would mail me that contract back again." I did not ask him any questions in the said. tions why he wanted me to do that. I said, "Well, I do not have to mail it, Mr. May, I have it in my pocket," and I gave it to him. I said, "I was on my way going down to the dump, and I suppose it isn't any use," or some such remark, "of my going down." "Oh," he said, "you can go if you like." That was about all that was said between him and me at the station.

Q. When Capt. May said that he had sent you a contract, did he tell you how he had sent it-did he say that he had sent it throught the mails?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did or did not Mr. May at that time say anything about the reason why he wished the contract back?-A. I think he made some remarks there that his company thought it would be best not to go any further with it until a future time. Q. Did he say why?—A. No; he did not.

Q. Had you heard anything at that time about a rumor or anything in the shape of a rumor of an investigation into the conduct of Judge Archbald by an officer or an agent of the Department of Justice from Washington?—A. No, sir; I had

Q. Nothing was said by you or Mr. May at that time about that?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not ask him to give any reason why he wanted the contract back, did you?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. And he volunteered none?—A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. You merely handed him back the contract; and you think the letter was in with the contract; was that all?—A. That is about all I knew about that.

Q. Did he not assign any reason whatever, Mr. Bradley?-A.

No, sir; he did not.

Q. You received a letter dated April 11, 1912, from Mr. May, did you not? I will show you a copy of it. I am referring now to U. S. S. Exhibit No. 6, it being a letter addressed to Mr. Richard Bradley at Peckville, Pa., dated April 11, 1912. and signed by W. A. May, vice president and general manager. I think this letter-Exhibit No. 6-has been read into the record. We have the two letters, and that is the one, I think, which was read awhile ago.

Mr. SIMPSON. The one you read awhile ago was the letter of the 13th.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I meant to have read the letter of April 11. That is the one I thought the Secretary was reading. The letter of the 11th, of course, is the one that inclosed the contract. Now, this letter of April 13 which has been read into the record is one that was written when Capt. May had decided not to make the contract, and I should have had that read first, before this one dated April 13.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the manager desire that they shall be transposed in the record?

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Yes, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Very well.
Mr. Manager CLAYTON. So the letter of the 11th, which transmitted the contract, shall appear first. Now I ask that the letter of April 11 be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read it.

The Secretary read as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 6.]

Mr. Richard Bradley, Peckville, Pa.

Dear Sir: Herewith please find proposed form of agreement conveying the interest of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. in the culm piles on the surface of lot 46, situate partly in Lackawanna and partly in Luzerne Counties, Pa.

Will you please confer with Mr. E. J. Williams, to whom I have sent a copy of this letter, in regard to the form herewith and advise whether or not same meets with your approval? If the agreement is satisfactory to you, it will be submitted to the executive officers of the H. C. & I. Co. for their consideration and approval.

Yours, very truly,

W. A. May,

W. A. MAY,

Vice President and General Manager.

(Inclosure: Copy to Mr. E. J. Williams, 626 South Blakely Street, Dunmore, Pa.)

Q. (By Mr. Manager CLAYTON.) That is the letter, Mr. Bradley, that I questioned you about and which you said accompanied this contract?—A. Yes, sir; that is right.

Q. That is the letter you say you surrendered back with the contract we have heretofore referred to?-A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I want the other one, dated the 13th. The SECRETARY. That is No. 8.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I know that letter was read to him awhile ago. So I was right and somebody else was in error, Mr. President. That letter was read awhile ago. I interrogated the witness about it. I did not think I made a mistake. Now, I desire to have read the letter of April 13.

The Secretary read as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 8.]

APRIL 13, 1912.

Mr. RICHARD BRADLEY, Peckville, Pa.

DEAR SIR: Further in the matter of the interest of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. in the Katydid dump, referred to in mine of the 11th instant to you:

Because of the complications brought to your attention yesterday at the Laurel line station our attorneys believe that it will be best for you not to do anything whatever in connection with the matter until you hear further from me.

Yours, very truly,

Yiee President and General Manager.

W. A. May, Vice President and General Manager.

(Copy to Mr. E. J. Williams, 626 South Blakely Street, Dunmore, Pa.)

Q. (By Mr. Manager CLAYTON.) Mr. Bradley, you have heard that letter read. It is already in evidence. Did you receive a letter of which a copy has just been read from the clerk's desk?-A. Yes, sir; I received that letter.

Q. When did you receive that letter?—A. I can not say just the day and date for that.

Q. Did you not receive it after you had surrendered the contract back to May?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw May before the letter reached you and you gave him back the contract?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And his former letter?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. After this letter was transmitted to you in the mail?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. You will observe that in the letter which has just been read Capt. May uses this language:

Because of the complications brought to your attention yesterday at the Laurel line station our attorneys believe that it will be best for you not to do anything whatever in connection with the matter until you hear further from me.

Now, does not that refresh your memory so that you can now tell the Senate that May did tell you something about what the complications were? And if it does so refresh your memory, tell us what he said.—A. No, sir; I would tell you. If he had and anything to me I would tell you, but he did not.

Q. You say that Capt. May did not call any complications to your attention at the station?—A. No, sir.

Q. He gave you no reason that because of any complication or for any other cause he desired not to execute the contract?-A. No, sir; he did not make any reference to anything whatsoever.

Q. Now, Mr. Bradley, for the purpose of refreshing your memory I desire to call your attention to a part of the testi-mony taken before the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives last spring here in Washington.

Is it not a fact that when Mr. May asked you to turn back that contract on account of the complications that had arisen you understood, without his telling you, that it was on account of these reports concerning Judge Archbald's connection with the transaction—

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, I think I will object It is a question which was asked this witness before the Judiciary Committee, in which he stated or undertook to state what he thought was in his mind at the time Mr. May asked him to return this contract. There is nothing that he communicated even to Mr. May much less to Judge Archbald, and we are asked to be affected now by what this witness said before the Judiciary Committee as to what he thought Capt. May thought at the time the contract was returned.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that the manager is only reading it for the purpose of refreshing the memory of the witness. Is the Chair correct?

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. That is my object.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Of course; but he wants to refresh his memory about a matter which I think is incompetent.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. May I conclude the reading and

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understood the counsel for the respondent to make an objection and-

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I had not finished reading the

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The manager will be given an opportunity to finish the question,

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I will await the pleasure of the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair suggested that the manager finish the question.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I did not so understand the Chair.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. In view of what followed in the statement before the Judiciary Committee I think I will withdraw the objection.

Q. (By Mr. Manager CLAYTON.) Then, Mr. Bradley, I will read the question over again. At the time and before the committee, which I have named to you, Mr. FLOYD asked you this question:

Is it not a fact that when Mr. May asked you to turn back that contract on account of the complications that had arisen you understood, without his telling you, that it was on account of these reports concerning Judge Archbald's connection with the transaction, and that you readily returned? Is not that the truth about it? Did you not understand what the complications were, and was it not the fact that rumor and report had connected Judge Archbald with the transaction in such a way that when Mr. May called for the contract back you understood without his telling you what those complications were and willingly surrendered back a contract which would have been to your advantage if executed? Is not that the truth about it?

And then you answered:

Mr. BRADLEY. I have an idea that had something to do with it.

Now, does not that refresh your mind and enable you to answer the question that I asked a while ago?—A. Yes, sir; I remember saying that. I remember answering the question in that way. But I wish to say this: That the day I gave Capt. May back that contract I had never heard nor seen nothing in the paper about Judge Archbald.

Q. You had not seen it in the papers?—A. Oh, afterwards it came out in the paper; I could not say just how many days after I gave the contract back; and there is where I had taken the idea that that was the reason Capt. May wanted the contract back.

Q. Let us see if you will stand by that answer when I further refresh your memory by reading from your testimony given before the Committee on the Judiciary at the time I have heretofore indicated. On page 871, near the bottom:

Mr. Worthington-

The same gentleman who sits here now, you remember. You remember having seen him in the committee?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. (By Mr. Manager CLAYTON.) Mr. Worthington asked you this question:

What is your recollection as to whether anything had appeared in the newspapers about these charges against Judge Archbald, or this proposed investigation, when you had that talk with Mr. May at the Laurel Station on or about the 12th of April?

Mr. BRADLEY. I will tell you; I hardly ever read the paper.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. You do not know whether anything had appeared in the newspapers at that time or not, do you?

Mr. BRADLEY. All I could hear, once in a while somebody would speak about it.

speak about it.

Now, your memory being refreshed, is not that the way the matter happened?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And is not that the truth?—A. Yes, sir; that is right.

Q. That you did hear once in a while somebody speak of the matter before you surrendered this contract back to Mr. May?-A. Well, that is a kind of a puzzle to me, that contract. When giving the contract back to Mr. May it runs in my mind—I can not say it thoroughly to be a fact, but it runs in my mind that I had never heard anything of the subject of Judge Archbald before I gave the contract back, you understand, but after I gave it back it was in the paper about Judge Archbald.

Q. Is it not a fact that you understood the complication to be this rumored investigation of Judge Archbald's conduct to be the reason why you gave the contract back without making any inquiry?—A. No, sir; that is not it; no, sir.

Q. Why did you give up a profitable contract so readily without making any inquiry?—A. Well, Capt. May wanted it.

Q. And you did it simply because he wanted it?—A. Yes, sir. You see it was not any use to me. The contract would not be any use to me with none of his name. There was nobody's name signed to it at all. Q. And you did not care to ask him about what reason operated upon him?—A. Yes, sir; that is right.

Q. You readily, without any question at all, surrendered it

Q. Did Mr. E. J. Williams tell you at the beginning of your negotiations that he had a half interest and Judge Archbald had a half interest in this Katydid culm dump?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you what they had to pay and that they had options from other people? State what he did say about that, if he said anything, as to how they acquired the Katydid culm dump.—A. That is in the sale you mean with somebody else that was after buying the dump?

Q. Yes .- A. Yes; he told me about these parties. Mr. Jones was after buying the dump.

Q. What did he say?—A. That he had offered them $25,000. Q. And you were buying the Katydid culm dump from Williams and Judge Archbald, were you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you had to ask Capt. May's consent to the transaction?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Capt. May was president of what concern?—A. Of the—

Q. Hillside Coal & Iron Co.?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. From whom Judge Archbald and Mr. Williams had acquired the property. Is that true?—A. You see Judge Archbald—I never met the judge. I had no talk with him whatsoever, more than taking old man Williams's word, and he said he had the selling of the dump, and he said himself and the judge owned the dump. Of course, I did not see the judge and had no talk with him about the matter.

Q. After this contract or paper was surrendered back to Capt. May by you did you have any conversation with Judge Archbald relative to the sale and purchase of the Katydid culm dump?-A. No, sir.

Q. Did you not to go Judge Archbald and talk to him about it and make him some proposition?-A. No, sir.

Q. You did not approach him on the subject at all after that?—A. No, sir.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, the counsel for the respondent can examine the witness.

Cross-examination:

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Did anybody explain to you why it was that if Mr. Jones was going to buy this dump for $25,000 the owners were selling it to you for $20,000?-A. Well, Jim Dainty kind of made the suggestions on those points, that if I did not want the dump for $20,000 those fellows would buy it and pay twenty-five, and then we would split the difference; he would take two thousand and I would get three thousand.
Q. Did anybody besides Dainty and Williams talk to you about it or suggest your getting this bargain for $20,000 ?- A. Mr. Boland.

Q. Which Mr. Boland?-A. W. P. Boland.

Q. Did Mr. Boland tell you why he was mixing in it?-A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. Did he tell you he had an interest in it?-A. He told me he did have an interest in it, but he did not have any at that time.

Q. He told you he had had an interest in it, but that he had none then?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all these interviews, I think, occurred in Mr. Boland's office, did they not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in Mr. Boland's presence?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you first get informed that there was a chance to buy this dump? Who first spoke to you about it, and where?— Mr. Boland put me on in the first start out.

Q. Mr. William P. Boland?—A. Yes, sir. Q. Where was that?—A. In his office.

Q. Go on and state what he had to do with it after that .-Well, he got after me to go and buy the dump, that he thought it was a very good deal for the money.

Q. Did he say anything to you about this $5,000 profit that might be made by reselling it to Jones?—A. No, sir. Q. Was that said in his presence?—A. No, sir.

Q. You appear to have gone along pretty fast with this transaction. How soon after that first statement to you about it was it that you went to the dump and looked it over?-A. Oh, I think it was two or three days from the time we talked it over first I went down.

Q. How long after you went down to the dump and looked it over was it before you went with Williams to see Capt. May for the purpose of closing up the transaction?-A. I went down in the afternoon to look the dump over and then went to see Capt. May the next morning

Q. Where did you meet Williams the next morning?-A. In

Mr. Boland's office.

In reference to the title to this dump or your idea about the title, whether you were satisfied with the title, I should like to read a little more than Mr. Manager CLAYTON read to you, and ask if this is what you said on that subject, and all you said on that subject, before the Judiciary Committee when you testified there? Reading from page 859 first, I begin a little farther back than the manager did.

The CHAIRMAN. You were satisfied with the title that Williams could

The CHAIRMAN. You were satisfied with the title that Williams could give you to it?

Mr. Bradley. Well, to get the main points and facts and figures of this thing, I had to go and see Mr. May. I had never met Mr. May before to be really acquainted with him until on that morning.

The CHAIRMAN. After you saw Mr. May, the matter of the title was satisfactory to you, was it?

Mr. Bradley. Well, Mr. May—yes. Mr. May explained it—how much of the bank they owned and how much Mr. Robertson and Mr. Law owned.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you please state in your own way, as nearly as you can, what Mr. May said and what you said?

Mr. Bradley. Well, there was not but very little said—very little. Of course me and Mr. May were strangers to each other there, and he wanted to know of me who would I get—that is, for reference of whether I was responsible, you know, of taking the obligation.

That is all about the title.

That is all about the title.

Now, I turn next to page 873, and will read something and ask you whether you said that on the subject at a later stage of your examination.

I find I have an erroneous reference. I pass that for the present and will come back to it.

Q. You said when Mr. May showed you the bank that there was one dump or one part of the dump not included. I did not understand just what you said about that. What was it?-A. There was a dump there with lots of coarse coal and rock mixed together.

Q. What was the shape of that particular dump or part of dump?—A. It was just like a dump. The railroad run out there and dumped it out there with cars.

Q. Was that a large proportion of the whole Katydid dump or only a small proportion?-A. It was quite a chunk that laid there

Q. Quite a chunk?-A. Yes; that is, I mean quite a quantity of stuff in that dump.

Q. You said that when you happened to meet Capt. May, when he asked you to return the contract, you were on the way to the dump again about certain points, or some points. What was that? What were you going there the second time to look at the dump for?—A. Well, the day that Mr. May was there with me the dump was very close to the Erie people's line, and there was not any room for a man to build a plant there on that piece of land, and at the end of the dump on the Erie line the D. & H. had some land leading from that; and I went there to look it over and to see the location and the lay of the land, and then go to the D. & H. and see if I could get that piece of land from them to build the plant. That was my object for that day.

Q. Did you have a plant then that you expected to remove to this place, or were you going to build a new plant to run the dump if you had gotten it?-A. I had not decided on that. I had a plant that I would be through with in the course of two years, but I had not decided on that-whether I could move it and move that dump in time enough to fulfill the contract.

Q. Now, where did you first learn of the investigation or anything about Judge Archbald-about his conduct?-A. About his conduct?

Q. Yes; these charges against him that resulted in this proceeding? How was it that the matter was first brought to your attention that such a thing was coming on ?-A. Now, lawyer, I do not know whether I can answer that.

Q. Let me ask you if you did not first see it in a Scranton newspaper?—A. Yes, sir; that is right, Q. What was that newspaper?—A. I think it was the Scranton Times.

Q. Now, up to the time that you had seen the publication in the Scranton Times had you heard any rumors or talk about the matter at all, or were the rumors and talk that you speak of after you had seen the publication in the Scranton Times?-A. No. sir.

Q. Do you mean that you had heard these rumors before or that you had not?-A. I had never heard anything about Judge Archbald until I seen it in the paper.

Q. Then when you find that paper and find the date of that publication we will know when you first had any idea there was such a thing coming on, will we?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Boland rather urged you to buy this dump, did he not, Mr. Bradley?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he not tell you that you could make money out of it?-Well, he thought it was a good deal. Q. And when you offered $16,000, did he not tell you it was worth more?-A. He did.

Q. Are you not mistaken in saying Mr. Boland did not talk to you about the Jones's $25,000 option?—A. No, sir; I do not think Mr. Boland said anything to me about that. I think it was old man Williams talked with me about that.

Q. That was in Mr. Boland's office ?- A. No, sir; it was on the street-the sidewalk.

Q. On the sidewalk?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not remember whether there was any talk about Jones's option in Mr. Boland's presence?—A. No, sir; I do not remember that.

Q. You say Mr. Williams told you that Judge Archbald had a one-half interest in that matter with him?-A. He did; yes,

Q. Did he make any suggestion about keeping that fact quiet?-A. Did he?

Q. Did he?-A. He did not say anything about it.

Q. Did anybody suggest it was a secret that Judge Archbald was connected with the matter?—A. Did anybody outside of Mr. Williams, you mean?

Q. Did Mr. Williams suggest it was a matter to be kept secret?-A. No, sir.

Q. Well, I ask, Did anybody ?- A. No, sir; not to me, they did not.

Q. Mr. Bradley, from your examination of this dump did you come to the conclusion about how many thousand tons of coal you could get out of it before you offered to pay $16,000 or $20,000 for it?—A. Yes, sir; I investigated kind of like.
Q. Well, how many tons of coal did you think you could get out of it when you offered first $16,000 and then $20,000 for it?—A. I thought it was anywhere from eighty to one hundred thousand tons of coal could be gotten out of it.

Q. It is upon that you based your conclusion that you could pay $20,000 for it and still make money?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you intend to execute that contract if it had not been returned without submitting it to your lawyer?-A. Oh, no. sir: oh. no.

Q. If you had found you did not get a good title from the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. and Mr. Robertson, would you have gone on with the deal?—A. No, sir; I had that privilege from Mr. May. He would send me the contract, and then I would hunt up the title-a copy of the contract-that is what I got. If the title was right, then we would do business together.

Q. When you said that with eighty or ninety thousand tons of coal there you could afford to pay $20,000 and expected to make $10,000, did you include anything for your own services and time in managing the operation?-A. Well, at all times I do not figure that in, but I figure out what it will cost me to build my plant; then figure out what my expenses will be, and is left I call it mine.

Q. Well, you did not deduct anything for your own time and services?-A. No, sir.

Q. How long would it have taken you, in the ordinary course of the operation as you expected to work it, to have finished the plant, the washing, and the delivery of the coal for sale?—A. That is, you mean how long would it take me to build the plant and wash the dump away?
Q. Yes, sir; to finish the job up?—A. Oh, I could do it in two years or two and one-half.

Q. Could you tell us what it would cost in that region to get a man who is competent to manage such a job—to run it?—A. I have got a very good man—a foreman—down at the southside plant at Scranton. I pay him $110 a month.
Q. Well, I mean a man to take your place for the work you were going to do?—A. I don't know as I could answer that question. There is an old saying, if you ever heard it, "Of all your mother's children, you love yourself the best."

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I think that is all, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there any other question to be asked on the part of the managers?

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. This witness may be discharged, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will be finally discharged.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, it is now after 4 o'clock; this is Saturday evening; few of the Senators are here; and, that being the case, I suggest to the managers that by unanimous consent we have an adjournment. If that is agreeable, I move that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment do now adjourn.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. If I may be permitted, I should like to have action on that motion suspended for just a moment until I speak to the managers about a matter concerning which I have already communicated with them. There is a witness who is detained here whom I wish to call and ask a single question, and the managers have kindly consented that it may

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from North Carolina withhold his motion for that purpose?

Mr. OVERMAN. I withhold my motion for that purpose. Mr. WORTHINGTON. It is simply an accommodation to the

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will be called. Will counsel please indicate the name of the witness?

Mr. WORTHINGTON, He is Mr. Pryor.

TESTIMONY OF W. L. PRYOR-RECALLED.

W. L. Pryor, having been previously sworn, was recalled, and testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Mr. Pryor, I want to ask you whether you heard in Mr. Boland's office, when you were there in the spring of 1911, any conversations between Mr. William P. Boland and Mr. Edward J. Williams in reference to Judge Archbald going to any New York office?—A. There were conversations going on continually in my presence and while I was absent. Mr. Williams was a constant visitor at the office; in fact, every few hours or so.

Q. Well, I ask you specifically whether you heard any conversation between William P. Boland and Williams in reference to Williams getting Judge Archbald to go to the New York office of the Erie Co.?-A. I believe Mr. Boland requested Mr.

Williams to see Mr. Archbald and get a letter of introduction from him, I believe, to Capt. May. Q. After that date did you hear Mr. Williams report that he had not got the option from Capt. May?-A. I think he did; yes, sir. On a subsequent time he came back and acknowledged having had it.

Mr. Manager NORRIS. Mr. President, as I understood, the Senate wanted to adjourn. Counsel is asking the witness questions that are not proper cross-examination. I have no objections tion, if I will be permitted to cross-examine him. Counsel is really making the witness his own witness now.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I understand that perfectly.
Mr. Manager NORRIS. He is really offering the witness as his own at this time.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. With reference to this particular matter.

Mr. Manager NORRIS. With that understanding, I have no objection, but it may delay the adjournment for some time.
Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I want respectfully to submit another suggestion, and that is that this witness is now the witness for the respondent, and the counsel for the respondent is asking him leading questions. For instance, he so frames the question that the witness can answer categorically. I submit that the proper way for him to proceed, until the witness has shown an unwillingness, is to ask what was said by the parties and not to state what he wants the witness to give an affirmative answer to or a negative answer to, as the case may be.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I think, Mr. President, it is perfectly apparent that we can not dispose of this matter in so short a time as I had hoped; so we had better not detain the Senate, if there is a desire to adjourn now.

Mr. OVERMAN. I renew my motion, Mr. President, that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment do now adjourn.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina moves that the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. LODGE. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 8 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, December 9, 1912, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Saturday, December 7, 1912.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon, The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Father Almighty, boundless the resources, infinite the mercies, plenteous the gifts poured out upon us. Help us as rational beings gifted with the power of choice to lay hold upon these things, make them ours, that we may wisely use them to the uplift of our souls and the furtherance of Thy kingdom, that peace and good will may reign supreme. In the spirit of the Lord Christ. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of House bill 26680, the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with Mr. GARNER in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the bill, of which the Clerk will read the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 26680) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. When the committee arose yesterday there was an amendment pending offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Borland), and if there is no objection, the amendment will again be reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 54, line 6, by striking out the word "photostat" and inserting in lieu thereof "photographic reproduction machines."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] is recognized.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I desire that the gentleman from Missouri shall be first recognized.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, I desire to withdraw the amendment that I offered yesterday in order that the chairman of the committee may introduce an amendment covering the same ground.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri withdraws his amendment, and the gentleman from South Carolina offers the following amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 54, in lines 5 and 6, strike out the words "and the purchase of supplies for photostat."

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I think under the appropriation for miscellaneous expenses and stationery they can supply these articles, and I move to strike out all reference to any particular machine.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman from South Carolina whether he removes the objection that was made by the gentleman from Missouri, that the photostat is a patented article.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman from Missouri did not want Congress to single out any particular machine for reproductive purposes. There are other machines by other names that do the same work.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That seemed to me to be a proper amendment. I do not think Congress ought to legislate in favor of certain patented articles requiring that they should be purchased.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The Committee on Appropriations has no knowledge of the merits of any particular machine, and therefore we are quite willing that the language shall not designate any particular machine.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The difference between the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri and the one suggested by the gentleman from South Carolina is instead of specifying the photostat we shall specify the materials used in the operation of the photostat, so that the photostat as a patented article still remains.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We do not specify any machine; they buy the materials for use on all the machines out of the appropriation for stationery.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman think that his amendment will allow any competition? Will any competitor under this bill be able to supply the department with his particular machine or is not the supply still limited to the photostat?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No; we do not limit it to any particular article because we do not mention any particular machine. My amendment strikes out the word "photostat."

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. If I understood the amendment of the gentleman correctly, it provides that instead of striking out the word "photostat" and using the term "photographic machines," as suggested by the gentleman from Missouri, the amendment of the gentleman from South Carolina sourly, the amendment of the gentleman from sourl' carolina simply proposes that we shall buy the materials for use.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The language of my amendment is, "on page 54, line 6, strike out the words 'the purchase of supplies for photostat.'"

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I think that prevents com-

Mr. BORLAND. They have already the labor-saving ma-chines under the general language of the clause which permits them to buy them. It does not specify any particular make of machines nor designate it by patented name. It is a general clause appropriating $8,000 for the purpose of purchasing laborsaving machinery. Under that they have the photostat and other machines for the same purpose. Recently the Auditor of the Treasury ruled there was some doubt about buying supplies for this machinery under this clause. He thought that they should put in additional wording permitting them to buy supplies for these machines. It appears, however, they could have bought the supplies under the stationery clause and ought to buy them under that clause. The amendment now suggested by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] strikes the word "photostat" from the law entirely and makes no provision here for the purchase of supplies for that particular machine. That relegates the purchase of supplies to the stationery

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman from Missouri made the statement yesterday that the photostat was a patented machine.

Mr. BORLAND. And now I repeat that. The photostat is not a generic term, but is a particular patented machine for the purpose of photographing reproductions. This is the only place in the law where the name "photostat" appears. It is the only clause in this law where it appears, and we now strike it out entirely.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Under the amendment proposed by the gentleman from South Carolina could the manufacturer of another machine now compete for these supplies?

Mr. BORLAND. That is my understanding, and I agreed to the amendment on that understanding.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Carolina.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of assistant treasurer at Chicago: Assistant treasurer, $5,000; cashier, $3,000; vault clerk, $2,250; paying teller, $2,500; assorting teller, $2,000; receiving teller, $2,000; beckleepers—1 at $1,800, 2 at $1,500 each; clerks—1 $1,750, 2 at $1,600 each, 9 at $1,500 each, 22 at $1,200 each, 1 $900; hall man, $1,100; messenger, $840; 3 watchmen, at $720 each, 1 anitor, $720; 8 money counters and handlers for money laundry machines, at $900 each; in all, $83,320.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. May I ask the gentleman from South Carolina whether in the estimates made for the office of the assistant treasurer at Chicago there was any recommendation of an increase in the number of positions, and particularly for an assistant

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There was, I am sure, although I have not the estimates before me at this moment.

Mr. MANN. I am sure they are very much in need of an assistant cashier.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. They asked that the re-ceiving teller be increased from $2,000 to $2,250. They asked that an additional man be employed under the name of assistant cashier, at $2,000, and then they dropped one clerk. They also asked that the watchman be increased from $720 to $840.

Mr. MANN. I was not speaking of the increases so much as the matter of authorizing an assistant cashier there, which my information leads me to believe is a place very much needed.

Did the committee consider that?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The committee had before it absolutely no evidence upon that question at the last sitting. In the making up of the bill during the last Congress we did have extensive hearings. The Secretary of the Treasury at-tempted to reorganize the force and to classify and standardize the work. I believe that in the bill as it finally passed we left the items for the subtreasuries just as the Secretary of the Treasury had asked us, with the exception of one or two men who had been reduced at Boston.

Mr. MANN. I think the committee last year in its recommendations did very good work in reference to the affairs in the office of the assistant treasurer. Of course that was in a way somewhat tentative, although practically complete. gentleman knows there is a very large amount of business transacted at the Chicago office, much larger than at any other place in the country outside of New York City, and while the business is not so great by any means as it is in New York City, where they have an assistant cashier, information led me to believe they are very much in need of an assistant cashier, by that title, in the Chicago office.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman will understand that the man who is designated in the estimates as assistant cashier is now carried as a clerk. They simply propose to increase the salary and give him a different designation. It does not increase the number of people in the subtreasury

Mr. MANN. I understand that, but it increases the effectiveness of the force by authorizing an assistant cashier who can do certain work that a clerk can not do. However, if the committee has not carefully considered it, we may bring it to the attention of the committee later.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I would say to the gentleman from Illinois that inasmuch as we adjusted all of these salaries in the last Congress according to the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury, we did not consider it at this time, and we had no evidence whatever respecting it before the committee.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman would not see his way clear at the present time, or would be, to accepting an amendment providing for an assistant cashier there?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We can not do that. The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I observe in these appropriations for the different subtreasuries that there are provisions for money counters and handlers for laundry machines. is that the money that is laundered in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving Office here or are the laundry machines located in the subtreasuries?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is to be installed in each subtreasury, except that at San Francisco where they use no paper money, a money-washing machine.

Mr. FOSTER. So that the work will be done in the sub-treasuries instead of here?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Oh, yes; there will be a money-washing machine in each subtreasury except the one at San Francisco. There is now one in the Treasury Department-

Mr. FOSTER. One here in Washington. Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. But none in the subtreasuries at this time?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No; but the machines have been purchased and will be installed by January.

Mr. COX of Indiana. I desire to ask the chairman how much economy will that result in?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. At least $300,000 a year.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of assistant treasurer at Cincinnati: Assistant treasurer, $4,500; cashier, $2,250; paying teller, $2,000; receiving teller, $1,800; vault clerk, $1,800; bookkeeper, $1,800; clerks—two at $1,300 each, five at $1,200 each, two at $1,000 each; clerk and stenographer, $1,000; chief watchman, $840; two watchmen, at $600 each; four money counters and handlers for money laundry machines, at $900 each; in all, $31,390.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order

The CHAIRMAN. Against what paragraph?

Mr. FOWLER. Against the paragraph just read. I desire to ask the chairman of the committee why the assistant treasurer at Boston and at Chicago receive a salary of $5,000 and at Cincinnati he only receives a salary of $4,500. Is that provided for by law?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I do not recollect there is any law fixing the salary of assistant treasurers in the United States. The salaries as fixed in this bill have been fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury. They were fixed, in his judgment, according to the responsibility of the position. The responsibilities in Chicago and Boston, where large sums are handled, are greater than the responsibilities in Cincinnati.

Mr. FOWLER. Are the sums the same as have been carried in the bills heretofore?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We have made no change whatsoever in any one of the subtreasuries of the United States unless it was a reduction.

Mr. FOWLER, I observe that the cashier at Chicago receives $3,000, whereas the salary paid the same position at Boston and at Cincinnati is $2,250 in one case and $2,500 in the other. Why should there be a difference made in these different offices in these subtreasury positions?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that Secretary MacVeagh has undertaken to reclassify and standardize the work and the salaries of all the employees in all the subtreasuries, and at the last session of Congress the appropriation bill carried the amounts recommended by the Secretary, and that was done not hastily but after investigation and inquiry.

Mr. FOWLER. I discover that you make an increase of clerks from four to five at the salary of $1,200. What is the use for the extra clerk at Cincinnati?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is no change in this bill.

Mr. FOWLER. Last year the bill carried a provision for four; this bill carries a provision for five.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Has the gentleman the law before him?

Mr. FOWLER.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an

There is a point of order pending. Mr. FOSTER.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FOWLER] reserve the point of order?

Mr. FOWLER. I did reserve the point of order, Mr. Chairman, and was trying to get the reasons for the increase of salary in certain positions.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, as I stated to the gentleman a moment ago, there is no increase. If he will examine the appropriation bill for the current year, he will find in one place four clerks at $1,200 each. Then follows two clerks at $1,300 each; vault clerk, $1,800; bookkeeper, $1,800; clerk, $1,200. This year, instead of carrying the five clerks in two separate parts of the bill, we consolidated and say five clerks at $1,200.

Mr. FOWLER. That may be true—
Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It is true.

Mr. FOWLER (continuing). That they have been combined, but I do not so discover on an examination of the bill. However, Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Long-

WORTH] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. LONGWORTH. In line 12, page 59, strike out the figures 600" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "720."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 59, line 12, by striking out the figures " 600" and inserting in lieu thereof the figures "720."

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I merely desire to make this very brief statement, and I trust that the chairman of the committee will offer no objection. It will be observed that the committee will offer no objection. It will be observed that the watchmen in every subtreasury, except that in Cincinnati, receive a salary of $720 a year, while in Boston they receive $850 a year. In Cincinnati their salary is only $600 a year—$50 a month. It seems to me that the mere statement of this fact carries its own argument. It is utterly absurd that these men in Cincinnati should be paid $120 a year less than they are paid in New Orleans for doing precisely the same work. If my amondment shall course them every watchmen in every subtrees. amendment shall carry, then every watchman in every subtreasury will receive at least $60 a month. The increase is almost negligible. It will amount to only $240 a year, and yet it will pay these watchmen what I regard as a fair living wage. I trust that the gentlemen will not interpose an objection.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Chairman-

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Ohlo [Mr. Long-WORTH] yield to his colleague?
Mr. LONGWORTH. Certainly.

Mr. ALLEN. Has the gentleman concluded his statement? Mr. LONGWORTH. Yes, if the gentleman desires to make a statement.

Mr. ALLEN. I simply wanted to say that I hope the committee will see its way clear to accept that amendment, not only for the reasons stated, namely, that the watchmen in the subtreasuries in other cities receive $720 a year, but, as I recall, in the Post Office appropriation bill last year janitors were increased on motion, I think, of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Murdock], from $600 to $720 a year, it being recognized that in this day of the high cost of living $600 was entirely inadequate for a man to take care of his family and to meet the require-ments of the present time. I want to add my word in their behalf, and I hope the committee will accept that amendment, which is a small amount, so far as this bill is concerned.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Longworth], which the Clerk will again report.

The amendment was again read.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

Office of assistant treasurer at St. Louis: Assistant treasurer, $4,500; cashier, $2,500; paying teller, $2,000; receiving teller, $1,800; assorting teller, $1,800; change teller, $1,600; coin teller, $1,200; book-keeper, $1,500; clerks—3 at $1,500 each, 7 at $1,200 each, 2 at $1,100 each, 3 at $1,000 each, 3 at $1,000 each, 3 at $1,000 each; 2 watchmen, at $720 each; 2 janitors, at $600 each; guard, $720; 4 money counters and handlers for money laundry machines, at $900 each; in all, $44,660.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I desire to offer an amendment on line 23. I move to strike out the figures "600" and substitute the figures "720." The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. DYER, Mr. Chairman, on looking over the pay for janitors and watchmen in the different subtreasuries of the country I find that, with the exception of those in the subtreasury in St. Louis, the pay is $720 in each and every in-These janitors at the subtreasury in St. Louis are on stance. the same footing as watchmen. They have to do that work in the subtreasury offices, and I feel, Mr. Chairman, that in view of the policy shown by the House at the last session of Congress the increase of pay of these men to a living wage, namely, to $720, which was the minimum of the increase of the last Congress-and, in fact, they were increased up to as much as $840-I think it is only fair and proper that this change should be made. It is impossible for men to live on $600 a year—$50 a month—and properly rear a family.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a que

Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Yes. Mr. DYER.

Mr. MANN. Why is it necessary to have two janitors at the St. Louis subtreasury? The bill already carries two watchmen and two janitors. At New Orleans there are two watchmen but no janitor, and at Cincinnati, where we just increased the appropriation for the watchmen, they have two watchmen and no janitor. What is the necessity for having two watchmen and two janitors at St. Louis?

Mr. DYER. St. Louis is a larger city.

Mr. MANN. What is the necessity of having two watchmen and two janitors at St. Louis more than at any other office? Chlcago, which is reputed to be a somewhat dirty city, so far as the air is concerned, has but one janitor, and yet requires three or four times as much work as is done in St. Louis. Is more cleaning required at St. Louis than anywhere else?

Mr. DYER. I will state, in answer to the question of the gentleman from Illinois, that St. Louis is a much larger city than any he has named except Chicago, which is provided with a messenger, which is not provided for at St. Louis.

Mr. MANN. The messenger does not do janitor's work.
Mr. DYER. These janitors do substantially the same work as the watchmen in the Chicago office. There is a messenger at the Chicago office at $840, and three watchmen at $720 each, and one janitor at $720. These janitors at St. Louis do practically the same work as the watchmen. The language is used interchangeably, and there is no difference, substantially, in the work which they do.

Mr. MANN. The amount of work done at the St. Louis office is only a trifle larger than the amount transacted at New Orleans and at Cincinnati, where they get along without those four men. What is the necessity of having four men at St. Louis to do the work done by two men at Cincinnati or at New Orleans or most of the other places? They have one janitor at Chicago and two janitors at St. Louis.

Mr. DYER. Well, I explained, or tried to explain that to the gentleman, that in some places "watchmen" are carried instead of "janitors." We have only one watchman at St. Louis, and these janitors have ofttimes to do the work of a watchman, because if he goes away for one purpose or other the janitors have to do his work. These janitors are employed all the time and give all their time to this work, and they are needed. I ask for a vote, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. MANN. There is no real necessity for them at all.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, did I understand the gentleman's amendment to provide that these people should be called watchmen instead of janitors?

DYER. No; my amendment did not provide that.

JOHNSON of South Carolina. But the gentleman's amendment proposes to increase the pay only?

Mr. DYER. Yes; to make it the same as janitors are paid at other subtreasuries in the country in every instance.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I have only this to say: That the Secretary of the Treasury has requested no increase in the compensation of these people. There is not a word of testimony before the committee that would justify the committee in making the increase. There are 450,000 people in the employment of the Government, and we can not raise salaries on the floor of the House indiscriminately without any evidence whatever. In fact, I think the best thing to do would be to strike out those two positions. They are hardly

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. DYER. When we had the Post Office appropriation bill up there were 1,400 messengers and janitors and watchmen whose salaries were increased and there had been no recommendation from the Postmaster General or anybody asking for it, and in the case of those whom we just increased a while ago, for instance, in the case at Cincinnati, there is no word from there on the subject. It is not because they are not needed.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The Secretary of the Treasury recommended the increase at Cincinnati.

Mr. DYER. Well, I will say that I have talked with the officials at the office at St. Louis and they tell me that $600 is not sufficient to pay these men to do the work and expect from them good service.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. That is all.
The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DYER], which the Clerk will again report.

The amendment was again read.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amend-

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the "noes" appeared to have it.

Mr. DYER.

Mr. DYER. I ask for a division, Mr. Chairman. The committee divided; and there were—ayes 16, noes 20. Mr. DYER. I ask for the yeas and nays, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The yeas and nays can not be had in committee.

Mr. DYER. I ask for tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri demands tellers. As many as favor taking this vote by tellers will rise and remain standing until counted. [After counting.] Only 12 gentlemen have arisen. It takes 20. Tellers are refused. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mint at Denver, Colo.: Superintendent, $4,500; assayer, $3,000; superintendent melting and refining department, $3,000; superintendent coining department, $2,500; chief clerk, and cashier, at $2,500 each; deposit welgh clerk, and bookkeeper, at $2,000 each; assistant assayer, $2,200; assayer's assistant, $2,000; assistant cashier, $1,800; clerks—two at $2,000 each, two at $1,800 each, four at $1,600 each, two at $1,400 each, one $1,200; private secretary, $1,200; in all, $47,200.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Idaho offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 62, by striking out all of lines 15 to 23, inclusive, and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

" MINTS AND ASSAY OFFICES.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I make

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the paragraph to which the amendment is offered provides simply for the mint at Denver, Colo., while the amendment undertakes to provide for assay offices throughout the country

The CHAIRMAN. As the Chair understands the gentleman's point of order, it is that the amendment is not germane.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I think it also provides for striking out parts of the bill that have not been reached.

Mr. FRENCH. Will the gentleman withhold his point of order for a few minutes?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I will, if the gentleman

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman's point of order is not well taken, but I shall not argue that question just at this time. I want to call the attention of the gentleman and of the Members of the House to that which is provided in the amendment which I have sent to the Clerk's desk. All that is provided is existing law. The language that has just been read is the language of the present law, and the bill as it has been reported by the committee proposes to abolish six of the assay offices of the United States, including the ones in North Carolina, Louisiana, Utah, Nevada, Montana, and Idaho.

The argument that was repeatedly advanced a year ago for the abolition of these assay offices, and the one that is pressed to-day, is the argument that it is necessary on account of economy and the economical administration of this branch of the Government. If there were merit to that argument, the position that the committee has taken falls short, because a year ago the committee went further and provided for the abolition of different assay offices which are not abolished in the present bill. More than that, if the argument of economy is to be regarded as the controlling factor in the consideration of this particular feature of the bill, the committee does not go far enough, because it should even abolish our mints and all the assay offices, with possibly one or two exceptions, because with possibly one or two exceptions they do not pay the expenses of their operation.

The fact of the business is that mints and assay offices are not maintained as revenue producers by our Government; and if we were to go further than that, the fact is that probably very few of the functions of the Government are exercised or maintained for the purpose of making a profit to the Government while performing a public service for the people. If you will go to the various departments, the head offices of which are here in Washington, you will find that that statement is amply borne out by that which we are doing in every session, in making appropriations for the maintaining of these various departments. Your Agricultural Department costs you every year millions and millions of dollars, and yet it is not urged that there is a profit coming to the Government from the maintenance of that department, other than the profit that comes to the people generally throughout the country through the information and development and experience that can be obtained, which are to the interest of farming and agricultural communities.

Until within the past year the Post Office Department has not been maintained at a profit, and has not even borne the expense of its own maintenance. You would not abolish that department. So it is with other departments. The people of the country do not expect that our governmental institutions shall bear the expense of their operation as a reason for their existence, providing they give service.

Here is an institution that is operated for the convenience of the people. I refer merely to the one in my own State, which may be taken as an illustration of the character of service performed by similar institutions in the other sections of the country

We have an assay office at Boise that performs the work of assaying gold and silver to the amount of nearly $1,000,000 per year for people of a large section of the country. The service that is performed is not performed for a few people only, it is not performed for a few large mining companies, but if you will turn to the record you will find that of the 500 and more who have sent bullion to the assay office at Boise almost all has been sent by persons who have sent less than $1,000 each.

Mr. BURLESON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. Certainly.

Mr. BURLESON. I would like to ask the gentleman if he is aware of the fact that during the last fiscal year the earnings of the assay office at Boise were $6,017.46 and the expenditure $14,541,14?

Mr. FRENCH. That statement is practically correct.

Mr. BURLESON. Does the gentleman think that it is a good proposition to maintain at Government expense an assay office with a net loss of $8,000 a year?

Mr. FRENCH. Postal routes are maintained at a net loss to the Government, and you would not ask to abolish them in all sections of the country on account of the expense.

Mr. BURLESON. Does the gentleman contend that there is any analogy between the two cases?

Mr. FRENCH. I contend that they are analogous. Of the 500 persons who sent gold and silver bullion to the assay office at Boise, nearly 500 sent in amounts of less than $1,000 each, and only 26 sent in an amount of more than $2,000 per individual. That represents accommodation to the people in handling nearly $1,000,000 of bullion that is assayed every year at that office. I have no doubt the same illustration could be made at every other assay office as to proportion and average. It is a great convenience to the people in the section where the assay offices are located.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. I will. Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The gentleman has referred to the Agricultural Department and the Post Office Department. We know that they are run in the interest of the people throughout the country. In whose particular interest are the assay offices maintained?

Mr. FRENCH. In the interest of the people throughout the country, because just as the development of agriculture and just as the development and dissemination of information through the Post Office Department are for the benefit of the country at large, so these assay offices are for the development of the mining resources. Our mining resources have developed in the last quarter of a century along these lines, so that to-day the output of gold and silver is nearly $100,000,000 every year, and yet the industry has received scarcely any encouragement.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Idaho has expired.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I ask that my time be extended five minutes. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Idaho asks that his time be extended five minutes. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

I will yield to the gentleman. Mr. FRENCH.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The gentleman surely does not mean to contend that these assay offices are maintained for any other purpose than the convenience of those who produce the gold bullion. Now I want to ask if it is not a fact that these people who now send their bullion to the assay office located in the gentleman's State could not send it other assay offices, say at Denver or Deadwood, S. Dak., which it is proposed to retain, and have the same services performed there that are performed now in the State of Idaho and save this expense to the people?

Mr. FRENCH. That is true in part, but there would be a delay in the time it would take to get a return on the bullion, and also an extra expense in the express charges that our producers would have to pay in carrying the bullion the greater distance. In the gold that is produced in Idaho to-day, 80 or 90 per cent is sent to Boise, and of the silver more than 96 per cent is sent to boise, and of the sover more than 30 per cent is sent to the assay office in Boise instead of the assay offices or mints in other parts of the country.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The only difference that would result would be that those who produce gold bullion now would have to pay a little more money to send their gold and silver to the assay offices located in other places than they do, in order to send it to the assay office in the gentleman's State.

Mr. EDENCH. That serve appropriate could be applied to the

That same principle could be applied to the Mr. FRENCH. Agricultural Department, and could be applied to the Post Office Department, and every other department that we main-

The people could bear the expense individually which tain. the Government now bears.

The position of the gentleman is Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. that 93,000,000 people should be forced to pay the extra expense of something like $8,000 for the benefit of 400 or 500 people in Idaho who produce gold bullion and send it to the assay office in his State, rather than to the mint and assay office at Denver.

Mr. FRENCH. Oh, not at all; and the convenience and advantage that just a few would receive is merely suggestive of the convenience and advantage it would be to a large section of the country to have the institution there, where people may have the opportunity of sending the bullion they produce in those States to a convenient assay office, for the encouragement of the industry, for the encouragement of building up the gold and silver mining in the particular sections of the country that are tributary to these assay offices. I think the people generally, the 93,000,000 to whom the gentleman refers, will be glad to have this expense borne by the Government as an encouragement to the mining industry of the United States.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Can the gentleman then tell why it is that the Secretary of the Treasury has, without exception, year after year, recommended that the assay office in the gentleman's State and all the other assay offices except at Denver and Philadelphia be abolished in the interest of the public service and of the people?

Mr. FRENCH. The Secretary takes that position honestly, but why has not the committee followed that course they followed a year ago? If their position a year ago was correct, wherein they sought to abolish the assay office at Seattle, the mint at San Francisco, and other assay offices in the country, why do they reverse their policy and now try to abolish only a few?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. If the gentleman asks me the question, I will say that the committee was in earnest a year ago when it endeavored to abolish all the assay offices, but the trouble was that when we came in here on the floor of the House we found a combination against the committee which prevented the abolishment of any of these offices. The committee now seeks by this bill to abolish only those assay offices which are a losing proposition to the Government.

Mr. FRENCH. Yes; and they are in States that are represented by but a one-Member delegation—States like Idaho, Utah, Montana, Nevada. Of course North Carolina and Louisiana must be included, but four of the six the committee is abolishing are located in States that have only one Repre-senative on this floor. Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. That is because these assay offices happen to be located in those States, but I will say to the gentleman that every assay office in the South has been abolished in this bill.

Mr. FRENCH. Only two of them.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. There are only two there.
Mr. FRENCH. Yes; and you have abolished four from States that have only one Member each representing them in this body, and I think it is more a question of being able, as the gentleman suggests, to prevent some such combination that the committee has prepared the bill in the way it has. If the committee were in earnest a year ago, why not fight it out along the same lines now?

Will the gentleman join us in an Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee.

effort to abolish all of them?

Mr. FRENCH. No, I will not; because I believe they should be retained, not only the ones that are retained in the bill but the ones I ask to have retained in the amendment which I now

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, has the Chair yet ruled on the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the point of order well taken. If the gentleman from Idaho cares to be heard upon the question, the Chair will hear him. The gentleman said he did not care to discuss the point of order.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I do not think there can be any particular question on the point of order. I think the point of order is not well taken, because the amendment simply reinstates existing law. It proposes nothing new, it refers to that which is already existing law, and I think that now is a very proper time to have it considered, in lieu of the paragraph for which it is a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN. It is a well-established rule of the House, as the Chair understands it, that if any portion of an amendment is obnoxious, it makes the entire amendment obnoxious. It appears from the reading of this amendment that it includes matters other than is contemplated in the provision from line 15 to 23, on page 62. If the gentleman's amendment should come after that as a different and separate section, it might be in order; but this provision provides solely for a mint at Denver, whereas the amendment offered by the gentleman from Idaho creates a number of assay offices throughout the country. If he should offer his amendment as a separate section following the mint at Denver, it seems to the Chair that it would be in order.

Mr. FRENCH. Then, to save time, because I would simply follow the program the Chair has outlined, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment I have proposed be offered as a separate section immediately following the disposition of this section that is now pending, and also in the same sentence I will ask that we do not read it, because we are all familiar with its terms, and then it can be voted up or down as the House sees fit.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I object, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina objects. The point of order is sustained, and the Clerk will read.

Mr. FRENCH. Then, Mr. Chairman, I would offer this same amendment as a separate section at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Idaho offers the following amendment as a separate section.

Mr. FRENCH. If the Clerk will omit the part pertaining to Denver-I want to omit that because that is taken care of-I would ask that the reading be dispensed with, because the House is familiar with it,

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Idaho asks unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. BURLESON. Mr. Chairman, I demand a division of the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas demands a division of the amendment. The Clerk will report the first subdivision of the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 62, after line 23, insert the following:

" MINTS AND ASSAY OFFICES.

"Mint at Carson, Nev.: Assayer in charge, who shall also perform the duties of melter, $2,250; assistant assayer, $1,500; chief clerk, $1,600; clerk, $1,000; in all, $6,350.
"For wages of workmen and other employees, $6,200.
"For incidental and contingent expenses, $3,000."

Mr. BURLESON. Mr. Chairman, I simply desire to direct the attention of the committee to the fact that last year the earnings at the Carson Mint were $3,717.93 and the expenses were $15,284.69. The aggregate expenses of the assay offices we seek in this bill to abolish are $144,673.69. The aggregate earnings are $42,180.18. The net annual loss to the Government is more than $100,000, and, in addition to this loss, for each year there is a cost for transportation necessarily incurred by the shipment of ore that is purchased which is sent to the mint for coinage purposes, aggregating thousands of dollars. The abolishment of these assay offices has been recommended by the present Secretary of the Treasury. Every Secretary of the Treasury for years with unvarying regularity, Democratic Secretaries of the Treasury alike with Republican Secretaries of the Treasury, have recommended their abolishment, declaring that they render no substantial service. It is in the interest of economy, and, Mr. Chairman, no reason can be stated why they should be continued, and they would not have been continued in last year's bill except for a combination upon the part of certain Representatives who have a selfish interest in the continuance of these particular assay offices, and I now ask that the Committee of the Whole sustain the Committee on Appropriations in its effort to strike down this wasteful extravagance. But for the combination last year these useless offices would have been abolished. I think now it no longer exists and that at last we can succeed in eliminating these indefensible items from

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Chairman, I had occasion the other day to criticize the committee and the majority of this House for introducing in this bill what I thought was the first indica-tion of a seizure of the spoils of office. I want to be fair about the matter, and so I think I ought now to say that this proposition which they are making here shows quite an opposite spirit. I am surprised at it. I am afraid it is a spirit that will not be demonstrated very often in the progress of time, but certainly in this instance the majority of the committee is showing great self-denial and restraint of appetite in the effort to abolish these offices, which in the future would give them patronage. I think they are doing it wisely as well as un-selfishly. I think it is a righteous economy which deserves the selfishly. I think it is a righteous economic commendation and support of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the subdivision amendment offered by the gentleman from Idaho.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected. The CHAIRMAN. Does the committee desire the balance of the amendment voted on together?

Mr. BURLESON. We are willing to vote on it.
The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the balance of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Idaho.

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced the noes seemed to have it.

Upon a division (demanded by Mr. French) there wereayes 11, noes 49.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Assay office at Deadwood, S. Dak.: Assayer in charge, who shall also perform the duties of melter, $2.000; clerk, $1.200; assistant assayer, $1,600; assayer's assistant, $1,400; in all, $6,200.

For wages of workmen and other employees, $3,000.

For incidental and contingent expenses, new machinery, etc., $1,500.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary in-

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COX of Indiana. I would like to know where the Clerk was reading

The CHAIRMAN. Page 65, line 7.
Mr. COX of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether I am too late or not, but I want to move to strike out all on page 65, lines 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7; in other words, from line 1 The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 65, strike out all of lines 1 to 7, inclusive.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I am quite willing.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Assay office at Seattle, Wash.: Assayer in charge, who shall also perform the duties of melter, $2.750; assistant assayer, $2.000; chief clerk, who shall also perform the duties of cashier, $2.000; cherk—one $1,700, two at $1,600 each, one $1,400; in all, $13,050.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I want to ask the chairman of the committee a question. Is there any more need for the office at Seattle than for the one at Deadwood, in his opinion?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes; there is a great deal more need for an assay office at Seattle than there is at any other point on the Pacific coast. The amount of bullion which comes down to Seattle from Alaska is very great.

While I am on my feet I would like to ask the Mr. DYER. chairman of the subcommittee a question which I wanted to ask him when we had up the matter of the subtreasury. I would like to know if the Committee on Appropriations has made any recent inquiry into whether or not some of the subtreasuries could not be abolished without injuring the public business

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. They ought all to be abolished, but this committee was not in a position to do it. They were organized under a very different condition of things than that which now obtains. We are not prepared to abolish them.

Mr. DYER. I understand the gentleman to say, then, that these different subtreasuries could practically be abolished without any injury to the public business?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I think they could. Of course we have not had any inquiries on that subject.

Mr. DYER. Can the chairman state to us whether or not it is the intention, so far as he knows now, of the Committee on Appropriations to take up this inquiry for the purpose of trying to abolish them?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I do not know who will be on the Committee on Appropriations after the 4th of March. This committee will do well to get through with the appropriation bills for the next fiscal year,

The Clerk read as follows:

GOVERNMENT IN THE TERRITORIES.

District of Alaska: Governor, $7,000; 4 judges, at $7,500 each; 4 attorneys, at $5,000 each; 4 marshais, at $4,000 each; 4 clerks, at $3,500 each; in all, $87,000.

Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last Mr. MANN. word. I would like to inquire from the gentleman in charge of the bill, in regard to the District of Alaska, whether they need as large a force there now since Alaska was created into a Territory as they have had heretofore? Is there a large share of this legal work there to be done hereafter?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The Committee on Appropriations has no information on that subject. When we were making up the bill last year we thought that the force was too large in the Territories, and we made an inquiry of the Attorney General, and after investigation he notified the committee that the force could not be reduced.

The Clerk read as follows:

For judges of circuit courts, at $4,000 each, so much as may be necessary, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914.

[Mr. FARR addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of inquiring of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson], in charge of the bill, whether any request or estimate was made in reference to the expenses of the Territorial Legislature for the Territory of Alaska, or whether they would properly come in this bill or in the sundry civil bill?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. They would properly come in this bill, Mr. Chairman, but no estimate was sent to us. We do provide in this bill for the Legislature of Hawaii, but as it only meets biennially it was not necessary to have any estimate n this bill. No estimates came in regard to the other.

Mr. MANN. And the matter was not called to the attention of the committee by the Delegate from Alaska?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No. There is no estimate before the committee as to the amount needed.

The Clerk read as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT.

Office of the Secretary: Secretary of War. $12,000; Assistant Secretary, $5,000; assistant and chief clerk, $4,000; private secretary to the Secretary, $2,500; clerk to the Secretary, $2,500; clerk to the Secretary, $2,000; stenographer to the Secretary, $2,000; clerk to the Assistant Secretary, $2,400; assistant chief clerk, $2,400; disbursing clerk, $2,750; appointment clerk, $2,250; 4 chiefs of division, at $2,000 cach; superintendent of buildings outside of State, War, and Navy Department Building, in addition to compensation as chief of division, $500; chief telegrapher, $1,800; clerks—4 of class 4, 5 of class 3, 15 of class 2, 19 of class 1, 6 at $1,000 cach, 1 at $900; foreman, $1,200; carpenter, $1,200; chief messenger, $1,000; carpenter, $1,080; 6 messengers; 7 assistant messengers, at $600 cach; telephone switchboard operator; assistant telephone switchboard operator; assistant telephone switchboard operator; assistant telephone switchboard operator; assistant telephone switchboard operator; engineer, $720; fireman: 4 watchmen; 5 watchmen, at $600 cach; 8 laborers; hostlers—1 at $600, 1 at $540; elevator conductors—1 at $600; 4 charwomen; in all, $148,160.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on this paragraph. I desire to ask the gentleman why the chief clerk's salary is increased from $2,500 to $4,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We have not done any-The salary is the same now as it has been. thing of the kind.

Mr. FOWLER. The last bill provides that the chief clerk of the Secretary of War shall have a salary of $2,500. In this bill it provides for a salary of $4,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We have made no change

Mr. FOWLER. I have the statute before me.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman may have the statute before him, but we are following current law.

Mr. FOWLER. Well, as a matter of fact, does the gentleman think that there ought to be an increase in the salary simply by current law, when there is no general law for it?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. He is not merely a chief clerk in the ordinary acceptation of that term, but he is also an Assistant Secretary of War.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, there is no provision in the statute for an assistant secretary and chief clerk of war, but there is a provision for a chief clerk at a salary of $2,500. It is sought by this bill to increase his salary from $2,500 to $4,000 by marrying him to an assistant for which there is no provision I therefore make a point of order against this provision in line 3 for $4,000 for the chief clerk.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the chief clerk when the War Department was created by the act of 1789 was provided for at $600 a year. From time to time it was increased; notably in 1871 the salary was increased to $2,500. At some time previous to this present fiscal year the salary was increased in an appropriation bill to $4,000, and this committee has not increased the salary over the amount carried in the current law. There would be just as much sense in going back and fixing this officer's salary at $600, which was the amount fixed in the original statute in 1789, as there would be in going back to the year 1871 and fixing the salary at $2,500.

Mr. FOWLER. Does the gentleman contend that there has been an amendment to the statute fixing the salary of the chief clerk to the Secretary of War to $2,500?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I endeavored to state distinctly that it has been increased on appropriation bills, and we are simply following the current law as made in an appropriation bill.

Mr. FOWLER. The gentleman is well aware of the fact that merely because a salary may have been increased by an appropriation bill it is not binding at all upon any future Congress or session thereof in making an appropriation for that purpose.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I am ready to have the Chair rule.

Mr. FOWLER. I will say to the Chair that I have before me the statute governing the question of salaries for the Department of War, and it provides for one chief clerk of the department at a salary of $2,500 a year.

The CHAIRMAN. It is the Chair's understanding of the precedents that where a statute fixes the salary of an officer a point of order against the increase of the salary is good, and that where the statute fixes no salary, then the current law is to govern in a case of that character; and for that reason it seems to the Chair that-

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, in this instance, however, there is one other point to which the attention of the Chair must be called. The statute cited by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fowler] fixes the compensation of the office of chief clerk, but that is not this office. This is a different office. It is the office of assistant and chief clerk—a different title, with somewhat different duties-and it is upon that ground that the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] has based his contention. There was a consolidation of offices and a change in the compensation, and the particular position that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fowlers] now mentions does not exist.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, does the gentleman from

New York yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Certainly.

Mr. FOWLER. I desire to ask if there is such a position as Assistant Secretary of War, as contemplated by this provision of this bill?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is an Assistant Secretary of War at $5,000 a year, and he has an assistant and chief clerk at $4,000 a year.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to ask the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] how the word "assistant is going to help to make it in order unless that office is authorized by law?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It is authorized by appropriation acts, which justify us in carrying it in the next appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. But if it is an office not authorized by law, and the point of order is made against it, under the rules of the committee a point of order would lie,

Mr. FITZGERALD. There is no separate statute, as I recall, creating the office of assistant and chief clerk. If the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fowler] has made his point of order on that ground that is one thing. But the only compensation fixed for the office of assistant and chief clerk is the compensation fixed in the appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is inclined to think the point of order is well taken.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Against the entire clause?

The CHAIRMAN. No; against this provision of "assistant and chief clerk at $4,000." Has the gentleman from South Carolina any amendment?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No; we have no amend-

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read,

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of the Judge Advocate General: Chief clerk and solicitor, $2,500; law clerks—1 at $2,400, 1 at $2,000; clerks—1 of class 4, 2 of class 3, 3 of class 2, 6 of class 1; copyist; 2 messengers; assistant messenger; in all, $26,600.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the paragraph. I desire to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill why the chief clerk, in this paragraph, has a salary of $2,500, whereas it ought to be $2,000?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is no law creating such an office. It is just simply carried in an appropriation We have carried it there because the previous appropriation bills provided for it.

Mr. FOWLER. There is a chief clerk of this office? Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. He is something more than a chief clerk.

Mr. FOWLER. Can you consolidate a statutory office with another office by an appropriation bill?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. A chief clerk is authorized by law at $2,000. Mr. FOWLER. A chief clerk is authorized by law at the salary of $2,000?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. FOWLER. I make the point of order against this portion of the paragraph, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. If it is subject to a point of order, I would rather let it go.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that the gentleman from Illinois says he has the statute before him, and the statute authorizes a salary of $2,000.

Mr. FOWLER. I understand the law so fixes it.
Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The words "and solicitor" are subject to a point of order.
The CHAIRMAN. What is the understanding of the gentleman in charge of the bill as to what the statutory law is?
Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is authority for a chief clark at $2,000. There is no provision for "chief clark".

chief clerk at $2,000. There is no provision for "chief clerk and solicitor," but there is a law for the chief clerk.

The CHAIRMAN. Let the Chair understand just what the gentleman from Illinois made the point of order against. Will the gentleman state it again?

Mr. FOWLER. The point of order is directed against the salary of the chief clerk and solicitor provided in the bill at There is no such office as "chief clerk and solicitor created by the statute. There is a statutory office of chief clerk, and I make a point of order against that provision of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order, in so far as the words "and solicitor" are concerned, is doubtless well taken. Chair is not certain whether that takes out of the bill the entire provision "chief clerk and solicitor."

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, the provision "chief clerk and solicitor, $2,500," goes out.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. There are carried in the legislative bill a very large number of offices which have been carried for a great many years at compensations and under titles different from the compensation and titles fixed in the organic act. series of years Congress, in providing for the needs of the public service, has from time to time provided additional compensation and changed titles in order to obtain the services required to carry on the public service adequately. It is a notorious fact that this bill can be taken by any studious or industrious Member of the House and completely emasculated. That is known to the entire House. We have established a governmental service in all the various departments essential for the proper conduct of the public business. The Chair will probably recall that a few years since, as a result of a some-what partisan controversy that arose in the House, two Members of the House undertook to eliminate from the legislative bill all of the items that were not strictly in order under the rules, and they carried their work to such an extent that at the completion of the bill the House, by a practically unanimous vote, adopted a rule reinserting all the items taken out, because it would have been ludicrous to pass through the House a bill purporting to provide for the departmental service which everybody knew in effect did not do so. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fowler] can follow that practice if he chooses to do so. If he were bringing to the attention of the Committee of the Whole items in this bill that the Committee on Appropriations were at this time attempting to do in the way of increasing forces or increasing compensation, which were not in strict conformity with the rules, that would be one matter, and I do not know that I have ever criticized anyone for exercising his rights under the rules in that respect; but to sit here and take out all these various items of appropriation which are absolutely essential for the conduct of the public service can not, it seems to me, be justified upon any theory whatever. It may be that the gentleman will carry his work to such an extent that in order to preserve the self-respect of the House, at the conclusion of the bill, the committee may be compelled to ask the adoption of a rule restoring all of the items eliminated in this way Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to take the place of the $2,500, which has been stricken out, and make it $2,000, so that it will read "chief clerk and solicitor, $2,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I make the point of order against that amendment that it is not provided by law.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I ask the gentleman from South Carolina to withdraw the point of order.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I will withdraw the point

Let the amendment be reported. of order. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 68, line 16, strike out $2,500 and insert $2,000.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I submit that that is not the amendment that was offered. Let the Clerk report the amendment that was offered.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment as offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fowler].

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to amend my amend-

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I demand that the amendment be reported.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fow-LER] will wait a moment, the Clerk will report his original amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 68, lines 15 and 16, insert "chief clerk and solicitor, $2,000."

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to amend the amendment by striking out the words "and solicitor."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the amendment by striking out the words "and solicitor."

Mr. MANN. I would like to ask the reason for striking out the words "and solicitor." This man is conceded to be a

Mr. FOWLER. I do not understand that there is any such statutory office as solicitor provided for in this department.

Mr. MANN. That is true; but this department itself is a lawyer's department. It is the office of the Judge Advocate General. While he is an Army officer he is also a lawyer and has to be; his office is the legal department, and like any other legal department of the Government it requires a solicitor. Where there is a chief clerk he needs to be a lawyer or else have a lawyer besides. It is run as a legal office and does the legal work for the Army, and occasionally has furnished information to the House and the committees of the House of an important character in legal work.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to hinder or delay legislation in this body in any way whatever. I feel as sensible as any other Member of this House of my weakness and newness in this body. Under no consideration would I hold up this House, in any sense of the word, in any department of the Government which would handicap it or lessen its ability to carry out the great needs of the Government of this country to the fullest extent.

I resent, Mr. Chairman, any statement made here on the floor of this House which may impute to me a disposition of that kind. I do say, Mr. Chairman, that there is a regular and lawful way to proceed in all of the business in this House. We have a code of rules which are employed for the purpose of guiding Members in the conduct of bills in this House, and we have ample laws, fixed and definite, as to what is to be done and should be done in appropriations for furnishing the Government in its various departments ample revenue for the purpose of bringing to the country its greatest welfare. I therefore offer this amendment so that the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fitzgerald] may be advised as to my position in the premises-that is, that where a statutory office is created that it shall remain distinct and apart from all other positions, and that it can not be married to Tom, Dick, and Harry without the consent of the Congress of the United States.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman from Illinois does not imagine that this marriage to which he refers was placed in this law without the consent of the Congress of the United States. It was done in the House and agreed to by the Senate. That is how it is here. I ask for a vote on the amendment to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The question was taken, and the amendment to the amend-

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the words "two thousand" in the amendment and insert "twentyfive hundred."

Mr. FOWLER. I make a point of order, Mr. Chairman, to that amendment to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. On what ground?

Mr. FOWLER. Because it seeks to regulate the salary of a statutory office which is fixed by law.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that the gentleman's amendment provides for an office that is not provided for by statute; that is legislation, and under the rules of the House any germane legislation is in order. The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that it is the unbroken rule that where an amendment is offered out of order and permitted to be acted on by the committee, it can be perfected in any way the committee may think best. So the point of order is not well taken. The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment as amended.

The question was taken, and the amendment as amended was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Office, Chief, Quartermaster Corps: Assistant and chief clerk, $2,750; 5 principal clerks, at $2,250 each; clerks—15 of class 4, 25 of class 3, 44 of class 2, 85 of class 1, 50 at $1,000 each, 10 at $900 each; advisory architect, $4,000; experienced builder and mechanic, $2,500; inspector of supplies, $2,500; draftsmen—3 at $1,800 each, 7 at $1,000 each, 5 at $1,400 each; supervising engineer, $2,750; 2 civil engineers at $1,800 each; electrical engineer at $2,000; electrical and mechanical engineer, $2,000; sanitary and heating engineer, $1,500; blue-print operator, $900; 6 messengers; 14 assistant messengers; 12 laborers; 1 laborer, $480; in all, $378,670.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against that paragraph. I desire to ask the chairman of the against that paragraph. I desire to ask the chairman of the committee why the chief clerk's salary is increased from $2,000 to $2,750. That is on page 69, at the bottom of the page.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the section of the bill now under consideration is the consolidated bureau resulting from the legislation in the last military appropriation bill that required three bureaus of the War Department to be consolidated

Mr. FOWLER. Did it create any office of assistant and chief clerk, and thereby fix the salary?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It certainly provided, Mr. Chairman, that these three bureaus in the War Department should be consolidated into one bureau. The statute itself does not fix the number of employees, and therefore under the general law we have the right to appropriate for such force as is necessary to carry on the work of that bureau. And I want to say, further, if the gentleman will permit me to give him the information-

Mr. FOWLER. That is sufficient.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. That these three consolidated bureaus for the present year are costing $425,700. By the consolidation we are able to carry on this service for $378,670, making, in round figures, a saving of $50,000. I am surprised that the gentleman should object to such economy as that.

Mr. FOWLER. There is not such a saving as $50,000. It is much less than $50,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. How much less?

Mr. FOWLER. I have not the exact figures, but it does not reach $50,000 by any means.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The service is costing $425,700 now. Under the proposed bill it will cost $378,670. There are 43 people less provided for, and the net saving is $47,030—in round numbers $50,000.

Mr. FOWLER. I desire to ask if the statute does not fix the chief clerk's salary for this department at $2,000?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is no statute fixing the chief clerk's salary in that bureau at any price.

Mr. FOWLER. I desire to call the attention of the chairman to the fact that the Quartermaster General's Corps provides for a chief clerk at a salary of $2,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes; but that is the old law. The military appropriation bill provided that these three bureaus should be consolidated. It abolishes all of the others.

Mr. FOWLER. Yes; but it does not make any change in the question of the chief clerk of the Quartermaster General's office.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is no such thing, It wiped all of them out of existence, and this section of the bill is prepared in accordance with the new law.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Certainly.

Mr. KAHN. Under the last Army appropriation bill the Quartermaster's Department, the Subsistence Department, and the Pay Department were consolidated under the name of the Quartermaster Corps. The $2,000 that the gentleman speaks of refers to a chief clerk of the Quartermaster's Department. That department has been abolished. This provides for the Quartermaster Corps, an entirely new department, and the legislation that was enacted in the last Congress did not pro-

Mr. FOWLER. Was there any provision in that bill repealing the law creating the Quartermaster General's office and that department?

Mr. KAHN. By inference there was, because the Quarter-master's Department was consolidated with the Pay Department and the Subsistence Department in the Quartermaster

Mr. FOWLER. Is it not a fact that this is the Quartermaster General's Department, just the same as it has been always, and if not, what has become of the Quartermaster General and his clerks?

Mr. KAHN. The Quartermaster General does no longer exist. He is now called the Chief of the Quartermaster Corps. The office of Quartermaster General has been abolished. The office of Paymaster General has been abolished and the office of Commissary General has been abolished. They are all consolidated in the new Quartermaster Corps.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make a point of order against that part of this paragraph, page 69, lines 24 order against that part of this paragraph, page 69, lines 24 and 25, wherein it is sought to create an assistant and chief clerk with a salary of $2,750.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. FOSTER). The Chair is of the opinion that the military appropriation bill of last year, in bringing about a consolidation of these offices, changed the office of Quartermaster General and Paymaster General and Commissary General, and created this new office called the Quartermaster. General, and created this new office called the Quartermaster Corps, and it is under the provisions of that legislation that the committee has appropriated for this new department. In the opinion of the Chair the point of order is not well taken, and the point of order is overruled.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of the Surgeon General: Chief clerk, $2,250; law clerk, $2,000; clerks—13 of class 4, 11 of class 3, 26 of class 2, 32 of class 1, 10 at $1,000 cach, 3 at $900 each; anatomist, $1,600; engineer, $1,400; 3 firemen; skilled mechanic, $1,000; 2 messengers; 10 assistant messengers; 3 watchmen; superintendent of building (Army Medical Museum and Library), $250; 6 laborers; chemist, $2,088; assistant chemist, $1,500; principal assistant librarian, $2,250; pathologist, $1,800; microscopist, $1,800; assistant librarian, $1,800; 4 charwomen; in all, $166,358.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the paragraph. I desire to make the point of order against the salary of the chief clerk at $2,250, because it is a statutory office wherein the salary is fixed by law at $2,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, it is subject to the point of order, and I do not care to waste time over it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. FOWLER. I desire to amend the bill by

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I move, in line 14, after the words "chief clerk," to insert the words "two thousand dollars."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend page 70, line 14, by inserting at the beginning of the line "$2,000.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of the Chief of Engineers; Chief clerk, $2,250; 2 chiefs of division, at $2,000 each; clerks—8 of class 4, 11 of class 3, 13 of class 2, 16 of class 1, 10 at $1,000 each; 11 at $900 each; 6 messengers; 3 assistant messengers; 2 laborers; in all, $104,070.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against this paragraph confined to the salary of the chief clerk, which is denominated in this bill at $2,250, whereas the statute fixes the salary at $2,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, it is subject to the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to amend by inserting $2,000 instead of $2,250.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Illinois that the gentleman in charge of the bill has the preferential right to recognition.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I move to insert "$2,000" after the words "chief clerk."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 71, line 22, by inserting at the beginning of the line "$2,000."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Office of the Bureau of Insular Affairs: Law officer, $4,500; chief clerk, $2.250; clerks—10 of class 4, 3 of class 3, 10 of class 2, 19 of class 1, 15 at $1,000 each; 3 messengers; 2 assistant messengers; 4 laborers; 2 charwomen; in all, $88,430.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the paragraph. I desire to ask the chairman of the committee why the chief clerk's salary is fixed at $2,250 instead of $2,000?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Because we thought he was worth the money and ought to have it.

Mr. FOWLER. Why make a distinction here, and in other places in this same department of the Government you fix the chief clerk's salary at $2,000, such as in the Engineer's Department?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We fixed it at $2,250 in order to equalize him with these and other chief clerks, and the gentleman made a point of order against it.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the chief clerk's salary at $2,250.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The point of order is not well taken, because there is no law fixing the salary at $2,000.

Mr. FOWLER. I submit, Mr. Chairman, that if there is a law fixing the exact salary I have not been able to lay my hands to it; but I believe it was fixed along with the other departments. I withdraw the point of order, not being definite enough to give the proper information.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman can withdraw the point of order, but it is subject to the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Contingent expenses of branch offices at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk, Savannah, New Orleans, San Francisco, Portland (Oreg.), Portland (Me.), Chicago, Cleveland, Buffalo, Duluth, Sault Ste. Marie, Panama, and Galveston, including furniture, fuel, lights, works and periodicals relating to hydrography, marine meteorology, navigation, surveying, oceanography, and terrestrial magnetism, stationery, miscellaneous articles, rent and care of offices, care of time balls, car fare and ferriage in visiting merchant vessels, freight and express charges, telegrams, and other necessary expenses incurred in collecting the latest information for the Pilot Charts, and for other purposes for which the offices were established, $11,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, on page 82, line 23, before the word "Panama," insert the word "Seattle."

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. GARNER). The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 82, line 23, by inserting at the beginning of the line, before the word "Panama," the word "Seattle."

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Now, Mr. Chairman, in that connection I desire permission to insert in the Record certain correspondence.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina asks unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD certain correspondence pertaining to the amendment just offered. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The correspondence is as follows:

DECEMBER 5, 1912,

Mr. G. F. Cooper,

Hydrographic Office, Navy Department, City.

My Dear Mr. Cooper: It seems that the Committee on Appropriations drew the conclusion from your statement made to the committee with reference to the removal of the hydrographic office at Port Townsend, Wash. that there was no necessity for a hydrographic office on Puget Sound. I know, of course, that you did not intend that any such construction should be placed upon your statement. Will you please tell me what necessity there is for the continuance of such office on Puget Sound? I will be under obligations for an immediate reply.

Sincerely, yours,

W. E. Humphrey.

In number of ships, and perhaps also in tonnage, Puget Sound is the second port of the United States. Tonnage of Puget Sound in 1911, 2,857,818 tons. Of this amount 2,162,814 tons came from Seattle and was of the value of $109,407,114.

Hydrographic Office, Washington, D. C., December 6, 1912.

Washington, D. C., December 6, 1912.

Hon. W. E. Humphrey, M. C.,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Humphrey: In reply to your letter of December 5, 1912, please permit me to express my great regret that the Committee on Appropriations should have placed the construction upon my testimony that they seem to have done. I had no intention whatever of conveying any impression that there was no necessity for a branch hydrographic office on Puget Sound. On the contrary, my testimony will show that the estimates requested the establishment of two offices on that Sound instead of one. The question was simply a relocation of the office now situated at Port Townsend and, if possible, the establishment of an additional office on Puget Sound. The office at Port Townsend, as I said to the committee (see p. 128, hearings on the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill for 1914), is not advantage-ously situated with regard to the shipping interests centering on Puget Sound. Port Townsend is a small place, and most of the shipping that centers on Puget Sound simply uses Port Townsend as a port of entry and quarantine station. The ships do not remain sufficiently long at that port for their masters to properly avail themselves of the advantages of the branch office now situated there. They are compelled to receive their information and publications by mail, and if they wish a personal interview with the officer in charge of the office it is generally necessary for them to go up to Port Townsend, leaving their vessels.

If the office is moved to Seattle, the situation would be very much ally necessary for them to go up to Port Townsend, leaving their vessels.

If the office is moved to Seattle, the situation would be very much more advantageous to the shipping interests. There is great necessity for a branch hydrographic office on Puget Sound. This office maintains a time ball which is dropped every day at noon. It supplies mariners with the latest information concerning dangers to navigation in all parts of the world. It has on file for their information all the charts and sailing directions of the world corrected to date. With this office taken from Puget Sound, the shipping interests centering on that Sound would be deprived of this time service and information service, which is of great use to them. Our one desire in suggesting that the office be moved from one point on the Sound to another is that it might be still more useful to the shipping interests.

I had supposed that the Committee on Appropriations would understand from my hearing that the office at Port Townsend was not as advantageously situated as it would be at Seattle. In addition to the hearing, I left with the clerk of the committee a copy of my letter to the Secretary of the Navy transmitting the estimates, which letter specifically mentioned the removal of the office from Port Townsend to Seattle.

Very respectfully,

George F. Cooper,

Commander, United States Navy, Hydrographer.

Mr. MANN. In the current law I notice Port Townsend is included as one of the hydrographic offices. Is this intended to take the place of Port Townsend and provide the office at Seattle?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Is that satisfactory to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HUMPHREY]?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I understand it is desired by the official heads. I have not had anything to do with the correspondence.

Mr. MANN. Is that satisfactory to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HUMPHREY]?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes; the gentleman from Washington requested me to make this amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Naval Observatory: Assistant astronomers—1 at $2,400, 2 at $1,800 each; assistant in department of nautical instruments, $1,600; clerks—1 of class 4, 1 of class 2; instrument maker, $1,500; electrician, $1,500; librarian, $1,800; assistants—3 at $1,600 each, 3 at $1,400 each, 2 at $1,000 each; stenographer and typewriter, $900; foreman and captain of the watch, $1,000; carpenter, and engineer, at $1,000 each; 3 firemen; 6 watchmen; elevator conductor, $720; 9 laborers; in all, $43,640.

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to page 72, lines 14, 15, and 16, and pending that, to make this statement as the basis for a motion to strike out those lines.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I am perfectly willing that the gentleman shall make his statement as to the reason for returning to page 72.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. SMALL. Also a motion, unless there is objection. Mr. CARLIN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, does the unanimous consent carry with it the right to make the motion?

Mr. SMALL. Yes; providing there is no objection to it. Mr. CARLIN. What is the motion to be? Mr. SMALL. To strike out the section.

Mr. Chairman, the chairman of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors [Mr. Sparkman] was expecting to be present when that paragraph, on page 72, lines 14 to 16, was read, but he was unexpectedly and urgently called away from the Chamber, and has requested me to ask for this consent. This section sought to be repealed was included in the river and harbor act approved July 25, 1912. As a matter of fact, it was inserted as an amendment to the river and harbor bill while it was pending in the Senate, but it was inserted at the request of the Chief of Engineers, Gen. W. H. Bixby, upon the statement that it was necessary as an urgency measure. Section 10 of the river and harbor act sought to be repealed provides that the Chief of Engineers may, in preparing estimates in the carrying out of directions in the river and harbor act, employ such additional clerical help as may be necessary. The chairman of the committee desired, if he had been here, to move to strike out the paragraph repealing this section, and that is my purpose upon which I ask unanimous consent to return to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL] asks unanimous consent to return to page 72 for the purpose of making the motion to strike out lines 14, 15, and 16. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, it is the purpose in the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill to provide all the clerical services for the Government within the District of Columbia. It is impossible for the Committee on Appropriations to know the number of people employed and the compensation paid if, in addition to what we provide in this bill, lump sums are given by the Indian Affairs Committee and the Post Office Committee, the Rivers and Harbors Committee, and the various committees of this House which Committee, and the various committees of this House which appropriate money. The rivers and harbors act, passed in July, 1912, in section 10, authorizes an expenditure for clerical services in the preparation of plans, and so forth. We carry in this bill $42,000 for that purpose. When Maj. Ladue, representing the office of the Chief of Engineers, was before the committee I asked him if he desired any larger appropriation than they have for the current year. He replied that they did than they have for the current year. He replied that they did not. I asked him the further question as to how many clerks had been employed under the authorization in section 10 of the rivers and harbors act, and he stated that none had been employed. So, Mr. Chairman, while section 10 of the rivers and harbors act authorized the employment of clerical service, the Chief of Engineers had not found it necessary to employ anybody, and as it is our purpose in this bill to give to this bureau, and every other bureau, the clerical force necessary I shall have to object.

Mr. SMALL. I ask the gentleman to reserve his objection for just a moment.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. And I desire to insert in the Record the testimony before the committee when this bill was being made up.

Mr. SMALL. May I ask the gentleman whether in the hearing there was any statement made by Maj. Ladue, or anyone representing the War Department or office of the Chief of Engineers, that section 10 was not desired?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I asked Maj. Ladue this

You are familiar with section 10 of the rivers and harbors act?
Maj. LADUE. For 1912?
Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes, sir.
Maj. LADUE. Yes, sir; I am.
Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Where did that originate?
Maj. LADUE. I am unable to say positively where it originated. It was put in by the Senate committee when the rivers and harbors bill was under consideration. I was not present at the hearings on that bill, and I have not read them. I really do not know who is responsible for the provision, but I know that is where it was put in.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina asks unanimous consent to insert certain matters in his remarks. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Following is the statement referred to:

STATEMENT OF MAJ. WILLIAM B. LADUE, FROM THE OFFICE OF CHIEF OF ENGINEERS.

ENGINEERS.

Mr. Johnson. Major, your item is on page 154 of the bill. We will be glad to have you make any statement that you desire to make, if the notes are not as full as you would like them to be, in regard to these increases on page 154.

Maj. Ladde. The notes express briefly the reasons for the proposed increases. They are, first, a recommendation that the salary of the chief clerk be raised from $2,000 to $2,500, and, second, a recommendation for an increase of three in the clerical force.

Mr. Johnson. Is there anything else?

Maj. Ladde. As to the chief clerk, I would simply add to the notes that our present chief clerk has been in our office for 45 years. He has devoted his life to the service, and his present pay has been unchanged for about 25 years. He is a man of tact and courtesy and is an efficient and able man, thoroughly devoted to the interests of the service. He has a good deal of responsibility placed upon him. He is in charge of the general office administration.

Mr. Johnson. Do you mean to say that he has been a clerk there for 25 years without having any increase in pay?

Maj. Ladue. He has not been chief clerk all of that time, but he had the same salary before he was promoted to the position of chief clerk.

Mr. Johnson. But you mean to say that he has had no increase in 25 years?

Maj. Ladue. It is a condition that is not uncommon in our service.

Maj. Ladue. He has not been chief cierk all of that time, but he had the same salary before he was promoted to the position of chief cierk. Mr. Johnson. But you mean to say that he has had no increase in 25 years?

Maj. Ladue. It is a condition that is not uncommon in our service. Note.—Upon examining the office records it is found that the above statement with regard to the salary of the present chief cierk is not correct, his salary having been unchanged for 12½ years instead of 25 years as stated. An increase of $200 per annum made 12½ years ago (July 1, 1900) was, however, the only increase in his salary since July 1, 1874, a period of 38½ years. The salary of the position of chief cierk has been unchanged since July 1, 1871, a period of over 41 years, during which time there have been two incumbents of the position, the first serving from July 1, 1871, until his death on July 10, 1901, and the present incumbent serving from July 15, 1901, to the present date.

Mr. Johnson. The purpose is to promote somebody in increasing these clerks of class 3?

Maj. Ladue. We need an additional force to carry on our work. Our work has increased right along. An analysis of the figures showing the papers that go through the office, the increase in the number of the appropriations, as well as in the amounts of the appropriations, and in the expenditures, with the annual river and harbor bill and the general increase in all public work handled by our office, shows that this increase has been continuous, and it shows no signs of decreasing. It rather shows signs of increasing steadily. This means, of course, more work in our office in the handling of projects, plans, and estimates, looking after the execution of work, replying to inquiries, recording papers, taking care of the accounts, the examination of papers, and the preparation of financial statements, and so on. So that we have been really requiring an additional clerical force for some time. We need more men. We have recommended increases in the hower grades.

Mr. John

CLERKS UNDER AUTHORIZATION OF RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. Johnson. How many clerks have you under the authorization of the river and harbor bill in addition to those provided for in the legislative bill?

Maj. LADUE. Last year we carried 1 chief of division and 10 clerks under that authority.

Mr. Johnson. You have reference, I think, to the section that authorizes the expenditure of not exceeding $42,000. I mean what clerical services you have employed under the rivers and harbors act of 1912? Maj. Ladde. None. We have not done anything under that. Mr. Johnson. I am glad to hear that, because we may not always give you what you ask, but we do try to provide for all clerical services in the District of Columbia in this bill so that we can keep a record of it.

Maj. LADUE. Yes, sir.

Mr. JOHNSON. Now, do you desire any change in the section authorizing the employment of skilled draftsmen, civil engineers, etc., the expenditure not to exceed $42,000?

Maj. LADUE. No, sir: we are asking for no change in that. We would like that to be the same.

CLERKS PAID FROM LUMP-SUM APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. JOHNSON. In the last legislative bill there is a provision to the effect that people who are paid out of lump-sum appropriations shall not be paid a greater sum than the amounts paid for similar services during the preceding year. Has that embarrassed you any in your expenditures for this year?

Maj. LADUE. Well, it has not embarrassed us so far.

Mr. JOHNSON. Under what conditions would it embarrass you?

Maj. LADUE. The question, of course, turns entirely upon the interpretation of the words "similar services." If these words are narrowly interpreted to mean the same service that the individual man performed last year, it would, of course, as you see, absolutely bar any further promotion. We have not interpreted it that way and neither has the comptroller. It has been interpreted to permit promotions in the grades, when there are grades established, for the purpose of recognizing efficiency or increased value to the service. The place where it is most likely to worry us is in our field service. Of course the provision in the legislative act does not affect the field service, but the provision in the efficiency act, which is similar to the language in the legislative act, does affect our field service. But under our present interpretation it has not worried us, because we have interpreted it to mean that if anywhere in our field service we are paying draftsmen $1,800 a year, then anywhere else in the field service draftsmen at $1,200 can be promoted. It hink that is the intent of the provision, and therefore it has not worried us. The effect of it is to put a limit on the top.

Mr. JOHNSON, Have you had a construction of it from the Comptroller of the Treasury? Have you asked for his interpretation of the law?

law? Maj. law?
Maj. Ladue. We have not for our own departments, but I have seen several interpretations that he has rendered for other departments. You see it puts a limit on the top. All up through the grades we can work very well, but at the top you will find the man who will feel the pinch. If the services of the man at the top entitled him to an increase that we would be glad to give him, he would be barred by this provision.

SECTION 10, RIVERS AND HARBORS ACT.

[See also p. 88.]

Mr. Johnson. You are familiar with section 10 of the rivers and

Mr. Johnson. You are familiar with section 10 of the rivers and harbors act?

Maj. Ladue. For 1912?
Mr. Johnson. Yes, sir.
Maj. Ladue. Yes, sir; I am.
Mr. Johnson. Where did that originate?
Maj. Ladue. I am unable to say positively where it originated. It was put in by the Senate committee when the rivers and harbors bill was under consideration. I was not present at the hearings on that bill, and I have not read them. I really do not know who is responsible for the provision, but I know that is where it was put in.

Mr. Manny. Mr. Chairman will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from South Carolina yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. In the bill itself is contained that item, I think, that the gentleman refers to, of $42,000 from which may be paid the services of skilled draftsmen, civil engineers, and so forth; to carry into effect the various appropriations for rivers and harbors and surveys, to be paid from appropriations for this purpose, not to exceed in the total $42,000.

Now, the river and harbor section, section 10, covers the preparation for and consideration of river and harbor estimates and bills, for which there is no special emergency appropriation anywhere. Would it not be perfectly fair, with the repeal of sec-tion, to insert in this item that language so that within the limit of the $42,000 they could employ some one for the emergency work in the preparation of the estimates in bill? It will leave the control of the matter with the Committee on Appropriations, and will require them to estimate for it and give reasons for it, and it will not increase the amount.

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Illinois will pardon me, I think his suggestion ought to be accepted, because while I can not reconcile the statement of Maj. Ladue with that of the Chief of Engineers, I do know-because I heard Gen. Bixby make a statement to that effect—that in his opinion an emergency does exist every year for additional help in making up estimates.

Mr. MANN. Probably the amount would be trifling, and it would not increase the appropriations any to insert that language.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I have no objection to the language of the gentleman from Illinois because it is not our purpose to cripple any bureau of the Government.

We all understand that. If the gentleman will insert in the bill on page 72, line 7, after the word "surveys," the language, "and the preparation for and the consideration of river and harbor estimates and bills," I think it would be well, although I do not know whether that would cover it exactly or not. Probably it would need something additional. I think you had better return to that, if you want to do it.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that we return to this item after the gentleman from Illinois has had time to prepare the amendment.

Mr. SMALL. In answer to the gentleman from South Caro lina [Mr. Johnson], I do not understand, Mr. Chairman, that he consents to return to the item for the purpose of accepting a motion to repeal lines 14, 15, and 16, but to insert an amendment to the provision.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL] does not object to returning to that item for the purpose Without objection, that will be of making an amendment, done. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Bureau of Yards and Docks: Chief clerk, $2,250; draftsman and clerk, 1,800; clerks—1 of class 3, 1 of class 2, 2 of class 1, 1 at $1,100; 0; $1,000 each; assistant messenger; 3 messenger boys, at $600 each; laborers; in all, $20,390.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]

reserves a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. MANN. I notice, Mr. Chairman, that there are a number of increases of salary of a number of chief clerks of the Navy Department. While my attention was engaged otherwise I see they were passed over. I supposed that my colleague [Mr. Fowler] was going to take care of them. What is the reason for making these increases?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that all the chief clerks in the Navy Department were increased from $2,000 to $2,250. The recommenda-tion was to increase them to $2,500. The committee was fairly satisfied that the work required of a man in the position of a chief clerk in any of the bureaus of the Navy Department is such as could well justify the salary of $2,250. We believed that the salaries of the chief clerks in the Navy Department were very much less than the salaries of men doing corresponding work in other departments, and we increased all of them because we believed they merited the increase.

Mr. MANN. Well, is the office of Chief of Ordnance in the Navy Department so much more important than the office of Chief of Ordnance in the War Department?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There was not anything before us on the matter from the War Department, concerning which the gentleman has just asked, upon which we could operate. In both the War and Navy Departments wherever the estimates called for an increase for the chief clerks we allowed $250 instead of $500.

Mr. MANN. This is one of those cases, then, where virtue is not its own reward, and modesty does not pay. The Chief of Ordnance of the War Department, thinking it was not the policy of Congress to make increases of salaries, refrained from requesting an increase for his chief clerk. The chief clerk himself probably did not desire to be turned down, but wanted to comply with the spirit that he believed would be likely to actuate Congress, and therefore he did not ask for an increase for himself. He does not get an increase, although he is just as important to the Government and to the department as any-body. All those who asked for increases got them. I go on body. All those who asked for increases got them. I go on the theory, usually, that when you find a man who is doing good work and is modest enough not to be "hollering" about getting something more, you can afford to do something for him, rather than for the one who is always complaining and insisting that he ought to be better provided for.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Well, the gentleman from Illinois understands that where we are providing for 16,000 employees in this bill it is impossible for us to inquire into the merits of every employee unless they are brought to our attention.

Mr. MANN. I have no intention of complaining about the Committee on Appropriations, which does very efficient work, and I am always willing to compliment the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] on his work. And yet when the gentlemen are proposing to increase the salaries of chief clerks throughout certain branches of the governmental service, it seems to me I would not leave out one who evidently ought to have his salary increased if others are increased, because he has been modest enough not to kick about what he is getting.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

What became of my point of order? Mr. MANN.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman to withdraw his point of order.

Mr. MANN. I did not; but I will.

The CHAIRMAN. The gorder. The Clerk will read. The gentleman withdraws his point of

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

Office of the Secretary: Secretary of the Interior. $12,000: First Assistant Secretary, $5,000; Assistant Secretary, $4,500; chief clerk, including $500 as superintendent of buildings, who shall be chief executive officer of the department and who may be designated by the Secretary of the Interior to sign official papers and documents during the temporary absence of the Secretary and the Assistant Secretaries of the department, $4,000; assistant to the Secretary, $2,750; assistant attorneys—1 at $2,500; 2 special inspectors, whose employment shall be limited to the inspection of offices and the work in the several offices under the control of the Department of the Interior, at $2,500 each;

6 inspectors, at $2,500 each; chief disbursing clerk, $2,250; clerk in charge of supplies, $2,250; clerk in charge of mails, files, and archives, $2,250; clerk in charge of publications, $2,250; private secretary to the Secretary, $2,500; clerks—4 at $2,000 each; 13 of class 4, 18 of class 3, 21 of class 2, 24 of class 1, 3 at $1,000 each; returns office clerk, $1,600; female clerk, to be designated by the President, to sign land patents, $1,200; 8 copyists; multigraph operator, $900; assistant multigraph operator, $720; typewriter repairer, $900; 2 telephone switch-board operators; 9 messengers; 7 assistant messengers; 21 laborers; skilled mechanics—1 at $900, 1 at $720; 2 carpenters, at $900 each; plumber, $900; electrician, $1,000; laborer, $600; 6 laborers, at $480 each; packer, $660; 2 conductors of elevators, at $720 each; 8 charwomen; captain of the watch, $1,200; 40 watchmen; additional to 2 watchmen acting as lieutenants of watchmen, at $120 each; engineer, $1,200; assistant engineer, $1,000; 7 firemen; clerk to sign, under the direction of the Secretary, in his name and for him, his approval of all tribal deeds to allottees and deeds for town lots made and executed according to law for any of the Five Civilized Tribes of Indians in the Indian Territory, $1,200; in all, $275,570.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on this paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foster] reserves a point of order on the paragraph.

Mr. FOSTER. As I understand, this provides, on page 91, lines 4 and 5, for an additional attorney for the Interior Department. Is that correct?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No; there is no increase. There is a transfer.

Mr. FOSTER. Last year's bill, I think, provided for but one, as I understand it.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is no change in it. There is no increase whatever.

Mr. FOSTER. Last year the bill provided for an assistant attorney at $2,500. I do not find this additional attorney in last year's law. This seems to provide for two attorneys, but last year's bill appropriated for but one.

Mr. MANN. There is only one attorney provided for here.

Mr. FOSTER. In the bill I have it says:

Assistant attorneys-one, $2,500.

Mr. MANN. Assistant attorney—one, at $2,500. Mr. FOSTER. My bill says "assistant attorney

My bill says "assistant attorneys."

Mr. MANN. That is a heading.

What I was getting at was whether there was Mr. FOSTER. a provision in the law for one and this provided for an additional one.

Mr. MANN. That is a heading which is supposed to cover what comes after.

Mr. FOSTER. My colleague may be right about that.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. If the gentleman [Mr. Foster] will look at the punctuation he will see that there is only one provided for at $2,500. Then we provide for other forces under that heading. There is no change whatever in the paragraph.

Mr. FOSTER. This provides for only one assistant attorney?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina.

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the chairman of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Sparkman], I desire to offer an amendment on page 72. The CHAIRMAN. We have passed page 72.

Mr. SMALL. It was agreed that we should return to page 72 for this purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina requests unanimous consent to return to page 72 for the purpose of offering a certain amendment. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Let the clerk report the amendment.

Mr. FOSTER. Reserving the right to object, let us hear the amendment reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 72, in line 7, after the word "survey," insert the following: "Preparation for and the consideration of river and harbor estimates and bills.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL] asks unanimous consent to return to page 72 for the purpose of offering the amendment which has just been reported.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I have no doubt this amendment is all right.

Mr. FOSTER. I should like to reserve the right to object until I hear the gentleman's statement.

Mr. MANN. This is what we discussed a while ago.

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Chairman, by a paragraph of the bill on page 72 it is proposed to repeal section 10 of the river and harbor act of 1912 because of the indefiniteness of it, and because there was no limit upon the amount which might be expended. This amendment which I have offered gives to the Chief of Engineers the right to employ clerical help in the emergencies referred to in the original section of the river and harbor act sought to be repealed and removes the objectionable features, and is a satisfactory provision.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL]?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will now report the amend-

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 72, in line 7, after the word "survey," insert "preparation for and reconsideration of river and harbor estimates and bills."

The word "and" should be inserted before the Mr. MANN. word "preparation."

Mr. SMALL. I ask unanimous consent to insert the word "and," before the word "preparation," in the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For per diem in lieu of subsistence of two special inspectors, Department of the Interior, while traveling on duty, at a rate to be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior, not exceeding $4 per day, and for actual necessary expenses of transportation (including temporary employment of stenographers, typewriters, and other assistance outside of the District of Columbia, and for incidental expenditures necessary to the efficient conduct of examinations), to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, $4,500.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to inquire of the gentleman in charge of the bill about this item of inspectors at $4 a day. In one place in the bill I notice that the per diem is $3 a day and in another place $4 a day. I would like to inquire as to the reason for this difference.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There are some Government employees who are allowed $3 a day and others allowed $4 a day. Those that are allowed $3 are the inspectors who are out in the country, where their expenses are less than in the cities at expensive hotels.

Mr. COX of Indiana. As I understand, in the bill under consideration some are allowed $3 a day and others $4 a day.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes; and for that reason.

Mr. COX of Indiana. I would like to inquire further whether or not it is not the custom of the department in the Assistant Attorney General's Department to allow the full $4 a day?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I think they do allow the full amount.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Does not the gentleman feel that it would be just and proper to put all the per diem employees on the same basis?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No; as I stated a moment ago, the distinction is brought about by reason of the difference in the circumstances. If a man is required to go on Government business to large cities where hotels are expensive, he is put to more expense than when he is traveling in the country, where the people are hospitable and the expenses are smaller.

Mr. COX of Indiana. I want to state to the gentleman that a few years ago the post-office inspectors were allowed $4 per day, and they used the same argument, but finally the House came to the conclusion that $4 a day was too much, and they reduced it to $3 per day. I do not remember the exact amount of the saving that it brought to the Government, but it was something like $40,000 or $50,000 a year. I am disposed to believe that $3 a day is a plenty, and I believe they all ought to be treated alike. I can not see the justice of allowing one set of men $3 a day and another set $4 a day, because I recognize that they can conjure up some sort of argument to justify the $4 a day rate.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I have stated to the gentleman the reason why some get $4 a day and some $3 a day. It was thought that those in the country had less expense than those who have their work in the cities.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Where do these men travel, as a rule, who are provided for in the Assistant Attorney General's office? What are their duties?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is nothing of that sort in that office. The people the gentleman speaks of are under the Secretary of the Interior himself.

Mr. COX of Indiana. That is right; I was looking at the wrong paragraph. Where do the inspectors in the Interior Department usually travel?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. They travel in all publicland States.

Mr. COX of Indiana. That is altogether in the western part of the country?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes; the land offices where they are required to go are located in the cities.

Mr. COX of Indiana. I understand that, but all the land offices are not located in large cities.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No: but they are all

Mr. COX of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana withdraws his pro forma amendment.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Now, Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out, in line 23, page 92, the figure "4" and insert in lieu thereof the figure "3," so that it will read "$3 per day." the figure "3," so that it will read "$3 per day."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 23, page 92, strike out the figure "3" and insert the figure "4," so that it will read "$3 per day."

Mr. COX of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to be parsimonious, but I think $3 a day for these men is plenty. realize that an argument can be made to justify it on different grounds, but at the same time I do not believe it is needed. I believe the economy which will be brought about as a result would be just, wise, and equitable to the people of this country, and I think that the amendment I have offered ought to obtain.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, these inspectors are in the land offices in public-land States. Their business takes them to Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, and a large part of their time they are obliged to travel from one city to another, living in Pullman cars, and it has not been very long since that item was increased from $3 to $4 a day because it was impossible for them to subsist on $3 a day.

·The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana.

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

The Clerk read as follows:

Hereafter the right of review by the Secretary of the Interior of the action of the Commissioner of Pensions in relation to claims for Army and Navy pensions, or in relation to the payment of Army and Navy pensions, shall be limited and confined to questions of law.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. I observe this limits the appeal to the Assistant Secretary of the Interior to matters of law and prevents him from going any further in settling an appeal in a pension claim.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the Commissioner of Pensions states that only 2 per cent of all the cases appealed are reversed on questions either of law or fact. He believes that the force in the Pension Office is better qualified to pass upon the facts in an application for pension than probably any other force that could be gotten together. There is no reason why there should be appeals upon questions of fact. The Commissioner of Pensions is deeply interested in this subject, is familiar with all the work in the Pension Office, having risen from a subordinate position to the head of the bureau, and he thinks no appeals should be allowed on questions of fact.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I have very high regard for the honesty and integrity and ability of Mr. Davenport, the Commissioner of Pensions, and believe that his duties are discharged in a satisfactory way so far as he is able to oversee that work, but it has occurred to me that since they have in the department a law division as well as a medical division there is no reason why questions of law should be considered on appeal any more than medical questions, as well as questions of fact. For instance, a local medical board examines a pensioner, and that board gives him a certain rating, which is provided for in the law as a part of their duty. That finding goes to the medical board in the Pension Office. That board passes upon the case of the pensioner, and in doing so may determine the case of the pensioner and in doing so may determine from the report of the local board that examined the pensioner that he is not entitled to the amount that is recommended by the board at home, in the community where the pensioner resides. I may be wrong, but it occurs to me that on an appeal on a question of that kind the pensioner ought to have the right to have his case reviewed so far as those facts are concerned as well as on the questions of law.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman from Illinois understands that the men in the Pension Office have had years of experience and training in passing upon questions of fact of that nature, and he will understand that when an appeal is taken to the Secretary of the Interior the men who constitute the appellate court, so to speak, are lawyers, and, while quite familiar with the law, have no special fitness for passing on facts in a pension case.

Mr. FOSTER. I would suggest that if that appeal board is composed entirely of lawyers, then the board ought to be changed. There ought to be others on the board who would be able to judge more particularly of medical facts as well as matters of law.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I am told they have a medical expert as well,

Mr. COX of Indiana. Does the Secretary of the Interior recommend this legislation also?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I do not know what his views on that question are. I have stated the views of the Commissioner of Pensions.

Mr. FOSTER. It has occurred to me that the pensioner should have a right to have his case on appeal reviewed as to matters of fact. If you are going to say that the men in the Pension Bureau are more able to judge of a pension case, then why have any appeal at all? Or if he has a right to have an appeal, why not let that appeal consider all the surroundings of that particular case?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman will understand that these questions have been settled so often that there are very few appeals necessary now. Under recent legislation the difficulty of the Pension Office is a mere matter of calculating how long a soldier has served. It depends upon how long he was in the service as well as upon the question of disability

Mr. FOSTER. I do not agree with the gentleman on that point at all, because under the pension law lately passed in one clause there is a provision for $30 a month when the pensioner is able to show by medical evidence that the disease or wounds contracted in the service are such as to prevent him from performing manual labor, regardless of age or time he served. In that case, if he is 65 years of age and served nine months or a year, then the question is whether he is entitled to $30 a month under the provisions of that law, and it seems to me if he is dissatisfied with the action of the Pension Commissioner that he should have a right to appeal his case to the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, if we are going to have any appeal

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I will say, Mr. Chairman, that this is legislation and is subject to a point of order.

Mr. FOSTER. I have read the hearings and know what Mr.

Davenport said.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I have great confidence in the Commissioner of Pensions, and I think his judgment is of great value, and I would as soon follow him as anybody I

Mr. FOSTER. I will say to the gentleman from South Carolina I believe I have as much confidence in the Commissioner of Pensions as he has, and I have a very high regard for his honesty, integrity, and his judgment, and yet I submit I might have an opinion of my own in reference to this matter which would vary with the Commissioner of Pensions without doubting his ability, his honesty, or his integrity.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois withdraw the point of order?

Mr. FOSTER. No; I insist on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For per diem, when absent from home and traveling on duty outside the District of Columbia, for special examiners or other persons employed in the Bureau of Pensions detailed for the purpose of making special investigations pertaining to said bureau, in lieu of expenses for subsistence, not exceeding $3 per day, and for actual and other necessary expenses, including telegrams, $215,000.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. May I ask the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson], in reference to the disbursing clerk's office which pays pensions, how the cost of that compares with the present cost of paying pensions? Also as to what is to become of the clerks in the various pension agencies? Then I would also like to know, if I may, whether this provision about filling vacan-cles only to the extent of 25 per cent will not injuriously affect the disbursing clerk's office.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, in reply to the several questions of the gentleman from Illinois I will say that the disbursing clerk provided for here is provided for in the law that abolished the pension agencies throughout the

Yes; I am familiar with that. What is the cost proposed for paying pensions under the consolidated office here and the present cost of paying pensions through the various pension agencies?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The difference is $131,100.

Mr. MANN. More?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It will be that much less under the new arrangement.

Mr. MANN. That is, it is that much more now than under the new arrangement?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes. Now, in answer to the question as to what becomes of the clerks who were in the various pension agencies throughout the country, it is provided that they shall be transferred to the office at Washington. There are 300 of them. Some of them do not care to come to We have provided for the number that the Com-Washington. missioner of Pensions believes that he will need and all that he believes will come to Washington.

Mr. MANN. Well, can they be transferred to Washington? Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes; the law specifically provides for that, as I understand.

Mr. MANN. The law we passed last session does the gentle-

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. They are in the classified service, and they will be transferred under the rules for transferring employees from one place to another. The reason for putting in the clause that only 25 per cent of the vacancies shall be filled is this: There has been for many years in the appropriation bill language to the effect that none of the vacancies in the Pension Office shall be filled, because the work was growing rapidly less. Under the recent legislation increasing pensions it was necessary to increase the force. The commissioner thought, therefore, it would be better not to allow all vacancies to remain, but to allow him to fill 25 per cent in order that there may be no difficulty in having sufficient force.

Of course there will not be any less work prob-Mr. MANN. ably on the disbursing clerk's office. Is it contemplated, then, that the places of clerks dropped out of the disbursing clerk's office shall be filled by transferring them from the general Pension Office?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. MANN. The work of the disbursing clerk's office is not likely to decrease very rapidly or for some time. templated that as clerks drop out their places will be filled by transferring from other portions of the Pension Office?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman understands there are 250 people who will be brought here from the agencies throughout the country, and that those gentlemen primarily will work in the disbursing clerk's office, but it was thought that probably the disbursing would not require the full time of all of these people, and we inserted a provision in the bill that when not engaged in that work they might be employed upon the general work of the office. It is not thought that the provision that only 25 per cent of the vacancies shall be filled during the next fiscal year will embarrass the Pension Office in any way whatever. I would call to the gentleman's attention page 197 of the hearings, where the following occurred:

Mr. Johnson of South Carolina. Is it proposed, Mr. Davenport, to bring from the pension agencies to Washington clerks who are now employed in those agencies if they desire to come?

Mr. Davenport. All that desire to come and are efficient. There are some very old clerks we would not think of bringing here.

Mr. Johnson of South Carolina. What proportion of the clerks in the agencies do you anticipate will come to Washington, or have you any data that would enable you to state it?

Mr. Davenport. More will come than are appropriated for.

I thought he said 250.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] reserve a point of order?

Mr. MANN. No.; I do not. I was trying to eliminate the word "dollars" from the bill. I am not quite through yet, unless my time has expired. May I ask the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] what information he has?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. If there is any danger of the force in the disbursing office being impaired by reason of that clause of the bill, I am willing to transpose lines 13 to 21, so as to precede the disbursing clerk's section, and let it apply to the other portion of the force only.

Mr. MANN. And insert the word "above."

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent at the end of line 3, page 97, to insert the language beginning on line 13, page 97, and ending on line 21, page 97, as an amendment.

Mr. MANN. And insert after the word "herein," at the end of line 15, the word "above."

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. And insert after the word "herein," at the end of line 15, the word "above."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] asks unanimous consent to return to page 97 and offer an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 97, after line 13, insert the following:

"During the fiscal year 1914 not more than 25 per cent of the vacancies occurring in the classified service of the Bureau of Pensions herein above provided for shall be filled except by promotion or demotion from among those in the classified service in said bureau. And the salaries or compensation of all places which may not be filled as herein 4 bove provided for shall not be available for expenditure, but shall lapse and shall be covered into the Treasury."

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Now, on page 97, beginning with line 13, I move to strike out down to and including line 91

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 97, strike out all of lines 13 to 21, inclusive.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

For necessary traveling expenses of the commissioner in studying educational systems, visiting educational institutions, and attending meetings of educational associations, societies, and other organizations for the purpose of collecting and disseminating information respecting educational conditions, $1,500.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman-

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on this paragraph. I would like some information. I refer to the top of the first paragraph on page 101.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The Commissioner of Education desired the committee to give him $20,000 for the purpose of paying the traveling expenses of himself and his experts throughout the country. It is necessary that the Commissioner of Education and those representing him should do some traveling, and we allowed $1,500 for that purpose. There is legislation pending in both branches of Congress which would probably largely increase the activities of that bureau, and we did not feel disposed to anticipate the action of Congress

Mr. FOSTER. The gentleman's committee was very kind in giving him one-twentieth of what he asked.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Fifteen hundred dollars is more than one-twentieth of what he asked.

Mr. FOSTER. Well, it seems to me if we start on this sort of work there will be no end to the amount of traveling the Commissioner of Education will do over the United States

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. This limits him.

Mr. FOSTER. But it limits him and those under him to the extent of $1,500. He does not have any agricultural colleges to visit. I believe I shall insist on the point of order.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It is subject to a point of order

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foster] makes a point of order, page 101, lines 1 to 6, inclusive. The point of order is sustained. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Postal Savings System: For the following, now authorized and being paid from a general appropriation: Director, $5,000; assistant director, $3,000; 2 chiefs of division, at $2,500 each; 2 assistant chiefs of division, at $2,000 each; clerks—10 of class 4, 15 of class 3, 25 of class 2, 50 of class 1, 50 at $1,000 each, 20 at $900 each; 2 messengers; 4 assistant messengers; 3 laborers; 3 pages at $480 each; in all, $229,980.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I raise a point of order on that paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]

raises a point of order on that paragraph.

Mr. MANN. I notice, Mr. Chairman, as to the postal-savings banks, that there is provided a specific salary for the director at $5,000, which may or may not be too much. It may be too little, for all I know. But it is the only $5,000 position in the Post Office Department, I believe, where the incumbent is not an assistant to the Postmaster General. I suppose this office is under one of the Assistant Postmasters General.

Wherever they create an office and pay its employees out of a lump sum they usually pay much higher salaries than anywhere else in the department. In this case the office was payable out of a lump-sum appropriation, and the salary of the director was fixed at $5,000. A $5,000 salary for this office is not at all on a plane with the other salaries in the Post Office Department, either of those superior to this office or on an equality with this office or inferior to this office. chasing agent of the Post Office Department is fully as portant as the director of the postal-savings banks. T are many other places in the Post Office Department that are equally important. I suppose the committee did not care to assume the responsibility of changing the salary and so took it the way it was,

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman from Illinois has already stated that when the postal-savings law was passed a lump-sum appropriation was made to carry on the Under that lump-sum appropriation this division was created by the Postmaster General, who fixed the salaries.

The salary of the director was placed at $5,000. In order that this committee might know the number of people employed and the salaries paid, we directed that they should furnish us with a list of the employees and of the salaries, and that they should be carried hereafter on the statutory roll. In accordance with that law they made their estimates this year. We took the force they had, and we did not feel justified in changing this salary, because while it looks as though $5,000 is a large sum for the head of a division, we realize that the deposits now amount to $28,000,000, I believe, and they will grow from year to year.

Mr. MANN. Well, that is probably true. A big man ought to be at the head of every division. In the property of Money Orders the superintendent gets a salary of $3,500 a year. I believe the money orders amount to several hundred million dollars a year-close to a billion dollars a year. I do not know whether this salary is too small or whether the duties are much more onerous with reference to the director of the postal savings banks. I do not say that the salary of $5,000 is too much, but it is too much in proportion to the other salaries that are paid in the Post Office Department.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. If it is, it simply demonstrates what some of us have all along believed, that lump-sum appropriations ought not to be made, but that the employees ought to be provided for specifically, as we try to do in this bill.

Mr. MANN. Yes; but it is inevitable to make lump-sum appropriations under certain circumstances, like those surrounding the postal savings-bank establishment. Then the question is, when the matter comes to be fixed by Congress, what Congress will do, because Congress is not bound by what the department does in regard to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

Office of the Attorney General; Attorney General, $12,000; Solicitor General, $10,000; assistant to the Attorney General, $7,000; 7 Assistant Attorneys General, at $5,000 each; Assistant Attorney General of the Post Office Department, $5,000; Solicitor of Internal Revenue, $5,000; Solicitor for the Department of State, $5,000; 4 attorneys, at $5,000 each, one of whom shall have charge of all condemnation proceedings in the District of Columbia and supervise the examination of titles and matters arising from such condemnation proceedings in the District of columbia and supervise the examination of titles and matters arising from such condemnation proceedings in which the United States shall be a party or have an interest, and no special attorney or counsel, or services of persons other than of those provided for herein, shall be employed for such purposes; attorneys—1 $3,750, 3 at $3,500 each, 1 $3,250, 12 at $3,000 each, 2 at $2,750 each, 5 at 2,500 each, 1 $3,500, 2 at $3,000 each, 2 at $2,750 each, 5 at 2,500 each, 1 $2,400, 2 at $2,000 each, 2 at $2,750 each, 5 at 2,500 each, 1 $4,400, 2 at $2,000 each, 2 assistant examiner of titles, $2,000; chief clerk and ex officio superintendent of the buildings, $3,000; superintendent of buildings, $5,00; private secretary and assistant to the Attorney General, $3,600; clerk to the Attorney General, $1,600; stenographer to the Solicitor General, $1,600; law clerks—3 at $2,000 each, 2 of class 4; clerk in office of the Solicitor of Internal Revenue, $1,800; attorney in charge of pardons, $3,000; superintendent of prisons, $4,000; disbursing clerk, $2,750; appointment clerk, $2,000; chief of division of Investigation, $3,500; examiners—2 at $2,500 each, 4 at $2,250 each, 2 at $2,000 each; 3 at $1,800 each; 1 of class 1, 14 at $1,000 each, 21 at $9,00 each; chief messengers, 7 laborers; 7 watchmen; engineer, $1,200; 2 assistant engineers, at $900 each; 4 firemen; 2 conductors of the elevator, at $7,000; packer, $9,000; messenger, $0,000; 5 messenge gation have been reduced. That is the division, I believe, that does the secret-service work.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It is simply a transposi-tion. There is no change. The Department of Justice made no request for any increases or decreases. They simply have current law, and wherever it appears that any change is made it is due to the fact that somebody has been transferred.

Mr. MANN. Where has this item been transferred to?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We put them in the Division of Accounts, because the last legislative bill provided that in the Division of Accounts an administrative audit should take place.

Mr. MANN. You have transferred an examiner at $2,500 to the Division of Accounts, with three clerks? Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I would not desire to have the Division of Investigation unduly interfered with, because I noted the other day, with considerable interest and some pride, that under the so-called Mann white-slave act there had already been 335 convictions.

If there is anybody on earth who deserves to receive a penitentiary sentence it is some designing chap who has monkeyed with the buzz saw and violated that white-slave law.

The CHAIRMAN. The clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

To enable the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to provide and pay for the medical examination of employees of the United States receiving compensation for injuries under the provisions of the act of May 30, 1908, as directed by section 5 of said act, and for clerical assistance in its administration, and for subsistence, transportation, and traveling expenses of officers and employees of the Bureau of Labor while traveling on duty away from their homes and outside of the District of Columbia while engaged in the investigation of claims arising under the provisions of said act, $3,000.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I desire to inquire of the gentleman in charge of the bill whether or not there is any schedule of fees fixed by the department for the payment of these doctors?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No. sir: I do not think so; but it was thought that under certain circumstances it was best that a medical examination should be made promptly, and we allowed the small sum of $3,000 for that purpose.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Was this item carried in last year's bill?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes. Mr. COX of Indiana. What I wish to know is if there is any schedule of fees regularly fixed for the payment of physicians when they make these examinations?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No; not so far as I know. Mr. COX of Indiana. Can the gentleman tell how they are paid, how the amount is arrived at? Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The doctors make the examination and make their charges.

Mr. COX of Indiana. How much was appropriated last year? Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Three thousand dollars. Mr. COX of Indiana. Was the entire sum used last year? Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I do not know whether there was any of it turned back into the Treasury or not. Last year we asked for all of these items, but this year we have not received them. I will say to the gentleman that we had to make up this bill before many of the reports required by law to come to Congress had been printed.

Mr. COX of Indiana. I am not criticizing the gentleman's

Mr. COX of Indians. I am not criticizing the gentleman's bill. On the contrary, I am commending it.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. When we made up this bill last year we knew in every case whether all of an appropriation had been used or any of it had been turned back into the Treasury, but we do not know this year.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Does the gentleman know how much of the appropriation for this fiscal year has been used up to this time?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Only between $200 and $300 of the $3,000 has been used up to this time, and they have paid out under that law approximately a million of dollars for injuries.

Mr. COX of Indiana. I withdraw the pro forma amendment. Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of making an inquiry. I desire to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill whether it is the object of these medical examiners to get information concerning these injuries for the purpose of relieving the injured, or is it for the purpose of aiding the Government?
Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The purpose is to ascertain the facts, so as to determine whether or not the Government is liable under the law.

Mr. FOWLER. Without any reference to relief for the injured?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We have provided by law for relief to the injured, and this medical examination is to determine our liability and the extent of it.

Mr. FOWLER. But not for the immediate or temporary relief of the injured.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No; because we have no doctor right on the spot.

Mr. FOWLER. I desire to say to the gentleman that I am asking for information. I desire to know if the medical examiner, in going to visit the injured person, does so for the purpose of examining him so as to give him medical relief?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Oh, no. There are only two men employed under this appropriation. Where the department, for reasons satisfactory to itself, wants some additional information besides what it has, and believes there ought to be some investigation made, one of these doctors is sent to investigate the particular case, and this $3,000 is appropriated for that purpose. A very small part of it has been used so far during the present fiscal year, but it may be needed.

Mr. FOWLER. Do these examiners go to every injured person or only in special instances where they are directed by the department to go?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I think they go only where they are directed by the department.

Mr. FOWLER. I thank the gentleman for the information. Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I fear the gentleman in charge of the bill, the gentleman from South Carolina, has not kept track of the calendar. would like to suggest to him that this is the seventh day of the week, and that we have been in session quite continuously all of these days, working hard. I think for the first time in my recollection we really began to work on the second day of the session and kept it up until nearly 6 o'clock at night. In other words, this is Saturday evening, and there is no quorum here.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Well, Mr. Chairman, I am at the mercy of the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. I do not think we can get through with this bill to-night. I think in justice to the Members of the House that the gentleman in charge of the bill who always wants to get through ought to be willing to waive his personal convenience in the interest of the rest of the Members. Last night we worked until after 5 o'clock, although it was understood that we would quit at 5. We can not finish the bill to-night anyway.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, of course it is perfectly obvious that no quorum is present, and while I was anxious to complete this bill this afternoon, it seems impossible, under the circumstances, to do it, and I now move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly the committee rose, and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Garner, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 26680) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

MEMORIAL TO THOMAS JEFFERSON.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has received a letter of great interest to the House, and does not know what to do with it, except to have it read and referred to a committee. Without objection, the Clerk will read the communication.

The Clerk read as follows:

DECEMBER 5, 1912,

The Speaker of the House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SIR: With the approval of Congress conferred by the sundry civil act of March 4, 1909, the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co. has erected upon the World's Fair site at a cost of $450,000 a memorial to Thomas Jefferson in commemoration of the acquisition of the Louisiana Territory. The statue of Jefferson will be unveiled and the memorial structure will be dedicated on the one hundred and tenth anniversary of the signing of the Louisiana purchase treaty, the 30th of April, 1913. The trustees respectfully request the presence and participation of a committee of the House of Representatives.

Respectfully,

David R. Francis. President

DAVID R. FRANCIS, President.

The letter was referred to the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas, chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, by direction of that committee, reported the bill (H. R. 26874) making appropriation for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, which, with accompanying papers, was ordered printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. (H. Rept. 1265.)

Mr. MANN reserved all points of order on the bill.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to give notice that I will call up this bill immediately after the disposition of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman from Texas state whether any arrangement has been made with reference to calling up the contested-election case next Tuesday? The gentleman from Ohio gave notice that he would call up a contested-election case on that day.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I was not aware of that. The SPEAKER. The Chair will inquire if any arrangement has been made about debate?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. None whatever.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I now move that the House adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 33 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Monday, December 9, 1912, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination and survey of St. Francis River from its mouth to the mouth of L'Anguille River, and L'Anguille River from its mouth to the city of Marianna, Ark. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution referred to will be read by the Secretary.

The Secretary read the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 78) proposing an amendmnet to the Constitution of the United States, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following be proposed as an amendment to the first paragraph of section 1 of Article II of the Constitution of the United States, which will be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States, namely: Amend said paragraph to read as follows:

lows:

"The Executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of six years and shall be ineligible to a second term, and, together with the Vice President, who shall hold for a like term, and shall also be ineligible to a second term, be elected as follows."

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, this proposed amendment to the Constitution is a matter of grave importance and should be considered with the utmost care. Every proposal to amend the fundamental law that has stood the test of time for more than a century should be regarded as most important. By this resolution we are proposing to submit to the people, represented by their respective legislatures, the question of the limitation of the term of service of the President of the United States and a provision that will make it impossible for any citizen to be a candidate for the office for a second time. On the one hand it is claimed, as I am about to maintain, that such a limitation of the term of service by any one man as President of the United States is in the interest of the people and necessary for the public welfare. I go further and contend that it is better for the incumbent, once elected, that he should be made ineligible for a second term. On the other hand, it is strenuously insisted by some Members of this body that such an amendment if adopted will be an unjust limitation of the right of the people to elect whom they please as their President and to reelect him as often as they please. These latter views, conscientiously entertained by Senators, are entitled to frank and fair consideration and should be given their full weight in determining this question. I approach the discussion of the subject in that spirit.

I am not one of those who believe that amendments of the Constitution of the United States should be made easy. I would not, as I view the situation and the conditions that prevail, add anything to the facilities now afforded for amending that great instrument, framed by our forefathers in their wisdom for the preservation and perpetuation of the rights and liberties of the people. But this affords no reason for a failure to make necessary amendments in the manner and under the safeguards of the Constitution itself.

I have no sympathy for the sentiment abroad in the country that the Constitution should be treated as subservent to the present will or sentiment of the majoritant to-day that may be the minority of to-morrow. Nor do I subscribe to the doctrine, openly declared, that there should be no constitutional limitation upon the will of the people as that will is supposed to exist at any given time. We are living in a time of supreme unrest, discontent, and dissatisfaction with things as they are. There is strong reason for this condition of public sentiment. rest, discontent, and dissatisfaction with things as they are. There is strong reason for this condition of public sentiment. Things have gone wrong in this country. We all recognize that fact. There is no concealing it from any thoughtful and observant man. Conditions need to be changed. Who is to change them, and how? Obviously, the people. And just as obviously, it seems to me, this change must be brought about by peaceful, legal, and legitimate means under the limitations and restraints of the Constitution. Any effort to remedy evil conditions affecting the rights of the people in any other way would lead to anarchy and ultimately to the overthrow of the Government. The very fact that this spirit of revolt against existing conditions prevails renders these restraints upon unlicensed power more than ever necessary. The demand that the Government should be returned to the people is just and right. The people have not ruled their own country or controlled its affairs in the recent past. But the vastly more important question is, How are the people to rule? Shall it be by the unlimited and unrestrained will of the majority without regard to the reasonable regulations and restraints of the fundamental law, under which this Nation has grown and prospered all these years, or shall it be according to the law of the land that is intended to protect the rights and liberties of the people?

POPULAR GOVERNMENT.

We hear much these days of popular government, of democracy, and the rule of the people. What do these advocates of popular government, so called, mean by that term? What do they mean when they cry out for a democracy? Do they really mean that they favor the establishment of a government controlled directly by the body of the people without the intervention of representatives chosen by them and without constitutional restraints; in other words, as democracy is defined, "the political system in which government is directly exercised by the people collectively"? They must mean this, or their cry for a popular government or a democracy means nothing more than the cry of the demagogue for votes. Unless they mean just this, their demand is not sincere. We now have a democracy defined as "a commonwealth in which the people as a whole legislate through elected representatives," known and recognized as a "democratic Republic."

What we need are just laws, strictly observed, guarded, and enforced, that will secure to the voter the free and independent use of the ballot unmolested and unafraid. This assumes, of course, that the voter will use the franchise intelligently, independently, and honestly. If he does not, he is unworthy to be a voter or an American citizen. If he uses the power given him corruptly or otherwise improperly, he should be deprived of the franchise altogether. Any corrupt use of it or corrupt or forcible interference with it should be severely and certainly punished. The direct primary and general elections under the Australian secret ballot system are the best means yet devised for the protection of the voters and elections. Such reasonable and just laws will insure to the people everything necessary to the full protection of their rights. To this should be added the initiative, referendum, and recall, limited and guarded in such way as to prevent, as far as possible, any abuse or misuse of them. If the people exercise their right of choosing their representatives intelligently and wisely, the other remedies will be unnecessary. If they nominate and elect competent and honest men to represent them, there will be no call for direct action by resort to the initiative or referendum. These remedies should only be used when legislative representatives fall or refuse to act when necessary for the public good or act corruptly or against the public interests. The recall can be justly resorted to only for similar reasons and should never be applied to judicial officers.

All of these remedies are beneficial and necessary to the full control of affairs by the people, but are subject to gross abuses that may make them worse than useless. They should be used only to protect the rights of the people to fair and honest representation and to preserve the Government as a democratic Republic. In most of the States we have all these remedies now. I am afraid that they are not sufficiently guarded to confine them to legitimate uses. This is needful, and I hope will come in time. We can not go beyond this with safety.

Does any Senator on this floor maintain that this Government should be converted into a pure democracy, where the people legislate and perform all other governmental functions as a Does anyone sincerely believe that a nation composed of a hundred millions of people could be governed in any such way? I can not believe it. The attempt would be ruinous and suicidal. To advocate such a change in government is revolutionary and dangerous.

Sir, the troubles that are besetting us as a Nation are not the result of our form of government. Our form of government is ample for the protection of the people. The constitutional guaranties are sufficient to protect the life, liberty, and property of the citizen. The fault does not lie there. It lies in the fact that our form of government is perverted and disregarded; that the Constitution is trampled under foot, often by constituted authority, and constantly and systematically by privilege-seeking and organized wealth. The poor man is denied his rights, not because the form of government is defective or inadequate, but because of the powerful, unrestrained, and corrupt encroachments of combined wealth on the one hand, and the indifference of the masses of the people to their civic duties and corruption and crime in politics by both rich and poor on the other, by which the right of the franchise is prostituted to base ends. The great corporation corrupts the ballot box for gain and the voter sells his vote for the same purpose. A change in the form of government will not make men, whether rich or poor, more houest or less greedy. The man who sells his own vote or buys the vote of another is as much a traitor to his country as the man who takes up arms against it. If we are going to maintain a free Republic that will preserve the liberties of the people, we must maintain an honest Government. To maintain an honest Government we must maintain the honesty of our people. All power emanates from them, and if the source of power is corrupt the Government will be corrupt.

Sir, when I think of the extent to which the franchise in the hands of the voters of this country has been corrupted and bartered away I tremble for the future of my country. What are we to expect when the voters of some communities of the great and enlightened State of Ohio have sold their votes and been disfranchised therefor to such an extent that there are hardly qualified electors enough to hold the elections, and when the neighboring State of Illinois and the proud and ancient State of Virginia have furnished similar cases of wholesale delinquencies? We have every reason to suppose that this mode of corrupting the ballot is prevalent in greater or less degree all over the country. Such practices have lowered the standard of citizenship, debauched the electors, and done much to destroy the sense of obligation to duty in public office.

ELECTION TO SECOND TERM CAUSE OF CORRUPTION.

Mr. President, I am persuaded that the amendment now proposed will, if adopted, do much to remedy these evil and threatening conditions. The effort to elect a President to a second term is a prolific source of political corruption, neglect of official duty, and betrayal of trust on the part of public servants. It is degrading to the President himself, and brings his great office into disrespect, often contempt. The President has come to be regarded as the head of his party, not as a candidate only, but as President, and not as the head of the Nation. It is a most pernicious doctrine. He has the power of appointment of thousands of Federal officers in every part of the country. Practically, in making these appointments he acts as the head of his party and not as President. If he is reelected the appointees may reasonably expect to retain their offices. A large part of his time that should be devoted to the public service is given over to politics and the effort to secure his reelection. He is regarded by his appointees as their political chief, to whom they owe allegiance because he ap-pointed them. They are tempted to serve him rather than the country. He expects every man he appoints to support his political aspirations. To fail is to be treacherous and ungrateful. They so regard it, and so does he. The White House is turned into the headquarters of a political party, where a press bureau is maintained in the interest of the political chief and leader of his party who is for the time being the President of the United States. The members of his Cabinet become his political advisers. In this they are not serving their country, but the seeker after a second term. The appointees in the immediate service of the President become his political aids and devote much of their time, paid for by the Government, to his service as political leader and candidate for reelection. It is a vicious system, that can not be denounced too strongly or too often. The people of a free Republic should not submit to it for a day. Every lover of his country should speak out against it and support any measure intended and reasonably calculated to put an end to it. If a President were limited to one term, and rendered ineligible to a second election, there would be no incentive or temptation to appoint men to office with a view to their support of him as a candidate for a second term. He would need no political army. As a political leader he would be useless. He would have no motive or desire other than to do his duty as President and make for himself an honorable record as a public official. We have had some highly honorable men in the White House, men who would have condemned the use of patronage by another for his political advancement, but there is not one of them who has been a candidate for reelection who has not willingly profited by such conditions. Not one of them, I believe, but would have regarded it as an act of treachery on the part of one of his appointees to oppose or even fail to support his candidacy for reelection. Every man holding an office by the appointment of the President has come, by common consent on the part of politicians, to be one of his political supporters owing him personal allegiance. This condition alone should assure the passage of this resolution by Congress and its ratification by the States.

But, sir, there are other considerations favorable to this proposed amendment that appeal to me with equal if not greater force. The President is more powerful than any king of modern times. Of later years he has assumed and exercised powers that do not justly belong to him. He has made himself an active and, not infrequently, a controlling part of the law-making power. He has not been content to recommend the enactment of laws; he has demanded their passage, and brought to bear all the power and influence of his great office to compel their enactment. This is a plain and dangerous usurpation of power and a violation of the spirit of the Constitution. The longer one man remains President the greater is his inclination to usurp this power.

The authority rightly vested in the President, to see that the laws are executed, is equally subject to abuse. Congress may enact a law. The President may nullify it or destroy its effect, either entirely or as affecting individuals, by a mere word. He may direct the Department of Justice to enforce a law or withhold its enforcement, and the Attorney General will obey. The Sherman antitrust law is an example in point. It defines what shall constitute a trust and makes the maintenance of a trust a crime. In any State in the Union it would be the duty of any prosecuting officer to whose attention a violation of the statute is directed to prosecute the offender. It is as much his duty to enforce the law as it is for the delinquent to obey it. So it should be in the case of the Attorney General of the United States, but it is not so regarded. If the President does not direct him to prosecute, that is looked upon as sufficient excuse for not doing so. If the President directs him not to enforce the law, or not to enforce it against a given corporation, that is conclusive. This very thing has been done, evidently in the interest of one great corporation or another. It has been made the subject of adverse comment in the late political campaign.

FAVORS CRANTED TO TRUSTS.

Now, sir, what is the natural result of favorable or unfavorable action affecting a corporation when the incumbent of the presidential office becomes a candidate for reelection? Would you expect such a corporation, thus favored and protected from prosecution by order of the President, to oppose his renomination and election? We are not without evidence of the effect of such action on succeeding elections. The great Harvester Trust, one of the worst and most oppressive of its kind, was signally favored by Mr. Roosevelt, when President, in this respect. It was not prosecuted for violation of the Sherman antitrust law, because Roosevelt ordered otherwise. What was the natural result? When Roosevelt again became a candidate W. Perkins became his ardent supporter and chief financial backer. Perkins was largely interested in the Harvester Trust. What else could one expect? Perkins knew, by actual demonstration, that his company would be safe against just prosecution if Roosevelt were elected, unless he should change his mind. And he would be much less likely to change his views if the Harvester Trust or its stockholders should lend him their support. The same comment might be made as to the

Mr. President, I am not saying that Mr. Roosevelt acted out of improper motives in dealing with the Harvester Trust or the Steel Trust. He may have been perfectly satisfied that the course taken by him was the proper and just course. It is not my purpose to judge or condemn him personally. I call attention to these instances of presidential favor and what followed them as illustrating the power that exists in the hands of a President, in his first term, to secure his election to a second Whether rightly or wrongly exercised, the power is It is practically unrestrained. The temptation to use it in such way as to secure a reelection is manifestly great. That the action of the President in dealing with the question of the prosecution of corporations alleged to be trusts may and almost certainly will affect his prospects most profoundly as a candidate for reelection can not be justly denied. The power that these great aggregations of wealth have exercised in controlling elections in the past is beyond question. As political campaigns are conducted, money is regarded as one of the most powerful factors in the struggle. That millions of money have powerful factors in the struggle. That millions of money have been supplied by these trusts and their millionaire stockholders has been clearly demonstrated by actual proof before the committee of the Senate to investigate campaign expenditures. No one familiar with conditions can reasonably doubt that the money contributed by such men and such interests has been the means of buying thousands of votes and in other ways corrupting the electorate and the ballot.

CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS.

This brings me logically to the consideration of campaign contributions as affecting the candidacy of the President for a second term. As I have pointed out, the question whether corporations alleged to be or suspected of being trusts in violation of law shall be prosecuted or not rests absolutely with the President. The temptation to prosecute or not to prosecute, as affecting him, I have already pointed out. The inducement to support or oppose a candidate for reelection as a result of his previous treatment of a corporation in this respect is too obvious to need comment. Privilege-seeking corporations support the public official who will grant them privileges. That is what they are in politics for. This being so, how natural it is for a corporation that has been thus favored to make contributions to the campaign fund of their official friend. They are not only paying for past favors, but buying new ones, as they very naturally believe. They expect to accomplish results by the use of money in politics as they do in business. It is the only way of doing politics that they know.

The investigation of campaign contributions lately had has exposed some of the darkest pages of the political history of the country. It has revealed the unpleasant fact that the used for campaign purposes, by both Republicans and Democrats, in past years, was supplied almost wholly by men interested in the large corporations that were amenable to punishment under the antitrust law. The new Progressive Party was tainted in the very beginning by putting itself in the hands of the same interests. It was managed and financed by promoters, corruptionists, and trust magnates. In all these cases the money was contributed to secure the election of the man who, if elected, would be intrusted with the power of determining conclusively whether they should be prosecuted or not. No matter whether it was so understood or not, it was nothing more or less than buying immunity from such prosecution. They very naturally reasoned that the man who accepted their money to secure his election would not use the power their money had given him to punish them for making that money unlawfully. To prosecute such as these for the crime of making the money violating a law that his sworn duty required him to enforce would convict him of accepting tainted money to secure his election. The hypocritical pretense that such contributions were in the public interest and not in the personal interest of the men who made them excites contempt.

But, sir, to me there is an even more serious and reprehensible side to this question of political contributions than this. Such contributions can not justly be called voluntary. The giver makes them under compulsion and for his own protection, especially in case of the candidacy for reelection. The President has some months of his first term to serve after the contributions must be made. If he is willing to accept such con-tributions he may well be suspected of a disposition to resent it if they are not forthcoming. He has it in his power to enforce the law against the noncontributors and he has ample time to do it even if he is defeated for reelection. When he makes known the fact personally or through his committee that he wants or is willing to accept such a contribution, the official or stockholder of such a corporation may well fear that it is a demand for money that must be furnished under penalty of prosecu-tion or other unfavorable treatment in case of refusal. Such a demand or request from the candidate, or his political managers, is essentially a holdup. That it has been so considered by some of the contributors is perfectly well understood. Let me again refer to the work of the investigating committee. E. H. Harriman was the president of the Southern Pacific Co., a Kentucky corporation, and other transportation companies operating a system of railroads in the western portion of the country, with headquarters in New York. He and his corporations were subject to prosecution for violation of the Sherman antitrust law. He was shown to have raised a fund of $250,000 for the Republican campaign fund of 1904, fifty thousand of which he contributed himself. Other generously disposed gentlemen, connected with other corporations, including the Standard Oil Co., also contributed large sums

Mr. Roosevelt was then the Republican candidate for reelection to the office of President. He denied that he had requested any of these contributions, and testified that he did not know that most of them were made, and that upon learning that the Standard Oil Co. had made a contribution he directed the chairman of the national committee to return it, which, however, seems not to have been done. He should be given the full benefit of this denial. But Mr. Harriman in his lifetime declared that he made his contribution and raised the additional amount at the request of Roosevelt. Judge Lovett, then and now connected with the same companies in an official capacity, testified that Harriman said to him that Roosevelt had called upon him to raise the money, and that he had to do it. On the other hand, Roosevelt testified that instead of his asking Harriman to raise money Harriman had appealed to him to use his influence to have the national committee furnish additional funds for the State campaign in New York. Lovett further tes tified that Harriman did raise the money and turn the full amount over to him in checks of other large corporation men, and some money, with directions to deliver it to the treasurer of the national committee, who would come for it, which he did. Senator Scott, of West Virginia, late a Member of this body, testified that he was a member of the national committee that year; that he was called on the telephone from the White House, he then being in the committee headquarters in New York; that he talked with Roosevelt, who asked him about a report that the campaign funds were running low, and told him that he would see Harriman and have him raise additional This is in substance the testimony of these several witnesses bearing on the question. I am not going to enter upon a discussion of the weight or accuracy of the conflicting testimony of these several witnesses. It is not very material which was right and which was wrong. The material facts are that Roosevelt was a candidate for election to a second term. Harriman was the head of a system of railroads owned nominally by several different corporations but operated together under one management; that he raised the $250,000, and it was accepted by the national committee. It was further shown that Roosevelt and Harriman were at that time close and rather intimate friends, but had a falling out after the election. And, Mr. President, Harriman received his reward whether the money was raised for that purpose or not. Suits by the Government were at that very time pending against some of his companies, and after this contribution they were dis-His roads were otherwise favored by the President that his money helped to elect, as shown by the following statement in La Follette's Magazine of November 2, 1912:

ment in La Follette's Magazine of November 2, 1912:

The Suit against Harriman's roads.

In this connection I remembered that two important suits brought by the Government against the Central Pacific Railroad Co. et al. and the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. et al., and pending when Harriman made his $250,000 contribution, were thereafter dismissed in the early part of the year 1903 following Roosevelt's election. Joseph H. Call, of California, was the special counsel employed to prosecute these cases. Mr. Roosevelt's Attorney General ordered them dismissed—not through Mr. Call, the special counsel, or upon his advice. Roosevelt's Attorney General did not appoint Call as special counsel to commence the suit to dissolve the so-called Harriman merger of these two and other lines. This suit was based upon an investigation and report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, No. 943, entitled "In the Matter of Consolidations and Combinations of Carriers," etc. In this report the commission states that these two lines, the Central Pacific Railroad and Southern Pacific Railroad, were competing parallel lines across the continent and had been consolidated together and operated through a holding company called the Southern Pacific Co. This suit was decided against the Government by the judges of the United States Circuit Court, Eighth Circuit, June 25, 1911. An inspection of this reported case will show that for some mysterious reason the Government did not join as defendants these two wrongdoers, the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. and the Central Pacific Railroad Co. And moreover, strange as it may seem, its bill did not charge or allege that a combination to monopolize competing lines; but, on the contrary, the bill admitted that these two lines had been combined in the Southern Pacific Co., the holding corporation, and started out with that fact. The result was not complained of, and because the parties were not before the court a judgment was entered against the Government. That case is now pending upon appeal in the Un

Mr. President, this episode in the political history of the country should teach us a valuable lesson and serve as a warning to the American people. Why did Harriman raise this large sum for campaign purposes? He did it, as he said himself, because he had to. He knew perfectly well that his corporations were violating the antitrust law and were subject to prose-cution. Roosevelt was his personal friend, was the President of the United States, and very much wanted to be reelected. No one knew better than Harriman what Roosevelt's resentment might mean to him and his corporations. To refuse the contribution would certainly arouse that resentment. There was nothing to do, in the estimation of a trust magnate, but to put up the money. What is said of the candidacy for the presidency is just as true in the case of candidates for Congress who are seeking reelection. The congressional political committees call for contributions. The corporations are at the mercy of such candidates for months, even if they are defeated. Therefore, whether willingly or unwillingly, they contribute in self-defense, as they naturally regard it. This enforcement of campaign contributions is nothing better than blackmail.

Mr. President, why should we have these large contributions from interested, privilege-seeking corporations or their stock-The making of them is a subtle and dangerous species of bribery. They make such contributions to gain favor at the hands of public officials whom their money elects. are buying privileges, to be asked for, or immunity from punishment for crimes committed, or both. Why should an election to the great office of President of the United States be made to depend on such contributions? Why, sir, the mere offer of them should be taken as an insult, and would be by a man possessed of a proper appreciation of the office and its dignity and responsibilities. I ask, Why should we have such contributions? I go further and ask, in the name of the people of this country, Why should we have any contributions at all? Such as these are not the only ones that are made in the interest of the donor. It is a significant fact that, as a rule, the men who are appointed to high offices under the Government are liberal campaign contributors. It is interesting to note that ambassadors to foreign countries have usually donated large sums to the campaign of the President who appointed them. Did they make their contributions in the hope of reward by appointment to office? Let us hope not. Were they appointed because they made them? Maybe not. But the fact that they made them and that they were appointed makes one feel uncomfortable. Some people may contribute to these funds for purely disinterested reasons—love of country, for example. But afraid such as these are few in number. The who The whole tem of campaign contributions, let the donations come from whatever source, is an evil. It is a corrupting and degrading influence in politics that should not be allowed. No contributions, from any source, other than the State or Nation. should be permitted. To make them should be made a criminal offense. Large campaign funds, however raised, are a dangerous menace to the free institutions of the country. worse than useless and unnecessary. They are an obstruction to the free exercise of the franchise and a degrading influence that corrupts the purity of elections. Such information as may be necessary to inform the voters of the issues and the candidates should be furnished at public expense. Nothing should be furnished at private expense. Until campaign contributions and campaign funds are abolished we need not expect purity or honesty in elections. No greater or more wholesome reform could be adopted than that of providing for the carrying on of all political campaigns at public expense and the abolition of the present pernicious system of private contributions.

CANDIDATES FOR PRESIDENT ON THE STUMP.

Mr. President, I refer with regret to another phase of the evil consequences, resulting mainly from the attempt of the President to be reelected. I have had occasion to mention it before. It is the advocacy by the incumbent of his own election. In the late campaign it led to the most shameful campaign of crimination and recrimination between the President and ex-President, one seeking a second and the other a third term, that has ever been witnessed. I hope it may never occur again. On the 1st of July last I offered a resolution in this body calling for an investigation of campaign expenses and other matters. On the same day, in some remarks made by me in support of the resolution, I had this to say:

We have just passed through a campaign in both of the great parties for the nomination of candidates for President of the United States. No American citizen can look back upon it without the blush of shame. Candidates for that great office have gone on the stump and canvassed for their own election. That was shame enough. But one of them was President of the United States and another an ex-President pitted against each other. Their campaign was undignified, malicious, and disgraceful. It was not a discussion of principles or an effort to inform or instruct the people, but consisted of personal attacks and counter attacks, criminations and recriminations. If half the things they said of each other were true, neither of them was fit to be nominated. The whole country was shocked at this unexampled spectacle. The people were humiliated and indignant.

Since then the general election has been held and both of these candidates were overwhelmingly defeated. It was just and right that this should be so. They both deserved defeat for this reason if for no other. The contest between these two men was unfortunate in the extreme, not only to them but to the whole country. They had been warm personal and political friends. As the result of this disgraceful campaign they became bitter enemies. The conduct of Roosevelt was peculiarly reprehensible. His vicious assaults on the President made it imperative, in his estimation and that of his friends, for the latter to meet on the stump the charges made against him. It was a fatal mistake. It lost him the respect and good will of many good people. He put himself on a level with his detractor, and thus lowered his own dignity and that of his office, to no purpose. How much better it would have been for these men, how much better it would have been for the country, if both of them had been ineligible to reelection.

Mr. President, I do not believe in a candidate for President, whether it be for a first, second, or any other term, going on the stump. It is undignified and beneath the office of any man fit to be President. In the late campaign two of the candidates traveled the country over making speeches, good, bad, and indifferent, most anywhere they could find standing room and to anybody that would stop and listen. They traveled in their private cars, at immense cost, paid out of contributions for campaign purposes. One of them gave time enough from his eager and unseemly quest for office to visit the tomb of Abraham Lincoln and lay a wreath, also paid for out of campaign contributions, on his grave. What a touching and sincere tribute this was to the greatest President this country ever had. Could anyone conceive of Abraham Lincoln, as a candidate for President, traveling the highways and byways extolling his own virtues and appealing for votes for himself or his party? There is no stronger evidence that politics and public estimation of the great office of President have degenerated than such a campaign as this acquiesced in by the people of the country.

PATRONAGE IN THE SOUTH.

Mr. President, turning back for a moment to the unwarranted use of patronage, let us consider briefly what it means in the Republican Party in the South. We all know that in many of the Southern States the officeholders constitute the active workers in the party. They dominate the local conventions. They are made delegates to the national convention, and sometimes hold the balance of power. These men support their chief. It is not a question of fitness with them. They support him for two reasons—because their own continuance in office depends on his reelection, and, besides, they owe him fealty and support. This is so, only in less degree, in every State in the Union. It is literally true beyond doubt that a President may be, and even has been, renominated by his appointees to office. Precisely the same condition will prevail in the Progressive Party if it becomes a political force. It has made no impression on the solid South, and probably will not. If it should ever come into power, it will be represented in most of the Southern States by a handful of officeholders, just as the Republican Party is now.

ALLEGED LIMITATION OF THE RIGHTS OF THE PEOPLE.

This brings me to a consideration of the chief objection urged against this proposed amendment. Several Senators have centered upon it as insurmountable. It is the claim that the amendment will amount to a limitation of the right of the people to choose their President and to determine at the time of his election whether he should be elected to a second or third It is worthy of remark that most of the Senators who seized upon this objection were then supporters of a man running for a third term. It would at least be embarrassing to his candidacy for the Senate of the United States to determine that he should be ineligible for even a second term. standing this, I am sure Senators urged this objection in perfect good faith and sincerity. It may well be, however, that, unconsciously to them, their judgment was more or less affected by existing conditions. At all events, Mr. President, they have overlooked the very object and purpose of this amendment. Rightly understood and considered the objection has no weight whatever. It assumes that, as things now are, there are no limitations upon the right or obstruction of the exercise of the right of the people to choose their President. If I believed this I would never have offered this resolution and would not now be urging its adoption. I offered the resolution for the very reason that, under the present provisions of the Constitution, the people do not freely choose their Presidents, but are prevented from doing so in great part by the conditions that enable a candidate for a second term to manipulate caucuses and conventions and command the influence and money of great corporations to subvert the will of the people and elect a candidate that the people do not want in spite of them. It is to remove the conditions that enable the interests, machine politicians, and Federal officeholders to thwart the will of the people and at the same time corrupt elections that this amendment is proposed. Do Senators really think it is an unreasonable limitation upon the rights of the people to attempt to rescue their elections from the money changers and corruptionists and place them in their own hands? What chance have the people against the millions of the great corporations, the corrupt political machine operated by them, and the army of Federal officeholders in the effort to select a President who has favored and protected the trusts and appointed the officeholders in his first term? What hope have they against a candidate with an army of Federal officeholders appointed by him supporting his candidacy, with contributions by interested parties of millions of dollars to be used in his election?

It is worse than idle to talk about limiting the rights of the people under such conditions. It is not a limitation of the exercise of their right to elect the man of their choice, but the removal of one of the greatest obstacles to the exercise of that right. That is the one thing that I am standing for in my support of this measure. I do not say that there are not other causes and other forces at work to hinder and prevent the free and independent exercise of the franchise by the voters and to rule politics by money in the hands of the interested and privilege-seeking few. But I do say that the power given a President to dominate the affairs of the party, and, with the help of the selfish and interested few against the will of the disinterested many, to force his nomination and election to a second term is one of the most potent causes for this condition in the politics of the country. It is within the power and jurisdiction of Congress to submit to the people of the country the question whether this change should be made or not. It is for them to say, in a proper case, whether the Constitution shall be amended or not. We, as their representatives, can do no more than to submit it to them for their consideration and action, I do not believe we are under obligation to do so unless there is reasonable ground for its submission to the people. I agree with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Borah], who, I regret to say, is opposing the submission of the question, that a Senator is not bound, as a matter of course, to vote in favor of it. He has a right, and it is his duty, to exercise his own judgment as to whether there is any necessity for the amendment. On the other hand, if there is a real and reasonable call for its submission, based upon substantial grounds, and there is a division of opinion as to the necessity for the amendment, I believe it is the duty of a Senator to support it. He does not thereby adopt the amendment but only the resolution submitting it to the people. one of the voters he could consistently vote against it at the polls notwithstanding the fact that, as a member of this body, he had voted in favor of submitting the question to a vote of the

Now, sir, is there reasonable grounds for the submission of this question to a vote of the people? I have tried to point out the evils that result from the candidacy of a President for a second term. They are serious evils that should be overcome. The only way this can be done is by amending the Constitution as proposed. I know, from information received before and since I offered the resolution, that there is a widespread and earnest desire that the amendment should be made. Moved by this wise and forceful public sentiment the now dominant party in the country has declared unqualifiedly in favor of such an amendment. The 1912 platform of the Democratic Party has this plank:

TERM OF PRESIDENT.

We favor a single presidential term, and to that end urge the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution making the President of the United States ineligible for reelection, and we pledge the candidate of this convention to this principle.

This platform has since been indorsed by the vote of the people, and a Democrat, running on that platform and indorsing that plank of it, has been elected President of the United States by the largest electoral vote ever given a candidate of his party. Neither the Republican nor the Progressive Party spoke for or against it, although it was then before the Congress and the country for consideration.

Sir, I submit that no Senator can now justly say that there is no general demand for this amendment. Neither can he, with just reason, stand upon the claim made here that there is no necessity for it. The Senator who endeavors to impress upon the minds of the people of the country that their rights are being encroached upon by such an amendment is, in my judgment, making a grievous mistake. From the point of view of the opponents of the measure it is a debatable question. If it is, then it should be submitted to the people for their determination. The electors of the country have the right to pass upon this question, and that right should not be denied them.

ADVANTAGE OF EXPERIENCE.

Another objection urged to the amendment is that one who has served one term as President is better fitted for a second term than a new man, and that to render him ineligible to a reelection is to deprive the country of his experience and superior ability resulting from his previous service. This is a plausible objection, but it has no support in the lives and experiences of men who have served a second term as President. Can Senators who make this objection point to a single case in the history of the country where the second term of an incumbent of the office was better or more satisfactory, either to him or the country, than the first? The Senator from Idaho [Mr. Borahl says in support of this contention:

What mistakes were made in the election of Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Lincoln, Grant, McKinley, and Cleveland to a second term?

But, Mr. President, that is not the question. The question is, Would it have been a mistake to have elected some one else? Does the Senator think that at the time any one of these men was elected another one might not have been chosen with entire 'safety and without detriment to the interests of the people of the country? I hope the time will never come when there is only one man in our 90,000,000 of people competent to be their Chief Magistrate. There has never been a time when a competent, reliable, and trusted man was not found to succeed the incumbent of a first term. If he who has served a first term is better fitted by experience to further hold the office, he must be still better fitted, for a stronger reason, for a third and a fourth term, and so on indefinitely. It is an argument that will justify a life tenure just as much as a second

But, Mr. President, let us look into this phase of the question a little more closely. For the information of the Senate, I submit a list of the Presidents of the United States and their terms of service.

PRESIDENTS AND THEIR TERMS OF OFFICE.

Theodore Roosevelt, September 14, 1901, to March 4, 1909.
William H. Taft, March 4, 1909, to March 4, 1913.

PRESIDENTS WHO SERVED TWO FULL TERMS.

George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe, Andrew Jackson, Ulysses S. Grant, and Grover Cleveland.

Theodore Roosevelt served out the second term of William McKinley and was elected to and served another full term.

The following Presidents were elected a second time but did not live out the term: Abraham Lincoln, William McKinley.

VICE PRESIDENTS SUCCEEDING TO THE OFFICE

John Tyler, Millard Fillmore, Andrew Johnson, Chester A. Arthur, and Theodore Roosevelt became President by succession to the office as Vice President on the death of the President, and of this number Theodore Roosevelt was elected to a second term.

Thus it will be seen that we have had 26 Presidents. Of this number only 10 were elected the second time, and 2 of this number lost their lives early in the second term. Therefore there are but 8 Presidents whose second terms of service can be compared with the first for efficiency. Can the Senator from Idaho put his finger on a single one of these who can justly be said to have rendered better service to his country in his second term than in the first? There may have been some particular act done or service rendered during a second term that might be especially commended, but doubtless the same service would have been rendered in the first term if opportunity had offered, or by his successor in his first term if one had been chosen.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President-The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. OLIVER in the chair) Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. WORKS. I do. Mr. BORAH. I have no doubt in the world that, under the peculiar circumstances, the second term of Washington was of far more importance to the country, and of far more benefit, than would have been the first term of any other man who could have been elected at that time.

Mr. WORKS. I am coming to that in a moment. There is not the slightest ground, I am persuaded, for the claim that any advantage ever accrued to the country by the election of any man to a second term. An exception may possibly be made in the case of Washington, not for the reason urged by Senators of greater efficiency by reason of previous service, but because the people believed that he was the one man to lead the Nation in its infancy. Perhaps this was only a fancy. There were then many competent men, of lofty character, su-perior ability, and exalted patriotism to take his place; men under whose guidance the Government would have gone on as well as under Washington and as it did when, in his wisdom and patriotism, he declined to serve further in that capacity. This objection is more imaginary than real. It has no tangible facts to support it. And if it were true that the experience of one term would better enable the incumbent to perform the duties of the second, the evils resulting from a second election, some of which I have endeavored to bring to the attention of the Senate, so far outweigh the advantages claimed for a second term of service that the objection becomes insignificant in compartson.

Mr. President, it will be impossible for me to conclude my remarks within the time limited. I ask to suspend at this point, and give notice that on to-morrow, immediately after the routine morning business, I shall continue my address.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. OLIVER in the chair). The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. CRAWFORD] has given notice

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I ask that the omnibus claims bill be now taken up. I do not know whether it is necessary to make that motion.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, pending that, I make the point of order that there is no quorum of the Senate present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Richardson Smith, Mich. Smoot Stephenson Sutherland Ashuest Clarke, Ark Martine, N. J. Bacon Bankhead Borah Brandegee Davis Fletcher Gallinger Massey Myers Oliver Gronna Overman Brandegee Brown Burnham Chilton Clapp Clark, Wyo. Kenyon Lea Lodge McLean Martin, Va Page Perkins Perky Poindexter Thornton Townsend Warren Works Reed

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum of the Senate is not present.

Mr. SMOOT. I ask that the names of the absentees be called. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah asks that the names of the absent Senators be called. The names of the absentees will be called.

The Secretary called the names of the absent Senators, and Mr. Bristow, Mr. Bryan, Mr. Crawford, Mr. Curtis, Mr. Hitch-cock, Mr. McCumber, Mr. O'Gorman, Mr. Pomerene, Mr. Sim-MONS, Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Mr. SMITH of Georgia, and Mr. SWANSON answered to their names.

Mr. KENYON. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. CUMMINS] is detained at his home by the serious illness of his father. I make the announcement to stand for the day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Upon the call of the roll of the Senate 51 Senators have responded to their names. A quorum of the Senate is present.

IMPEACHMENT OF ROBERT W. ARCHBALD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (Mr. Bacon) having announced that the time had arrived for the consideration of the articles of impeachment against Robert W. Archbald, the respondent appeared with his counsel, Mr. Worthington, Mr. Simpson, and Mr. Robert W. Archbald, jr.

The managers on the part of the House of Representatives appeared in the seats provided for them.

The Assistant Sergeant at Arms (Mr. Cornelius) made the usual proclamation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the name of any Senator who has not yet taken the oath.

The Secretary called the name of Mr. Chilton, who advanced to the desk, and the oath was administered to him by the President pro tempore.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the Journal of the proceedings of the last sitting of the Court of Impeachment.

The Secretary read the Journal of Saturday's proceedings of

The Secretary read the Journal of Saturday's proceedings of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there any inaccuracies in the Journal? If not, it will stand approved.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I should like for the witness, John Henry Jones, to be called at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will be called.

The Assistant Sergrant at Arms. John Henry Jones! John Henry Jones! John Henry Jones! Appear and answer summons.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I ask for present consideration of the order which I send to the desk. I ask that the order be read, and then I will make a statement to the

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the order as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

Ordered, That an attachment do issue, in accordance with the rules of the Senate of the United States, for one John Henry Jones, a witness heretofore duly subpœnaed in this proceeding, on behalf of the managers of the House of Representatives.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I desire to show by the Sergeant at Arms that that witness has been duly sub-poenaed; that he is not present; and that he has not been present to answer, as the subpœna requires.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Sergeant at Arms will produce the officer who made the service.

James K. Julian, having been previously sworn, appeared and testified as follows:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is your name?
Mr. JULIAN. J. K. Julian.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What office have you been performing? What is your position?

Mr. Julian. I am clerk in the office of the Sergeant at Arms of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. And you were deputized-Deputized. Mr. JULIAN.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (continuing). To serve certain subpœnas?

Mr. Julian. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. State whether or not you served the witness, John Henry Jones?

Mr. JULIAN. I did.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. When?

Mr. Julian. November 30, at 11.20 in the morning, in the courthouse at Scranton, Pa.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Personally?

Mr. Julian. Personally.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Sergeant at Arms will state whether or not the witness has appeared.

Mr. E. Livingstone Cornelius appeared

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Mr. Cornelius, has this witness appeared?

Mr. Cornelius. He has not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He has not been here at all?

Mr. Cornelius. He has not reported to us.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I respectfully submit the order for the consideration of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeach-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Possibly it might be well to show from the subpæna at what date the witness was required to be present.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I can state it, but I think the suggestion of the Chair is better.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. When was Mr. Jones subpenaed to appear?

Mr. Cornelius. He was subpænaed to appear on the 3d day of December.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Have you the return of the subpœna?

Mr. Cornelius. I have.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the copy of the sub-poena which you hold in your hand show on what date he was summoned to appear?

Mr. Cornelius. December 3.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He was ordered to appear on the 3d day of December?

Mr. Cornelius. Yes, sir.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Now, Mr. Manager Clayton. Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I ask the adoption of the order which was read from the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will inquire whether it is necessary to insert in the order the fact that the witness Jones has not appeared. The order does not state that fact.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Following action in like cases-The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is unnecessary?

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I think it is unnecessary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the order submitted by the manager on the part of the House of Representatives. [Putting the question.] The "ayes" have it, and the order is adopted. The Secretary will see that the proper attachment is prepared and delivered into the hands of the Sergeant at Arms for this purpose. The managers will proceed.

Mr. Manager STERLING. Will you have Mr. Snyder called? TESTIMONY OF G. F. SNYDER.

G. F. Snyder, being duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows

Q. (By Mr. Manager STERLING.) What is your name, and where do you live?—A. G. F. Snyder; 1735 New Hampshire Avenue, Washington, D. C.

Q. What official position have you here?-A. I am clerk of the Commerce Court.

Q. How long have you been clerk of that court?-A. Almost two years; since its organization.

Q. And you have been clerk continuously since you were appointed, two years ago?-A. I have

Q. Have you the briefs and petitions filed in cases of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. against The Interstate Commerce Commission, Nos. 38 and 39?—A. I have; except that the case was brought against the United States and not against the commission.

Q. What case do you refer to as against the United States?-A. Both of them.

Q. What was the popular title of the case which is marked No. 38, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. and others against The Interstate Commerce Commission?-A. It was known as the Sugar Lighterage case.

Q. And generally called the Lighterage case?-A. By most people; yes.

Q. Look at the eight briefs which I hand you, and state if they are the printed briefs which were filed by the several parties in that case?—A. (After examination.) They are.

Q. Are those briefs the briefs of the petitioners or of the defendants?-A. (After examination). The briefs for both sides.

Q. Are those all of the printed briefs that were filed in the Commerce Court?-A. They are,

Q. I will ask you if the title of the case on the back of each of those briefs is the same?-A. Practically. In some cases it is abbreviated.

Q. I wish you would read the title of the different ones. Those that have the same titles you need not repeat, but read the different forms of the title of the case as they appear on those several briefs.—A. The title on the brief for the petitioners on the motion for temporary injunction reads "In the United States Commerce Court, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., the Central Railroad Co. of New Jersey, the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., the Erie Railroad Co., the New York, Ontario & Western Railroad Co., the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., petitioners, against the United States of America, respondents."
Q. Whose brief is that?—A. The brief of the petitioners on the motion for temporary injunction.

Q. Read the title on the back of the brief in the other cases. except where it is the same as that you have read.—A. On the brief which is entitled "Points submitted on behalf of the defendant, the Federal Sugar Refining Co.." the title is "In the Commerce Court of the United States. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. et al., petitioners, against United States, respondent. Federal Sugar Refining Co., intervening party, defendant."

In the brief of the United States the title is "In the United States Commerce Court. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. et al., petitioners, against The United States, respondent."

In the brief for the Jay Street Terminal and Arbuckle Bros., interveners, the title is "In the Commerce Court of the United States. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. and others, petitioners; Jay Street Terminal and Arbuckle Bros., interveners, against The United States, respondent. Federal Sugar Refining Co. and Interstate Commerce Commission, interveners."

On the brief for the Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal the title is "In the Commerce Court of the United States. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. et al., petitioners, against The United States, respondent." Brief for the Jay Street Terminal and Arbuckle Bros., interveners—I may say that from now on these briefs have been filed within the last month or two in the Commerce Court.

Q. Have you read all the briefs that were filed prior to August 29, 1911?—A. I have.

Q. Those that were filed subsequent to that date, then, you Have you read the title to the cases on the need not read. back of all the briefs that were filed prior to August 29, 1911?-A. I have.

Q. I will ask you if in the title of that case, in any of those briefs, the case is designated as the Lighterage case.—A. It is not. Q. Does the word "lighterage" appear on the back of any of the briefs in that case?-A. It does not.

O. Look at this volume, marked "38," and state what that is. A. That is the original petition for injunction filed in the Commerce Court April 12, 1911.

Q. What was the date it was filed?-A. April 12, 1911.

Q. That is the date on which that case came into the Commerce Court?-A. It is.

Q. Does the word "lighterage" appear in the title of the case on the back of that petition?-A. It does not.

Q. Is it designated as the lighterage case anywhere on the back of the petition?-A. It is not.

Q. What is this volume, marked "Exhibit 24" [indicating]?-A. It is the printed record as transmitted to the Supreme Court by the clerk of the Commerce Court, printed by the clerk of the Supreme Court.

Q. And when was that printed?-A. I do not know. It must have been printed subsequent to the date on which it was filed, which, it is stated, was July 14, 1911.

Q. That is the transcript of the record from the Commerce Court in No. 38, known as the Lighterage case?-A. It is.

Q. Does the word "lighterage" appear on the back of that transcript anywhere?—A. It does not.

Q. Is the case designated as the Lighterage case anywhere on the back of the transcript?—A. It is not. Q. Look at this volume, marked "Exhibit 26." Let me state for the benefit of the record, Mr. President, that the numbers which I have given are the numbers of the exhibits as they were presented to the Judiciary Committee. I will say that the clerk desires to take those, as there are files in the court, and that is the reason I am proving what is contained on the cover, so that he can take them now. What is volume 26?—A. This is a printed record of the transcript as sent by the clerk of the Commerce Court to the Supreme Court.

Q. Of 38?—A. No; of the Commerce Court, No. 39.

That is not the Lighterage case?-A. It is not.

What was 39?-A. 39 was a case popularly known as the O. Fuel Coal case.

Q. Just read the title to that case, giving the names of all the parties in interest .- A. As it appears on this printed transcript the title is, "Interstate Commerce Commission and the United States, appellants, against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., et.al.'

Q. Does it not name the Erie Railroad Co. in the title?-A.

Not on this transcript.

Q. Who are the et al.?-A. I should have to look at the original petition in order to state that.

Q. This volume is marked "39," and this one also is marked "39." Please state what the first volume is.—A. The first volume is the original petition filed in the Commerce Court on April 27, 1911, in the Fuel Coal case. The second volume is the brief for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and others, petitioners.

Q. The first one is the original petition?—A. It is,

Q. Filed April 27?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Ascertain from that, if you can, the names of all the parties interested in that suit.—A. I will read them, if you wish.

Mr. Manager STERLING. Yes, sir.

A. The petitioners were the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co.; the Pennsylvania Railroad Co.; the Pennsylvania Co.; Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railway Co.; the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Co.; the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad Co., and B. A. Worthington, receiver thereof; the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway Co.; the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad Co.; Buffalo & Susquehanua Railway Co., Harry I. Miller, receiver; Buffalo & Susquehanna Railway Co.; and here inserted in pen and ink is the Erie Railroad Co.; next the Western Maryland Railway Co.; the Pittsburgh, Shawmut & Northern Railroad Co., and Frank Sullivan Smith, receiver thereof.

Q. You say the Eric Railroad Co. is written in in ink in the title?-A. It is.

Q. I wish you would look at the body of the petition and see if it is designated as a party there.—A. This is in the Fuel case, you understand.

Q. It is No. 39?-A. Yes, sir. [The witness examined the

Q. Well, the Erie Railroad Co. was a party to that suit, was it not?

Mr. Manager WEBB. I think the respondent admits it in the

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I was going to say that so far as all this is concerned, it is admitted in the answer.

The Witness. I do not see the name of the Eric Railroad Co. in the petition. I can only say from the documents before

Q. By Mr. Manager STERLING.) It is written in the title?-

Yes, sir; it is. Mr. Manager CLAYTON. And reference is made to the parties, Judge.

Mr. Manager STERLING. Yes. [To the witness:] Look at this document.

The witness proceeded to examine the document.

Mr. Manager STERLING (to the Secretary). I wish you would mark that.

The pamphlet was marked "Exhibit No. 23."

Q. (By Mr. Manager STERLING.) Have you the brief in case 39?—A. I have the brief of the petitioners.

Q. I wish you would read the title on the back of that brief.—A. In the Commerce Court of the United States, in equity, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. et al., petitioners, against The United States, respondent.

Q. Look at this, Exhibit 23, which I hand you, and state what it is.—A. This is the docket of the United States Commerce Court for the April session of 1912.

Q. Are cases 38 and 39 in that docket?-A. They are.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. 1911.

Mr. Manager STERLING. 1911. The Witness. This is 1912 which you handed to me.

Q. (By Mr. Manager STERLING.) What was the last docket printed by the court prior to the October session, 1911?which showed the calendar to be called March 24, 1911.

Q. Is it the docket of 1911 or 1912 that is before you?-A. 1912, sir.

Q. Have you the docket for the April session of 1911?-A. After the April session of 1911 the next session for which we had printed the docket was the October session, 1911.

Q. Then the first docket which your court had printed after cases 38 and 39 came into the Commerce Court was the October session, 1911?-A. 1911.

Q. Are those the cases in that docket?-A. They are.

Q. When was that docket printed?-A. It was printed about two weeks before October 2, 1911.

Q. About the middle of September, 1911?-A. About then is the time we have our dockets printed.

Q. Look at the title to case 38 and see if the case in that docket is designated as the Lighterage case.-A. It is not in the title. Q. Just read the title as designated in that docket .-- A. No. 38 is designated as the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. et al., petitioners, Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal, John Arbuckle, and William A. Jamison, intervening petitioners, against The United States, respondent, Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Sugar Refining Co., intervening respondents. I might say under "Remarks" on this docket, opposite "Case," it is said it will be in order "to set aside an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission affecting lighterage charges on sugar in and near New York Harbor."

Q. Is that the first time in any brief or docket or calendar or petition in printed form the word "lighterage" appears in or in connection with the title to case 38?—A. It is, in printed form,

Q. And that was not printed until after the 29th of August, 1911?-A. That is correct.

Q. What page is that on?-A. Page 12 of the docket for the October session, 1911.

Mr. Manager STERLING. We offer Exhibit 23, so far as it relates to cases 38 and 39. I will offer it a little later. (To the witness.) No. 38 came into the Commerce Court on the 12th day of April, 1911?

A. April 12, 1911. Q. No. 39 came into that court the 27th of April?—A. 1911.

Q. When were the cases argued orally in the Commerce Court ?- A. The Sugar Lighterage case was first argued on petition for preliminary injunction May 17, 1911.

Q. And the other case?—A. The Fuel and Coal case first came up on motion of the Interstate Commerce Commission to strike out, and was heard on that motion on May 19, 1911. Q. When were those cases taken by the court for consideration after those arguments?—A. The Sugar Lighterage case was taken under consideration by the court May 18.

Q. That is No. 38?—A. No. 38. Thirty-nine, the Fuel and Coal case, the court did not take under consideration, but announced from the bench that the motion of the Interstate Commerce Commission to strike out would be sustained.

Q. Those cases have been pending on the Commerce Court docket from the time they were filed until the present time?-They were both appealed from the preliminary A. In a way, order of the Commerce Court, and being in the Supreme Court on appeal, of course nothing could be done in the Commerce

Q. But that is not my question. Did the titles appear on the docket of that court from that time until the present time?-A. They did.

Q. Do you know what case in the Commerce Court is generally known as the Meeker case?-A. I do.

Q. Have you the title of that case there?-A. I have not. was the title?-A. As I remember it, it was the O. What Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. against The United States.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. was a party to that suit, was it?-A. It was.

Q. And Mr. Meeker was an intervener?-A. Yes.

Q. When was that case filed?—A. I have not the original petition here, and I can not say.

Q. Could you tell from memory about when it was filed?-A. No; I can not. Of course it was subsequent to this case, being a later number, but it might have been-

Q. Does it appear in any of these dockets?-A. No; these are my rough notes I am reading, taken in the court room.

- Q. Look at this docket here [presenting paper] and see if it appears in any of these dockets.—A. (Examining.) The docket of the February session, 1912, states that the Lehigh Valley Railroad case, known as the Meeker case, was filed September 29, 1911.
- Q. How long did it pend in the court?-A. I am afraid I can not tell that.

Q. Is it on the docket of the Commerce Court now ?-A. No: it was dismissed at the request of the petitioner.

Q. When was it dismissed?—A. It was dismissed some time between the April session of 1912 and the June session of 1912.

Q. On motion of the petitioner, the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co.?-A. As I remember it.

Q. When was it argued in the court?-A. This case, known in the Commerce Court as No. 49, was heard on petition for preliminary injunction on October 10, 1911.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, it seems to me it would be very much to the advantage and convenience of all Senators and counsel and managers if we should have this witness furnish a copy of the docket entries in each of these cases to be put into the record instead of having to go through his testimony to find out certain of these dates.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is a matter of agreement between the counsel and the managers.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I ask to have it furnished and put in the record.

Mr. Manager STERLING. We have no objection to it at all. Mr. Worthington can have it done as well as we. I will ask the witness to furnish it and send it to Mr. Manager Clayton.

Will it be sufficient if he will send it to Mr. Manager CLAYTON?
Mr. WORTHINGTON. That is, in each of these three cases; a certified copy of the docket entry in those cases.

The WITNESS. And filing?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Certainly. [To the witness:] I want to ask you one or two questions.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Mr. Snyder, do the briefs show the dates they were filed in your court?-A. They do.

O. That will appear from these docket entries?—A. It will Q. If I understand what you have testified to in regard to the Lighterage cases it means this-I wish you would correct me if I am wrong-that there were no documents filed in what is called the Lighterage case in which the word "lighterage" appeared until September. What was the date?—A. The document upon which the word "lighterage" appeared was not a paper that was filed. It was a docket printed by the court,

Q. That was printed just before the beginning of the October term, was it?—A. Yes; 1911.

Q. The court had a recess from May 29 to October 2 or 3, 1911?—A. Yes; as I remember it.

Q. Do I understand you correctly as saying that the docket was printed two weeks or so before the court met in October?-A. It was

Q. And were not copies of those dockets sent to the judges?-A. Immediately upon being received from the printer.

Q. So, in the ordinary course of things Judge Archbald would have received a copy of this docket or a list of cases with the word "lighterage" appearing along about the middle of September, 1911?—A. He would.

Q. Will you look at this paper [presenting paper] and tell me whether that is a copy of the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Lighterage case as it came to your court after the Supreme Court had acted upon it?-A. (After

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I should like to have that marked. Mr. President, for identification.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore.

It will be marked in order.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. It will be marked "H."
The Secretary. United States Senate Exhibit H.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) I should like for you to look at this paper [presenting paper] and tell me if that is a copy showing the final action taken in the Lighterage case by the Commerce Court.—A. (Examining.) To date.

Q. The final action of the Commerce Court after the case came back from the Supreme Court?-A. It is.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I should like to have that marked, Mr. WORTHINGTON. I should like to have that marked, Mr. President, for identification.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be marked. The Secretary. United States Senate Exhibit I.

Mr. Manager STERLING. I should like to see them, Mr.

Manager. Mr. WORTHINGTON. Certainly. I am not offering them in evidence now. Mr. Manager STERLING. I may want to cross-examine the witness

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Certainly. I should like to see the petition in which the word "Erie," or the description of the Erie, was inserted in handwriting, as I understood you. Do you recognize the handwriting in which the words "Erie Railroad Co." stand in this caption? A. I do not.

Q. Have you examined the paper itself to be sure that the Erie Railroad is not a party otherwise than its name is written in the caption?-A. No; I have not. I did not have time to read carefully the body of it.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I may say, Mr. President, that on examination I find that the Erie Railroad Co. is a party in the petition.

Mr. Manager STERLING. We know it is in the body of the paper.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. The witness was in error about it in stating it was not there. Perhaps the witness had better correct that new. [To the witness:] State if from closer examination you find the Erie is a party in the body of the paper.

A. (Examining.) I state upon closer examination of case No. 39 the Eric Railroad Co. is a party printed in the body of the petition.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. That is all, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there any other questions to be asked the witness?

Mr. Manager STERLING. Mr. President, I desire to offer in evidence the docket of the October session, 1911, which the witness read, in which the word "lighterage" appears in connection with the order made in that case. I ask to have it marked Exhibit 24.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. The October docket.

Q. (By Mr. Manager STERLING.) This Exhibit 24 is the docket from which you read the order in which the word "lighterage" was used in connection with case 38, is it not?— A. It is.

Q. And that is the docket of the United States Commerce Court, October session, 1911?—A. It is.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Let me look at that. [The paper was handed. I

Q. (By Mr. Manager STERLING.) Exhibit H you say is the opinion of the court in case 38, known as the lighterage case?—A. (After examining.) The opinion of the Supreme Court.

Q. What is the date of that?-A. June 10, 1912.

Q. On what question was the decision of the Supreme Court with reference to those cases?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I should think that would appear from the decision.

Q. (By Mr. Manager STERLING.) Did it go to the Supreme Court on its merits?—A. It did not.

Q. Then during all that time, while it was in the Supreme Court on this one question, it was still pending on its merits in the Commerce Court, was it not?—A. It was.

Q. (Presenting paper.) State what that is.—A. (Examining.)

Exhibit I, the final order of the United States Commerce Court in the Sugar Lighterage cases.

Q. What is the date of that?—A. November 15, 1912. Mr. Manager STERLING. I believe that is all to be asked this witness

Mr. WORTHINGTON. That is all. Let me have those two papers.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness may retire. Mr. Manager STERLING. Leave Nos. 24 and 23, Mr. Snyder. The WITNESS. Very well.

TESTIMONY OF A. F. GALLAGHER.

Mr. Manager STERLING. Let Mr. Gallagher be called.

A. F. Gallagher appeared.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. State your name and residence.

Mr. Gallagher. A. F. Gallagher: 131 A Street NE., this city.

Having been duly sworn, A. F. Gallagher was examined, and testified as follows:

(By Mr. Manager STERLING.) What is your business, Mr. Gallagher?-A. Shorthand reporter.

Q. In what court do you report?-A. In various courts; in the district court and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Q. Do you report in the Commerce Court?-A. I have not reported in the Commerce Court this session, but I did for two

Q. Did you report in the Commerce Court October 2, 1911?-

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would look at this paper [presenting paper] and state if it is a transcript of notes which you took upon that date with reference to a case in the Commerce Court .-(Examining.) Yes, sir; I recognize it.

Q. Did you make that transcript?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it correct?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is a correct transcript of the stenographic notes which you took?-A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Manager STERLING. I think that is all I desire to ask of this witness.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. We have nothing to ask him. Mr. Manager STERLING. We offer this transcript. Mr. WORTHINGTON. There is no objection to that,

Mr. Manager STERLING. We ask the clerk to read it, beginning at this point [indicating].

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, the witness may be

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Perhaps if the transcript is to be read, he might as well stay. Some questions might be suggested by the contents of the paper.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Take your lagher. The Secretary will read the transcript. Take your seat, Mr. Gal-

The Secretary read as follows:

The Secretary read as follows:

Judge Knapp. No. 38, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. et al. v. United States, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and others.

Mr. Swifft. That case, I understand, is ready. The preliminary injunction has been granted in that case, and the motion of the defendant to dismiss has been denied. The Government has filed an answer, as has also the sugar company, but the Interstate Commerce Commission has not filed any. It is the desire of the petitioners to bring that case on for final hearing and take such action as may be necessary and such testimony as the court may think proper in the case. An appeal has been taken from the order granting the preliminary injunction in the case to the Supreme Court; but it does not seem to us that that should interfere with the case coming up for argument in this court.

Judge Ancibald. When was the answer filed?

Mr. Swiff. I can not give you the date when it was filed; but it was some time ago, your honor.

Judge Ancibald. Has anything been done on that toward taking testimony?

Mr. Swiff. It is ready; and we ask for the privilege of taking testimony in the case.

Judge Knapp. The petitioner, then, desires to take testimony?

Mr. Swiff. It is ready; and we ask for the privilege of taking testimony in the case.

Judge Knapp. The petitioner, then, desires to take testimony?

Mr. Swiff. Yes.

Mr. Esterline. If your honor pleases, the case has gone to the Supreme Court of the United States on the old record; the appeal of the Supreme Court of the United States on the old record; the appeal of the Supreme Court of the United States on the old record; the appeal of the Supreme Court of the United States on the old record; the appeal of the Supreme Court of the United States on the old record; the appeal of the Supreme Court of the United States on the old record; the appeal of the Supreme Court of the United States on the old record; the appeal of the Supreme Court of the United States on the old record; the appeal of the Supreme Court of the United State merce Commission, and the intervention of the Federal Sugar Refining Co. Their pleadings are full and complete in all respects. The injunction having been issued on the face of that record, that whole record, which has gone to the Supreme Court, and not a word of which is disputed as it stands before the Supreme Court, and the appeal having been taken from the preliminary injunction, it is the idea of the Government that the whole case made by the petitioners and the interveners stands squarely before the court undisputed and undenied, and the Supreme Court's decision on that preliminary injunction will dispose of that case. If that injunction is affirmed, I do not know what could be done in the nature of taking testimony. If it is reversed, I do not know what could be done in the nature of taking testimony. If it is started in to take testimony now, or to hear the case, the Supreme Court may decide it on the question of law, and the time and labor would simply be in the air. The Government expects to present that case squarely on the record made by their pleadings, which are not denied, and all the testimony that they could take for the rest of the winter would not make that any stronger for the purpose of the injunction. It is the contention of the Government that there is no testimony to be taken, and the decision of the Supreme Court will be final.

Indee Arcuman Does the other side coincide with you on that?

Injunction. It is the contention of the Government that there is no testimony to be taken, and the decision of the Supreme Court will be final.

Judge Archeald. Does the other side coincide with you on that?

Mr. Swift. No; they do not. There is an assignment of certain errors made, which does not go to the merits of the case at all. A reversal which would prevent the preliminary injunction by the Supreme Court on a technical ground would leave us without an injunction, and they would compel us to obey its order pending the final determination of the case.

Mr. Estelline. If your honors please, if there were reversals on any such ground as that this court could either issue another injunction with the findings of facts, on a day's notice, or take such action as it chose in issuing the injunction.

Judge Archeald. If the Supreme Court should say it would not interfere with the exercise of the discretion of the court—

Mr. Estelline. Very well, then, I think it is up to us. If they hold that this court to determine what its opinion was, and in that case they are not in any way prejudiced.

Mr. Dykman. Is there not another course by which the Government might withdraw the technical assignments of error to which Mr. Swift has referred? There are more than one; there are three or four assignments by the commission and at least three assignments by the Attorney General. We are here answering because there has been an answer interposed, and on this calendar we are here to dispose of the issues joined by the answer.

Judge Archald. Your application now is for some opportunity for a hearing?

Mr. Dykman. Yes; we want to come to a decision as to the merits, which will be final. If the decision of the Supreme Court would be final and would bring an end to the litigation, we will be better satisfied.

which will be high. If the decision of the supreme court would be final and would bring an end to the litigation, we will be better satisfied.

Judge Knapp. It is understood that you desire to take some further testimony?

Mr. Swift. Yes, sir.

Judge Knapp. Can you indicate the nature of the testimony and the length of time which will be required to take it?

Mr. Swift. I think that depends altogether on whether our opponents would enter into a stipulation for the testimony taken before the commission. That would take only a short time.

Mr. Estering. I do not want to state now what we would or would not stipulate. Our position is to follow the practice of proceedings in the circuit court of appeals. It would be a hardship for us to take a lot of testimony in this case while preparing for argument on other cases before the Supreme Court. It would seem to be the better practice to see what the Supreme Court is going to decide, because I can not possibly see how it would prejudice the petitioners. If the court affirms that injunction, they are not hurt. If it is reversed because your honors did not make a finding of fact, it would not take long to make one.

affirms that injunction, they are not nurt. It is reversed because your honors did not make a finding of fact, it would not take long to make one.

Judge Archbald. If they want to hear all the case, how can you deny it?

Mr. Dykman. Mr. Esterline said he was not prepared to answer now whether he would stipulate that evidence; but I am not prepared to say that I would not, for expedition, stipulate that record to saye time.

Mr. Esterkine. The most you could do is to prove the allegations of your bill. You could not go beyond that. Now, they stand undisputed before the Supreme Court.

Judge Knapp. Has there been an answer filed in this case?

Mr. Esterkine. Not before it went to the Supreme Court.

Judge Knapp. It appears to me that if the petitioners are desirous of taking this course in this case they are entitled to do so, and therefore the application to take further testimony will be granted. We suggest that you confer with each other, and if that results in an agreement to stipulate the present record of the testimony taken before the Interstate Commerce Commission, it may obviate the necessity of taking further testimony, or at least the oral examination of witnesses, and you may appear in court to-morrow morning and we will hear what you have agreed upon and then decide whether the testimony will be taken, if any is to be taken, by a member of the court or by an examiner, and will perhaps fix the time and place for taking that testimony. Would you be willing to take it here in Washington?

Mr. Dykman. Would it be possible to have a longer time than to-morrow morning, in order that I may be able to consult Mr. Brownell? I should like to submit any result that we would reach to him. Judge Knapp. We will only say to you that the application for the taking of testimony will be granted, and at the opening of court to-morrow morning we will make some announcement as to whether that testimony will be taken by an examiner or a member of this court.

Q. (By Mr. Manager STERLING). Mr. Gallagher, who is Mr. Swift?—A. Mr. Swift was the representative of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co.

Q. He was one of the attorneys for the petitioners in case 38?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Manager STERLING. That is all.

Cross-examination:

(By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Who was Mr. Esterline?-. Mr. Esterline represented the United States. Mr. WORTHINGTON. That is all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there are no further questions, the witness may retire.

The witness thereupon retired.

Mr. Manager STERLING. Mr. President, we offer the evidence of G. A. Richardson, taken before the Judiciary Commit-tee of the House, and ask to have it read because Mr. Richardson is sick and unable to attend.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, I should like at this point to repeat what I think I said the other day, and that is that we have agreed that this may be read, but we do not waive any objection to any part of it for materiality or competency, nor do we agree that the managers have any right to read here testimony taken before the Judiciary Committee. They do it now by our consent, but, of course, the question of whether they may read without it—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is done with your con-

Mr. WORTHINGTON. It is done with our consent. The question of whether they have a right to read testimony given there without our consent is not to be prejudiced by our consenting in this instance.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Therefore we do not ask consideration of a moot question, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF MR. G. A. RICHARDSON.

The witness was duly sworn by the chairman.

The Chairman. Mr. Richardson, will you please give your full name, your address, and your occupation to the reporter?

Mr. RICHARDSON. G. A. Richardson, 50 Church Street, New York; vice president of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you any connection, Mr. Richardson, with the Eric Railroad Co.?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I am a director of the Eric Railroad and vice president of the Eric Railroad.

The CHAIRMAN. And you are president of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co.?

President of the Eric Railroad.

The CHAIRMAN. And you are president of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co.?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Vice president.

The CHAIRMAN. And are you also a director in the coal company?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I am a director and vice president of about all of the subsidiary companies of the Eric Railroad.

The CHAIRMAN. And this Hillside Coal & Iron Co. is one of the subsidiary companies of the Eric Railroad?

Mr. RICHARDSON. The Eric Railroad owns the capital stock of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co.

The CHAIRMAN. Did Mr. George F. Brownell, the vice president and general counsel of the Eric Railroad Co., introduce Judge Archbald to you in your office in New York City some time during last summer—the summer of 1911?

Mr. RICHARDSON. He did.

The CHAIRMAN. Can you give the committee the time at which that occurred?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I can not.

The CHAIRMAN. Can you give the during the summer, in July or August, I should say, but I have no definite way of locating the time.

The CHAIRMAN. Of 1911?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Please state, Mr. Richardson, in your own way, what took place between yourself and Judge Archbald while Mr. Brownell was present in your office at the meeting to which you refer.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Nothing occurred that I can recall, except passing the time of day and speaking about things in general. Mr. Brownell left quite promptly afterwards. I believe he had an appointment to keep. The judge opened the matter of business on which he called by stating that he was either interested for himself or other parties in the Katydid culm bank. I told him I had had some conversation with Capt. May in regard to it several months prior to that time; that just what it was I could not recall, but that the next time Mr. May was in New York, or I was in Scranton, I would make it a point to ask him what the esituation was, and to see if some determination could not be arrived at. Subsequently, I suppose it might have been a few weeks or several months laier, Capt. May was in New York, and viously known—

The Chairman. When you say "he," that was Judge Archbald?
Mr. Richardson. That was Capt. May, on his succeeding visit to New

Mr. Richardson. That was Capt. May, on his succeeding visit to New York.

The Chairman. Yes. I want to know now what happened. I do not want to interrupt your story, but I want to get back, and I want to know what took place between you and Judge Archbald after Mr. Brownell left your office.

Mr. Richardson. He mentioned the purpose of his visit, and I told him I knew something of the case, but nothing of the particulars.

The Chairman. What did the judge say to you at that time, if you can recal?

Mr. Richardson. I can not recall his words, but it was to the point that he was interested in that property.

The Chairman. What was it?

Mr. Richardson. That he was interested in that property. That was the effect of his words. What they were in detail I do not know.

The Chairman. What property did he refer to?

Mr. Richardson. The Katydid culm bank.

The Chairman. Did he indicate what he wanted, or what he wanted you to do?

Mr. Richardson. I have no doubt that he did, but my recollection is that he either said he was interested or interested for people in it, and had made some application for it, and wanted to know the result.

The Chairman. That he was interested with some other people, you think, and he wanted to know what was the result of his application for the purchase of it?

Mr. Richardson. Well, that might be it or it might not be it. He might have said he was interested, or he might have said he was interested for other people. I do not recollect. It did not impress me one way or the other.

The Chairman. He told you he had come to your office for the purpose of ascertaining whether the deal for the Katydid culm bank would be consummated, did he not?

Mr. Richardson. He called on Mr. Brownell to find out what officer of the company he should see in regard to it.

The Chairman. Yes; and it was referred to you?

Mr. Richardson. Yes. He was brought over by Mr. Brownell and introduced personally, which is the custom on his part.

The Chairman. Mr. Brownell brought the judge into your office and introduced him, did he?

Mr. Richardson. He did; and it is customary on his part.

The Chairman. You had never known Judge Archbald before that time?

Mr. RICHARDSON. He did; and it is customary on his part.
The CHAIRMAN. You had never known Judge Archbald before that time?
Mr. RICHARDSON. I had never met him before.
The CHAIRMAN. And he came in to talk, and his business with you was looking to the purchase of the Katydid culm bank?
Mr. RICHARDSON. Particularly.
The CHAIRMAN. And you are not positive whether he said he was interested for other people who wanted to buy it, including himself, or that he and his associates wanted to buy it. You do not know what the language was that he used?
Mr. RICHARDSON. I am not positive. I do not know what language he used.
The CHAIRMAN. As nearly as you can, Mr. Richardson, please state what your recollection is of what he did say when he brought up the matter of the Katydid culm bank.
Mr. RICHARDSON. My recollection is that it made no particular impression upon me at the time, but I thought he was interested with other people who had made application for that bank.
The CHAIRMAN. You did not think he was interested merely as a friendly matter to other people, but you thought he was financially interested?
Mr. RICHARDSON. I had no way of knowing that. I made no inquiries pression upon me at the time, but I thought he was interested with other people who had made application for that bank.

The CHAIRMAN. You did not think he was interested merely as a friendly matter to other people, but you thought he was financially in the complex of the people, but you thought he was financially in the complex of th

Mr. RICHARDSON. Doubtless he told me, but I have no recollection of it.
Mr. FLOYD. You were not impressed with that?
Mr. RICHARDSON. Not at all.

Mr. Floyd. Please describe Capt. May's duties as superintendent of e Hillside Coal & Iron Co. Mr. RICHARDSON. He has practically complete charge of its operation.

eration.

Mr. Floyd. What was Capt. May's attitude regarding this proposition prior to your conference with Judge Archbald?

Mr. Richardson. It might have been favorable or it might have been unfavorable. But I am inclined to think it was just half way. He had not completed his investigation. He was just showing it to me as matter of precaution.

a matter of precaution.

Mr. FLOYD. Is it not a fact that you would ordinarily act in accordance with the recommendation of Capt. May in a matter of this kind?

Mr. RICHARDSON, Unless I had some very good reason to the con-

MR. FLOYD. Is it not a fact that you would ordinarily act in accordance with the recommendation of Capt. May in a matter of this kind?

Mr. RICHARDSON, Unless I had some very good reason to the contrary.

Mr. FLOYD. Had you discussed with Capt. May the price which the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. should receive for its interest in the Katydid culm bank in the event of a sale?

Mr. RICHARDSON, No; I have no recollection of discussing anything in regard to price with him.

Mr. FLOYD. Why did you not refer Judge Archbald to Capt. May when he disclosed the nature of his mission to you?

Mr. RICHARDSON, I practicallly did.

Mr. FLOYD. But later you brought it to the attention of Capt. May yourself again, did you not?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Oh, no; I brought Capt. May's attention to it the first time I saw him afterwards.

Mr. FLOYD. About how long after?

Mr. RICHARDSON. That was some time subsequent to Judge Archbald's visit.

Mr. FLOYD. About how long after?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I would be unable to say. It might have been a week or it might have been a month. Probably it was not more than a month.

Mr. FLOYD. What moved you to take action in the matter after your conference with Judge Archbald, under the attending circumstances?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Oh, I took action about the same as I do in I, probably, out of every S or 10 cases that come up. Some one comes in and asks me something about it, and I tell him that I have discussed it more or less with Capt. May, and will refer it to him and see what his final decision is.

Mr. FLOYD. What action did you take in the matter after you had this conference with Judge Archbald?

Mr. RICHARDSON. None at all.

Mr. FLOYD. Did you state that at the next visit of Capt. May to New York you brought it to his attention?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I said I would call Capt. May's attention to it the next time I saw him. I did not know whether I would see him in Scranton or in New York. My recollection is that I saw him in New York the next time.

Mr. FLOYD. Did not Judge Archbald request you to see Capt. M about II?

Mr. RICHARDSON, I do not know whether he requested me or not, but I said I would. Either he asked me or I volunteered the informa-

Mr. RICHARDSON. I do not know whether he requested me or not, but I said I would. Either he asked me or I volunteered the information.

Mr. FLOYD. Did you not understand that the reason for his visit to see you in regard to the matter was that he could not get satisfactory arrangements through Capt. May directly?

Mr. RICHARDSON. No; I did not understand it exactly in that way. He was there, and I suppose he took the opportunity of seeing me.

Mr. FLOYD. If Capt. May practically had the absolute control over those matters, what would be the necessity of Judge Archbald calling on you in reference to it unless there was some difference between you and Capt. May in regard to the transaction?

Mr. RICHARDSON. None, probably. Capt. May probably told him that the question was not ready for settlement, and that he could not reach any decision; and he might have said that he would refer the subject to New York or have a talk with me about it; and the next time Judge Archbald was in New York he asked me to see whoever had the matter in charge.

Mr. FLOYD. Capt. May had not, in fact, referred it to you by letter or otherwise?

Mr. RICHARDSON. He called it to my attention when I was there. He said that questions were likely to arise in the future, and he wanted me to know of it when they did.

Mr. DAYIS. Did you indicate to Judge Archbald whether your recommendation to Capt. May would be favorable or unfavorable?

Mr. RICHARDSON. In no way.

Mr. FLOYD. Is it not against the general policy of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. to dispose of its coal property interests?

Mr. RICHARDSON. It all depends upon the circumstances. Sometimes we do, but generally we do not, because we think we can operate—

Mr. FLOYD. I was asking you about the general policy.

Mr. RICHARDSON. It all depends upon the circumstances. Sometimes we do, but generally we do not, because we think we can operate the coal property to success where a great many other people would make a failure of it.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I did not depart from it. I simply told Capt.

received any report.

Mr. Webb. You say that the first time you heard anything about this Katydid proposition was in Scranton some time last summer, when Mr. May called your attention to it?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes.

Mr. Webb. I believe the evidence shows that Judge Archbald wrote Mr. May a letter some time in the spring of 1911 asking him to place a price on this culm bank, or asking him if he would fix a price.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I understand so, generally, but I have never seen any correspondence on the subject.

Mr. Webb. I imagine that it was in consequence of that letter that later Mr. May did ask you something about it?

Mr. Richardson. That and some future developments no doubt caused him to bring it to my attention.

Mr. Webb. And at that time in the summer you told him that under the circumstances he might let the matter rest?

Mr. Richardson. The matter was so complicated that I thought the matter might rest until some of the points were cleared up, anyway.

Mr. Webb. Exactly. And in something like a month or two after that Mr. Brownell introduced the judge to you?

Mr. Richardson. It might have been a month or six months; but my recollection has been called to it since, and it was probably about three months, in fact.

Mr. Webb. Can you tell just the conversation that the judge had with you, and what you said to him?

Mr. Richardson. Oh, no; I can not.

Mr. Webb. But you inferred from his conversation that he was interested alone, or interested with others in this Katydid culm bank?

Mr. Richardson. I did.

Mr. Webb. He wanted to buy or lease it, and you told him you would see if a determination of the matter could not be arrived at.

Mr. Richardson. I told him that Capt. May had spoken to me about it and showed it to me, and that the next time I saw him I would call his attention to it and see if we could not get rid of the difficulty, so that we could bring about a trade somewhere.

Mr. Webb. I understood you to say that you told the judge at that time that you would see if a determination could not be arrived at.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes, sir; that is it.

Mr. Webb. Then, what did you communicate to Capt. May in consequence of that agreement with the judge, that you would look after the matter? What did you tell Mr. May?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I suppose I had an accumulation of just about twenty things. I can only go on the order of my business. I have no notes whatever.

Mr. Webb. The probability is that you communicated with him pretty son?

twenty things. I can only go on the order of my business. I have no notes whatever.

Mr. Webb. The probability is that you communicated with him pretty

Mr. Webb. The probability is that you communicated with him pretty soon?

Mr. Richardson. I assume that I asked him to come to see me, as I had numerous things to discuss with him.

Mr. Webb. Do you remember discussing this with him?

Mr. Richardson. I remember discussing it with him?

Mr. Webb. Did you tell him to go ahead with the matter?

Mr. Richardson. I told him to go ahead and to complete his investigation of it as soon as he could.

Mr. Webb. It is in evidence here that very soon after the judge called on you in New York Mr. May notified Mr. Williams, who had made application for this lease, to come around to his place of business and he would give him that option, and that in consequence of that understanding Mr. Williams did go around and got a letter which they called an option on this culm bank. Looking at it from your standpoint, now, would you take it that Mr. May agreed to this option in consequence of what you told him, and in consequence of the judge's visit to New York to see you, coming so soon after the judge's return from New York?

Mr. Richardson. No: I do not really see how Capt. May could give anyone an option on it, because his interest in it was so small.

Mr. Webb. Sir?

Mr. Richardson. I say I can not see how Capt. May could give anyone an option on it, because his interest in it was so small.

Mr. Webb. Sir?

Mr. Richardson. I could not be held responsible for that, because I would try to have him act on his own initiative in a great many matters.

Mr. Webb. Exactly; but the point I am making is that a few days, it

Mr. Richardson. I could not be held responsible for that, because I would try to have him act on his own initiative in a great many matters.

Mr. Webb. Exactly; but the point I am making is that a few days, it may be immediately after the judge's return from his visit to New York to see you, we find a letter ceming from Capt. May to Mr. Williams saying that if he would come around he would give him the option, or recommend the option; and that he did so. His letter is in evidence here. Would you say that that letter, coming so soon after the judge's return from New York, was written in consequence of your instruction to May, or the judge's call upon you, or what would you attribute that to?

Mr. Richardson. I should attribute it, if Capt. May wrote that letter, that it was based upon some instruction or authority that I gave him.

Mr. Webb. The truth of it is, and I believe Capt. May so testified, that you changed your attitude in regard to this matter from what it was in the summer to what it became later on?

Mr. Richardson. I think he was entirely wrong if he so testified.

Mr. Webb. Judge Moon calls my attention to the fact that the evidence of Capt. May is that when you first discussed it with him you were opposed to it, but that later on you changed your attitude in regard to the matter.

Mr. Richardson. I recall his first testimony, because I think I heard it. I think that he said I did not approve of it, which was an indication that he probably recommended it; but I do not so recall it. I think he was blased—

Mr. Webb. But if Mr. May did write this letter saying that he was ready to give the option, or would give it, naturally it was in conse-

Indication that he proposity recommended it; but I do not so recall it. I think he was biased—

Mr. Weer. But if Mr. May did write this letter saying that he was ready to give the option, or would give it, naturally it was in consequence of something that you had said to him later on?

Mr. Richardson. That might have been, but I do not think it could have been. I do not think I gave him any such authority.

Mr. Weer. The testimony so far shows, Mr. Richardson, that Mr. May would not consider the proposition to lease this culm dump, and that later on in the summer the judge went to New York to see you, and did see you, and within a few days—I do not know whether it was the next day, but almost immediately—after the judge returned from New York to Scranton Mr. Williams went around and got a letter from Capt. May, saying that he would now recommend the lease. Would you not, looking at the matter as the business man that you are, judge that that recommendation on the part of Mr. May was brought about by something that you had directed him to do or told him or advised him?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I might have seen Capt. May a week or 10 days later than I saw Judge Archbald. I have no way of fixing it; but I will let it go by saying that when I did see Capt. May I instructed him what to do, and that was to clear up the title as much as possible and rid ourselves of a property that was bringing us no return and might not in the future.

Mr. Weer. But when the letter was written immediately after the lates.

Mr. Webb. But when the letter was written immediately after the judge's return from New York, written by Capt. May saying that he would recommend the lease, the title had not been cleared up, so Capt. May said.

Mr. RICHARDSON. And it has not to this day, so far as I know.

Mr. Webb. Exactly: Then how can you account for Capt. May writing this letter to Mr. Williams telling him he would make this lease to him, so soon after the judge's return from New York to see you?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I assume that he did it anticipating the approval of his superior officer. If it would come to me not cleared up, I would not have approved it.

Mr. Webb. You had already said to May to let it lie on account of the condition of the title. You had already directed May to let it run because the title was not clear. A day or two after the judge calls on you in New York, and then Capt. May writes a letter in which he says "I am now ready to grant the option."

Mr. RICHARDSON. My instructions were to go ahead and clear up the whole situation.

"I am now ready to grant the option."

Mr. RICHARDSON. My instructions were to go ahead and clear up the whole situation.

Mr. Webb. But he wrote this letter before the whole situation was cleared up, according to the testimony.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Then he probably overestimated his authority, I do not know any other way to explain it.

Mr. Webb. You said awhile ago that if he wrote the letter probably it was on authority that you had given him.

Mr. RICHARDSON. My general authority to him is to act on his own initiative as far as possible; and if he knew he had cleared the title to the property, he could act accordingly.

Mr. Webb. Do you think in view of what you told him personally in Scranton, to let the matter lie, that inside of a month after that he would have written this letter saying that he was now ready to give the option, unless he had gotten some authority from you to do so?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Not knowingly, he might have undertaken to dispose of the rights that he had, in the letter, for a certain price—not the rights of the whole property.

Mr. Webb. Here is a letter, Mr. Richardson, that Mr. May wrote on August 30, 1911, after the judge had been to New York and had seen you, and after you had told Mr. May to let the matter rest. It reads:

Mr. E. J. Williams,

Mr. E. J. WILLIAMS, 626 South Blakely Street, Dunmore, Pa.

DEAR SIR: As stated to you to-day, verbally, I shall recommend the sale of whatever interest the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. has in what is known as the Katydid culm dump, made by Messrs. Robertson & Law in the operation of the Katydid breaker, for $4,500.

In order that it may not be lost sight of, I will mention that any coal above the size of pea coal will be subject to a royalty to the owners of lot 46, upon the surface of which the bank is located.

It is also understood that the bank will not be conveyed to anyone else without the consent of the H. C. & I. Co., and that if the offer is accepted articles of agreement will be drawn to cover the transaction. Yours, very truly,

W. A. May, General Manager.

W. A. MAY, General Manager.

Yours, very truly,

W. A. May, General Manager.

Can you give the committee any idea as to what made Capt. May change his attitude so soon after you had told him to let the matter lie? The title had not been changed, the title had not been cleared up. In other words, do you not know, Mr. Richardson, that it was in consequence of the judge's visit to you in New York? Is not that the fact, now? Naturally, would it not be so?

Mr. Richardson. I think you are in error in regard to the instruction I gave him. I did not instruct him to clear it up, but to go ahead and clear the incumbrances, if he could, which he had brought to my attention before. He probably on his second visit to New York told me all he had told me on his first visit, reminding me of all the complications. Now he gets through and leaves New York with instructions to clear the proposition up to the best of his ability. He makes a proposition to somebody that he would sell the Hilliside Coal & Iron Co.'s interest in it. It might be more or less—

Mr. Weeb. But that was under your instruction, was it not?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes; that is part of his authority.

Mr. Weeb. That was all the judge wanted, was it not—your interest in it? He did not expect to get the interest of anybody else?

Mr. RICHARDSON. But he did not buy it, and the offer is still open. That is, simply the Hilliside Coal & Iron Co.'s interest.

Mr. Weeb. I understand that the offer is still open; but an agreement was made that they would lease it—that your company would lease it?

Mr. RICHARDSON. In the proposition you have read me Capt. May says he will sell the Hillside's interest for $4,500; and he is prepared to take that now, but he can not find a taker.

Mr. Weeb. But he was not willing to do that 30 days before he wrote his letter?

Mr. RICHARDSON. The matter had not progressed far enough to act, sir.

Mr. Werb. There had been no change in the title or in the conditions,

Mr. RICHARDSON. The matter had not progressed the total sir.

Mr. Webb. There had been no change in the title or in the conditions, except that the judge had seen you in New York?

Mr. RICHARDSON. It was the consequence of subsequent negotiations. Mr. Webb. But the negotiations had not been changed. The same negotiations were on foot between the judge and Williams and May. You had told May to let the matter rest; and in less than 30 days we find May writes a letter, and that he changes his entire attitude and says, "I will sell now."

Mr. RICHARDSON. That might be his way of clearing up the situation. It might be that he found certain things that he could not clear up, and consequently he would sell the interest.

Mr. Webb. Then he knew that he had authority to clear it up to this extent?

Mr. Webb. Then he knew that he had authority to clear it up to this extent?

Mr. Richardson. He had authority to clear it up in any way he saw fit.

Mr. Webb. You gave him that authority, and told him—
Mr. Richardson. I do not think he needed any authority. He had it in the first place.

Mr. Webb. Did you not promise the judge that you would see that there was some determination made of the matter?

Mr. Richardson. I promised the judge nothing whatever, sir.

Mr. Webb. You told him you would see—

Mr. Richardson. I told him I would see the general manager in regard to it, as I tell everyone.

Mr. Webb. And the general manager in less than 30 days after you saw him wrote—

Mr. Richardson. I do not know. The record shows everything he did.

did.

Mr. Webb. I think the record shows that in less than 30 days he saw him on the street and told him to come around and that he would saw him on the street and told him to constitution.

Mr. RICHARDSON. And he gave him an offer that he did not accept, and has not accepted yet.

Mr. Webb. Later he did make a lease, did he not, or draw a lease at the suggestion of Mr. Williams, leasing the culm bank property to one Bradley, or selling the property to Bradley?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have understood it so in a general way. I would consider the letter that you read as a perfect lease.

Mr. Webb. You would?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I would consider the letter from Capt. May, that

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have understood it so in a general way. I would consider the letter that you read as a perfect lease.

Mr. Webb. You would?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I would consider the letter from Capt. May, that you read, as practically a perfect lease.

Mr. RICHARDSON. If it was properly signed, I think it would give sufficient authority to anyone to operate it.

Mr. RICHARDSON. If it was properly signed, I think it would give sufficient authority to anyone to operate it.

Mr. Webb. And this letter, which you say is a perfect lease, was written within 30 days after you told him to let the matter lie. Is it not fair to draw the conclusion that the lease which you say is perfect now would not have been made except by reason of the judge's visit to you in New York?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have already said you could assume it. I instructed Capt. May to find out about it and clear it up as soon as he possibly could, whether that was one week after the judge's visit or three months later; but here you see he had not cleared the title. He says he will sell all of the interest of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. in it, whatever it may be. There is no attempt to clear up the title in this letter.

Mr. Webb. The date will show for itself. That is all I want.

Mr. McCov. What was it that the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. was proposing to part with?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Their interest in the Katydid culm bank.

Mr. McCov. The proposition was, then, to give a quitclaim deed of whatever they had there?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have would give whatever they had in the bank. I do not know—

Mr. McCov. That would be the customary way of parting with right, title, and interest, would it not?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I do not know what legal document might be required to give our interest in it.

Mr. McCov. As I recollect your testimony, it was to the effect that when you went to Scranton at one time you did talk with Capt. May about this property, and he described the situation to you, and your testimony was that it was so complicated that you told him to drop i did come before me.

Mr. McCov. What was it that it was expected would be called to your attention later? Was it the valuation of the property or the condition of the title?

Mr. RICHARDSON, Oh, he might have come to New York at some subsequent date, and he might have talked to me on that subject, or on two or three other subjects.

Mr. McCoy. But I say, at the time you were in Scranton and had this first talk with Capt. May about the property, what was it that you then expected he would later call to your attention and clear up? Was it the question of what the property was worth or the title to the property.

property?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Oh, I have not the least idea—not the least in the world—whether it was the question of money or of the title to the

Mr. RICHARDSON. Oh, I have not the least idea—not the least in the world—whether it was the question of money or of the title to the property.

Mr. McCoy. What did he state to you at the time in Scranton were the difficulties involved in the matter?

Mr. McCoy. What did he state to you at the time in Scranton were the difficulties involved in the matter?

Mr. RICHARDSON. My recollection is, assuming that the difficulties were difficulties affecting the title, what difference did it make what those difficulties were, when all that the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. was to transfer was its right, title, and interest in the property?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Practically none, I should say.

Mr. McCoy. Then it made no difference how complicated the title was, or what anybody was claiming, because the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. was to convey only its interest. That is all there was to it. Is not that the fact?

Mr. RICHARDSON. But you must recall that this was a personal conversation. He might have told me or he might not. If he had been writing me on the subject he would probably give the price, the names, the title, and everything that he could think about; and if there was anything that I could think about that was not covered, I would probably call his intention to it, and ask about it; because when I finally determine a subject, I ascertain and know everything about it.

Mr. McCoy. Did he ever communicate to you in writing subsequently about it?

Mr. RICHARDSON. No; I communicated with him first, the second time.

Mr. RICHARDSON. After Judge Archbald came to see me.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I did not communicate with him by letter. I communicated with him verbally. I probably had from a dozen to 15 or 20 subjects to discuss with him. I have them currently. I have them every day.

Mr. McCoy. I am not referring to any matter except to this particular matter.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I probably had a dozen or twenty others with that, them every day.

Mr. McCox. I am not referring to any matter except to this particular matter.

Mr. Richardson. I probably had a dozen or twenty others with that, I will say.

Mr. McCox. That does not interest us. What other communication did you have with him, either verbally or in writing, in regard to the interest of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. in this culm bank?

Mr. Richardson, I had none in writing. Whatever communication I had with him was verbal.

Mr. McCox. What communication did you have with him in regard to this after you saw him in Scranton?

Mr. Richardson. He came to New York, or I went to Scranton. I have said that presumably he went to New York. There were several subjects to be discussed and one was this culm bank.

Mr. McCox. Was the title to the property discussed at that time?

Mr. Richardson, I have not any recollection of what I might have discussed with him. I think I discussed every phase of it with him. That had been my custom.

Mr. McCox. Your testimony, then, is that you now have not any recollection of even the substance of your conversation with Capt. May when you saw him the second time there in New York or in Scranton?

Mr. Richardson. I have a very close recollection of the whole transaction when I saw him in Scranton, and I think I have already testified as to that.

Mr. McCov. I am talking about the subsequent interview.

Mr. Richardson. In the subsequent interview in New York I assume that I sent for him and that, amongst other subjects about which I spoke to him, I mentioned Judge Archbald's desire to secure this bank either for himself or his associates, or both combined, and told him to go ahead and see if he could not close it up in some manner. That would have been done for anyone else.

Mr. McCov. I understood you to say a few minutes ago that you might on that occasion have discussed in detail this question of the culm bank. Is not that what you said—that you might have done so? Mr. Richardson. My ordinary practice would be—and that is all I can give you, because this is no exception to the general rule—Mr. McCov. My question is this: Have you now any personal recollection of your conversation at the second interview with Capt. May?

Mr. Richardson. None whatever.

Mr. McCov. In regard to the culm bank?

Mr. Richardson. None whatever.

Mr. McCov. You do not now recollect?

Mr. Richardson. None whatever.

Mr. Richardson. None whatever.

Mr. Richardson. That is what I wanted to get. Now, did you say there was no established policy of the Eric Railroad or any of its subsidiary companies in regard to the sale of its coal properties?

Mr. Richardson. I make whatever policy they have, as an officer of the coal company. I would know the general basis. If anyone can operate the property to advantage, the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. can. I should look very closely into some one else's proposition to buy coal property from the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. is adverse, prima facie, to the sale of any of its cal properties?

Mr. Richardson. I do not think I go that far. If anyone comes to me I refer him to Capt. May to get a full report of the details and his recommendation. I think I would reserve my own judgment until I had received or I think it is desirable. You may make my answer to that I do, if you like.

Mr. McCoy. Let me ask you another question. Has the Erie Co., or any of its subsidiary companies, in the last five years, parted with their or either of their interests in any coal property?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes.

Mr. MCCOY. What property?

Mr. RICHARDSON, Well, I can not mention all of them now. I know there are certain outlying coal properties that we could not work to advantage, and if we would receive what I thought was a proper price for them we would sell them without any question.

Mr. McCoy. You are talking about what you would do. I am asking for a matter of fact.

Mr. RICHARDSON, I can give you specific cases if you will give me time to refer to the records. I can not do it offhand.

Mr. McCoy. That, of course, is a fair suggestion, to give you time, but can you not—

Mr. RICHARDSON. I could not tell you.

Mr. MCCOY. Without tying you down to any specific number, have there been numerous instances in the last five years in which the Erie or any of its subsidiary companies, or affiliated companies, companies in which it owns a controlling part of the stock, have sold their properties? Have there been numerous instances?

Mr. RICHARDSON. The cases have not been numerous. The applications have been more or less numerous, but when looked into they are found faulty in some respect, either as to the price or the prospects.

tions have been more or less numerous, but when looked into they are found faulty in some respect, either as to the price or the prospects.

Mr. McCox. Will you furnish to the committee when you get back to New York, as soon as you can, a statement of the number of instances in which any of these companies which I have referred to have absolutely parted with their interest in any coal properties—not leasing them?

Mr. Richardson. I can give you one, I think, within the last year.

Mr. McCox. Mr. Richardson, I have asked you to give me all, and you say you can not do it. I prefer to give you the opportunity you want of getting the information back in New York and sending it, so that we could have it accurately.

Mr. Richardson. I am perfectly agreeable.

Mr. Norris. I would suggest that you confine it to properties that are on the railroad. I think you had better confine it to those.

Mr. Webb. Because this one is on the railroad.

Mr. McCox. All the properties which any of these companies have absolutely sold their title to; and their location in a general way. I do not care for the metes and bounds.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Will you specify the period of time?

Mr. McCox. I say in the last five years.

Mr. RICHARDSON. That does not mean leases, but sales?

Mr. RICHARDSON. That does not mean leases, but sales?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I can say now that I think it has never sold. It would be a question of lease.

Mr. McCox. You say now that they have never sold?

Mr. RICHARDSON. The does not mean leases, but sales?

Mr. RICHARDSON. The account of the sale of the right. title, and interest?

Mr. McCox. But the question in the Katydid culm bank was a question of the sale of the right. title, and interest?

Mr. McCox. You do not need to get me the list, because you have answered my question. I just wanted a list of the properties which any of these companies associated with, controlled by, or affiliated with the Erie Co. had absolutely sold, or their interest in which they have absolutely parted with—not by lease, but by a quitcl

Mr. Richardson. Oh. I have no doubt I knew it, but it made no impression on me, to think of it particularly.

Mr. Werb. No; but you did know it?

Mr. Richardson. I would say that, as a fairly well informed man, I probably knew it.

Mr. Werb. Did you know that your railroad company, of which you were the vice president, was the defendant in a suit that was then pending before his court?

Mr. Richardson. No; I did not. I saw the general solicitor almost daily and we talked of different things. He might have told me about one thing one day, and I might have forgotten it. I have no recollection about it in any way or shape now.

Mr. Werd. You do not know, now, whether your company has a suit in the Commerce Court or not?

Mr. Richardson. I do not know whether any Erle suits are lodged there now or not.

Mr. Werd. No you know whether they ever had a suit in the Commerce Court.

Mr. Richardson. I am not sure that I ever heard of any one that was ever before that court.

Mr. Richardson. I am not sure that I know of any that were ever taken to the Commerce Court.

Mr. Werd. Do you know that your railroad ever had a suit before the Commerce Commission?

Mr. Richardson. The Interstate Commerce Commission?

Mr. Richardson. The Interstate Commerce Commission?

Mr. Richardson. The Interstate Commerce Commission?

Mr. Werd. You never knew that this lighterage case in which the Eric Railroad Co. was defendant was appealed from the Interstate Commerce Commission to the Commerce Court—and you were vice president of the railroad?

Mr. Richardson. I erlally know nothing about it myself.

Mr. Richardson. I do not know as much about it as you do.

Mr. Richardson. I really know nothing about it myself.

Mr. Richardson. I was thinking about it myself.

Mr. Richardson. I do not throw as much about it myself.

Mr. Richardson. I do not the was a suit before the Commerce Court?

Mr. Richardson. I do not think anything about it myself.

Mr. Richardson. I do not suppose you knew, then, that it was possible for your railroad to even have a had in his mind?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have never known Mr. Brownell, in this or in any other case, to use any unfair or improper methods.

Mr. Webb. Do you think that is an answer to my question?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I think so; yes.

Mr. Webb. I will repeat it. Do you believe that Mr. Brownell would have brought Judge Archbald into your office and introduced him in the way and manner he did to you if he had not then known the purpose the judge had in mind?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I do not believe I can answer that yes or no. I might say.

Mr. Richardson, I do not believe I can answer that yes or no. I might say—
Mr. Webb. Read the question.
The reporter read as follows:
"Mr. Webb. I will repeat it. Do you believe that Mr. Brownell would have brought Judge Archbald into your office and introduced him in the way and manner he did to you if he had not then known the purpose the judge had in mind?"

Mr. Richardson, Yes; I do. I think he would have brought anyone in that came to him for information.
Mr. Webb. Did he ever bring anybody else to you in the last 10 years who wanted to buy an interest in a culm bank or a colliery belonging to your railroad or coal company?
Mr. Richardson, I have no idea. He has brought numerous people in on numerous subjects.
Mr. Webb. Do you know of one that he has brought in there who wanted to buy the company's interest in coal property? Because you have not sold any and you were not trying to sell any?
Mr. Richardson. We might have leased our interest in some prop-

Mr. RICHARDSON. We might have leased our interest in some prop-

Mr. Webb. I understand; but this is not a leasing proposition, but a proposition to part with the entire title in the Katydid culm bank—something that you had never done in five years.

Mr. RICHARDSON, I think Mr. Brownell brought him in simply because he came to him. He did not express himself in any particular way about it.

Mr. FLOYD. Mr. Richardson, Mr. Brownell has been before this committee, and he testified as follows in answer to questions by the chair-

"The CHAIRMAN. Please state in your own way, Mr. Brownell, just what took place at that conference or that meeting between you and Judge Archbald in your office in New York City.

"Mr. Brownell. Judge Archbald called at my office something before 12 o'clock on that day.

12 o'clock on that day.

"The CHAIRMAN. On what day?

"Mr. Brownell. On Friday, the 4th of August. I fix the time, because I had an engagement between the hours of 12 and 1, and therefore in writing him had indicated a desire for an early appointment rather than an afternoon appointment. I was also preparing to leave on vacation in the afternoon.

"The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

"Mr. Brownell. Judge Archbald stated, in substance, that he was interested in an endeavor to clear up the title to certain coal property in the vicinity of Scranton belonging to third parties—I mean by that otherwise than the Hillside Coal & Iron Co.—in which the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. had, or claimed to have, some disputed title of a fractional character."

Did not Judge Archbald and you discuss this question of the title, and Did not Judge Archbald and you discuss this question of the title, and did not Judge Archbald explain to you the situation about the title to that property?

Mr. Richardson. He may have explained to me about what Mr. Brownell expressed on the witness stand. He made some explanation of it. All I can recall is that he called my attention to the property and that some proposition had been made. Whether he had made it, or his clients, or what it was, I do not remember.

Mr. Floyd. Mr. Brownell states that Judge Archbald told him that his purpose was or that he was interested in an endeavor to clear up the title to this coal property at Scranton.

Mr. Richardson. Yes.

Mr. Floyd. Did Judge Archbald tell you any such thing was his purpose?

Mr. Richardson. He probably did. He probably told me the very thing he told Mr. Brownell.

Mr. Floyd. Did he not, in that interview that he had with you, show that he was familiar with the title, and give you information about the title, and explain to you that it was not necessary to delay the sale or transfer of that property on account of the title; that you could simply transfer your company's interest and that they would look after the other interests in the title, and if that does not change your attitude?

Mr. Richardson. I have no recollection at all about what he might have said to me, or what he offered, or what he might have said about the title.

Mr. FLOYD. I understood you to say in response to a question that was asked by Mr. McCoy in regard to your conversation with Capt. May that you had no present recollection of what you did say to Capt. May that property on the middle standards of the interview at Scranton?

Mr. FLOYD. No; the second interview—not at Scranton.

Mr. RICHARDSON. At New York?

Mr. FLOYD. I understood you to say that you did have an accurate recollection of what occurred at the interview at Scranton.

Mr. RICHARDSON. At New York?

Mr. FLOYD. I understood you to say that you did have an accurate recollection of what occurred at the interview at Scranton.

Mr. RICHARDSON. At New York?

Mr. FLOYD. I understond you to say that you did have an accurate recollection of what occurred at the interview at Scranto ment of what occurred there on your habitual custom as a business man?

Mr. Richardson. No; what I told Judge Archbald and what I told Capt. May would be two vastly different things on the same subject.

Mr. Floyd. I understand. But what is your present recollection—not from your habits of business, or what you would be likely to do? What is your present recollection of what did occur between you and Judge Archbald?

Mr. Richardson. I can base my recollection on what occurred yesterday afternoon. A man comes in to see me about some coal-property case that he has up. I say that I know something about it. I do not assume to know the details. I may know more than I confess to him, but all I can say is that I will submit it to my next subordinate officer the next time I see him, and I base my action on what he tells me at that time.

Mr. Floyd. That is no answer to my question. My question is for you to state now what is your present recollection of your interview with Judge Archbald, when Mr. Brownell introduced him to you on that occasion, the first time you had ever met him.

Mr. Richardson. I think I gave it early in my testimony; but it was to the effect that he was interested, or interested with others, in the Katydid culm bank; and I said yes. I knew something about it, because Capt. May had taken me there and showed it to me and explained it to me, and that the next time I saw him I should take it up with him and ascertain what was holding it up.

Mr. Floyd. You understood that he was interested individually, or with others, or for others, in the purchase of that property, did you not?

Mr. Richardson. Yes.

up with him and ascertain what was holding it up.

Mr. Floyd. You understood that he was interested individually, or with others, or for others, in the purchase of that property, did you not?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes.
Mr. FLOYD. You got that idea?
Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes. he wanted to acquire the bank and wash it, as I understood it. What he was trying to do with it I did not know. Mr. FLOYD. That is all.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any other questions, gentlemen? Mr. Worthington, do you wish to ask Mr. Richardson any questions?
Mr. WORTHINGTON. Yes; do you know of a dump owned by the Hillside Co. called the Florence dump?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have heard of it, and knew it at one time.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. Do you remember whether that is one dump that your company sold within recent years—sold its interest in?

Mr. RICHARDSON. My recollection is that they sold it to some one.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. Now, about this very dump, the Katydid dump. Do you remember that within recent years you offered to sell that very dump, or your interest in it, to the Dupont Powder Co. for $2,000?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Well, that is subsequent recollection. I might have known at one time in regard to it and dismissed it from my mind.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. Let me ask you whether in anything you did in this matter you took any action or did anything or suggested anything on account of Judge Archbald's supposed power or influence as a member of the Commerce Court?

Mr. RICHARDSON. None whatever.
Mr. RICHARDSON. None whatever.
Mr. RICHARDSON. I can lot fix the date at all. It was probably two or three months after my interview at Scranton.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. Lot und not say that.
Mr. RICHARDSON. I could not say that.
Mr. RICHARDSON. I could not say that.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. On page 106 of Serial 3 it appears that Mr. Brownell's introduction of Mr. Archbald to you was a few days before the 30th of August?
Mr. RICHARDSON. I can not fix the date at all. It was probably two or three months after my interview at Scranton.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. On page 106 of Serial 3 it appears tha

Mr. Worthington. Is this Katydid dump on the line of the Erie Railroad or the Hillside?

Mr. Richardson. My recollection is that it is on the New York, Susquehanna & Western Railroad, near the Hillside junction.

Mr. Worthington. The Hillside Co. is not a railroad?

Mr. Richardson. No, sir; the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. is a coal company.

Mr. RICHARDSON. No, sir; the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. Is a company.

Mr. Worthington. How far is it from your line? How far is the Katydid coal dump from the Erie line—the nearest point?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I should think it was—well, not over 5 miles nor less than half a mile. It is close to the Hillside junction. I do not know just the distance.

Mr. McCor. Would the coal from the Katydid dump be shipped over the Erie or over the Susquehanna?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I think it could be shipped over both roads, but it would probably go over the Susquehanna. I think it could be shipped over both roads from the Hillside junction.

Mr. McCor. Do not these coal-carrying companies have arrangements with each other by which in a situation of that kind they charge the shipping railroad what they would charge themselves, so to speak, for shipping the coal?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Well, they have some arrangement, but that is all made by the traffic department. I do not have anything to do with that.

Mr. McCov. In other words, if the Erie Co. owned a coal mine on the line of the Susquehanna, it would not cost it any more to ship the coal than it would to ship coal from a mine on the Erie line itself. Is not that a fact?

Mf. McCoy. In other words, if the Erie Co. owned a coal mine on the line of the Susquehanna, it would not cost it any more to ship the coal than it would to ship coal from a mine on the Erie line itself. Is not that a fact?

Mf. Richardson. I am not sure about that. I am inclined to think that the Susquehanna road would ship its own coal through from the operations on its line.

Mf. McCoy. That may be, but my point is this: Here is an Eric coal property on the line of the Susquehanna Railroad or more accessible to the Susquehanna than to the Erie.

Mf. Richardson. Yes.

Mf. McCoy. The Susquehanna would ship the coal to Hoboken, for instance, or wherever you ship if—to Jersey City—mined by the Erie Co. Just as cheaply as it would ship the coal which one of its own properties produce; or, in other words, it would charge the Erie for shipping the coal what it charges against its own company when it ships its own coal. Is not that the fact?

Mf. Richardson. I can not give you that directly. I can only say that I assume that they have some reciprocal arrangements whereby they balance those things up.

Mf. Norris. Did I understand you to say, in answer to Mr. Worthington's question, that the Katydid dump was not on the line of your railed that it is not the New York, Susquehanna & Western line, near the Hilliside junctin.

Mf. NORRIS. There are probably several roads that run so near to it that it might be said to be on all of them. What I want to know is its it or not on your line—that is, on the Erie line?

Mf. Richardson. I think not. If you will let me give the best of my recollection, it is on the New York, Susquehanna & Western. I do not think it can be on the line of any other company.

Mf. Norris. Joi to not never offer to sell this before?

Mf. Richardson. I have no way of knowing that. I do not know. Mf. Norris. You did not know anything about it, did you?

Mf. Richardson. I have known of the operation, but I do not recollect that transaction ever coming up before.

Mf. Norris. You did not know anything abo

Mr. Norris. Do you know anything about the Du Pont Powder Co. proposition?

Mr. RICHARDSON, I may have known about it at the time, but I do not recall it now.

not recall it now.

Mr. Norris. You do not remember it now?

Mr. Richardson. I remember it now, because I have heard subsequent conversation about it, just as I have about the Florence culm bank, when the gentleman here inquired of me if we had disposed of our interest in it.

Mr. Norris. Did you offer to sell your interest in the Katydid culm bank to the Du Pont Powder Co. for $2,000?

Mr. Richardson. It might have been carried out subject to my approval, and brought to me. I do not think it was.

Mr. Norris. Can you tell us now whether you would have been inclined to recommend the sale of the interest for $2,000?

Mr. Richardson. It would depend upon the presentation of the case to me.

Mr. Norris. What do you mean by that?

Mr. Norris. What do you mean by that?

Mr. RICHARDSON. If Capt, May had made a very full and complete argument in regard to the ownership, title, and value of the property, and possibly had come down to explain to me, I nlight have approved it.

Mr. Norris. Assuming that Capt. May would tell you the truth, and

Mr. Norris. Assuming that Capt. May would tell you the truth, and would tell you the same in one case that he would in another, would you have been inclined to sell to the Du Pont Powder Co. for $2,000 what you were selling to Judge Archbald or Mr. Williams, whichever it might be, for $4,500?

Mr. Richardson. I would assume always that Capt. May was telling me the truth, and whatever recommendation he made, even if I saw nothing was to be made on it, I would approve it.

Mr. Norris. But you say it would depend upon what Capt. May said as to whether you would accept $2,000. Assuming that Capt. May would say the same thing when the Du Pont people came to him that he would say when Judge Archbald came to him—assuming that, would you have been likely to have taken that for your interest? Would you have accepted $2,000?

Mr. Richardson. If it is possible to assume those things, I would accept it and approve it.

Mr. Norris. You would have accepted $2,000?

Mr. Richardson. Without question, if the whole matter was clear and straightforward. It might be good policy. I can tell better after it works out.

Mr. Norris. Do you mean by that that you probably did instruct May to sell it for $2,000?

Mr. Richardson. I have not any recollection on the subject, either good or bad. I do not believe he ever took it up with me.

Mr. Norris. This price of $4,500 was fixed on his recommendation, was it?

Mr. Richardson. I have never seen that recommendation. It has not come to me.

Mr. Norris. This price of $4,000 was fixed on his recommendation. Was it?

Mr. Richardson. I have never seen that recommendation. It has not come to me.

Mr. Norris. How did that price come to be fixed?

Mr. Richardson. I just heard it here, when the letter was read offering it at that price.

Mr. Norris. You did not know anything about that?

Mr. Richardson. Yes; because I have seen copies of the letter since bare here here.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes; because I have seen copies of the letter since I have been here.

Mr. Norris. Who originated the price?

Mr. RICHARDSON.-I have no doubt that Capt. May originated it. I think it is within his power to do so.

Mr. Norris. What I mean is, if you were going to sell the property, who would fix the price? Would Capt. May offer to sell it for $4,500 without first getting your consent to that?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I think the price would really be fixed between him and me.

Mr. Norris. You have not anything to do with fixing the price?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have not fixed it.

Mr. Norris. There was an offer to sell it for $4,500 after the judge consulted you about it?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes; and I may have approved it and may not.

Mr. Norris. But he had made that offer as manager of the company to sell it for $4,500, and he had never consulted with you about the price?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I do not recall his consulting me at all about the or sell it for $4,500, and he had never consulted with you about the price?

Mr. Richardson. I do not recall his consulting me at all about the $4,500 price.

Mr. Norris. You know that he offered it for $4,500?

Mr. Richardson. I saw that by the letter that was just read.

Mr. Norris. You do not know what fixed in his mind that he should get that amount of $4,500?

Mr. Richardson. Oh, I am inclined to think that he thought it was probably a couple of thousand dollars more than I thought he might be able to get for it, and consequently it would be such a good price that I would not fall to approve it. And for that amount of money I certainly would approve it.

Mr. Norris. You would approve anything that he recommended?

Mr. Richardson. Anything that he would recommend for $4,500, if it was worth twice that much, to keep his recommendation good.

Mr. Norris. I am trying to get at the proposition whether he had authority to fix a price. You first said—

Mr. Richardson. Let it go that he had authority. Let it go that way.

AIR. NORRIS. I do not want it to go at that, unless it is the truth, you know.

MR. RICHARDSON. I said it would lie between us. I said that anything I disapproved would be rejected.

MR. NORRIS. If you said you would sell for $4,500 he would have to sell it?

Mr. Norris. If you said you would sell for $4,500 he would have to sell it?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes. I would have that authority as an executive officer of the company.

Mr. Norris. Did you not have authority to fix the price?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes; as an executive officer.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes; as an executive officer.

Mr. RUCHER. I want to read Capt. May's testimony in this connection:

"Mr. RUCHER. While it is true that you had given some consideration to the sale of this cuim pile before your trip to New York, at the time you conferred with your superior officer. Mr. Richardson, you had never fixed a price on it until after that, had you?

"Mr. MAY. No; I had not."

So it seems that he had never fixed a price on that cuim bank until he had seen you. [Reading further:]

"Mr. FLOYD. Capt. May, you stated that when you first mentioned this matter to your superior officer, Mr. Richardson, he protested or objected on account of title, and that afterwards he acquiesced?

"Mr. MAY. Yes.

"Mr. FLOYD. After you had this interview in New York, or at that time, was when he acquiesced in your recommendations, was it not?

"Mr. MAY. When I had the—

"Mr. FLOYD. When he told you in New York to go on with the deal, you understood that to be an acquiescence in your former recommendations to sell it?

"Mr. May. Yes, sir; I did—to further consider it.

"Mr. FLOYD. To further consider it.

in theerstood that to be an acquiescence in your former recommendations to sell it?

"Mr. May. Yes, sir; I did—to further consider it.

"Mr. Floyd. To further consider it?

"Mr. Floyd. I understand that; but you understood that all his objections to the transaction were withdrawn, and you were to proceed with the negotiations?

"Mr. May. That we could further take it up; yes."

I wanted to state that the 4th of August. 1911, was when Judge Archbald called on you in your office; on the 25th day of August, in obedience to a request from you, Capt. May went to New York'to see you, and on the 30th day of August Capt. May writes a letter giving to Mr. Williams a price on the Katydid culm bank. Would you not judge from Capt. May's testimony that that procedure was produced because the Judge had called on you on the 4th day of August; and that that is the reason for your change of attitude in this matter?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I do not like to give my judgment on Capt. May's testimony. It struck me that by your questions right there you were trying to get him to say something that he did not want to say; but he was finally compelled to say that I instructed him to take up the case and carry it to a conclusion.

Mr. Weer. One more question. You know Mr. Brownell well?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Quile well.

Mr. Weer. He has an office in your building?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes.

Mr. Weer. Joy ou not know that Mr. Brownell appeared for your railroad in the lighterage case in the Commerce Court?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I did not know of the lighterage case specially, but I knew that all of the legal cases of the Eric Railroad he was very much interested in.

Mr. Weer. In the restricted-rate cases—did you not know Mr. Brownell, who has an office right across the hall from you, appeared on behalf of the railroad before the Commerce Court in the restricted-rate cases—and in the lighterage cases?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I know he appears for the Eric in every legal case they have, no matter what it might be. I have no recollection of any particular case. My duties are so much more than I can properly perform now that it takes all of my time, and I am not interesting myself in Mr. Brownell's duties with the railroad?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Certainly I am. I am interested in the Eric, first, last, and always.

Mr. Weer. Do you want to tell us that you never knew the Eric Railroad Co. had a suit before the Commerce Court?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I might know those things from day to day, but—are and the weak a suit pending?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I might know those things from day to day, but—are the vice president of the company. Did you not know there was a suit pending?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I might know those things from day to day, but—are the vice president of the company. Did you not know there was a suit pending?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I might know those things from day to day, but—are the vice president of the company. Did you not know there was a suit pending?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I might know those things from day to day but—are the vice president of the company. Did you not know there was a suit pending?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I might know those things from day to day but

Mr. RICHARDSON. I should say that a greater part of them are. It is economy, sir.

Mr. Norris. They have practically the same officers?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Pretty much so, I should say.

Mr. RICHARDSON. The majority of the stock of the New York, Susquehanna & Western Railroad Co. is in the Erie Railroad Co.

Mr. Norris. Is not the Katydid culm bank on your railroad? You said in answer to a question by the attorney for Judge Archbald that this property was not on your railroad, or words to that effect, as I understood

Mr. RICHARDSON. I did not mean it to be understood in that way. I meant that it was accessible for shipment by the Hillside Coal & Iron Co.

Mr. Richardson.

I meant that it was accessible for shipment by the Iron Co.

Mr. Norris. There is no difference, so far as that is concerned, is there, between your railway and the Susquehanna? It is all one system, is it not?

Mr. Richardson. No; I would differentiate them.

Mr. Norris. Are you an officer in the New York, Susquehanna & Wastern?

tem, is it not?

Mr. Richardson. No; I would differentiate them.
Mr. Norris. Are you an officer in the New York, Susquehanna & Western?

Mr. Richardson. Yes, sir; vice president.
Mr. Norris. And what position do you hold in the other?
Mr. Richardson. I am vice president of that, too.
Mr. Norris. You are vice president of that, too.
Mr. Richardson. Yes, sir.
Mr. Norris. You are vice president of the coal company?
Mr. Richardson. Yes, sir.
Mr. Norris. You do not want the committee to understand that these two railroads are independent of this coal company, do you?
Mr. Richardson. They are so particularly anxious that we have everyone believe that, that they keep all their accounts separate.
Mr. Norris. Who is particularly anxious?
Mr. Richardson. Everyone, all concerned—the legislatures and everyone interested in politics, and—
Mr. Norris. Who is particularly anxious?
Mr. Richardson. Everyone, all concerned—the legislatures and everyone interested in politics, and—
Mr. Norris. I want to know if that is what you want us to understand. That was the impression you left with me.
Mr. Richardson. That is the impression that I want to give.
Mr. Richardson. They are independent concerns?
Mr. Richardson. They are independent concerns, and I am attempting at unnecessary expense to keep them so.
Mr. Norris. As the vice president of one railroad you get into bitter competition with yourself as the vice president of the coal company you fight both of the railroads, do you not?
Mr. Richardson. If provocation came I would have to produce it myself, but I am not very likely to produce complications for myself.
Mr. Richardson as the vice president of the Susquehanna road?
Mr. Richardson. That is not quite liable to happen, of course.
Mr. Richardson. Step vice president of the Susquehanna road?
Mr. Richardson. No; it would not be.
Mr. Richardson. No; it would not be.
Mr. Richardson. I did not think it was.
Mr. Ri

Mr. Norris. The point is this: If it is on your line of railway you would have shipping advantages that other roads would not have. It came out from the question of Mr. McCoy, who wanted you to give him a list of the properties that you had offered to sell, and I wanted him to limit that list to properties that were not on your railroad-property located like the Katyldid, on the Susquehanna line. That is owned by the Erie?

Mr. RICHARDSON. No: it is owned by the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. Mr. RICHARDSON. You mean the Susquehanna road is owned by the Erie?

Mr. NORRIS. I mean the railroad.

Mr. RICHARDSON. You mean the Susquehanna road is owned by the Erie.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Part of it is.

Mr. NORRIS. The coal company does not own the railroad?

Mr. RICHARDSON. The Erie Railroad owns part of the stock of the New York, Susquehanna & Western Railroad.

Mr. RICHARDSON. The Erie Railroad owns part of the stock of the New York, Susquehanna & Western Railroad.

Mr. RICHARDSON. The Erie Railroad owns part of the stock of the New York, Susquehanna & Western Railroad.

Mr. RICHARDSON. They could control them.

Mr. NORRIS. They are all controlled by the same men?

Mr. RICHARDSON. They do to some extent and to some extent they do not. by reason of the law.

Mr. NORRIS. They do as much as they dare under the law?

Mr. NORRIS. I wanted to have the evidence show whether this particular coal dump was on your railroad.

Mr. RICHARDSON. May I say in answer to that it is on the New York, Susquehanna & Western Railroad?

Mr. RICHARDSON. It is owned and controlled by the Erie Railroad Co. Mr. NORRIS. That makes it perfectly plain. I wanted to have that yo into the record, because as you left it it was not on your railroad. And therefore it was not desirable property for you, because you would have to get the cousent of some other railroad to ship if.

Mr. RICHARDSON. It is owned and controlled by the Erie Railroad Co. Mr. NORRIS. The Hilliside Coal & Iron Co. owned the perfect which the record because a you left it

Mr. Richardson. I assume it was accessible to the New York, Susquehanna & Western Railroad, because I knew Robertson & Law operated and shipped coal that way; and if we secured the operation of it we would send our shipments out that way.

Mr. Martin. That is all. I thought there was another railroad.

The Chairman. Mr. Richardson, you may be discharged from further attendance upon the committee.

Mr. Richardson. Thank you very much. I should like to say to the chairman and to the committee that if my testimony is needed further and a telegram is sent to me at New York, I shall be very glad to respond to it. I expect to be back there by the first of the weeks

TESTIMONY OF THOMAS H. JONES.

Mr. Manager WEBB. Mr. President, we would like to have now the witness, Thomas Howell Jones, called.

Thomas H. Jones appeared.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. State your name and residence.

Mr. Jones. Thomas H. Jones, 1144 Academy Street, Scranton, Pa.

Thomas H. Jones, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager WEBB.) Mr. Jones, are you called Thomas Howell Jones?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is your real name?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do they call you Thomas Hart Jones?-A. No. sir.

Q. Do they call you Thomas Starr Jones?-A. Sometimes they do; yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever secure an option from E. J. Williams on the Katydid culm bank?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was it?—A. April. Q. What time in April?—A. April 6.

Q. This year or in 1911? This year, was it not?-A. This year.

Q. Do you mean last April?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you happen to trade with Williams?-A. He told me he had this dump for sale.

Q. Well, go on and tell the court.—A. I went to look at the dump and took two gentlemen down with me to see as to the tonnage—how the tonnage was—about $22,000.

Q. Right there, when he first mentioned to you the dump, did he agree to tell you where it was?—A. Not the first time; no, sir.

Q. When he mentioned the dump to you the first time, did you ask him the contents of it; that is, how much it contained?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he tell you?—A. I think, 150,000 tons.
Q. What did you tell him?—A. I told him I did not believe he had such a dump; I did not know such a dump as that near Scranton.

Q. Was that the end of the conversation with him the first day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long after that was it that he brought it to you again?—A. I think I went down to examine the dump before I saw him the second time.

Q. But he would not tell you where it was the first day?-A. No. Well, it was afterwards that he told me where it was.

I think he did.

Q. How long afterwards?—A. That I do not remember.
Q. Two or three days?—A. Thereabouts. It could not be long. Q. Now, tell us what he said to you and what you said to him the second time you had a meeting. May I refresh your memory? Did he ask you if you would like to buy the dump, and you finally told him yes and asked him if he had papers on it, and he told you yes?-A. Yes, sir; he told me he had an option

Q. Did you meet him again and ask him if he really had title to it?—A. I did.

Q. What did he say to you, then?—A. He said he had title.
I told him I did not believe he had title.

Q. What did he say to you about title?—A. Then he told me, "If you will come up with me to Judge Archbald's office I will prove to you I have title."

Q. Did you go to Judge Archbald's office with him?-A. I did. Q. Immediately?—A. I do not remember whether that day or the next day.

Q. When you went to Judge Archbald's office was that in the Federal building in Scranton?—A. Yes.

Q. Was the judge there?—A. I do not remember that the judge was there. I think he was.

Q. Well, now—A. Yes; he was.

Q. What did you say and what did he say to the judge? A. Mr. Williams told the judge he was trying to sell me that dump, and I did not believe he had title to it, and the judge gave me to understand that he did not have no title to it—that he couldn't deliver if.

Q. That who did not have?—A. Mr. Williams.

Q. Was that in the presence of Mr. Williams and in your presence?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He gave you to understand, if I interpret your language, that Mr. Williams had no title to it and could not deliver it?— A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what did you do after he had told Williams in your presence that Williams had no title to it? Did you leave the office?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was the next time that you saw Williams?-A. I generally saw him every day on the street.

Q. After that particular transaction?-A. I could not tell exactly; probably a week; I do not know Q. Was it the next day?—A. I do not know.

Q. Anyway he did come to you again, and he insisted on your buying it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And told you if you came up to the judge's office you would get the option?—A. Yes, sir. I told him I would not go down again unless he had an option.

Q. Did you go again to Judge Archbald's office?-Q. Was the option drawn while you were waiting there?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who drew it?-A. I do not know.

Q. Was it drawn in Judge Archbald's office?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it drawn in typewriting?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long was that option to run?—A. Ten days.
Q. What was the price fixed in the option?—A. $25,000.

Q. Where were you when the option was drawn?—A. I did not see the option drawn at all. Mr. Williams gave me the papers in Judge Archbald's office, right on the desk, and signed it there.

Q. Explain when the option was drawn where you were and where it was drawn, if you did not see it drawn.-A. I was in Judge Archbald's office, but I did not see anybody drawing that paper.

Q. It was drawn in some mysterious manner, then?-A. I did not see it.

Q. Did you remain in Judge Archbald's office all the time after you went up there until you got the option?—A. I did not. Q. What did you do?—A. I went out. I stopped in the corridor; there was something going on in Judge Williams's court; and when I got back Williams had the paper and signed it.

You went out of the office and remained out long enough for that option to be drawn in typewriting, and then you went back and found the option on the table?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there a clerk there who drew it?-A. No, sir.

Q. Who signed it?—A. Edward J. Williams.

Q. Was it delivered to you there in Judge Archbald's office?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he say Williams had no title to it?-A. No, sir; nothing was said.

Q. At what time was that option drawn?—A. April 6. Q. When you were down here before the Judiciary Committee the 25th of last May you did not have this option?—A. No; I did not have it. I could not find it.

Q. It was lost at that time?—A. It was among the papers on my desk. I found it.

Q. (Presenting paper.) Is this the option?-A. (Examining.) Yes sir.

Mr. Manager WEBB. Mr. President, we would like to have read and marked the proper number. (To the witness.) This is the first time you have ever produced that paper so far as the managers know anything about it?-A. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the paper.

The Secretary read as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 26.]

SCRANTON, PA., April 6, 1912.

THOMAS H. JONES, Esq.

Dear Sir: I will sell you the interest which I have in the Katydid culm dump, produced under the operation of Robertson & Law, in the neighborhood of Moosic, Pa., for the price or sum of $25,000. It is understood that for this price I only undertake to sell the interest which I have by virtue of the writing or option which I have from the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. of August 30, 1911, and the option of September 4, 1911, from John M. Robertson. I will undertake to pay out of the money received from you the amount which I am to pay to the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. and to Mr. Robertson. It is understood that if any coal is found in washing or disposing of said dump above the size known as pea coal a royalty of 20 cents is to be paid to the parties entitled thereto. This option to you is only to hold good for 10 days. Yours, very truly,

E. J. WILLIAMS.

Q. (By Mr. Manager WEBB.) Did anybody witness this op-A. No, sir.

Q. Was anything said in the presence of Judge Archbald during your conversation in securing this option which indicated that the judge had a half interest in this proposition or deal?-A. No, sir; not to me; no.

Q. All that you can remember is the judge having said that Williams had no title to it?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. And could not deliver it?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want to ask you if, after he told you that, you did not know that Judge Archbald drew this option?—A. I do not.

Q. And he did not let you see him do it?-A. I did not see him doing it.

Q. Who else was in the office?—A. Mr. Williams. Q. Was a stenographer there?—A. No, sir.

Q. You know Mr. Williams did not draw it, do you not?-A. I should say so.

Q. You should say he did?-A. He did not draw it.

Q. You went down and estimated the amount of culm in the bank, and concluded you would not take it, and paid no more attention to it. I will ask you if at this time, April 6, you did not know that agents had been to Scranton, Pa., investigating the conduct of Judge Archbald, and that is the reason why the judge did not have anything to do with this proposition?—A. No, sir; I did not know about it.

Q. Had it not been talk and common rumor?—A. No, sir; it had not. I had never heard it.

Q. You never heard it?—A. No, sir; not at that time.

Q. What time did you hear it?—A. I do not remember; I could not tell the exact date.

Q. Did you not know that E. J. Williams was examined before Wrisley Brown, in Scranton, on the 14th and 16th of March?—A. No, sir; I did not.
Q. You never heard it?—A. No, sir.
Q. Did you ever have any other transaction with Judge Archbald about a culm dump?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, when was that?-A. I can not give you exactly the date.

Q. You remember that now because of what occurred before the Judiciary Committee when you were down here, do you not?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time you did not remember of ever having any other transaction with Judge Archbald?-A. No; I did not testify that; no, sir.

Q. Did you not testify that you never made an application with him or with other parties for a culm bank?—A. I told you that I could not recall signing that paper—the application for the lease. After refreshing my memory I think I did recall the application for the lease.

Q. Explain to us what other transaction you had with Judge Archbald with reference to a culm bank or culm dump, its operation or purchase or lease .- A. Why, a gentleman by the name of John Henry Jones came to me and offered me a wash-

ery for sale

Q. John Henry Jones. Is that the man we have ordered attached here to-day?—A. Yes, sir. He told me that he had a washery, and I think he told me the tonnage was about 250,000 or 300,000 tons, or something like that; but he did not tell me he would not give me the location of that washery for some time.

Q. What was that last expression?—A. That he did not give me, the first time he offered me the proposition, the location of that washery.

Q. Proceed.—A. Then, I think it was some time later on he told me where it was.

Q. Where was it?-A. In the Shenandoah Valley. Then I went down to examine the dump.

Q. Did he tell you that the judge had anything to do with it?-A. He did not; no, not exactly; but I remember he told

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Mr. Witness, the Chair is informed by Senators that they can not hear you. Speak out louder.

The Witness. I think that Mr. Jones told me that there was a couple of fellows in the Shenandoah Valley operating a washery that did not operate it to an advantage and that it was for sale; they would like to sell it; that he got that information from Judge Archbald, Mr. Jones did.

Q. (By Mr. Manager WEBB.) Is that the proposition that Jones wanted to interest you in?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you join him in the proposition of the Oxford washery?-A. I offered that operation for sale, but it was turned down as no good.

Q. Then that was the last you heard of the Oxford proposition?-A. No, sir.

Q. Well, proceed and tell us all about it, Mr. Jones. You understand what I am asking you, do you not?—A. Yes, sir. I offered this proposition for sale, but it was turned down. I told you I got it from Mr. Jones and that it was no good. Then I went down to examine the property

Q. You went down to examine the Oxford dump?-A. Yes,

Q. Go ahead, sir .- A. I found it was no good; the dump had been almost washed; it was very rocky; and the superintendent of the Oxford washery told me if we could secure a dump across the way that a fair operation could be made out of it by bringing that coal into this washery.

Q. What did you ask for it?—A. For the washery?
Q. Yes; when you went down to examine it?—A. I think the price was $75,000 or $80,000; I do not remember.
Q. Did you ever have any other association with Judge Archbald besides the Oxford proposition?-A. No, sir. I am telling you that the superintendent of the Oxford washery showed me a dump across about a quarter of a mile from that, and said that if I could secure a lease on that dump a fair operation could be made, combining it with the Oxford.

Q. Did you ever sign with Judge Archbald a request to lease a certain bank, known as Packer No. 3, from the Girard estate?—A. Yes, sir. This was Packer No. 3. Q. It was?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I thought you had turned it down?—A. Not Packer No. 3—the Oxford, sir.

Q. You turned down the Oxford?—A. Yes. Q. Do you remember having made a different proposition to the Girard estate, asking for a lease of Packer No. 3 dump with Judge Archbald?—A. Yes, sir. When I came back after examining the property I told Judge Archbald and Mr. Jones that there was a dump not far from there called Packer No. 3, and if there was a dump not lat from the transfer that could be secured, it would make a fair operation.

Q. That is something that you remember since you testified before the Judiciary Committee, is it not?-A. No, sir.

Q. You did not remember before the Judiciary Committee that you ever signed any proposition with Judge Archbald at all?—A. I had forgotten it.

Q. You had forgotten it at that time?-A. Yes, sir. I was not quite sure about that before.

Q. You had forgotten that you ever signed your name with Judge Archbald applying for a lease from the Girard estate?— A. Yes. sir.

Q. You had forgotten that in that application the coal company was to be called the Jones Coal Co., have you not?—A. I told you at that time that the name was undecided upon; that we thought of several names.

Q. But afterwards the application which you signed was read, and in that application a statement was made that they proposed to form the Jones Coal Co.—A. It slipped my memory about signing that paper.

Q. I say on the 29th of last May you had forgotten that you had made application, you had forgotten the name of the company, and had forgotten who was to put up the money?—A. No; I did not say that.

Q. Have you talked to anybody about this matter since you were down here last May?-A. No, sir.

Q. Have you been in Judge Archbald's office?-A. I was in Judge Archbald's office once.

- Q. What time? When?-A. I do not know. I was up in the revenue office one day, was walking around the corridor, and the judge was sitting in his office, and passed the time of That is all.
 - Q. You just passed the time of day with him?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did you go into his office?—A. Standing right in the door.
 Q. Did you stop and pass the time of day?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. You did not sit down?—A. No, sir.

 - Q. You have not been examined by counsel?—A. No, sir.

Q. By any lawyer?—A. No, sir.

- Q. You have not had any conversation with any counsel?-A. No, sir,
- Q. But you do remember now that you were the man who suggested that they might get Packer No. 3 from the Girard estate?—A. Mr. John Henry Jones told me that they thought that they could get something else down there. Then I told Mr. Jones of this Packer No. 3.
- Q. Let me ask you now if this [showing paper to witness] is the application that you made? I want to read you the first part of it.

Mr. Manager WEBB. I will introduce this paper, Mr. President. It is a copy, I will say to Col. Worthington, but I presume there will be no question about it. [Showing the paper to Mr. Worthington.]

Mr. President, at this point we will introduce a copy of the application, because the original is in the files of the Girard estate in Philadelphia and will be produced here at the proper time. Counsel for respondent admit that this is a copy. I now ask that the Secretary read it.

The Secretary read as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 27.]

(Copy.)

SCRANTON, PA., December 19, 1911.

Col. James Archeald,

Engineer of Stephen Girard Estate.

Dear Sir: We hereby make application for a lease of the culm bank near Shenandoah known as Packer No. 3, the same to cover also the upper part of the adjoining Packer No. 4 dump. We propose to incorporate as the Jones Coal Co., with a capital of $25,000, and to put up a washery which will handle some 400 or 500 tons of coal a day. We understand that these dumps are now subject to a lease to the Lehigh Valley Coal Co. which expires December 31, 1913, and which possibly will be renewed. But we have the assurance of that company that on certain terms and conditions, which have practically been agreed upon between us, it will be satisfactory to them to have us lease from you to the extent suggested. We shall expect to pay the current royalties, but we suggest that owing to the character of the dump, which is not the best, the royalties should not be the highest. We shall be prepared, if the lease is made, to put up the washery with reasonable promptness.

Very truly, yours,

R. W. Archeald.

R. W. ARCHBALD, JAMES F. BELL, V. L. PETERSEN, T. H. JONES,

Q. (By Mr. Manager WEBB.) Mr. Jones, is your name T. Howell Jones?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who drew this application?—A. I think Judge Archbald

Q. What?-A. I should say Judge Archbald did. I did not see him doing it.

Q. Where did you sign it?-A. In Judge Archbald's office. Q. At whose suggestion and instance?—A. Well, now, I do not recall that. I went in there and signed that paper,

Q. Did you not swear before the committee that John Henry Jones got you to go in ?-A. I do not think I did.

Q. At whose instance?—A. I do not remember; no, sir. I went in there to sign that paper.

Q. Do you remember at whose instance? Did you go in at the judge's or John Henry Jones's instance?—A. I can not recall that. I am sure I went there.

Q. You do not know, then, under what circumstances you went into the judge's office and signed that application for a lease, stating that you were going to form the Jones Coal Co. and incorporate for $25,000? You do not know why you went in to sign it?-A. No; I can not recall.

Q. Did the judge send for you?-A. I do not remember that he did; no, sir.

Q. When you went into his office, what did he say to you?-A. Well, if I remember right now, he told me that was the paper; that that was the application for the lease; and I

Q. Had you talked about it before?—A. About what, sir?

Q. About forming the Jones Coal Co .- A. Yes, sir.

- Q. Had you talked with Judge Archbald about it?-A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How long before December 19?-A. Now, that I could not recall
- Q. What was the agreement between you, Judge Archbald, Bell, and Petersen?-A. We had no agreement, sir.

Q. What was the corporation to be called?-A. Well, the Jones Coal Co.

Q. You had no agreement before you signed this paper that it was to be called the Jones Coal Co., had you?-A. No, sir.

Q. In fact, when you were down here before the committee you did not know that it had been called the Jones Coal Co., did you?-A. I told you then we talked of several names.

Q. But the name had not been agreed upon?-A. No, sir; I do not remember that it had. I suppose that whoever prepared that paper called it the Jones Co.

- Q. Exactly. So really when you signed that paper you did not know that it was going to be named in your honor?—A. No, sir. If I did I had forgotten that name had been put upon it.
- Q. You had forgotten that when you testified here in May?-A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who was going to put up the money to finance this Jones Coal Co.?—A. Mr. Thomas Farrell, from New York.
 Q. Did you not swear that you were to find the money?—A. I - was to find the money.
- Q. You were to find the money?-A. Yes, sir; I was to find the money.
- Q. Do you now mean that you were to find the man who was to find the money?—A. It is all the same, is it not? to finance that deal; I said "I will find the money."
- Q. You agreed to find Farrell and Farrell was to furnish the money?-A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And Farrell was not even an incorporator, was he?-A. No, sir.
- Q. His name is not attached to this proposition?—A. No, sir. Q. What was Judge Archbald to do and what interest was he to have in this corporation?—A. We did not define that interest; we had not gone so far as that.

Q. You did not define that interest?-A. No, sir.

Q. You knew when you made this application to the Girard estate that the consent of the Girard estate would be worthless unless you at the same time got the consent of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. or the Lehigh Valley Coal Co. to operate this Packer No. 3, because the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. or the Lehigh Coal Co. had a lease from the Girard estate for it. Is not that so?-A. I did not know that.

Q. Did you not know that your lease from the Girard estate would be no good or worthless unless you got a further lease from the Lehigh Valley Coal Co.?-A. No; I did not.

Q. Did you know anything about the situation at all when you came and signed these papers?-A. The superintendent of the Oxford washery told me that it was dump or mine of the Lehigh Valley or of the Girard estate, I think he said.

Q. You say that you did not know when you signed this application with the judge to the Girard estate that you had also to get the consent of the Lehigh Valley Coal Co. before you could operate this dump?—A. No, sir; I do not recall that.

Q. Did you know that the Lehigh Valley people had a lease on it?—A. That I did not know.

Q. In fact, you do not know anything about this proposition except what you find on this paper, do you?—A. Yes, sir; I have told you all that I know about it.

Q. Do you know what became of the Jones Coal Co.?-A. Why, it was never incorporated.

Q. Never incorporated?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know why?-A. Because we did not get the lease,

Q. You are guessing now.—A. That is what the judge—Q. After December 19, 1911, did you ever go to Judge Archbald and ask him what had become of the Jones Coal Co.?—A. I do not know that I did.
Q. You swore before the Judiciary Committee that you never did ask him, did you not?-A. I do not remember what I did ask him.

- Q. Then you signed this application in December, and up to last May you had never asked the judge what had become of that coal company?-A. No; I do not think I did. The judge has been away from home a good deal, and I seldom see him.
- Q. You know him well; you are friends?-A. Yes, sir. Q. You see him when he is in Scranton, do you not?—A. No, sir: not always.

Q. Do you live in Scranton?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not do anything there now, do you?—A. Well, yes. I have some interests to attend to.

Q. But you are not actively engaged?—A. Yes, sir.

- Q. Well, you do see the judge when he goes to Scranton, do you not?-A. Sometimes I see him on the street; yes, sir.
- Q. But you have never asked him what became of the Jones Coal Co. up to this hour?—A. No, sir; I have not. Q. And you do not know?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Did he ever tell you that he had secured from S. D. Warriner, the vice president and general manager of the Lehigh Valley Co., permission to lease, or re-lease, from the Lehigh Valley people this culm dump, provided the Girard estate was willing to do it?—A. I do not recall that I ever told you that.

Q. What did you mean when signed your name to this state-

We understand that these dumps are now subject to a lease to the Lehigh Valley Coal Co., which expires December 31, 1913, and which possibly will be renewed. But we have the assurance of that company that on certain terms and conditions, which have practically been agreed upon between us, it will be satisfactory to them to have us lease from you to the extent suggested.

You did understand what you were signing?—A. I did not word that paper.

Q. Do you mean to say, then, that you did not understand what you were signing?—A. Not exactly; no. I know what I am signing, as a rule, but I have forgotten the contents of that paper.

Q. Then, you must have known that it was necessary to get the consent of the Lehigh Valley Coal Co., because you so state in that application ?- A. I can not recall that now.

Q. You do not remember?—A. I do not. Q. And you do not remember whether the judge told you that he had secured that consent from S. D. Warriner?-A. I do not remember that he did.

Q. Did he ever tell you from December 19, or on that date, to the present time that he had secured the consent of the Lehigh Valley Coal Co. to lease to you this dump provided the Girard estate did not object?-A. I do not remember; I am not sure that he ever told me.

Q. And you signed this paper, knowing very little about it?—

A. No; I knew a good deal about it.

Q. You do not seem to know the two main features.—A. I see your point. I did not prepare that paper.

Q. But you understood it, did you not?—A. At that time, sir.

Q. Was it read over to you?—A. Yes, sir; I think so. Q. Who read it to you?—A. Now, I am not sure whether Mr.

Bell was there with me or not. Q. Was Bell with you?—A. I am not positive now whether he was there or not. I do not remember.

Q. You are not sure, then, whether you read it or whether it was ever read to you?—A. It was read to me. I would not have signed it without it being read to me.

Q. You are the last signer on here, I notice?—A. Yes, sir. Q. Did you ever talk with Mr. Warriner about this proposition?—A. No, sir; I do not know the gentleman.

- Q. What was the judge to do, in connection with the forma-tion of the Jones Coal Co., to entitle him to a share in it or to be a stockholder?-A. No more than he made that application for the lease, I guess.
- Q. Was he not to go there and get the permission of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. to the lease?-A. That I do not
- Q. Do you mean to say you do not know whether that is so?-A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. You stated in this application that it was necessary to get the consent of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co.?—A. Yes, sir; understand that.

Q. Did you understand that the judge had already gotten it, then?—A. No; I did not understand that he had it.
Q. You stated in this paper that you had assurances that you would get it. Who gave you those assurances?—A. I do not remember. I did not prepare that paper.

Q. That is not an answer. Did the judge tell you that he had gotten permission of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. to lease this dump?-A. I do not remember that he did; no, sir.

Q. You say he did not?—A. I do not remember that he did. Q. Why did you not ask him, if you read this paper, "How did you get this consent from the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co."?—A. Well, I did not want to ask him such a question.

Q. You did not want to ask him such a question?—A. No, sir. Q. Do you not know, Mr. Jones, that your connection with this proposition was merely nominal; that you were simply to find a man who could furnish the money; and that Judge Archbald's connection with it was only for the purpose of securing from the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. its consent to do something that it had not done in 35 years, to wit, re-lease one of their culm dumps to you? Is not that the reason why he was connected with this proposition?—A. Well, the first way he became connected was through the Oxford, I guess; I do not know.

Q. Do you think that is an answer to my question?-A. What did you want me to answer?

Q. I want to ask you whether Judge Archbald's only connection with this proposition was not for the purpose of securing a lease from the Lehigh Coal Co. to your coal company?-A. I should say so; yes, sir.

Q. You should say so?-A. Yes, sir.

- Q. Where were you born?—A. In Wales. Q. How long have you been in the United States?-A. Thirtyfive years.
- Q. What has been your business?—A. I have been in the drug business.

Q. In connection with the Star Drug Store?—A. Yes, sir. Q. That is why they call you Thomas "Star" Jones, at

- times?-A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How long were you in the drug business?—A. I do not know.
- Q. And how long have you been a coal operator—that is what I am trying to get at?-A. I have been in the coal business a good many years.

 Q. About how many years?—A. Eleven or twelve years.

 Q. So that the judge was to put nothing in this proposition, no money?—A. No, sir. Mr. Manager WEBB. That is all, Mr. President, that we care to ask the witness.

Cross-examination:

Q. (By Mr. SIMPSON.) Mr. Jones, where did you first meet Mr. Williams in relation to the Katydid culm dump?—A. I met him in front of the Republican Building, sir; in Scranton.

Q. Did he tell you at that time where the dump was?-A.

No, sir.

Q. How long was it after that that you first learned where the dump was?—A. Well, I can not tell you exactly how long, but it was not very long until he told me where it was.

Q. Did you go to see the dump before or after the option was given to you?-A. I went the first time before the option was given to me.

Q. Did you take anybody down with you?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was it you took with you?-A. I took Mr. Alonzo Davis. He is an engineer.

Q. For what purpose?-A. Why, there were three besides

Q. Who were the other two?—A. They were the prospective buyers of the dump.

Q. Were they engineers?—A. No, sir; I do not think they were engineers; I did not know them.

Q. What purpose did you have in going down to the dump?-To ascertain the size of the dump-what tonnage it was

Q. Did you have an estimate then made as to what the ton-nage of the dump was?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the estimate?—A. 22,000 tons.

Q. In the beginning of your examination in chief you spoke of $22,000. That was a mistake, was it not? You meant tous?— A. 22,000 tons.

Q. After you got the estimate as to there being 22,000 tons in it, what did you do?—A. I dropped it; I did not do anything further with it for awhile; but I was not satisfied that those engineers were right. I thought there was more in the dump than 22,000 tons; so I told Mr. Williams if he would give me an option, I would go down again and see; and I went down again and took a competent engineer.

Q. Not so fast, please. This is all now relating to the Katy-did culm dump?—A. Yes.
Q. And you told him that if he would give you an option you would go down and make another examination?-A. Yes, sir. Q. Then the option which has been produced here was given?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you pay anything for the option?-A. No, sir.

Q. Then you went down again and examined the dump?-A.

Q. Who went with you that time?—A. A mining engineer by the name of Carl Motiska.

Q. Did he make any estimate as to the tonnage of the dump?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was his estimate?—A. Sixty-eight thousand tons, I think, if I remember right.

Q. Was that the whole tonnage or the coal in the dump?—A. The whole tonnage.

Q. The whole tonnage of the dump?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, of these two estimates that you had, the first estimate was 22,000 tons and the second estamate 68,000 tons in a dump which Mr. Williams had told you contained 150,000 tons?--A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is correct, is it?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was the first estimate of 22,000 tons the estimate of the quantity of coal in it or of the whole tonnage of the dump?—A. The whole tonnage of the dump.

Q. Then, after you got this second estimate of 68,000 tons while the option was running, what did you do—in regard to the option, I mean?-A. I examined the dump.

Q. You have told us that, and found 68,000 tons in it?-A. I did not do anything more with it.

Q. Why did you not do anything more with it?-A. Because I did not think it was worth the money-no good.

Q. It was no good. Do you mean that you were satisfied that it was no good because of the experience you had had in such matters?-A. No, sir.

Q. You mean that you did not think it was any good because of that?-A. That is it.

- Q. The next matter, as I understand, was the Oxford washery matter?-A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Will you tell us, please, whether that was an old dump or a new one?—A. That was a very old dump.

Q. A very old dump?—A. A very old dump. Q. You made an examination of it?—A. Yes, sir.

- Q. And your conclusion about that was what?-A. That it was no good.
- Q. No good either? But out of that, I think you said awhile ago, there grew the question of the leasing of Packer No. 3?-A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who suggested the leasing of Packer No. 3?-A. I did. told Mr. Jones and the judge of this dump in the immediate neighborhood, called Packer No. 3.
- Q. That is in the immediate neighborhood of the Oxford washery?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You mean John Henry Jones?-A. Yes, sir.

- Q. The question was asked you whether you did not say before the Judiciary Committee that you did not sign an application for Packer No. 3. I am reading, gentlemen, from page 1466:
- Mr. Webb. Did you ever sign an application for a lease of a culm dump, together with Judge Archbald, Peterson, and others, directed to James Archbald, chief engineer of the Girard estate, asking for a lease of any culm dump?

 Mr. JONES. Yes, sir; I believe I did.
 Mr. Webb. You did?
 Mr. JoNES. Yes.

Q. Do you remember testifying so?—A. Yes, sir. Q. That was true, was it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then there was read to you the application which has been read already this afternoon, and these questions were asked on page 1468:

Mr. Webb. Did you ever sign it? Did you or did you not sign such a statement as that, addressed to James Archbald? Did you ever sign such a statement, or such a letter, to Col. James Archbald, engineer of the Girard estate?

Mr. Jones. I think I did. I signed one paper, I know.
Mr. Webb. Do you know who signed it?
Mr. Jones. I am not positive; I believe I did.
Did you testify to that?—A. Yes.

Q. And that is true also, is it not?—A. Yes, sir. Q. You saw, when you signed that application for Packer No. 3, that the judge's name was already signed to it?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Webb asked you a little while ago whether or not it was not true that Judge Archbald was to do nothing but obtain, if he could, the dump from the Lehigh Valley Coal Co. knew that his application was made also to the Girard estate. did you not, and that that was the application which was read while ago?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there anybody put any money in it other than the money which was to be obtained through your financing of the proposition from Mr. Farrell?-A. That is right.

Q. Nobody was to put any money in it?-A. No, sir. Q. Nobody was to put any money in it?—A. No, sir.
Q. You testified that when you first went down to look at the Oxford washery you reported to Judge Archbald the result of your investigation. Why did you do that?—A. I reported to Judge Archbald or Mr. Jones. I do not remember whether I reported to Judge Archbald or Mr. Jones.
Q. You knew that both of them were interested in it before you were interested in it?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And they were interested in it, then, when you went to look at it?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And your report was made either to the judge or John

Q. And your report was made either to the judge or John Henry Jones?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Because of the fact of their being interested in it and getting you to go and look at it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. After this application was made to the Girard estate there was nothing further ever done with the matter, was there?—A. No, sir.

Q. And it has remained in that position from that day to this?-A. Yes, sir.

- Q. It was suggested in the course of the examination a while ago that there was something mysterious about the way in which the option for the Katydid culm dump was drawn. there anything mysterious about it that you know of?-A. No. sir.
- Q. You knew, did you not, that the room of the stenographer whom Judge Archbald had was adjoining the judge's; that she was not in the same room where you and the judge and Mr. Williams had your conversation?—A. I know there was no stenographer in the judge's office when I was there.

Q. But did you know that there was a stenographer in the adjoining room?—A. Yes; I knew that.

Mr. SIMPSON. That is all, Mr. President.

Redirect examination:

- Q. (By Mr. Manager WEBB.) At the time that 10-day option for $25,000 was drawn and presented to you did you think Judge Archbald drew it?—A. I do not know who else could do it.
- Q. Answer my question. Did you think he drew it?-A. I did.
- Q. Then I ask you what was the impression that was made on your mind when you determined that Judge Archbald had drawn that option from Williams to you inasmuch as two or three days before that time he had told you that Mr. Williams had no title to it? What impression did you get from that?— A. Well, Mr. Williams insisted that he had an option. He said his title was good.

Q. But the judge said he did not have it?-A. Yes. The first time he gave me to understand that he had no title to it.

Q. And in a few days afterwards the judge did draw this option from Williams to you?—A. Yes, sir; at the judge's office.
Q. Out of your sight?—A. Yes.

Q. He did not even witness it?-A. No, sir.

And drew it while you had gone into Judge Witmer's court?-A. Yes. I was not there in the judge's office when that paper was prepared.

Q. Let me ask you this question: You told Mr. Simpson that nothing further had been done with this Girard estate application since the application was made. Do you not know that the judge had much correspondence with Mr. Warriner, the vice president of the Lehigh Valley Coal Co., about getting a lease from him, and that he went to Philadelphia to see the manager of the Girard estate in an effort to get them to agree to make the lease; do you not know that?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Then why did you tell Mr. Simpson that nothing else had been done about it?-A. I do not know whether it was before or since—Q. Then you do not know anything more than that you signed this application on December 19, 1911?—A. I know more? I told you all I know about the proposition.

Q. You told us a while ago that you have not heard of it since?—A. Yes, sir.

Co.?-A. No, sir.

Q. Is that true-that you have not heard of it since?-A. Yes, Q. And you do not know what became of the Jones Coal

Q. Then you could not meant what you said when you told Mr. Simpson that nothing more had been done with the matter. Your answer should have been that you did not know what else had been done. Is not that true? When you estimated the amount of coal in the Katydid dump you found 80,000 or 90,000 tons?-A. 68,000 tons, I think.

Q. Of coal or culm? Mr. SIMPSON. Culm.

Q. (By Mr. Manager WEBB.) Sixty-eight thousand tons. Do you mean by that the entire contents of the bank or the coalthe pea and chestnut and prepared sizes of coal and buckwheat to be found in the bank?-A. The entire contents of the bank.

Q. That included dirt and all the rest?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was that engineer?—A. Carl Motiska.
Q. Did you know how much coal—pea, buckwheat, chestnut, and prepared sizes-there was in this Packer No. 3, for which you applied to the Girard estate?

WITNESS. What was the tonnage, do you mean? Q. How much coal—pea coal, chestnut coal, barley, and pre-pared sizes—was contained in Packer No. 3, for which you girned an application?—A. No, sir.

Q. I will ask you if you have learned since that there were 472,000 tons in it?—A. I was under the impression that there was more.

Q. Where did you get the impression?—A. From myself; I judged myself that there was more than that.

Q. You mean by that the entire contents of the bank? I am asking now about the entire amount of coal to be taken from the dump. Did you ever know that there were 472,000 tons in this Packer No. 3 dump?—A. I figured it more than that. I had an engineer to figure it, and I think it was more.

Q. You had an engineer to figure Packer No. 3?—A. Yes, sir. Q. How much did he figure it?-A. I think it was 700,000 tons.

You made it a million and something tons, did you not?-A. That was the whole dump.

Q. He made 700,000 tons in Packer No. 3?-A. Something

Q. And did you know that when you signed this application for the lease or was it done afterwards?-A. I think I knew it

Mr. Manager WEBB. That is all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness may retire.

Mr. Manager WEBB. And so far as we are concerned this witness may be discharged.

Mr. SIMPSON. We do not want him. He may go so far as we are concerned.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness is finally discharged.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. The next witness we desire called is Mr. James H. Rittenhouse.

TESTIMONY OF JAMES H. RITTENHOUSE,

James H. Rittenhouse, being duly sworn, was examined, and testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Please state your name and place of residence.—A. J. H. Rittenhouse, Scranton, Pa.

Q. What is your business or occupation?-A. Civil and mining engineer.

Q. What experience have you had as a civil and mining engineer in the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania and elsewhere?—A. Forty years in all kinds of work—railroad work, mining work, metal mining, masonry, dams, including general mining engineering.

Q. So you have a thorough knowledge of general engineering in all the various branches you have mentioned, including engineering?-A. I think I have a pretty good knowledge of it.

Q. Have you ever at any time been employed by the Marian Coal Co. or by W. P. Boland or C. G. Boland?-A. Never.

Q. I will ask you if you are acquainted with a culm dump known as the Katydid culm dump, near Moosic, Pa.?-A. I am.

Q. Were you ever employed by anyone to make a survey of that culm dump and to estimate the amount of material and the various kinds and sizes of coal contained therein; and if so, state by who and when.—A. I was; by Mr. Wrisley Brown, in the month of March, I think.

Q. Who is Mr. Wrisley Brown, or in what capacity was he acting when he employed you?—A. I did not know Mr. Wrisley Brown. He simply gave me a card with his name on it, and I did not know where he was from or whom he represented till afterwards.

I want to say this: He came into my office. I took him to be a well-to-do man-he was dressed accordingly-and after making some preliminary inquiries as to what he wanted and as to the responsibility of the parties whom he represented, he told me that for certain reasons he did not wish to have his identity known. He had been over to the adjoining office, to one of my business associates, although we are not a copartnership at all, and he had talked with him, and Mr. Stevenson brought him over and introduced him to me. After arranging the preliminaries in regard to about what it cost to make such a survey, he held up a telegram and said: "I have telegraphed my people as to the cost and it is satisfactory." But he covered up the address and signature of the telegram, so that I simply could not tell from whom or where it came.

Q. Let me ask you if you afterwards learned that he was at that time representing the Department of Justice?-A. Not until I had made my reports, sent my papers on, and then finally sent my last communication and turned it over to the stenographer, and when she brought it into me I saw that it was addressed to Wrisley Brown, Department of Justice, Washington, D. C. That was the first intimation I had of what I was called upon to do. If I had pursued my usual policy of asking whom he represented and whether there was a lawsuit at the end of it, I would undoubtedly have turned the proposition down.

Q. Under the circumstances, you accepted the employment without knowing the purpose of the survey?—A. I did; yes.

Q. And made it without knowing whom you were representing-that is, except Wrisley Brown, and you did not know what interest he represented?—A. I did not. He gave me to understand there were certain reasons why he desired to keep the matter quiet, and I supposed it was in reference possibly to the Everhart title. They wanted an unbiased, disinterested opinion, so I supposed he could use it in that way.

Q. State whether or not under this employment by Mr. Brown you made a survey of this culm bank and made a report thereon.-A. I did.

Q. Please state the amount and percentage of the various kinds of coal according to your estimate as incorporated in your report.—A. I have given to Mr. Brown all these papers and the maps in the case when it was tried by the House.

Q. For the purpose of refreshing your memory I will let you take that. Is that your original report, Mr. Rittenhouse, which you made to Mr. Brown [handing witness report]?—A. (After examination.) It is.

Q. And the supplemental report is attached to that, is it not?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now you may answer my question.-A. What was the

The Reporter repeated the question, as follows:

Please state the amount and percentage of the various kinds of coal according to your estimate as incorporated in your report.

A. The number of cubic feet in the bank, as outlined by the Erie, is 3,133,632; additional dump, making 3 in all, 681,229; total, 3,824,861 cubic feet. Weight per cubic foot, 52.9 pounds; 42.3 cubic feet equals 1 ton of 2,240 pounds; 3,133,632 cubic feet divided by 42.3 cubic feet equals 74,081 tons; 681,229 cubic feet divided by 42.3 cubic feet equals 16,105 tons; total, 90,186 tons.

Q. Is that the gross amount of material that you estimate?-That is the gross amount of the material; yes, sir.

Q. Does that include waste as well as coal?—A. It does. Q. You can go ahead with your statement .-- A. A test of the component parts of the various sizes in the dump I find as follows:

	Coal.	Waste.	Total.
Sizes above chestnut	6.086 1.041 12.419 9.893 22.454	Per cent. 2.765 .261 45.080 3.026
Total	51.893	48.106	99,999

This, worked out on the basis of values received from the various sizes, according to their percentages, would make the dump figure up in gross receipts $47,533.

Shall I give the percentage of values as to the different sizes?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Yes, sir; give the percentage of values as to the different sizes.—A. Assuming that the bank contains 90,000 tons, we then have the various sizes, as below:

Chestnut and above, 5,477 tons. At a value of $3.25 a ton, it makes $17,800.25; pea coal, 937 tons, at $1.78 per ton, making $1,667.86; No. 1 buck, 11,177 tons, at $1.41 per ton, $15,759.57; No. 2 buck, 8,904 tons, at 70 cents a ton, equals $6,232.80; No. 3 buck, 20,200 tons, at 30 cents a ton, makes $6,062.70; total of tons, 46,704 tons; total dollars, $47,533.18.

If line prices were obtained instead of the 65 per cent basis, then the amount would be increased to some extent.

Q. Now at that point please explain what you mean by the 65 per cent basis and by the term "line prices."—A. Sixty-five per cent basis is the railroad contract for transporting the coal, giving the operator 65 per cent of what it brings at tidewater, the railroad company taking the balance of 35 per cent for

Q. Now what is meant by "line prices"?—A. Line prices is when you get the same kind of a contract as to freight that you sell along the line and is not based on tidewater. Tidewater prices are usually less than line prices. For instance, 10 miles outside of Scranton in any direction coal sells for more than it does in New York. Consequently line prices are preferable.

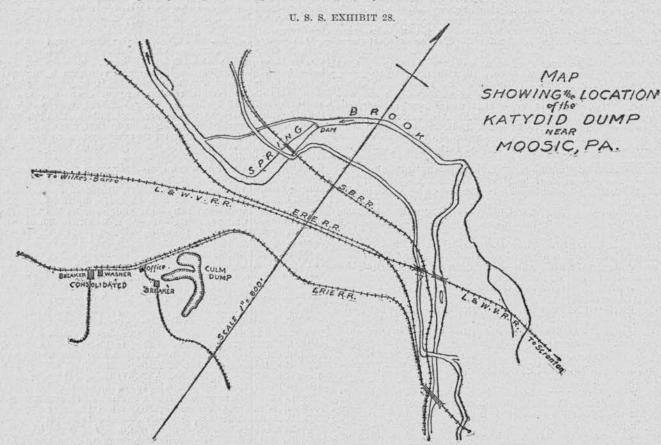

Q. Do they apply this 65 per cent basis on line prices as a rule?-A. That I am not prepared to say. I think the regular freight rates rule.

Q. Now you can proceed with your statement .- A. If what passes through a three thirty-seconds inch mesh and over onesixteenth mesh is saved, it would be equal to 12,678 tons, and this at 30 cents per ton would be an increment of $3,803.40; and this should be added to the above, making the total $51,336.58. But I might say that that size of mesh is used in only a few places; not generally.

Q. Permit me to ask you if it is possible by the use of that sized mesh to gain this increment of which you speak?—A. It is.

Q. You can proceed.—A. A flat price of 30 cents a ton for the entire dump, or 90,000 tons, at 30 cents per ton, would be $27,000.

Q. Now, Mr. Rittenhouse, please describe the location of this culm dump with reference to the different railroad lines in that vicinity.—A. This property lies on lots 46 and 47, if I remember rightly.

Q. To refresh your memory, I will ask you to state if that [exhibiting] is a map of the location of the Katydid culm dump? We will first establish the location of the dump.—A. (After examining.) It is. yes, sir; made by us.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Now, Mr. President, we desire to make this an exhibit at this point.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Let me see what you are offering. Mr. Manager FLOYD. Excuse me, Mr. Worthington.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. It is from the other record? It is the same thing?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Yes, sir; the same thing. witness.] Now, do you desire this, Mr. Rittenhouse?

A. This lies to the southeast of the borough of Moosic and is on the southerly side of the Lackawanna Valley; lying to the south there is a large brook called Spring Brook. The Erie & Wyoming Valley Railroad, which was located on the line of the old gravity track of the Pennsylvania Coal Co., light track, after the gravity road was abandoned, is now the main line of this valley branch of the Eric. That breaker, called the consolidated breaker, was connected with this old gravity road, which was built in the fifties. Subsequently the Lackawanna & Wyoming Valley Railroad, an electric railroad, was built in 1901 or 1902, during those years, and it runs parallel about 4 or 5 rods from the Erie for a distance of a quarter of a mile. Then it swings off to a point nearer the Katydid dump than the branch of the Erie. There is a lateral branch from this main line of the Erie that goes into this consolidated breaker and along the tail track connected with the Katydid culm pile. The culm pile is situated right on the tail tracks of the Erie and about 600 feet from the nearest point of the Lackawanna & Wyoming Valley Road.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Mr. Rittenhouse, one of the maps that has been submitted shows the location? evidence two or three maps .- A. This is the map [exhibiting].

Q. It shows the facts with reference to the location?-A.

The map was marked "U. S. S. Exhibit 28" and offered in

Q. Did you make this map [presenting map] which was Exhibit 31 before the hearing, showing in detail the situation of the Katydid culm dump?—A. (Examining.) Yes, sir.

Q. That map was prepared by you?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we want to offer this exhibit in evidence at this point.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. May I see it first?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Certainly; excuse me.

Mr. WORTHINGTON (after examining). This is all right.

The paper was marked "U. S. S. Exhibit 29" and offered in evidence. (See accompanying illustration.)

Mr. Manager FLOYD. What is the scale indicated on the map or blue print submitted?

A. I have not got it.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. The Clerk has it at the desk.

The WITNESS (examining map). Scale 1 inch equal to 40 feet.

U. S. S. EXHIBIT 29.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Here is a further map. [Pre- | the area of the different sections; the two sections are put senting map.] Please identify that, Mr. Rittenhouse, and state whether or not you prepared that map in connection with this investigation, and what it is ?- A. (Examining map.) This is a map on cross-section paper on a scale of 1 inch equal to 40 feet, and in connection with it I will say that these cross sections or these tracings are 20 feet apart, and then those sections are represented by the red lines. Those sections are then put on this cross-section paper and used for calculating panying illustration.)

U. S. S. EXHIBIT 30-Continued.

U. S. S. EXHIBIT 30-Concluded.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Mr. Rittenhouse, what do you mean in your report by the slush pile?—A. I mean the waste that goes through the finest mesh that they use. It is called tailings; it is called slush.

Q. State the origin and meaning of the word "culm" of the term "culm dump."-A. Culm meant and means anything that is waste. Back in the early days it was called culm when they put chestnut in the pile; it was all the waste rock and the material that was thrown out in the breaker; rough coal and slate were thrown indiscriminately on this pile, and it was called culm pile. As the years went by and they used chestnut coal, when that was taken up the coal before it went to the culm dump. It was the same way with pea coal; following that, buckwheat No. 1; then again No. 2, and again No. 3; so that now what represents culm or culm pile, as it goes by, is the finest sand or silt as it goes through three thirty-seconds or the eighth of an inch or the sixteenth of an inch mesh, whatever they happen to use. Sometimes that is separated, and when it is separated and the slate in larger pieces is not mixed with it it is a slush.

Q. In the common acceptation of the term a culm dump is the material in the dump made from coal mines, including particles of coal and other waste, is it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State the relative value of a culm dump with reference to its age. Those made in an earlier period, according to your explanation, would be of more value than those made in a later period, would they not?-A. For the reason I have just stated, the older the pile is the larger the sizes in it. Consequently, at the present time the refuse from a coal breaker is of little value unless some means is found for utilizing that fine stuff for fuel. They are at the present time using in some places fuel that will go through a three thirty-seconds and over, a three sixty-fourths, and that is the finest I know of.

Q. State, if you know, how long this Katydid dump was in forming.-A. I think from 1886 or 1887 until 1908 or 1909, at which time, I think, the breaker that was washing it was burned. It had been made previous to that. It was the product of mining from these two different lots, 46 and 47.

Q. Are you acquainted with the operations of the Erie Railroad Co. and its subsidiary corporation engaged in coal business?—A. To a certain extent, along different lines. I am acquainted with their various products.

Q. Was this culm dump so located with reference to the Erie Railroad that it could have been worked to advantage by the Erie Railroad Co. or by the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., which is a subsidiary corporation thereof?—A. I consider it an Erie proposition pure and simple, because

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, we are now going into

Mr. Manager FLOYD. The witness has just answered my question.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I want to object to proceeding on this line.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. What is your objection?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I object to going into expert testimony as to the profitable or unprofitable connection of the Erie Railroad with the operations of this dump, if they ever operated If we are to go now into testimony of an expert as to how much it would have cost them to take the coal to tidewater or wherever it could be disposed of and how much profit they would make on it, it would involve necessarily an inquiry into the cost of operation, the cost of the freight, and the details of the operation, and we could be kept here two weeks on that question alone on one side or the other.

It is perfectly manifest, I submit, that Judge Archbald can not be supposed to have known anything about that. If the managers want to prove that he had any information on the subject when he went into this operation or when trying to sell this dump, it would be competent evidence, whether it was the truth or not about the matter. If he was told that the Erie Railroad Co. could make $100,000 and had given it to him, of course that would be competent and might affect the matter. It is not so much the question as what the witness was going on to say.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I will be satisfied if the witness will simply answer my question, and I will ask that the stenographer will read the question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the counsel object to the question?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. As I remember the question it is not objectionable from our standpoint. Let it be read and it can be determined.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The stenographer will read the question.

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. Was this culm dump so located with reference to the Eric Railroad that it could have been worked to advantage by the Eric Railroad Co. or by the Hillside Coa! & Iron Co., which is a subsidiary corporation thereof?—A. I consider it an Eric proposition pure and simple,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that the witness was simply proposing to give a reason why it would be profitable

Mr. WORTHINGTON. He was about to go into the details showing why he thinks the Erie would have made a profit if it had the dump and operated it, and as to that I object for the reason I have stated. It opens up a very wide field, and if gone into at length if will take a great deal of time on one It is impossibleside and the other. It is impossible—
Mr. Manager FLOYD. I submit that the witness has answered my question when he says it was so located that the Erie could work it to advantage.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Very well.
Mr. Manager FLOYD. I did not go any further than that in

Mr. WORTHINGTON. The witness was going further, because he started-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The counsel being satisfied, the witness will refrain from further replies to the question unless it is brought up by the subsequent examination.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) You have your original report, Mr. Rittenhouse?-A. Yes, sir.

(The paper was handed to Mr. Manager Floyd by the wit-

Mr. WORTHINGTON. The manager offers the report?
Mr. Manager FLOYD. I ask leave to offer this as a report made by Mr. Rittenhouse, the full report, in evidence at this point.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. How a report that he made to some third party could be evidence against Judge Archbald I do not comprehend. If there is anything in the report that is competent evidence it can be stated now and we will have a chance to cross-examine him about it. It contains, I may say, the very matter to which I objected just now, and which I understood the manager to say he did not care about.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. We think that the report is entirely competent. The question is as to the contents and value of The Erie Railroad Co. owned an interest that culm dump. in the culm dump, and the report relates to the situation of the culm dump with reference to various railroads, and the report made by Mr. Rittenhouse under those circumstances contains full detailed facts. It is true it has no reference to Judge Archbald and we do not think it is necessary that it should It is a question of fact that we are dealing with, and we think is a very material question in this case as to what is the real and actual value of that culm dump.

I know of no better way to establish that fact than by the testimony of competent witnesses who have made a survey of that dump. This witness has already disclosed the fact that he at the time did not know in whose interest he was making his report. He knew the man's name, but did not know in what capacity he acted; he did not know whom he was representing. It seems to me that this report was made under circumstances in which he must of necessity be entirely unbiased in the matter.

The testimony is material to show the contents of that culm dump, because we charge that Judge Archbald, while a United States circuit judge and judge of the Commerce Court, undertook, in connection with one Williams, to purchase from the Erie Railroad Co. or the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., a subsidiary corporation of the Erie Railroad Co., this culm dump, with a view and for the purpose of selling it to other parties in order to make a profit for themselves.

So we think that this evidence is material, and that a report made under those circumstances is entitled to be submitted in evidence to show the fact as to the contents of the culm dump, the material in it, the location with reference to the railroad, and the other facts stated therein.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. As to the question of the admission of the report itself, the Chair does not desire to hear further on the right to prove the contents of the same; but if counsel wish to be heard the Chair will hear them.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. When a question is asked to bring out anything in the report, we can be heard, I suppose?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is of opinion that it is material under the features presented by this case to prove the value of the coal in that dump.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Of that we have so far made no question, not because we think it is competent, for we think that the matter might just as well be left until we get through the evidence. Our contention is and will be that it does not make any difference what the value of this culm dump is or was; the real question is what did Judge Archbald have reason to believe that it was worth. If it shall be shown that at the time he undertook the negotiations for the purchase of it with Mr. Williams, his information was it was worth $100,000, and he was proceeding on that basis to get it for $4,500 or $8,000, it would be to no purpose, I submit, to have some expert examine it and bring him here to testify that it was not worth 10 cents, because that is wholly immaterial. But we do not care to go on with a discussion of that question now; it is only when we come to go into the proposition of showing what the details of the operation of the Erie Railroad would have been if it had operated it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is of opinion that it is competent for the managers to prove the value of this dump, and the Chair would also be of opinion that it is perfectly competent for the witness to use that paper to refresh his memory that he may give the necessary testimony; but the Chair does not think that the report as a report would be admissible in evidence. The facts contained can, so far as they are governed by the suggestion that has already been made, be proven by the witness

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Mr. Rittenhouse, I will ask you to state what, in your opinion, is this Katydid culm dump worth? First, what is its value according to the estimate you have made? I think you have already stated it. You can state it again. What is the value of the coal in that dump, according to your estimate?—A. That depends upon who works it.

Q. Then, what would it be worth to the Erie Railroad? Mr. WORTHINGTON. I object to that question, Mr. Presi-That is a very simple question to ask; but you see at once it involves an inquiry not only as to the cost of building a washery there or transporting the coal to some other washery every question about where it can probably be sold or be likely to be sold, what would be the details of the expense there, what would be the probable market price, and all that-simply the opinion of an expert. If we are to go into that, we want to warn the Chair and the Senate that it is a very wide and large field.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would inquire of counsel if similar questions could not be propounded as to the estimate of its value to any one?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. No; it would have to be—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. As to its general value?
Mr. WORTHINGTON. It would have to be its market value, I should say, Mr. President, what it would be worth. Certainly, it would have to be shown that it would be reasonable to suppose Judge Archbald would know what it was worth. He might know what it was worth in the market. We have a right to assume that he might know that, though there is no evidence that he did. The only thing that appears, the only evidence that I know of—it is hardly evidence—is a letter that was in-troduced by the managers, written by him to Mr. Conn on the 30th of September, 1911, in which he said he had never seen the dump

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. As the Chair understands the attitude of the managers, one of their propositions is that the dump was sold by the Eric Railroad Co. for less than it was worth. If so, it would be competent to show what it was worth

Mr. WORTHINGTON. If the Chair thinks that, of course that involves going into all these details. We are—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would say to the managers and to counsel that it is not competent for the Chair to exclude legitimate evidence on the ground that it may involve too wide a discussion or inquiry.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, I will say that the managers charge that this property was sold by the Erie Rail-road Co. through the influence of Judge Archbald, and our contention is that it was sold for less than its value to the company. We think this is material, and I believe the Chair has so indicated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks it would be perfectly competent for the respondent to show what it would be worth to him or what he had reason to believe it would be worth to him.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Please answer my question, Mr. Witness.

The Witness. What is the question, please?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The stenographer will read the question.

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Mr. Rittenhouse, I will ask you to state what, in your opinion, is this Katydid culm dump worth? First, what is its value according to the estimate you have made. I think you have already stated it. You can state it again. What is the value of the coal in that dump according to your estimate?—A. That depends upon who works it.

Q. Then what would it be worth to the Eric Railroad?

The WITNESS. The actual value of the coal in the dump that can be gained by treatment figures up, as I gave it, reading my estimate, $47,533.18, if I remember correctly. That is what that stuff will bring at the breaker. It depends on how you get that and how you freight it as to what it is worth—who does it. There is the possibility of the Erie working it; there is the possibility of the Laurel line working it; and also the possibility of some individual working it—any one of these three will get different results by working it.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) What I desire to know is what would be the value to the Erie Railroad Co., if it worked it?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, if that includes going into the question of transportation, then I want to renew my objection. I do not understand the Chair has passed upon that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will ask that that question be read by the stenographer.

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager Flovo.) What I desire to know is what would be the value to the Eric Railroad Co., if it worked it?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is of the opinion, under the statement of the managers as to their contention in the matter, that the railroad company had sold this dump for less than it was worth, that it would be competent evidence. The Chair repeats that it would still be open for the respondent to show what was his view in regard to the matter of what it would be worth to him.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Now, please answer the question, Mr. Rittenhouse.

A. As I have stated before, the value of $47,533.18 is the value of the coal in that dump; and inasmuch as it lies contiguous to the present washery of the Erie, with their tail tracks and all that, it is worth more to them than to anyone else. They would require less expense to get it and ship it than anyone else. Therefore I fix the value of about $35,000 as the value of the coal, leaving out the question of freight to the Erie.

Q. You say, leaving out the question of freight, you think it would be worth $35,000 to the Eric Railroad if they worked it?-A. I do; leaving out the freight. The freight would be

Q. Now, suppose they carried it to tidewater over their own lines and sold it at tidewater, what would be the additional value by reason of freights?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. One moment. Mr. President, it seems to me that the witness must qualify as an expert in freight rates and railroad operations before he can answer that question. He has qualified as an expert in mining and coal, but I have not yet heard him say anything to the effect that he is qualified to give us information-

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Let me modify my question, then. Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) What would it be worth on the 65 per cent basis that you have already explained?—A. They would charge varying prices for that coal. Chestnut would give them a rate of $1.82 and a fraction ordinarily; grate, egg, and stove would be $1.74 and a fraction; pea coal would be $1.40; No. 1 buck would be $1.30; and No. 2 and No. 3 buck would be a little less than that. I do not know that I can recall the figures; but it would be around $1.15 or $1.20 for No. 2 and No. 3 buck. Those are their charges.

Q. Well, can you tell us the total amount they would get as freight rates out of hauling that much coal to tidewater over their own line?—A. I never figured that out; no, sir. I would have to strike an average freight rate and figure up the different tons in order to find out what that would run into. It is a calculation that can be made, if you desire it.

Q. Have you got anything in your report on that question? [Handing the report to the witness.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness may use the report to refresh his memory, and not for the purpose of reading it.
Mr. Manager FLOYD. To refresh his memory.

The WITNESS. I have nothing in the report as to that. I have taken it in bulk.

Mr. Manager FLOXD. That is all, Mr. President. Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Mr. President, I desire to ask a question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama desires that the witness shall be asked a question, which will be read to him by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

What, in your opinion, would be the profit if worked intelligently and economically?

The WITNESS. Do I understand that has reference to the

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. The value of the dump, the coal in the dump.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator can modify his question if he desires to do so.

Mr. WORTHINGTON (to Mr. Johnston of Alabama), I will ask the question as a part of my cross-examination.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama.

Very well.

i) Without any reference to Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) the transportation of the coal, but taking its value after—
Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President—
Mr. WORTHINGTON (to Mr. Manager FLOYD). Are you not

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I insist that the question which was asked by the Senator from Alabama ought to be answered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question must be an-vered as asked by the Senator. The Chair simply suggested, swered as asked by the Senator. in view of the verbal comment of the Senator, that, if he desired, he could modify the question in writing.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I was going on because I understood the Senator had withdrawn the question, with the idea that I would bring out the information he desired.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator withdraw the question?

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. Yes; I withdraw it.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I did not so understand, Mr. President. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair did not understand the Senator had withdrawn the question. The Chair inquires if the managers have finished with the witness?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. We have on the part of the managers; but I did not understand the Senator had withdrawn his question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Very well. Counsel for the respondent has an opportunity to ask the question if he desires to do so.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Will you permit me one more question, Mr. President?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Very well. Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) What we What would be the profit to the Eric Railroad Co. if they intelligently and economically worked that culm dump?—A. Leaving out the freight?

Q. Leaving out the freight.—A. Just as I said before, $35,000 profit to them.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. That is all.

Cross-examination:

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) What would the coal be worth at the washery after it was ready for sale if the operation were conducted intelligently and economically?—A. Just as I said, the value of the coal was $47,533, and allowing them a fair price for working it, they should realize that much from it, in my judgment.

Q. Now, aside from the Erie, you have told us that there are three bases, as I understood you, for the calculation; that is, what would be the result for the individual operator, what would it be for the Laurel line, and what would it be for the Take the individual operator, suppose he works it?-A.

I think he would lose money by it.

Q. He would lose money by it?—A. Yes, sir. Q. Why?—A. For this reason: He has got to buy the pile, in the first place. That is an outlay of $20,000 to $25,000. He has got to put up his plant, which will cost in the neighborhood of $10,000. That would make an aggregate of from $30,000 to $35,000, and he has got to operate it. Assuming that he operated it as cheaply as the Erie would operate it—that is, at a cost of as much as 25 to 30 cents a ton-it would eat up the balance of the value of the pile.

Q. I wish you would tell us-I could do it perhaps if I had your figures, but I will be obliged if you will do it-suppose a sale had been made of the merchantable coal in the dump and 271 cents a ton was to be paid for the coal won from the dump, what would be the price that would be paid for it?-A. Then he would likely make something out of it, just as Mr. Bradley testified to, because, inasmuch as about 50 per cent of the pile is coal, instead of paying a flat price for it you would cut that $25,000 or $30,000 or $20,000 pile down to about $14,000, and in that way he would make anywhere from $5,000 to $10,000the individual operator.

Q. I think you misunderstood my question or else I did not ask it very intelligently. I simply desired to ask if you take the quantity of coal that you found in the dump, what would it amount to at 27½ cents a ton?—A. I said, in my judgment, it would be somewhere around fourteen thousand dollars and something, for a guess.

Q. Of course, I need not ask you, but you have assumed in fixing the value of this dump to the Erie that the Erie own the whole dump?-A. I have. They would not have to buy it, or their part of it, at any rate.

Q. On that subject, were you not told that there was some entanglement about the title?—A. I have understood that there was some entanglement about the title. I know there is.

Q. I believe, Mr. Rittenhouse, you have not said anything about that, but were you not first employed in regard to this dump by Mr. Conn, the manager of the Laurel line?-A. Mr. Conn and I went down there and looked the pile over, and he wanted me to give him a rough estimate of about what I thought was in the pile.

Q. Did you do that?—A. I did.

Q. What did you tell him, then, when you simply gave a rough estimate?-A. If I remember rightly, I made him a written statement covering about three or four lines, saying that taking the outline of the blue print by the Erie and a little data that I had gotten together as to elevation, I estimated about 87,000 cubic feet in the dump. My accurate survey subsequently, I think, put it a little over 90,000.

Q. You do not mean 87,000 cubic feet only?—A. I should have said 87,000 tons; I beg your pardon.

Q. Do you remember when you were talking to Mr. Conn about this matter that he told you that Judge Archbald was interested in it and you went to see Judge Archbald about it?-A. I did go to see Judge Archbald; yes.

Q. Was it not because Mr. Conn told you that Judge Archbald was interested in it?—A. No. That had developed at the time when we went down over the pile to look it over.

I am interested to know how it developed that Judge Archbald was in it. How did you find out?-A. Through Mr. Conn.

Q. I say Mr. Conn had told you?-A. Yes.

Q. Then you went to see Judge Archbald about it, did you not?-A. I did after I had been employed. This matter with Mr. Conn was last fall and we anticipated getting to work promptly, on it, but we were called off very suddenly when the breaker and constructors and I had arranged to go down there and look the plant over to see what could be done with it. Nothing more was done about it, and I had not thought any more about it until Mr. Wrisley Brown came and asked me to make a survey of the pile, as I stated.

Q. When was it you went to see Judge Archbald about it?-A. I think it was either in the latter part of March or the first part of April.

Q. This spring some time?—A. This spring; yes.

Q. It was then that Mr. Conn told you that Judge Archbald was interested in it, was it?-A. I had nothing whatever to say to Mr. Conn at that time at all.

Q. Well, did you not just say that Mr. Conn told you that Judge Archbald was interested?-A. Well, that was last fall.

Q. He told you that last fall?-A. Yes.

Q. Then you did not go to Judge Archbald until this spring?-No, sir. I heard rumors about it. I thought maybe he could clear the matter up.

Q. When Mr. Conn told you that Judge Archbald was interested did he accompany that with any suggestion that you were to keep that fact quiet?—A. No, sir.

Q. There was not any suggestion of concealment, was there?-A. No, sir; nothing that I-remember.

Q. Do you know, as a matter of fact, whether you talked to other people as to whether Judge Archbald was interested?-A. I do not know that I mentioned it to anybody.

Q. If you did not it was merely accidental that you did not;

it was not intentional?-A. That is right.

Mr. WORTHINGTON, I would like to see that Exhibit No. 29, that map.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Referring to this map, which is Exhibit No. 29, I see it is a map of the Katydid dump, and a portion of it is labeled "conical dump." In your estimate have you included that conical dump as a part of the Katydid dump?-A. I have.

Q. Just what tests were made of this dump for the purpose of determining the proportions of the different kinds of coal in it, and who made them?-A. We dug holes all over the culm pile at stated distances at the top and the bottom, and then put that into bags and carried it to a big flat rock and spread it out into conical piles by tossing it over so as to get an average mix-Then we quartered it and took the opposite quarters and sized it down in that way until we got something over a hundred pounds to test for the various sizes. That is the usual way of testing the dumps.

Q. What were the dimensions of these holes that you made?-We took a shovel full, half a bag, at a time from a hole, going down a couple of feet, and in the top of the pile and the bottom of the pile and on the slopes and over the top.

Q. You did not in that way reach the interior of the pile at all, did you?-A. We did not; no, sir.

Q. Was the chestnut coal which was in that pile-that is the largest size you have in your estimate?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that in chestnut size or was it in large lumps and had to be broken up?—A. It was in various sizes.

Q. Various sizes?—A. Yes; "chestnut" and above, I think

I have it

Q. Would the larger sizes have to be broken up?—A. They would have to be broken up. It would hardly be worth while to put the screens on for the small quantity of the larger sizes. As a general thing, all of that larger stuff is ground up.

Q. You have included in your estimate about $17,000 for that chestnut after it was ground.—A. There is quite a difference between $3.25 for some and 30 cents for others, and the 30-cent coal is the largest quantity of the bunch in itself.

Q. The chestnut coal, which I understand you to say it would not be worth while to run through as chestnut, you have concluded was worth $17,000 as chestnut, have you not?-A. I

Q. That reminds me, Mr. Rittenhouse, I think you have not got part of your report in here. [To Mr. Manager Floyd.] If you will let me have that report, I should like to show it to the witness and ask him to read a table from it which bears on this question of amounts.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. We are perfectly willing to let the whole report go in.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Yes; I have found that out. Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) I ask you to look at the part of this record which I indicate, to refresh your memory, and tell me what was your estimate, assuming that the bank contained 90,000 tons, giving the quantities and the values which you have fixed to them of each kind .-- A. That is worked out from the percentages that are in the pile.

Q. I would like to have it worked out and have it in the record just as it is in the report, if that is correct.-A. I gave all this in detail when I read it.

Mr. SIMPSON. No; you only gave the percentages. Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) I think you did not give the whole of it, and I would like to have it in order to have it complete?-A. I will go over it again, but I am positive that I

Assuming that the bank contains 90,000 tons, we then have the various sizes as below:

Chestnut and above, 5,477 tons, at $3,25	$17, 800, 25
Pea, 937 cons, at $1.78	1, 667. 86
No. 1 buck, 11,177 tons, at $1.41	15, 759, 57
No. 2 buck, 8.904 tons, at $0.70	6, 232, 80 6, 062, 70
No. 3 buck, 20,209 tons, at $0.30	0, 002. 10

Total (46,704 tons) ____

Q. What is the name of the washery that you have referred to that is near the Katydid?-A. It joins the Erie Consolidated breaker, probably about 50 feet from it.

Q. The Eric Consolidated?—A. Yes, sir.

- Q. What do you know about that washery?-A. I simply know it is a good-sized washery, treating a large amount of culm, and is within 500 or 600 feet of the Katydid dump.
- Q. Have you examined its machinery or apparatus to know the details of it?-A. I have not.
- Q. Or what they do there?-A. No; only what I have seen go in there.

Q. Only as to the result?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is your estimate of 30 cents based upon the proposition that it is 30 cents flat; that is, for everything in the pile?-A. $30,000 is what I was figuring on in the first place. cents flat would give $27,000.

Q. Thirty cents flat, that is for culm and all?-A. Yes, sir.

- Q. And the whole contents of the pile would amount to how such?-A. Twenty-seven thousand dollars at 30 cents. course that would be doubled when you get only half of the
- Q. Double it?-A. Practically so. There is only about 50 per cent coal in the pile.
- Q. Where did you get that 30 cents?-A. When it was talked of in the first place it was talked of for $30,000. I did not know any other price or anything further in regard to it until Mr. Brown came and said something about 271 cents. I did not know anything about these arrangements with Mr. Connas to what he proposed to pay for it or whether instead of paying a flat rate for it he was going to pay a royalty basis for it. I knew nothing about it until it developed in this case.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. That is all, Mr. President.

Redirect examination:

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Did I correctly understand you to say that Mr. Conn told you that Judge Archbald was interested in this transaction, or what did you say about that? A. I do not know that Mr. Conn said that he was interested in it anything more than that Judge Archbald and Mr. Williams had an option on it.

Q. When was that?-A. That was last fall; that is, a year ago. Q. Was that when you were making an estimate for Mr. Conn at his request?—A. It was.

Q. Did you make a statement about seeing Judge Archbald at some other time?-A. I did.

Q. And talking to him about it?-A. I did.

Q. When was that?-A. The latter part of March or the first part of April of this year.

Q. Of this year?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state what was said?-A. Mr. Brown asked me not to go into the title particularly, but to find out in a general way as to the ownership, and so forth. That is all I did in regard to it.

Q. And you went to Judge Archbald for that purpose, did you?—A. I thought Judge Archbald would probably know more about the title end of it, and I asked a few questions in regard to that. I want to say that, inadvertently, when I was asked that question before by Col. Worthington—whether any other subject was discussed-I said no. I said that on the spur of the moment, and what I meant by "no" was nothing further referring to the Katydid.

Q. That was during the negotiations with Mr. Conn that you went to Judge Archbald and asked him some questions about the title?-A. No, sir; it was last fall.

Q. Last fall?—A. Last fall. I went to Judge Archbald when I tried to get this data that Mr. Brown asked for.

Q. This spring, you mean?—A. This spring.
Q. When Mr. Brown was making his investigation?—A. Yes, sir

Q. That was the time you went to Judge Archbald?-A. Yes, sir

Mr. Manager FLOYD. That is all.

Recross-examination

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) What did Judge Archbald say to you about the title when you went to him in the spring? A. He could not give me much light on the subject, only he thought the matter could be straightened out in a short time.

Q. Did he not tell you in substance that there was some trouble about the title but he thought it would soon be fixed up and be all right?-A. That is my understanding about it.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. That is all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is it desired that this witness be finally discharged?

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Yes; the witness may be finally discharged.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, we agree.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness is finally dis-

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I desire to introduce in evidence and have printed in the RECORD copies of the several commissions issued to Judge Archbald, and his several oaths of office.

Mr. SIMPSON. There is no objection, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The managers do not desire to have them read?

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. No. sir; merely printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Executive nomination confirmed by the Senate December 9, 1912. TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES.

Carmi A. Thompson to be Treasurer of the United States.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Monday, December 9, 1912.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon,

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father in heaven, on earth, and in the hearts of men, we approach Thee with profound gratitude for life, liberty, and all that makes life dear. Help us to realize that as "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," so it is the price of all that makes for righteousness in the soul. Make us, therefore, zealous in all good works, that we may all come unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ, and unto Thee we will give all praise. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday, December 7, 1912, was read and approved.

DISTRICT DAY.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that this is the day set apart for the consideration of District of Columbia business.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 26680) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Of course the motion made by the gentleman from South Carolina is a privileged motion, but before putting the question the Chair will again state that this is the day set apart for the consideration of business relating to the District of Columbia. If no one desires to call up any District business, the Chair will put this motion. [After a South Carolina that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, with Mr. GARNER in the chair.
The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Enforcement of navigation laws: To enable the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to provide and operate such motor boats and employ thereon such persons as may be necessary for the enforcement, under his direction by customs officers, of the laws relating to the navigation and inspection of vessels, boarding of vessels, and counting of passengers on excursion boats, $15,000.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Will the gentleman from South Carolina please say whether this is a new item or has it been regularly provided for heretofore? I refer to the appropriation of $15,000 for the enforcement of the navigation laws.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It is the current law.

There is no change whatever.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. There is nothing new in the paragraph?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Nothing new.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Enforcement of wireless communication laws: To enable the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to enforce the acts of Congress "to require apparatus and operators for radio communication on certain ocean steamers" and "to regulate radio communication" and carry out the International Radio Telegraphic Convention, and to employ such persons and means as may be necessary, this employment to include salaries of employes in Washington not exceeding $5,800, traveling and subsistence expenses, printing, purchase and exchange of instruments, technical books, rent, and all other miscellaneous items and necessary expenses not included in the foregoing, $37,880.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. This item for the enforcement of miscales communication laws is new is it not?

wireless communication laws is new, is it not?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I will state that there is no change whatever in the amount appropriated. The difference is in this, that in the last legislative bill we carried $10,000, while the deficiency bill carried $27,000. In order that we might keep it together we bring it forward in one item in this bill.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. New legislation was passed last year regulating radiotelegraphy.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes. The gentleman will understand that at the time the legislative bill passed we incorporated $10,000 for that purpose. After the legislative bill had passed the House there was legislation upon the subject. Then the deficiency bill made an appropriation of $27,000 in addition to what we had appropriated in order to carry out that law. We now bring both of the amounts forward in this bill.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Ten thousand dollars was in anticipation of what would be needed under the new law?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes. We were doing then by departmental regulation what we are now doing by

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. And the department will now be in a position to go ahead and regulate these private enterprises?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The committee informally rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, a message, in writing, from the President of the United States was communicated to the House of Representatives by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The Clerk read as follows:

For Division of Information established under section 40 of the act approved February 20, 1907, entitled "An act to regulate the immigrations of allens into the United States," namely: Chief of division, $3,500; assistant chief of division, $2,500; clerks—2 of class 4, 1 of class 3, 2 of class 2, 3 of class 1, 1 at $900; messenger; in all, $19,240.

Mr. RODDENBERY, Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 129, line 22, by striking out all of line 22 after the word "one" and insert the following:

"Provided, That after four months from the approval of this act, in addition to the aliens who are by law now excluded from admission into the United States the following persons shall also be excluded from admission thereto, to wit: All aliens over 16 years of age, physically capable of reading, who can not read the English language, or the language or dialect of some other country, including Hebrew or Yiddish: Provided, That any admissible alien or any alien heretofore or hereafter legally admitted or any citizen of the United States may bring in or send for his father or grandfather over 55 years of age, his wife, his mother, his grandmother, or his unmarried or widowed daughter, if otherwise admissible, whether such relative can read or not; and such relatives shall be permitted to land.

"Sec. 2. That for the purpose of ascertaining whether aliens can read or not the immigrant inspectors shall be furnished with copies of uniform slips, prepared under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, each containing not less than 30 nor more than 40 words in ordinary use, printed in plain type in the various languages and dialects of immigrants. Each alien may designate the particular language or dialect in which he desires the examination to be made, and shall be required to read the words printed on the slip in such language or dialect. No two aliens coming in the same vessel or other vehicle of carriage or transportation shall be tested with the same slip.

"Sec. 3. That the following classes or persons shall be exempt from the operation of this act, to wit: (a) All aliens who shall prove to the satisfaction of the proper immigration officer or to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor that they are seeking admission to the United States solely for the purpose of escaping from religious persecution; (b) all aliens in transit through the United States; (c) all aliens who have been lawfully admitted to the United States; (c) all aliens who have been lawfully admitted to the United States and who later shall go in transit from one part of the United States to another through foreign contiguous territory.

"Sec. 4. That an alien refused admission to the United States under the provisions of this act shall be sent back to the country whence he came in the manner provided by section 19 of 'An act to regulate the immigration of aliens into the United States,' approved February 20, 1907."

During the reading of the foregoing.

During the reading of the foregoing,

Mr. BURLESON (interrupting the reading). Mr. Chairman, it is patent from what has been already read that this is subject to a point of order, and I make the point of order that it is new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. As the Chair understands it, the amendment must be reported.

Mr. BURLESON. It is not necessary that it should be reported in full, if it is patent that it is subject to a point of

Mr. RODDENBERY. Mr. Chairman, before there is any ruling on the point of order at any stage I should like to be heard

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will permit the amendment to be read.

The Clerk then concluded the reading of the proposed amend-

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Bur-LESON] makes the point of order against the amendment that it is new legislation. Does the gentleman from Georgia desire to be heard?

Mr. RODDENBERY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to submit that under the rules of the House the motion reduces the number of offices and reduces the expenditures provided for in the bill, and offers an amendment to a statute, the subject of immigration, with which subject the paragraph to which it is offered deals and which statute is specifically mentioned in the paragraph.

The paragraph reads as follows:

For division of information established under section 40 of the act approved February 20, 1907, entitled "An act to regulate the immigration of aliens into the United States," namely—

Then it recites the officers for the administration of that law. The amendment offered provides in terms that an additional class of persons other than those mentioned particularly in the act recited in the bill shall be excluded from admission to the United States, providing in its terms that this exclusion shall in no way limit or restrict the present prohibited classes as mentioned in the particular paragraph of the pending appropriation bill to which the amendment is offered. It goes further and provides and regulates the condition and manner upon which they may be admitted and the condition and manner in which nonadmissible aliens may be deported from the United States, and section 4 of my amendment specifically provides that an alien refused admission to the United States under the provisions of this act shall be sent back to the country whence he came in the manner provided by section 19 of an act to regulate the immigration of aliens into the United States, approved February 20, 1907, and the act of February 20, 1907, is the same act to which the paragraph and the section of the measure to which this amendment is offered relates. Even if it is new legislation it is germane to the bill as it is legislation which retrenches expenditures and reduces the number of offices in the Federal Government. It is so clearly a proper amendment to be offered to this bill, Mr. Chairman, under more than one rule of the House that I do not see how the gentleman in charge of the bill can insist that this amendment is not pertinent as well as in order.

Mr. MANN. Will the Chairman have the first part of the amendment reported?

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That after-

Mr. RODDENBERY. Mr. Chairman, I raise the point of order. The first part of the amendment I offered is to strike out the words "one, $900; messenger; in all, $13,340"; that is the first part of my amendment, and to substitute therefor the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 129, line 22, by striking out all of line 22, after the first word, "one," and insert the following: "Provided, That after four months from the approval of this act, in addition to the allens who are by law now excluded from admission into the United States, the following persons shall also be excluded from admission thereto, to wit."

Mr. BURLESON. Mr. Chairman, the point of order is that it is a change of existing law and new legislation upon an appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. The Chair has examined the amendment and it is clearly subject to the point of order and the Chair sustains the point of order. The Clerk will read.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 129, in lines 19 and 20, by striking out the word "immigrations" and insert in lieu thereof the word "immigration."

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The only purpose is to correct a typographical error.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Bureau of Standards: Director, $6,000; physicists—chief, $4,800, 1 qualified in optics, $3,600, 2 at $3,600 each, 1 $3,000; associate physicists—3 at $2,700 each, 4 at $2,500 each, 5 at $2,000 each; assistant physicists—9 at $1,800 each, 11 at $1,600 each, 5 at $2,000 each; assistant physicists—9 at $1,800 each, 11 at $1,600 each, 14 at $1,400 each; chief chemist, $4,800; chemist, $3,500; associate chemists—1 $2,700, 2 at $2,500 each, 1 $2,200, 1 $2,000; assistant chemists—1 $2,700, 2 at $2,500 each, 1 $2,200, 1 $2,000; assistant sorry assistants—16 at $1,200 each, 13 at $1,000 each, 13 at $1,000 each, 13 at $900 each; laboratory helpers—1 $840, 3 at $720 each; aids—10 at $720 each, 7 at $600 each; laboratory apprentices—6 at $540 each, 6 at $480 each; storekeeper, $1,000; librarlan, $1,600; secretary, $2,200; clerks—1 of class 4, 1 of class 3, 2 of class 2, 4 of class 1, 4 at $1,000 each, 4 at $900 each, 2 at $720 each; telephone operator, $720; office apprentices—2 at $540 each, 2 at $480 each; 3 at $360 each; elevator boy, $360; chief mechanician, $1,800; mechanicians—1 $1,600, 1 $1,500, 1 $1,400, 3 at $1,200 each, 4 at $1,000 each, 1 $900; shop apprentices—1 $540, 2 at $480 each; 4 watchmen; skilled woodworkers—1 $1,000, 1 $840; 5 skilled laborers, at $720 each; draftsman, $1,200; packer and shipper, $840; messenger; superintendent of mechanical plant, $2,500; assistant engineers—1 $1,500, 2 at $1,200 each, 1 $1,000, 1 $900; pipe fitter, $1,000; 4 firemen; 2 glass blowers, at $1,400 each; electricians—1 $1,000; 4 firemen; 2 glass blowers, at $1,400 each; electricians—1 $1,000; 1 $900; pipe fitter, $1,000; 4 firemen; 2 glass blowers, at $1,400 each; electricians—1 $1,200, 1 $900; electricians—1 $1,200, 1 $900; electricians—2 $1,200, 1 $900; electricians—2 $1,200, 1 $900; electricians—2 $1,200, 1 $900; electricians—2 $1,200, 1 $900; electricians—3 $1,200; at $1,200 each, 1 $1,000, 1 $1,200; electricians—4 $1,200, 1 $1,200; electricians—2 $1,200, 1 $1,200; electricians—3 $1,200; ele

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. I desire to ask, on page 130, line 1, why the necessity for the new physicist at $3,000?

Mr. CANNON. Is he a clairvoyant?

Mr. FOWLER. I do not know; he may be a morganatic fellow; I do not know just what kind of a fellow he is.

Mr. CANNON. If the gentleman will yield? Is there a copy of the latest dictionary, Century, or otherwise, here?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, in answer to the gentleman, in respect to that one particular man, I may as well answer as to all. In 1903 Congress authorized the establishment of the Bureau of Standards. The work was begun upon a small scale, and from year to year the work has increased. The appropriations have correspondingly grown. That bureau is engaged in very important work along many scientific lines. We have recently, within the last two or three years, authorized the construction of a new laboratory, and that laboratory will be completed in January. It is necessary that it should be equipped with machinery and apparatus and with men. We have given not all that was asked for, but what we thought was needed to carry on the work. I hope that will satisfy my friend, not only as to that one man, but as to all the others in the paragraph. We have increased the appropriation about $50,000.

Mr. FOWLER. A little more than $50,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I said about $50,000 in that one item.

Mr. FOWLER. You also increased the salaries of many of these men in this employment. Why should the salaries be increased? You have also increased a number of them. For instance, in line

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. There is no increase in salaries, I will say to the gentleman from Illinois. It may be that some of the scientific men who are employed in the bureau will be promoted and given an advance in salary in the next fiscal year, but we have not specifically increased anybody's salary, but we give the Director of the Bureau of Standards a vary largely increased force, because the circumstances not only justified it but demanded it.

Mr. FOWLER. I call the attention of the chairman to the associate chemist, who received in the last appropriation bill

$2,500. According to this bill he will receive $2,700.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. That is not the same man that was appropriated for before, I will say to the gentleman from Illinois

Mr. FOWLER. That must be a new place, then, entirely.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. It is a new place, and the old man is appropriated for at the old salary.

Mr. FOWLER. Well, you have not only increased the salary, as I take it, but you have increased the number. You have two assistants at $2,500, whereas, as I understand, there was only one.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. That is right.

Mr. FOWLER. One assistant chemist at $2,500. Now, you have one at $2,700 and two at $2,500.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. That is correct. Mr. FOWLER. That makes an increase of two?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. I think last year one was at $2,500 and one at $2,200. So there is certainly an increase of salary in those

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No; we still appropriate for the man at $2,500 and we still appropriate for the man at $2,200, but what we do is to give the director two additional men-one at $2,700 and one at $2,500.

Mr. FOWLER. And then you give him another assistant at That is new also.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes, sir.

Mr. FOWLER. Now, there are three new men-one at $2,700, one at $2,500, and one at $2,000. Is it necessary to the carrying out of the provisions of this department that these three new positions should be created?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I would say to the gentleman from Illinois that we are just completing a $250,000 building for these scientific purposes, and it would be utterly useless to construct that great building unless we were going to put scientific men there after constructing it in order to carry on the work.

Mr. FOWLER. Well, you will increase that work in the associate physicists from one to three at $2,700, making two, and then you have increased the other assistants from three to four, and then the other assistants from three to four, making in all four new places.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I tried to explain to the gentleman in the beginning that the Bureau of Standards was organized and started out on a very small scale. This building has been authorized and will be completed in January. intending, if we can, to install it with all the necessary machinery and apparatus and with the men to operate it.

Mr. CANNON. Will the gentleman allow me? Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Certainly.

Mr. CANNON. I think if my colleague [Mr. Fowler] would make an investigation-if he has not done so-touching this work that is being done by the Bureau of Standards, he will find that if this bill sins at all it sins in not being sufficient rather than oversufficient. I am satisfied, if my colleague would familiarize himself with the work of this bureau, that he would agree with me that possibly both of us had better get a dictionary and see that a physicist is not a man who practices morganatic marriage. [Laughter.]

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I am much obliged to the gentleman from Illinois for his statement.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. If it is true that we made any mistake with respect to the Bureau of Standards, the mistake was in giving too little and not too much.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to state, in reply to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois, my colleague [Mr. CANNON], that I am well aware of the fact that it is difficult to understand all of the machinery of any department of this Government, and I am more than anxious to equip each and every one of them with the proper assistance that is necessary to accomplish the great good of this country. But I must say that here is an increase in the physicists from four to six, and if these are necessary now the force heretofore must have been wholly inadequate, and I am sure, Mr. Chairman, that it can not be explained on any other ground. I therefore make a point of order against the new position created on page 130, line 1, of a physicist, at $3,000. But, before I yield, I desire to reserve a point of order against the remainder of the paragraph until this question is settled.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the point of order is not well taken. On page 1449, chapter 875, of the laws of the United States, 1901, the Chair will find that the Bureau of Standards was established by law. It was provided that this bureau should be established for the purpose of doing testing and standardizing work and such other scientific work as might be useful to the country. I send the statute to the Chair. There is no force specifically provided. The language of the statute is broad, and it is within the purview of Congress to authorize such force as, in its judgment, is necessary to carry forward the work.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr.

FOWLER | desire to be heard further?

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say that if it is left to the committees of this House to create new positions and increase the salaries of the positions already in operation, then the House and the country are in a deplorable condition, and are solely at the mercy of the committees. It has been evidenced that legislation in this body is largely carried on by recommendations of departments, without law and without any legal authority. If these new positions can be created indiscriminately, then, Mr. Chairman, the country is at the mercy of departments and committees of each branch of this legisla-

I take it, Mr. Chairman, that if this new position can be created, a million such positions can be created by the same authority, and without any authority of law, and these positions to the number of a million may have affixed to them salaries at a million dollars each; and the rules of this House are too short, according to the contention of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson], to be reached by a point of I take it, Mr. Chairman, that the rules of the House, especially rule 21, govern this case, and it is new legislation which increases the expenses of this department.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to take up the time of this House, because I am anxious to finish this bill, as much so as any member of the committee. But I do say, Mr. Chairman, that this is an entirely new position created by this bill, and the salary is fixed by the committee indiscriminately within its own purview. If it could create one position, it could create a thousand. If it could fix the salary at $3,000, it could fix the salary at 300 times $3,000, and, according to the contention of the gentleman from South Carolina, this bill would be in order and not subject to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] desire to be heard?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I take it that the Chair has before him the organic act. I remember very distinctly when we passed the law creating the Bureau of Standards, and the language of the law was so framed at that time as to meet this very point of order now being made, because it was recognized in Congress that the Bureau of Standards was one of those bureaus which would necessarily increase its work and grow from time to time. It was not possible in the creation of the bureau to specifically authorize the employment of officials which would be sufficient as time went on and as the work of the bureau increased.

Now, we have just inaugurated or provided a large new laboratory there, carrying out the original idea of the law in creating the bureau, and the language of the organic act, taken in connection with the language of the law creating the clerks, and so forth, in the executive departments, specifically authorizes Congress, over a point of order under the rules of the House, to make provision for such scientists and other employees in the bureau as it desires to provide for.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. There are two well-defined policies of Congress in reference to this mat-One is, in the creation of bureaus under the statute, to define what the offices may be. The other is to pass a statute broad enough to permit Congress to create such offices as are necessary for the conduct of the business required by the statute. This is one of the cases where the statute is broad enough to permit the Congress to create a sufficient number of offices. at such salaries as the Congress may deem proper, to conduct the business of the bureau.

The Chair is inclined to agree with the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fowler] that if the Congress should see proper it might create this office at a salary of three hundred times $3,000; but it is not to be supposed that Congress in its wisdom will create an office with that salary.

The Chair is thoroughly of the opinion that this statute is broad enough to permit the Congress to create such offices as are necessary to carry out the provisions of the law, and that their number and salaries are entirely a question for the committee and the House. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I make the same point of order to the two associate physicists created in line 1, page 130, of this bill, at $2,700 each. I presume the same ruling will be made by the Chair as to that.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. FOWLER. In line 2 there is a new associate physicist at $2,500 and one at $2,200. I make the point of order as to both those two items

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point for the same reasons.

Mr. FOWLER. In line 3 there is an increase of the number of assistant physicists from seven to nine, at $1,800 each, making two new ones. I make the point of order as to that

The CHAIRMAN. Does the Chair understand the gentleman from Illinois to state that this point of order is as to the increase of a salary or as to the increase of a number?

Mr. FOWLER. It is an increase in the number. The CHAIRMAN. The same ruling would apply.

Mr. FOWLER. In line 5 there is a new chemist created, at $3,500. The chief chemist, $4,800, is the same as it was in the last bill, but a new place, known as chemist, is created, at $3,500. I make the point of order, because it is new legislation and against Rule XXI.

The CHAIRMAN. The same ruling.

Mr. FOWLER. There is an increase in the salary of the associate chemist, in line 5, from $2,500 to $2,700. I make the point of order to that because it is an increase in a salary heretofore carried by current legislation.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman is mistaken. The current law provides for an associate chemist, at $2,500. We provide for one at $2,700 and two at $2,500. We have not increased the salary, but we have created two new positions

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, that is tweedle dee, tweedle dum. I say there are two new positions created at $2,500 and an increase of the associate chemist from $2,500 to $2,700.

The CHAIRMAN. The chairman of the committee in charge of the bill, Mr. Johnson of South Carolina, states to the Chair that the $2,700 position is a new position and that one of the $2,500 positions is the one carried in the last bill.

Mr. FOWLER. There was only one in the last bill, and that was an associate chemist, at $2,500.

The CHAIRMAN. And the chairman of the committee in charge of the bill states to the Chair that that one is one of the $2,500 positions provided in this bill.

Mr. FOWLER. In line 6 there is another new place created at $2,000. I make the point of order as to that, because it is new legislation and not in harmony with Rule XXI of this

The CHAIRMAN. The same ruling applies.

Mr. FOWLER. There is an increase in the laboratory service from 15 to 16. I presume that the same ruling will be made as to that increase in number?

The CHAIRMAN. May the Chair suggest to the gentleman from Illinois that he might include certain other new places created? The Chair understands the gentleman in charge of the bill to say that there are no increases of salary, but that there have been certain new places created. The gentleman from Illinois might include in his point of order all the new places created in this paragraph.

Mr. FOWLER. In line 12 the salary of the librarian is increased from $1,400 to $1,600. There is no tweedledum and no tweedledee here. The salary prior to this bill was $1,400, and this increases it to $1,600. I make the point of order against the increase, because it is not in harmony with Rule XXI of this House.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the salary of the librarian is increased $200, and is subject to the point of order if the gentleman seeks to make it.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois insist on his point of order?

Mr. FOWLER. Yes; I insist upon it.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained. Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to line 3, page 131, where two female laborers are provided for at $360 each. I desire to strike out the figures "360" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "600," so that it will read:

Two female laborers, at $600 each.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 131, line 3, strike out the figures " $360\,\mathrm{"}$ and insert in lieu thereof the figures " $600.\mathrm{"}$

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, if this committee has the authority to provide liberally for the carrying out of the provisions of this department, I think it would be very generous for us to provide a larger salary than $360 a year for the services of women. If we can create new positions here at $3,000 each, and if we can increase the salary of these large officeholders, then I say it is fit that we go down the line where the people by manual labor perform the work of this department.

I believe, Mr. Chairman, to carry in this bill three laborers, who shall be females, at a salary of $360 is not only a recreant discharge of duty, but it is a crime against the better half of mankind. I insist, Mr. Chairman, that the gentleman from Illinois withdraw his point of order and permit the House to vote upon the proposition.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the item is "two female laborers, at $360 each." These two laborers are charwomen, carried under the head of "female laborers" in order that they may receive $10 a month more salary than the ordinary charwomen do in the District. These women work probably a little longer time than the ordinary charwomen, but do not work a full day. Charwomen get $240 a year, or $20 a month, while these two receive $360 a year, at a rate of $30 a month, which is quite sufficient, and I make the point of order.

Mr. FOWLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. FOWLER. I desire to ask my colleague if he thinks that $360 a year is enough for any laborer in this country.

Mr. MANN. It depends upon how long a time they work.

These people do not work a full day, as my colleague will understand.

Mr. FOWLER. Do you believe that the charwomen in the various departments of the Government are receiving a sufficient salary at the present time?

Mr. MANN. I will express my views upon that subject in some way when we reach the item in the bill and my colleague moves to increase the amount from $240 to a larger sum, which amendment would be in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, in line 12, page 130, I move to insert the figures "1,400" after the dollar mark, which went out on a point of order, so that it will read "librarian, $1,400."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 130, line 12, insert the words "librarian, $1,400."

The amendment was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. Fitzgerald having taken the chair, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3436) granting to Phillips County, Ark., certain lots in the city of Helena for a site for a county courthouse, asked a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. Smoot, Mr. Nelson, and Mr. SMITH of Arizona as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested: Senate concurrent resolution 31.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That a joint committee, consisting of three Senators and three Representatives, to be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, respectively, is authorized to make the necessary arrangements for the inauguration of the President elect of the United States on the 4th day of March next.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the investigation of fire-resisting properties of building materials and the conditions under which they may be most efficiently used, including personal services, in the District of Columbia and in the field, $25,000.

Mr. COX of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to insert a new paragraph after line 2, on page 132.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 132, after line 2, insert as a new paragraph the following:

"To investigate the dangers to life and property due to the transmission of electric currents at high potentials, and the precautions to be taken and the best methods of construction, installation, and operation to be followed in the distribution and return of such current in order to reduce to a minimum such dangers; also to investigate the best means of protecting life and property from lightning, including personal services, in the District of Columbia and in the field, $15,000."

Mr. COX of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I want to say, in the first instance, that I hesitate to introduce this amendment because I am a member of the Committee on Appropriations, but I believe that consideration for the lives of individuals should transcend any notion of propriety with reference to submitting the matter which I shall discuss. The members of the subcommittee who will oppose this amendment can offer no justification for the elimination of this item, except upon the ground that two or three other provisions have been made in behalf of the Bureau of Standards.

The provision here is that the Bureau of Standards shall now make practical use of certain laboratory apparatus which was purchased under an authority granted during the session of the last Congress. Let me remind Members of this House that every State in the Union which is keeping step with the progress of the age has created a so-called public-utilities commission, and it is the purpose of this subdivision of State governments not only to regulate the rates which are assessed against individuals, but to protect in the largest measure possible human life. Living in the North, as many of us are, I think we have a measurably full appreciation of the tremendous dangers which now join to the great industrial activities of this age. In our neighboring State of Indiana the most important question now is the passage of a workman's compensation act, in order that there may be taken from the courts every piece of litigation which joins to personal-injury cases. The President of the United States, in submitting his message here the other day, dilated upon the importance, the propriety, and the justice of We want to go deeper. We want to touch this legislation. a more important fundamental of this subject by preventing this harvest of deaths. The public-utilities commissions in the States desire to install certain safety devices which will be fair to corporations and which will be fair also to the people. They want to know what the best safety devices are, and then they can standardize them.

Civilization now calls upon this Republic, through Representatives here assembled, to give to the highest authority in this land, the Bureau of Standards, the task of determining the safety devices which ought to be installed in order that publicutilities commissions in the States can then have them standardized and applied. The cost is only $15,000 per year. The apparatus for experimentation has been purchased. I want to remind gentlemen that I have in my hand now press clippings from the newspapers of the day covering but a short time, and yet they tell the story of countless human tragedies. I do not want to appeal in any improper way to the sentiment nor the impulse of this House, but there is not a provision in this bill which is half so important to the country as the amendment which has just been introduced.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX of Ohio. Certainly.
Mr. HOBSON. The question I desire to ask the gentleman bears chiefly upon making his purpose effective. Would not the gentleman actually need more money and need the whole question to be taken up in a more thorough method than his amendment provides?

Mr. COX of Ohio. I will state for the information of my distinguished colleague from Alabama that it is the judgment of the Bureau of Standards, than which there is no more efficient subdivision of this Government, that $15,000 is abundant. They have the apparatus. They simply want money to employ two or three experts and give to them the means to meet their traveling expenses to test these different devices.

Mr. Chairman, the trouble in this country is that all of the so-called unrest arises from the fact that we legislate here along lines entirely too impersonal. Your subcommittee has left in this bill the provision with respect to the testing of fire materials. We have legislated in behalf of property. I ask you to legislate now in behalf of the human unit. That is the trouble in this country, and when we begin to recognize the propriety of legislating along more personal lines we will have less of the so-called unrest than we now have.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman wield?

Mr. COX of Ohio. Certainly.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman is trying to place the committee in the attitude of having selected an item beneficial to property interests as against one that is beneficial to the safety of human life. Is the gentleman not aware that both items were placed upon the same ground, namely, that the fireresisting materials were just as essential to the protection of human life as this investigation, and is it not a fact that the Chief of the Bureau of Standards was asked to state the relative importance of these

Mr. COX of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I will ask the gentleman to state one question at a time.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I would state the two together in order to save time.

Mr. COX of Ohio. No; the gentleman will pardon me. entleman has stated his first question. Let me reply to that. What the gentleman says is true. That has to do also with the safety of human life, but let me remind him now that there are building codes in every great city and State in this country.

Under their terms it is necessary to construct buildings along certain lines

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. COX of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio? [After a pause.] The Chair hears

Mr. COX of Ohio. We have the protection of municipal enactment and we have building codes in the States. Now, I want to ask the gentleman from New York whether he knows this to be a fact or not that within the last month certain gentlemen interested-and I want to preface what I have to say with respect to this by the assurance that I mean nothing unkind whatsoever with reference to my colleagues on this committee in fireproofing material and other things of that sort have been in Washington asking for this legislation?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I know that certain public officials, the most prominent of whom were from the State of Ohio, called publicly at the Committee on Appropriations and made inquiry about it as they had a perfect right to do, as had any other American citizen,

Mr. COX of Ohio. The gentleman gives point again to the fact that Ohio is always more clearly alive to the interest of our people than public officials of New York State.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Well, he happened to be accompanied by the most competent man in that particular line from the State of New York.

Mr. COX of Ohio. Yes; but this is the thing that is in my There is no one here to represent the people in whose behalf I am offering this amendment, except the Members here

Mr. FITZGERALD. If the gentleman will permit, there was no lobby in behalf of either of these amendments. I started to ask the gentleman from Ohio a second question when he headed it off, and that was: Was not it a fact that the Chief of the Bureau of Standards, in response to an inquiry, placed the items that the committee reported as of more importance than the one in which the gentleman from Ohio happens to be particularly interested, and the committee based their action upon the report of the man who is supposed to be most competent to inform the committee?

Mr. COX of Ohio. I replied to the gentleman's first question and now I shall make response to his second question. the statement of the chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. Johnson of South Carolina] on that phase of the matter, and that is sufficient so far as I am concerned. He made the statement to the subcommittee and the whole committee that the bureau had indicated the importance of these projects in the order named, and they placed two or three before the project which is contemplated in my amendment; but let me remind the gentleman from New York and my colleagues here on this floor that the head of the Bureau of Standards is not as able to understand the influence, the effect, and the result of these experimentations as the people in the States are.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Well, I know the gentleman is mistaken. and that the best-equipped man to pass on this question is Dr. Stratton, universally recognized as one of the most efficient men in his line in the entire world.

Mr. COX of Ohio. Let me say for the information of the gentleman that the statement has been made in the last few days, since the unsuccessful fight in the Committee on Appropriations in behalf of this amendment, that it would probably be better if not a word were spoken in the House on this because the Senate will amend it anyhow, but I am bringing this no here in order that the House of Representativs can do its duty and not await the pleasure or action of the great body at the other end of this Capitol. I conceive it to be our duty, in making provision for new projects in the Bureau of Standards, to take care of that department which contemplates the protection of humanity, and I trust the amendment will prevail.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Ohio yield to his colleague?

Mr. COX of Ohio. I do.

Mr. FOSTER. May I ask the gentleman from Ohio if his State, concerning which he has been somewhat profuse as to what the State and the people are doing in reference to matters of this kind, has taken any action looking to an investiga-tion along the line suggested by his amendment, or is he trying to get the Federal Government to make this investigation for the State of Ohio?

Mr. COX of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I am very glad the gentleman asked the question. It is the wish of the public-utilities commission in our State to have standardized safety devices. This matter was not brought to my attention by anyone in the Bureau of Standards, but it was presented to me first by the State electrician in the great city of Cleveland, the most ideal municipality in this country so far as government is concerned, and I have taken it up since with the board of public utilities of Ohio and they say that something must be done, but they are groping about in the dark.

They want these devices made standard, first, because they want to be fair to capital, and, second, they recognize the absolute importance of protecting human lives. Electricity is being transmitted through what we call larger potentials now, and it is essential that something be done.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX of Ohio. With pleasure.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I understand the board you speak of thinks it more essential to protect capital than it is to protect human lives. They put human lives of working people second to capital and profit. That has been the trouble. That has been the reason why we have not had these investigations and laws throughout the States and throughout the United States to protect the lives of the workingmen of the country. That is the reason that a better system has not been provided.

Mr. COX of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to the gentleman asking me a question, but I do object to his making an argument.

Mr. BUCHANAN. The consideration of profit has always stood in the way.

Mr. COX of Ohio. I suggest the gentleman read my speech in the morning's Record. I tried to dilate in this body concerning the very thing the gentleman is now urging.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I am not criticizing the gentleman. The gentleman mentioned capital first-

Mr. COX of Ohio. I will observe with interest as to whether the gentleman gives support by his vote to the thing concerning which he is talking.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, if there was any one item in the biil concerning which I felt the House might call upon us for an explanation as to why we have so largely increased the appropriation, it was this item. The appropriation for the Bureau of Standards is very much larger in this bill that it has ever been. I realize that the Bureau of Standards is doing a great and an important work, but I wish to call the attention of the committee to the fact that many projects are under investigation. If we increase the number of projects which they must investigate it will postpone the final solution of the problems. In addition to all the work now in progress in the Bureau of Standards, they ask for appropriations for four new projects. We have given them in this bill money for the two projects which we understood in the mind of the chief of the bureau to be of the greatest importance. I want to say for the benefit of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Cox] and the other members of the committee, that no lobbyist approached the subcommittee or the chairman of the subcommittee with respect to any of these projects

Mr. COX of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield for just a moment?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes, sir.

Mr. COX of Ohio. I know that full well. That was farthest from my thought. But people were here in behalf of this legislation, and properly so. The point I am making is that the provision you left in was right, and the people were here in behalf of it. The class of humanity I am seeking here now to benefit has no representative here except their chosen representatives. I was trying to work out a mere distinction, that was all. I would despise myself if I made the slightest unkind reference to any gentleman on the committee.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. All the information I have with respect to this item or any other items came from Dr.

Stratton, the head of the bureau.

Now, Mr. Chairman, in addition to the work hitherto undertaken at the Bureau of Standards, we have given three new items. One is for the investigation of railroad, elevator, and other scales. The next is for the investigation of fire-resisting properties of building materials. I believe that as many human lives are lost through great fires in the cities as have ever been lost through electrical devices. I am as much interested in humanity as any Member upon this floor. I do not question the wisdom of making this investigation, but I say that we can not appropriate all the money in one bill to do all the things that people come and ask Congress to do. I hope the committee will vote down the amendment.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman— Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Honson] is recognized.

Mr. HOBSON. I will defer to the gentleman from Illinois

[Mr. CANNON]

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I am a member of the Committee on Appropriations, and I am glad to cooperate with that committee. Ordinarily, after the committee considers estimates, there is not much of division between the two sides of the aisle touching the same. This bill I think is a good one. I feel like complimenting the gentleman in charge of the bill and the subcommittee that prepared it. In supporting this amendment I do not wish to criticize the gentleman from South Carolina or the committee. The committee was divided.

Now, what are the merits, after all? If the House should adopt the amendment, then the committee is not harmed. I think the gentleman from South Carolina will concede that this is an important estimate, and that the investigation ought to be made, but contends the $15,000 to pursue this investigation for the coming fiscal year can wait. I do not agree with him in that position. Of course it can wait and must wait unless the appropriation is made. But an item of $15,000 in the presence of total expenditures that run pretty well up to one thousand million dollars is of but slight importance in view of the fact that an investigation ought to be made. I believe this work ought to be undertaken, and undertaken now. The Bureau of Standards is a splendid bureau, and it is doing a great work. It has justified its creation. I quite agree that these three items which the committee has reported for the year are very important, and I believe that the appropriation ought to be made.

Now, then, we all understand that we enact legislation for the District of Columbia; we appropriate for our insular possessions; we appropriate for Alaska. Otherwise in the United States proper, I believe, there is no Territory that is not organized. I believe we organized Alaska at the last session, or provided for its organization, with a Territorial form of government.

It is simply marvelous to contemplate the electrical development throughout the country, and yet that development is in its infancy. From the standpoint of human life it is important. I cooperated as one Member of the House, and cooperated cheerfully, in the creation and strengthening of the Bureau of Mines. One mining disaster attracts great attention. The States have plenary power in the premises, but notwithstanding they have plenary power Congress has wisely created a Bureau of Mines and Mining, and the expenditures for that bureau will constantly grow. It will do a great work from every standpoint; primarily from the standpoint of the protection of human life, and secondarily for the protection of property. They go hand in hand. Yet I think I can safely say, although I am not informed by statistics, that more men are wounded, disabled, and killed who are engaged in the various electrical industries of the United States than there are of wounded or killed or injured in the mining industries. From that standpoint I believe that the United States Government, for the reasons assigned by the gentleman from the State of Ohio [Mr. Cox], to which I shall not refer further, would do well to cooperate with the States in these investigations in the greatest bureau for the making of scientific investigations in the United States. I think it is our duty to make these investigations for the information of the respective States, which are performing their duties, each State upon its own initiative.

Mr. Chairman, I ask for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks for five minutes more. Is there objection to the gentleman's request?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON. So much from that standpoint. Now, let us consider it from the property standpoint, and that is important but not of primary importance. I feel quite sure that my honorable colleague from one of the Chicago districts [Mr. Buchanan], if he had been in the Chamber at the beginning of the discussion, would not have asked the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Cox] the question that he did ask. I do not go hotfoot in any legislation that I undertake to say that because property and material interests and capital are interested human life should not also be protected, because there comes a benefit also to capital and to property from the protection of human life.

It is a very cheap kind of politics. It is a well-known fact—and I do not speak now as a scientific expert—that the electric current is not yet fully understood; that in our great cities, with the gas mains and the water mains, the injuries from electrolysis are very serious indeed. Therefore, as labor conquers all and creates all, I do not perceive that it is criminal to make an investigation that will tend to protect human life and at the same time tend also to protect property created by labor. I do not advocate legislation from that standpoint.

Considering the capital that is already invested in the Bureau of Standards and considering the fact that these investigations are proceeding for the benefit of the public service, for one I believe that this bagatelle of $15,000 for making investigations touching electricity, coming, as it does, in its operation in contact with substantially every one of the 90,000,000 people in the United States, should be appropriated, and this investiga-tion ought to commence, in my judgment. Therefore I shall vote for the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, I shall support this amendment. In doing so I wish to say to the chairman of the sub-committee that framed the bill [Mr. Johnson of South Carolina] that I have a fellow feeling for him in his desire to have his bill go through as drawn; but I think it is simply in keeping with the spirit of legislation that the House in Committee of the Whole should from time to time make amendments to bills as submitted by the various committees. formed in the years since I have been here, is that it might be to the public interest to have more amendments adopted than are usual in this House when offered by members of the Committee of the Whole.

It ought to be fully understood that the Chief of the Bureau of Standards does not oppose this amendment, but, on the contrary, that he fully recognizes its importance.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. HOBSON. Certainly.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The item is in the estimates.

Mr. HOBSON. Yes. Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The Chief of the Bureau of Standards made an argument in favor of it?

Mr. HOBSON. Yes.
Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. But the gentleman understands that the departments usually ask for more than they

Mr. HOBSON. I am fully aware of that. Our naval appropriation bill requires very large reductions from the estimates.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We asked the Chief of the Bureau of Standards to furnish us the items in the order of their importance, in his mind, for our guidance, if we could not give him all he wanted, and we have inserted in the bill the items in the order of their importance, according to his judgment and not ours.

Mr. HOBSON. I thoroughly understand that position, and I want simply to remind my colleagues that this amendment does not seek to have inserted in the bill something that is opposed by the chief of the bureau, nor even opposed on its merits by the members of the subcommittee, but an item whose utility and usefulness are recognized by all.

The next point is this: This amendment does not undertake to purchase or install any life-saving apparatus. It is purely a question of investigation. As a general proposition money spent in getting information for standardization is the best money that can be spent in any line of expenditure. And further, Mr. Chairman, as a general proposition, this House and other legislative bodies, in my judgment, give more attention to questions of what might be called business, questions of property, the departments of human activity in which men find their employment, and tend naturally and inevitably to neglect those departments of human activity that relate to what may be called the humanities of life and the conditions of living. which seem, in the process of human evolution, to have fallen to the lot of woman. My investigations in recent years have convinced me that the great need of the world at large is the need of more attention to life, health, and the conditions of living, in framing legislation and public policies; and, to make an honest confession, those investigations have led me to believe that woman suffrage would be a good proposition for the Nation. [Applause.] I have become a smiragist as the result of my investigations.

Mr. MANN. The problem has been solved by one man.
Mr. HOBSON. And to come down to this specific application, I should like to remind my friends who represent districts in the neighborhood of the Appalachian system, particularly the southern Appalachian system, in the great States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, and other States whose Members I see here among my colleagues, that the question of the development of water power is one of the great questions of the day. Take my own State. I expect before I make my exit to see the State of Alabama ramified with electrical transmission of power from the Tennessee, the Coosa, and other great rivers.

It is a fact, as stated by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Cannon] and others, that the question of human life is very fundamentally involved in the electrical transmission of power for long distances. The voltages are now something undreamed of a few years ago, and in a very few years more they will be very much larger than they are to-day; because you know the waste, the heat, varies as the square of the current and only the first power of the resistance. That means that it will be advantageous to have smaller wire, with large voltage and a small current, for the transmission of a given amount of power a given distance, and particularly for long distances. Therefore we will be dealing constantly with networks of potentials that would destroy life when turned upon the human body; and it is the simplest form of leadership that the Federal Government should assume, not to take the parts of individual States, but to proceed to standardize and to take the leadership in such measures as this, that protect human life.

The CHAIRMAN. All debate on this amendment is exhausted.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. Mr. Chairman, the remarks of the gentleman from Ohio in advocating this amendment were grossly unjust to the Committee on Appropriations. They did not quite state the facts, and they were so framed as to give a very unfair color to the attitude of the members of the committee. The gentleman intimated that the committee were more interested in legislation and appropriations designed to protect material interests than to those to conserve human life. Subsequently he inti-mated that the activities of a lobby—expressed with that peculiar tone sometimes used in making use of the term—was instrumental in determining the question by the committee. Neither one of the insinuations is based upon anything which justifies such an accusation against the committee.

Mr. COX of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. FITZGERALD. Certainly.
Mr. COX of Ohio. The gentleman from New York will remember that I disavowed in plain words any intent to cast any reflection on the committee. The gentleman from New York does me an injustice when he suggests that such a thing would enter my mind.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman did not intend, he says, to reflect on the committee, but it was intended to influence Members of the House to vote on the proposition, and the remarks directed to me were intended to convince Members that a lobby had been present in Washington in the interest of the item to investigate the fire-resisting qualities of building material, but none in behalf of the other item.

Now I shall, if the gentleman will permit me, lay before this committee all of the information that I have about this socalled lobby, together with all the correspondence that has come to me as chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. Then Members will be better able to determine just whether this lobby was such a movement as might have influenced Members in their judgment, and whether it should not properly have influenced Members in their judgment.

The Director of the Bureau of Standards, in his statement before the committee, in discussing the item for an appropriation for the investigation of fire-resisting qualities of building materials, stated that "the loss of life and property due to fire He urged this appropriation so that in building operations buildings might be so constructed as to prevent the destruction of life and property.

Mr. COX of Ohio. Did he not urge the other also?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I am coming to that. In his statement about the investigation in regard to establishing standards to be utilized in the transmission of electric currents of high potentiality he said, "The loss of life and property due to each cause is very great." But these two statements hardly justify the gentleman from Ohio in intimating that because the committee recommended the item for the investigation of the fireresisting properties of building material and not the one for the standardization of the methods of carrying electric currents of high potentiality that thereby they were recommending legislation designed to be beneficial to the material interests and to capital invested and to be indifferent to those matters which may be instrumental in conserving or protecting human life. They were both put on the same plane by the Director of the Bureau of Standards, and I will put his judgment against all the others that may be marshaled on such a proposition, because I believe he is not only the best informed, but the most competent man to express an opinion. In his judgment, the idvestigation of fire-resisting qualities of building materials was of more importance than the matter in which the gentleman from Ohio is so much interested.

Mr. COX of Ohio. Do the hearings show that? I wish the gentleman would read it.

Mr. FITZGERALD. It is not in the hearings.
Mr. COX of Ohio. Then it ought to be in the hearings.
Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman can think what he pleases as to what ought to be in the hearings. I am making statements and giving authority for them. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] stated that he asked the Director of the Bureau of Standards to state the relative importance of these estimates so that the committee, if it did not feel that it could recommend all the appropriations, in determining to give some would give the ones most important from his point The gentleman from South Carolina stated that the item for the investigation of fire-resisting qualities of building materials was placed by the Director of the Bureau of Standards above the item for the standardization for the methods of transmitting electricity of high potentiality. Mr. Chairman, I am not disposed, nor would I for a moment suggest that it is hecessary to have that statement in print in order to rely upon the statement of the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. COX of Ohio. What is the use of having hearings published if they do not contain all of the statements?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I do not wish to discuss that now. Mr. COX of Ohio. The gentleman makes a statement as being intrinsic, but it does not appear in the hearings.

Mr. FITZGERALD. We have more important matters to discuss than that; whether it is in the hearings or not, the statement was in the possession of the gentleman from Ohio, because he heard the gentleman from South Carolina make it.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. At the conclusion of Dr. Stratton's testimony before the subcommittee I said to Dr. Stratton, who was asking an increase of $50,000 in one item and of $100,000 and upward in others, that it was possible that the committee might not feel able to give him all that he de-I further stated that we were not familiar with these scientific subjects, and asked him to indicate to the committee the order in which he thought these matters most important, so that if we could not give all that he wished we could provide for them in the order of their importance, in his judgment. I have here a little typewritten statement on which is marked the order of importance, 1, 2, and 3. It came to us after Dr. Stratton's testimony had been concluded.

Mr. FITZGERALD. No. 1 is test car, etc.; No. 2 fire-resisting properties; and No. 3, high potentials.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I yield.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. I would like to ascertain to just what extent the committee, which I regard as possessing rare discrimination, yielded to Dr. Stratton's desires and buried their own views on this question.

Mr. FITZGERALD. That is not a fact. The committee did not bury its own views. Their views coincided with those of Dr. Stratton as to which of these items is more important. That is why they recommended them in the bill. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Cox] dissented from Dr. Stratton and a majority of the committee, and in that he happens to be unfortunate.

Mr. COX of Ohio. The gentleman from Ohio was for life second and property third, and the position of the gentleman from New York was directly the reverse, and I would not swap positions with him on the subject.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman still has not realized the value of certain investigations that the Bureau of Standards

Mr. FITZGERALD. Dr. Stratton stated that the loss of life and property due to fire was appalling, and that is why he wanted to make these investigations.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. If the doctor had reversed his recommendation, what would then have been the attitude of the committee? If the gentleman is in a position to state that, I would like to have him do so. I desire to follow the committee, if I can, and I would like to know the judgment of the com-

Congress convened on the 2d day of December, which was Monday, and I arrived in the city of Washington on the evening previous, the 1st of December. Among mail accumulated and coming, because of my absence in Panama, I found the following:

OHIO STATE BUILDING CODE COMMISSION, Columbus, Ohio, November 30, 1912.

John J. Fitzgerald, Chairman Appropriation Committee, Washington, D. C. Chairman Appropriation Committee, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I am informed that a request has been made by the Bureau of Standards for an appropriation to enable the said department to make fire tests and tests of various materials used for fire prevention and fire protection.

As consulting architect for the Building Code Commission of Ohio, I fully realize and appreciate the value of the knowledge to be gained by such investigations, and believe that such a department should be operated and maintained by the Government.

Government tests and reports would be free from the criticisms of and objections to private tests, as is the present condition.

Government tests would provide a uniform standard throughout the country and would raise the standard of building operations along these lines.

lines.

I further believe that the work of the Bureau of Standards should be so expanded as to include all materials and devices used in building construction and equipment.

The above are my personal views, and in these I believe I voice the sentiments of the code commission; however, I have been unable to secure a statement from the commission owing to the lateness of the hour and the fact that this is Saturday and a holiday for the officials.

It will be a pleasure to know that the request of the Bureau of Standards has been granted and that Ohio and all other States may secure the benefit of Government regulations and tests.

Sincerely,

Ohio State Bullings Cone Commission

OHIO STATE BUILDING CODE COMMISSION,. Per FRED W. ELLIOTT, Consulting Architect,

I also received the following communication:

THE BUREAU OF BUILDINGS FOR THE BOROUGH OF MANHATTAN, New York City, December 5, 1912.

Congressman John J. Fitzgerald, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: I understand that an appropriation of $25,000 has been requested by the Bureau of Standards for testing and determining the fire-resisting qualities of building materials. I believe this item is included in the legislative bill recently reported by the Appropriations Committee.

Included in the legislative bill recently reported by the Appropriations Committee.

Under normal conditions there is a steady increase in building construction throughout the country. The tendency is toward the construction of larger and higher buildings. Increasing congestion in cities is practically unavoidable. All this increases the fire hazard. Not only is property affected, but the lives of the occupants are at stake. Fire-resisting construction, therefore, becomes more and more important. To secure satisfactory fireproof construction, a thorough knowledge of fire-resisting qualities of building materials is essential. No agency seems to me better qualified or equipped for an impartial and careful investigation of this subject than the Bureau of Standards. Municipal governments and building officials need this information, which at the present time is secured in a scattered way and not systematically by various methods in different parts of the country, and then only with a view of some one device or construction and not with any purpose of establishing the general and underlying principles.

Our Government has spent for some years past millions of dollars in investigations in the interests of agriculture. It seems reasonable, therefore, that some appropriation be made for the investigation of the materials used in so large an industry as building construction. Some work along this line was done by the Federal Government under the direction of the Geological Survey a few years ago. I hope that the work may now be continued by the Bureau of Standards, and that you will lend your support to the passage of this item in case it should be questioned on the floor of the House.

Rudolph P. Miller, Superintendent of Buildings.

RUDOLPH P. MILLER, Superintendent of Buildings.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I ask for five minutes

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I want to know if the gentleman desires to read some more communications of the same kind. If that is the purpose of extending his time, I object.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I have two more letters.
Mr. BUCHANAN. They can be inserted in the RECORD without taking up time to read them here.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I have two letters that I desire to read. Mr. BUCHANAN. I object, Mr. Chairman, to a further extension of time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois objects. Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last three words.

The CHAIRMAN. That amendment is now pending; the gentleman can be recognized to speak in opposition.

Mr. BUCHANAN. The amendment was to strike out the last two words.

The CHAIRMAN. That amendment is now pending. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized on the pro forma amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, I do not care to take up much of the time of the House, but it seems the question I asked the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Cox] was misunderstood. I only was calling his attention to the way he was putting the matter in regard to the protection of capital and labor. question of safety devices for the working people of the country has been one to which I have given much study and thought, for I believe we have drifted into a condition, as I have said before, where we are making cripples and paupers, due to the fact that the people themselves have probably been indifferent to this great question and the public officials certainly have lost sight of the importance of securing the passage of laws and enforcing them that will give better protection to the working masses of the country. There are 22 foreign nations that have passed protective measures for the working people of their respective countries, but we seem to follow the path of greed and avarice, and we have drifted into a condition that ought to bring the blush of shame to the faces of people of public spirit. I have been probably in a position through my experience in life, working at one of the most hazardous trades, where this has been brought close home to me, and it has impressed itself upon me strongly, for I have seen the tears often of those whose relatives have been killed by accidents that could have been avoided if reasonable care had been exercised.

I have seen the poor widows condemned to the washtub and their children to destitution and poverty. In answering the question of whether or not I would support any amendment that would tend to provide safety devices of any sort to the working people of the country, if the gentleman understood me to say I would not, he certainly does not understand me. Nor in doing this do I believe that I am putting any obstruction in the way of the proper success of legitimate and honest business and capital. I do believe, though, if the proper safeguards were given the working people of the country they would probably be unable to pay the large dividends which have been paid in the past on fictitious capital and watered stock that has been floated on the industries of this country, which has made it a burden and made it almost impossible to provide the necessary safeguards and protection and give the necessary wages for working people of the country to exist as they should. These questions are something that ought to be and will be considered when men realize their importance and it begins to awaken their sympathy, as I believe the gentleman from Ohio does, and when that sympathy gets stronger for the human side of the question, then the influence that is brought to bear for the sake of profit-a profit, too, on this fictitious capital, counterfeit capital that has been created by a few financial pirates and industrial highbinders of this country, men who now are parading as eminent business men and business benefactors of the country to the discredit and disgrace of honest legitimate

Mr. TOWNSEND. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes; but I have not much time. Mr. TOWNSEND. I want to ask the gentleman if he does not think that the fire in New York known as the Triangle fire, where within the space of five minutes 375 shop girls were killed, was not the result of the absence of fire-resisting building materials in that building?

Not only that, but I understand it was Mr. BUCHANAN. also on account of their not having proper fire escapes, due to the neglect of which I am speaking. I am not complaining of this committee putting into the appropriation bill money for I do complain that there ought to be money appropriated, if necessary, for the other purpose of standardizing safety devices, and so forth, and for that reason I am in favor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio, and if my question has been misconstrued or misunderstood I wanted to correct that, otherwise I would not have taken the committee's time to have again arisen.

It is not my purpose to criticize the committee for what they have done, but this amendment should pass.

The CHAIRMAN. All debate on this amendment has been exhausted.

Mr. BERGER. Mr. Chairman— Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSON] moves that all debate on this amendment close in five minutes.

Mr. BERGER. Mr. Chairman, I asked for time half an hour ago.

Mr. MANN. There are three gentlemen who are seeking the

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I will ask for 10 minutes,

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson] moves that all debate on this amendment close in 10 minutes.

Mr. MANN. I understood the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Berger] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FARR] were to have the time.

The question is on the motion of the The CHAIRMAN. gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson].

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Ber-

GER] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. BERGER. Mr. Chairman, I am glad to know that the social conscience is making some headway in the House here. I am glad to notice that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobson], and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Cox] unite on the necessity for protection to human life of the workers. We all understand that labor nowadays performs a social service even when labor is still privately employed.

Therefore labor is entitled to social protection; to all the protection scientific investigation may provide, and the Nation ought to provide the investigation.

Now, I do not like to find fault with the report of a committee that reports on routine matters or appropriations, for the simple reason that the committee has the opportunity and the necessary time to consider these things in detail, and the average Member has neither the time nor the opportunity. On the other hand, it is not said that when such committee makes a report the House must simply accept every proposition as submitted, otherwise there would be no sense in reporting bills to the House. I do not believe the chairman of the committee or any member of the committee should consider any committee report a personal question and any criticism a personal criticism.

As I understand it, Dr. Stratton, of the Bureau of Standards, was in favor of the proposition of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Cox] to have the bureau investigate the nature, qualities, uses, and dangers of electricity.

Electricity is rapidly becoming one of the main forces of production and transportation—one of the principal sources of heat and light. And yet we know little or nothing about the nature and origin of electricity—scientists even disagree whether it is a fluid or caused by vibration.

Human life is in constant danger by the necessity of constant handling of a wonderful power about which we know so little. Thousands of human beings lose their lives every year. Fifteen thousand dollars is simply a pittance when we consider this question from that point of view.

But there is also the economic waste. Carlyle said somewhere that a human being ought to be worth as much as a hundred horses. A good horse is worth about $500 nowadays. A human life should therefore be worth at least $50,000, according to Carlyle's estimate in 1830. I have no statistics at hand, but I know it is safe to estimate that 10,000 human beings lose their lives every year through accidents caused by electricity. I believe the number of such accidents will grow from year to year, because electricity is rapidly supplanting gas, steam, and other forces, and is bound to grow immeasurably with the development of our water powers. The economic waste is therefore also tremendous.

I believe $15,000 to study this question is a very small sum, indeed, from any point of view-from the humanitarian or the economic. We ought not to make any objection to so small a sum when we consider that we spend over a billion of dollars every year for other purposes. I hope the Committee of the Whole will see its way clear to vote for the amendment and for the appropriation of the $15,000. There is not a dollar in this bill that is spent more wisely.

Mr. FARR. Mr. Chairman, I welcome an opportunity to vote for an appropriation that ought to result in so much good as There is no controversy as regards the wisdom of testing the resisting power of fire brick, and there should be none on the question of safeguarding life after viewing the batch of clippings presented by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Cox] showing the horrible accidents and the great number of deaths resulting to those engaged in electrical work. come also the opportunity to vote for this appropriation, with the hope that the House will pass it, because it puts in the hands of a Federal bureau the work of research. The work, after all—the work that will prevent accidents along these lines-will be done here in Washington and not by the different States.

Mr. COX of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. FARR. I will.

Mr. COX of Ohio. Has the gentleman observed that of the three projects carried in this bill two of them are in behalf of the property unit and one in behalf of the human unit? The latter is that in respect to refrigeration. That calls for $15,000. The sum total of the other two property units is $105,000, or about seven times the amount. Now, we ask that we put beside the projects for the property units a small, modest provision for another human unit of $15,000.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Does the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Cox] understand that the method of refrigeration for transportation of freight is what is called a human element?

Mr. COX of Ohio. It is a supply; yes, sir.

Mr. FARR. I have no controversy with the gentleman with regard to those provisions, but I sincerely hope this House will favor the appropriation of $15,000 to safeguard human life.

The amendment speaks for itself. It carries its own conviction. It is to investigate dangers to life and property due to the transmission of electric current at high potentialities and the precautions to be taken and the best methods of con-structing installation and operation to be followed in the distribution and return of such currents in order to reduce to a minimum such dangers; also to investigate the best means of protecting life and property from lightning.

The distinguished former Speaker, Mr. Cannon, referred to the work of the Bureau of Mines.

The national Bureau of Mines, I believe, is doing more than all the bureaus in the respective States combined to find out the causes of accidents and to do things to prevent accidents. Many lives will be saved as a result of its research and experimental work.

The States are doing a supervisory work in that line. believe more and more of the responsibilities of government are going to shift to this great and wonderful center of Washington, and it will be for the good of humanity and the advance-ment of our Nation. And I sincerely trust that inasmuch as $1,500 worth of our time has been taken up in debating this simple provision of appropriating $15,000 to save the heads of many families and to prevent shocking accidents, such as have been referred to, we will not spend another $1,500 in debating it further, but that we shall vote for it, and vote for it heartily

The CHAIRMAN. All debate on this amendment has been exhausted. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Cox].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. A division, Mr. Chairman. The committee divided; and there were—ayes 63, noes 19. Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Let us have tellers, Mr.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I offer another amendment to page 134, line 21, to strike out the sum "$1,000" and insert in lieu thereof the sum "$500."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 134, line 21, strike out the sum "$1,000" and insert in lieu thereof the sum "$500."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

JUDICIAL.

Supreme Court: Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, $15,000; 8 associate justices, at $14,500 each; marshal, $4,500; 9 stenographic clerks, 1 for the Chief Justice and 1 for each associate justice, at not exceeding $2,000 each; in all, $153,500.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I raise a point of order on this paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois FOWLER] makes a point of order against this paragraph.

Mr. FOWLER. I desire to ask the gentleman in charge of this bill if the salary of the Chief Justice is fixed at $15,000 by current law or by statutory law?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. By statute law. Mr. FOWLER. When was that change made?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Two years ago. Mr. FOWLER. Is not the salary $14,000 for the Chief Justice and $13,500 for the Associate Justices? Is not that the statutory salary?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We followed the law as it is-$15,000 for the Chief Justice and $14,500 each for the Associate Justices.

Associate Justices.

Mr. CULLOP. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois yield?

Mr. FOWLER. Yes.

Mr. CULLOP. I desire to ask the gentleman from South Carolina if the salary of the Chief Justice is not $13,500 and the salary of the other Justices $13,000? I understand that this is an increase of $1,500.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The salary of the Chief Justice is fixed by law at $15,000 and that of the Associate Justices at $14,500, and the committee has simply appropriated the amount required by law.

Mr. CULLOP. My understanding, I will say, was different from that of the gentleman. Two years ago, when the statute was amended, the salary was $13,500 for the Chief Justice and $13,000 for each of the Associate Justices.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois IMr.

FOWLER] insist upon his point of order?

Mr. FOWLER. I am satisfied, Mr. Chairman, that there is no statute authorizing the salary of $15,000 for the Chief Justice and $14,500 for the Associate Justices, respectively.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. But, Mr. Chairman, there is a statute, and it went into effect on the 1st day of January, 1912.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSON] assures the Chair that there is a statute fixing the salary of the Chief Justice at $15,000 and that of the Associate Justices at $14,500 each. If the gentleman from Illinois will state to the Chair that he is positive there is no such statute, then the Chair will investigate in order to determine which of these two gentlemen is correct.

Mr. FOWLER. The rule of parliamentary procedure in this House, Mr. Chairman, is that if there is a contention by a committee that there is a statute fixing a salary at a certain amount, the burden is on the committee to produce the statute.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair believes that would be a good rule if these contentions were made only where there was some indication that there was no statute authorizing the salary.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I will produce the statute. The CHAIRMAN. But if some gentleman in his place questions the chairman of the committee as to the law, and the chairman of the committee in charge of the bill asserts of his positive knowledge that there is a statute, the Chair will take that statement, unless some gentleman says, I have the statute before me and the chairman of the committee in charge of the bill is in error.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, at the last session of this Congress, on an amendment to increase the salaries of the clerks to the Members of Congress, I had occasion to investigate the salaries of public officers, and among them was the salary of the Chief Justice and Associate Justices. I solicited the assistance of the librarian for that purpose, and with him went through an investigation of the matter, and my recollection assures me that the salaries in this paragraph are too

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from Illinois yield now to his colleague [Mr. MANN], who says he has the statute before him?

Mr. FOWLER. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, by the act of March 3, 1911, revising the laws relating to the judiciary title, which carries the salaries of the Supreme Court Justices and other salaries, it is provided that the salary of the Chief Justice shall be $15,000 and the salary of the Associate Justices $14,500.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair now has the statute before him-United States Statutes at Large, acts of 1909-1911.

Was that current law or permanent law? Mr. FOWLER. The CHAIRMAN. It is permanent law, and it has not been repealed so far as the Chair knows.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Section 218 of the code: The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States shall receive the sum of $15,000 a year, and the Justices thereof shall receive the sum of $14,500 a year each, to be paid monthly.

Mr. MANN. He will find it at page 1152 of the Statutes at Large, Sixty-first Congress.

Mr. FOWLER. In what connection was that statute passed? The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is not familiar with the law, only that it is an existing statute on the books now.

Mr. MANN. It is the revision of the judiciary title, so called, and that provision was inserted in the bill in the House on my motion.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, it is characteristic of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] to make motions to increase the salaries of big men and to object to motions to increase the salaries of charwomen. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. MANN. I never made a motion to decrease the salary of my colleague.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last I, too, am a Representative, from now until March 4, from the State of Illinois. I am not in sympathy with the great desire of my colleague [Mr. Fowler] to protest against the salaries of the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States. I should not have felt it necessary or even desirable to make this remark had it not been that my colleague [Mr. Fowles] is also from the State of Illinois, and I am glad that the salary of the Chief Justice is $15,000, and that the salaries of the Associate Justices are $14,500.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] I desire to say that I am not objecting to this paragraph because of the salaries, but I was making an honest inquiry as to whether there was any permanent law which authorized those salaries. I was sincere in believing that the statute fixing the salaries of the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the United States did not authorize these amounts. I was acting in good faith. I stand for the courts of our country, and I defy the ex-Speaker of this House to have greater reverence for them than I have, because I regard myself as a member of those courts as an attorney practicing therein.

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman then agrees with me that he is glad that the Chief Justice receives a salary of $15,000 a year? The gentleman then agrees with me that he

Mr. FOWLER. I would be very glad, Mr. Chairman, could have my colleague Mr. CANNON say that he joins me in asking that the wages of the labor of this country be placed upon a better level with the salaries of the great offices which he has sought in the past so many times to increase; but I am sorry to say that he and his kind have ever had their seals set against the labor of this country and regard it as a matter of course to serve those who feed upon the products of its toil.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. Does the gentleman desire that the charwomen and messengers, occupying positions sought for in the District of Columbia for which we are constantly besieged for recommendations, should be compensated for at the rate of $15,000 a year? Mr. Chairman, labor pays it all,

Mr. FOWLER. And produces it all.

Mr. CANNON. Labor that is distributed throughout the country of 100,000,000 people, substantially, produces all, pays all the taxes, for the preferential labor at better pay and more certain pay; labor throughout the country is taxed to contribute to it.

know that the gentleman represents a district in the southern part of the State of Illinois, standing in season and out of season to play up to his constituents that mine the coal, fooling the people with the idea that he is serving them when he seeks to tax them for the purpose of employing other labor at preferential prices. Yet it is true that by the verdict of the people that sent him here he has succeeded in fooling them; how long he can fool them God only knows. [Laughter.] I want to say one other thing, as long as my colleague has made the statement that I lie awake nights and in my service have discriminated against the men who live in the sweat of their faces. I apprehend that during my service I have assisted in legislation more for the benefit of the hundred millions of people that toil than he would or can even if he lived to be as old as Methuselah and occupied a seat in this House for that time. [Laughter.]
Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to speak in opposition to the amendment now pending.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois, Mr. CAN-NON, moved to strike out the last two words, and now the geutleman from Illinois, Mr. Fowler, is entitled to speak in opposition.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I did not know that it was a crime in any legislative body to look after legislative appropriation bills to the extent of seeing whether they conform to the law of the land, but my distinguished colleague from Illinois [Mr. Cannon] has revealed such as being the fact from his standpoint. I do not complain of paying a salary to an individual who is worthy of the salary. I am not complaining of a salary that is commensurate with the services rendered. Neither am I complaining at the salary of the Supreme Court of the land, but the gentleman from Illinois rose in his seat and eulogized the salary which was paid to these great officials of this country. In the same connection he sought to belittle the effort to increase the salary which is paid to such people as messengers and charwomen. From his seat, since I have been here, he has repeatedly sought to keep such labor on a low salary, below that which is necessary to give an economi-With such as him the country has complained; it cal living. has complained of his policy as Speaker of this House, and the people at large have complained and repudiated him and his policies. He has been fooling a majority of the people of his district for a long time. If I should live as long as he suggested, I would not fool the people, or as many of them as he has, because he has fooled a majority of the people of this country, and I have not even fooled a majority of one congressional district. My constituents sent me here because I stand against such policies as the gentleman has labored for 30 years to inaugurate in this House and to fasten upon this country. I say to him that I never will stand for his policies. The people have repudiated them once and for all time to come, as I verily

The CHAIRMAN. All debate on this amendment is exhausted, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

District courts: Ninety-three district judges, at $6,000 each, $558,000. Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 135, line 25, strike out "$6,000" and insert "$7,000," and in line 25, page 135, strike out "$558,000" and insert "$651,000."

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that that is new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Retired judges: To pay the salaries of judges retired under section 714 of the Revised Statutes, so much as may be necessary for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, is hereby appropriated.

Mr. CULLOP. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking the chairman of the committee a question. How many judges are there now upon the retired

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The amount for retired judges for the year 1912 is $132,651.11.

Mr. CULLOP. In number how many are there? Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I do not I do not know. number varies from time to time.

Mr. CULLOP. Does the gentleman know what States and Territories they are in? Each State has not a retired judge?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I will say to the gentle-man that there are Supreme Court judges, circuit court judges, and district court judges on the retired list, and they draw different salaries.

Mr. CULLOP. Are there any Supreme Court Justices on the retired list?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. GARRETT. Judges Shiras, Brown, and Moody are on the retired list.

Mr. CULLOP. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Court of Appeals, District of Columbia: Chief justice, $7.500; 2 associate justices, at $7.000 each; clerk, $3.250, and $250 additional as custodian of the Court of Appeals Building; assistant or deputy clerk, $2.250; reporter, $1,500: Provided, That the reports issued by him shall not be sold for more than $5 per volume; crier, who shall also act as steaographer and typewriter in the clerk's office when not engaged in court room, $1.260; 3 messengers, at $720 each; necessary expenditures in the conduct of the clerk's office, $1,000; 3 stenographers, 1 for the chief justice and 1 for each associate justice, at $1,200 each; in all, $36,710, one-half of which shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on ne paragraph. I desire to ask the chairman what was the the paragraph. necessity for raising the salary of the crier from $1,000 to

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, the crier of the court is required to be a stenographer and typewriter and to act as such. He has been receiving a salary of $1,000 a year. The committee was urgently requested to increase the salary to $1,600 a year, and we allowed an increase of $200.

Mr. FOWLER. Has he been doing the stenographic work heretofore?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I do not know how long he has been doing that work. That is what he is doing now.

I desire to ask if these volumes of reports Mr. FOWLER. can not be produced for less than $5 each? They ought not to be sold above cost, should they?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman stands that there is no great demand for these reports. The gentleman underare from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia. There is a very limited number of volumes sold.

Mr. FOWLER. I did not know whether the gentleman's committee had gone into the question.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. We did not. I am just giving the gentleman my judgment.

Mr. FOWLER. Does the gentleman think that they could be produced for $3 a volume?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman knows that in producing books the cost depends on the number of copies that can be disposed of, and the number here is small.

Mr. FOWLER. If the gentleman thought so, I would like to offer an amendment to make it $3 instead of $5.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I think we had better let it alone.

Mr. FOWLER.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Yes. The lawyers who buy the books are not complaining.

Mr. FOWLER. Very well. I withdraw the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Commissioner, Yellowstone Park: Commissioner in Yellowstone National Park, $1,500. And the provisions of section 21 of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act approved May 28, 1896, shall not be construed as impairing the right of said commissioner to receive said salary as herein provided.

Mr. CULLOP. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would ask the chairman why this provision is worded as it is in regard to the act of 1896, providing that it shall not be so construed as impairing the right of said commissioner Was there anything to receive such salary as herein provided. in that act which provided for the payment of a salary to this commissioner?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The United States commissioners are paid fees. It is necessary for the Government to have one commissioner in the Yellowstone Park, but the fees received are insignificant, so that it is necessary for Congress to provide, and it has so provided for many years, for a small

Mr. CULLOP. Would it not be advisable, then, to add a provision to this that the fees he may receive should be covered into the Treasury of the United States to be used for park funds?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The gentleman understands that $1,500 is a small salary for anyone to receive who resides in the Yellowstone Park, and if we were to require him to turn the little fees he receives into the Treasury it would probably be necessary to increase the salary by an equal amount.

Mr. CULLOP. About what is the amount annually that he receives?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I do not know, but it is small; inconsequential, the Clerk tells me.
Mr. CULLOP. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

For rent of necessary quarters in Washington, D. C., and elsewhere, $7,000; for necessary traveling expenses of members of the court and clerk, $150; for books, periodicals, and stationery, supplies, freight, telephne and telegraph, heat, light, and power service, drugs, chemicals, and cleansers, furniture, and printing; for pay of bailiffs and all other necessary employees not otherwise specifically provided for; and for such other miscellaneous expenses as may be approved by the presiding judge, $7,500; in all, $14,650.

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Chairman, I offer as a separate section the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. ROBINSON). The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 138, after line 6, insert as a separate paragraph the fol-

On page 138, after line 6, insert as a separate paragraph of the lowing:

"Commerce Court: Expenses allowance for judges at rate of $1,500 per annum each, $7,500; clerk, $4,000; deputy clerk, $2,500; marshal; $3,000; deputy marshal, $2,500; for rent of necessary quarters in Washington, D. C., and elsewhere, and furnishing same for the United States Commerce Court; for books, periodicals, stationary, printing, and binding; for pay of balliffs and all ther necessary employees at the seat of government and elsewhere, not otherwise specifically provided for, and for such other miscellaneous expenses as may be approved by the presiding judge, $35,000; in all, $54,500."

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to take the time of the committee in debating this, because the majority of the House have already fully indicated their opinion upon it. It was debated at length in the last session of the Congress, and I do not suppose that any argument would alter their minds. In fact, the leaving out of this provision shows their purpose; but I simply wish that there shall be a vote upon it, so that the responsibility may rest where it belongs and it shall not appear that the whole House acquiesced in omitting this appropriation.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman we are perfectly willing that the responsibility should appear to rest upon us for not putting this item in the bill. Let us have a vote on the amendment. The House has passed upon it and the country has passed upon it.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

For reporting the decisions of the court and superintending the print-lng of the forty-seventh volume of the reports of the Court of Claims, $1,000, to be paid on the order of the court, notwithstanding section 1765 of the Revised Statutes or section 3 of the act of June 20, 1874.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 138, in line 22, strike out the words "forty-seven" and insert in lieu thereof the words "forty-eight." The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 2. That the pay of telephone-switchboard operators, assistant messengers, firemen, watchmen, laborers, and charwomen provided for in this act, except those employed in mints and assay offices, unless otherwise specially stated, shall be as follows: For telephone-switchboard operators, assistant messengers, firemen, and watchmen, at the rate of $720 per annum each; for laborers, at the rate of $660 per annum each; assistant telephone-switchboard operators, at the rate of $600 each; and for charwomen, at the rate of $240 per annum each.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to line 16 by striking out the figures $240 and inserting in lieu thereof $360.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 139, line 16, by striking out "$240" and inserting in lieu thereof "$360."

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that this is new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois desire to be heard? Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, it is not subject to the point of order. There is no statute fixing the salary of charwomen or the wages to be paid to charwomen, neither is there any precedent for fixing wages of charwomen. I think that $240 is much less than has been paid to any charwomen in any department carried in this bill. As I recall, none of them has been paid less than $360. The only thing I desire is to make the salary equal to that in other departments. I do not think it is subject to the point of order at all.

The CHAIRMAN. May the Chair ask the gentleman from South Carolina whether $240 is the amount carried in the appropriation bill of last year?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The law fixes it at $240, or rather the appropriation bill fixes it at $240. That is all the law on the subject.

The CHAIRMAN. That is what the Chair asked the gentle-

The point of order is sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 4. That section 7 of the general deficiency appropriation act approved August 26, 1912, is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 7. That no part of any money contained herein or hereafter appropriated in lump sum shall be available for the payment of personal services at a rate of compensation in excess of that paid for the same or similar services during the preceding fiscal year; nor shall any person employed at a specific salary be hereafter transferred and hereafter paid from a lump-sum appropriation at a rate of compensation greater than such specific salary, and the heads of departments shall cause this provision to be enforced: Provided, That this section shall not apply to mechanics, artisans, their helpers and assistants, laborers, or any other employees whose duties are of similar character and required in carrying on the various manufacturing or constructing operations of the Government."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the section. I would like to know just what change this makes from the provision now in force.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Does the gentleman make inquiry of me?

Mr. MANN. I made inquiry of the gentleman.
Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. The last Congress provided that persons transferred from the statutory roll to the lump-sum appropriation should not receive a greater sum than they had received on the statutory roll. Some of the governmental departments employ people—artisans and mechanics—in the navy yards and arsenals, and it is the rule at those places to fix the rate of compensation for mechanics and artisans every six months by a board. This board figures as to the rate of compensation paid for like services in surrounding manufacturing establishments, and upon that basis they fix the rate of pay, and this provision would of course forever limit them to the rate of pay received the year before this law was enacted unless it was modified.

Mr. MANN. Well, this statute was just enacted. is hardly dry upon it. Was it ill considered at the time it was brought into the House and passed?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. No; it was not ill considered. It was good legislation, because we found that people who were on the statutory roll at $1,600 or $1,800 a year would be transferred to a lump-sum appropriation at an increase of $900 or $1,000, and it was to stop that that this legislation was enacted. Then it was brought to the attention of the committee that these artisans and mechanics were employed in the way that I have indicated, and we are trying to keep all the good effects of the law without doing anything wrong.

Mr. MANN. I may say it may not have been ill-considered legislation, but evidently not fully considered legislation, because here is a proposition to amend it in two very important particulars, only one of which has been suggested by the gen-theman from South Carolina [Mr. Johnson].

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Oh, well, I do not say that the legislation was perfect, but it was in the right direc-

Mr. MANN. It seems to me that when matters of this sort are brought in, involving every branch of the service, they ought to be pretty fully considered by the committee before they are presented.

Mr. GILLETT. Last year it was not intended that it should apply to the artisans and mechanics, but it was overlooked that it would affect them.

Mr. MANN. Whoever drafted the amendment must have intended that to apply.

Mr. GILLETT. Not at the time, I think. I do not think they thought of it at all.

Mr. MANN. Then it was not considered at all, because the bulk of the employees of the Government probably are artisans and mechanics. Here was a provision framed affecting them, and you say the committee never thought of them in connection

Mr. GILLETT. That is what I have understood. Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. This came over from the Senate as an amendment.

Mr. MANN. I had forgotten that. Now, as I understand, this provision, having ascertained that the law as it now stands would prevent the raising of the salaries of artisans and mechanics at all, would keep them from year to year what they were the preceding year, and you propose to do the same thing by this amendment as to everybody else in the Government serv-You have herein proposed to have amended the law so that the rate of compensation shall not be in excess of that paid for same or similar services during the preceding fiscal year. Well, take this year, and here is the rate of compensation fixed now according to the preceding fiscal year. It could not be raised next year; it can not be raised the year after that; it can not be raised the year after that; and if this remains in, it can not be raised in any year, because it will be fixed according to the preceding year; and in 50 years it will be the same as this year.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Unless Congress changes the pay.

Mr. MANN. That is what it is-

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Unless Congress changes the rate of compensation here in the department, the rate now obtaining will continue to be the rate.

Mr. MANN. Under the existing provision in the deficiency act the rate of compensation must not exceed that paid for the same or similar service during that current year. Mr. GILLETT. Yes; but not out of a lump sum. For instance, we do change every year the compensation of different officers who are not paid out of a lump sum.

Mr. MANN. I am not talking about what this applies to. is a lump-sum appropriation. But there are various officials of the Government who are paid out of lump-sum appropriations. I agree with the committee that the fewer the better, but under this bill it would not be possible to change the amount paid any individual out of a lump-sum appropriation under any circumstances hereafter if this remains in the

Mr. GILLETT. The gentleman, I think, is mistaken there, because the gentleman goes on the theory that this means that whatever is paid out of a lump sum shall not be greater than that which was paid the previous year out of a lump sum. Now, that paid the previous year out of a lump sum, of course, could not be increased, and that was not the intention of this clause, I understand. This clause means that what is paid out of a lump sum shall not be greater than was paid to the same man who did similar work, who was paid not necessarily from the lump sum, but by regular, specific appropriation. Now, those cases can be raised from year to year. I think that was the intention.

I know, but if you have cases where a man is Mr. MANN. being paid out of a lump sum-that is, under this provisionthe best test of it is what sum was paid for similar services last year. What he is paid is the best test, and no other test could be applied. You could not change the compensation by increasing it.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] places a peculiar construction on this language. The intent of the section is to prevent the increase of the salary or emolument of certain classes of officers or employees out of a lump-sum appropriation over and above the amount they received in the previous year out of regular appropriations.

Mr. MANN. I beg the gentleman's pardon; to that portion of the bill I have not referred, or to that portion of the law.

Mr. MONDELL. That is all there is in the law.

Mr. MANN. I beg the gentleman's pardon. There is a specific paragraph on that subject, which is not changed by the addition of a word or the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a " from existing law.

Mr. MONDELL. Well, referring now to the part of the section contained in the first five lines, the intent is as I have stated, and the intent is very clearly stated, I think, in the language used; and I think the language can not be properly criticized. Then the provision goes on and provides:

Nor shall any persons employed at a specific salary be hereafter transferred and hereafter paid from a lump-sum appropriation at rate of compensation greater than such specific salary.

There can be no objection to that, it seems to me.

That is the current law. Mr. MANN.

Mr. MONDELL. Then the gentleman's objection is to the first part of the section, which I have just read; it seems to me that it very clearly meets the evil that it is intended to cure, providing that no payment out of a lump-sum appropria-tion shall be in excess of the payment to the same officer for the same kind of service out of regular appropriations.

Now, the committee, in adopting the language last year, through inadvertence, used the words "during the fiscal year 1912." It is very clear that that was adopted by reason of the fact that when the provision was first considered it was considered as an amendment to that particular bill, and not as continuing legislation. When it came to be considered and changed into continuing legislation, those words were not modified. We modify it now, in order that it may be continuing legislation, under which payments out of lump sums may not be in excess of what the same officer or employee received from a regular appropriation for the same service in the preceding fiscal year.

MANN. Mr. Chairman, my distinguished friend from Wyoming, whom I was glad to designate to go on the Committee on Appropriations, has given a great deal of attention to the subject of appropriation bills, but I believe not quite so much attention as I have given, and very naturally he should have fallen into the error he has fallen into about this item. This item is not continuing legislation, and will not be continuing legislation unless it is inserted from year to year in the bill.

The item in the deficiency bill relates only to the year 1912, and therein it is provided that salaries paid out of lump-sum appropriations shall not be greater than those paid for the same or similar services during the fiscal year 1912. That is perfectly proper. That does mean that lump-sum salaries shall not be greater than specific salaries. But now, as it is proposed to be changed, while it is not continuing legislation, if the same item is to be put in every appropriation bill, it will fix the salary this year or last year for all lump-sum salaries for all time to come. It was purposely made in the deficiency bill so that it should only put lump-sum salaries on the same basis as specific salaries are during that same time. Now it is proposed, how-ever much specific salaries may be increased hereafter, that lump-sum salaries shall remain inviolate.

Mr. MONDELL. I know that the gentleman wants to be accurate, and he generally is-

Mr. MANN. I am on this occasion. I have studied this appropriation, and I am sure the gentleman has not.

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman says this provision contained in the late deficiency bill had no reference to any appropriation except that appropriation. The gentleman must be mistaken; otherwise the words "hereafter appropriated" would have no force or effect. I think the gentleman will concede that this language in the deficiency bill is continuing legislation, in that it affects appropriations in the future. The amendment also affects or will affect, if it remains in the bill, appropriations in the future, and it was to avoid the very fault that the gentleman criticizes—that of continuing the salaries of 1012 as the basic for the future, that the salaries of 1912 as the basis for the future—that the amendment was

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, be that as it may, I called attention to this section because here was a provision inserted in the deficiency bill which became a law on August 26 last, fully considered by the gentleman now in charge of this measure. It is proposed to amend it in two very important particulars. I call attention to that because I propose to make a point of order against the next section. I do so for the purpose of showing how easy it is for our great Committee on Appropriations, when they start to legislate instead of appropriate, to make bad mistakes and bring in, not possibly ill advised, but certainly not fully considered, legislative propositions. I withdraw the point of order on this section.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman withdraws the point of order.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, before the Clerk reads I desire to ask unanimous consent that the clerk of the committee be authorized to correct all totals in the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina asks unanimous consent that the clerk be authorized to correct all totals in this bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 5. That hereafter no person who is or has been employed, within the classified service, in any executive department or other branch of the public service of the United States shall be employed, within the classified service, in another executive department or other branch of the public service of the United States unless a period of at least 11 months shall have elapsed since such previous employment of the person shall have ceased, except in specific cases where the heads of executive departments or other branches of the public service immediately concerned shall be agreed on a transfer or an employment not withstanding the period of not less than 11 months herein contemplated shall not have elapsed, and in every such exceptional case the written approval of the President shall be obtained in advance of the employment, and except also in cases where termination of service shall have occurred because of reduction of force in any branch of the public service.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against that section.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman-

Mr. MANN. I will reserve the point of order if the gentleman from South Carolina desires to be heard upon it.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. I have no desire to encumber the Record. We believe this is wise legislation, but it is subject to a point of order, and if my friend is going to make it I have nothing further to say.

Mr. MANN. I shall make the point of order in the end. Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Then the gentleman had better make it now.

Mr. MANN. I make the point of order. The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 6. That all laws or parts of laws inconsistent with this act are repealed.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I have asked this recognition in order to make reference to another item in the bill at the top of page 65, containing the appropriation for the maintenance of the assay office at Deadwood, S. Dak.

The Committee on Appropriations after deliberation dropped six assay offices. They made an appropriation in the bill for the Deadwood assay office and for the assay office at Seattle.

Upon Saturday afternoon, when there were but very few in the Chamber, a motion was made by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Cox], when this paragraph was read, to strike it That motion was not resisted by the committee or otherwise, and the amendment prevailed.

I was necessarily absent at the time, and other gentlemen interested in the item were relying upon the assumption that it having been reported by the committee, it would not be dropped out, at least without resistance and debate. Consequently, a demand will be made for a separate vote in the House upon the amendment striking out this item.

I want, in my time, to explain the situation regarding the Deadwood assay office. Of the eight remaining assay offices outside of the city of New York, the office at Deadwood produces more bullion in the course of the year than any of the eight. Indeed, almost one-half of the entire purchase of bullion, in the neighborhood of $8,000,000, is made at that office. The earnings of the office are considerably more than those of any of the assay offices in this entire list, and the expenses of operating it are less than any, with the sole exception of the small office at Charlotte, N. C., which has really been only nominally maintained for many years.

The policy has been to drop out assay offices upon the theory that they were unnecessary and were not maintaining themselves out of their earnings. The Deadwood office is one the dropping of which can not be sustained upon any such theory of economy.

It is the only office, practically, paying the entire expenses from the earnings. The receipts or earnings of the Deadwood office during the last fiscal year were $10,917.95. As reported in the tables of the Secretary of the Treasury, it would appear that the expenditures were $14,096.40; but, as a matter of fact, the expenses of that office were only $10,122.65 for the fiscal year. This other item is an-item which has been charged from the general Department of the Treasury apportioning the dis-bursements for express charges on bullion from the various offices amounting to three thousand nine hundred and someodd dollars. Taking that out of the alleged expenses of the Deadwood office, the office has earned an actual profit and has been doing so for some years.

As a matter of fact, that express charge ought not to be carried against this office. The assay office charges and collects for charges of stamping and assaying bullion purchased at the office $1.25 per thousand. If it was sent to the nearest mint, the Government would collect no such charge for assaying and stamping, and the result would be that the cost to the Government would be more than the express item.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for one minute more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that his time be extended one minute. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. This is an item that I am familiar with, because it is in my own city. The office has been managed constantly with the idea in view that it ought to be managed and maintained within the earnings of the office. has practically done so, and the committee were right in retaining the item in the bill. It was inadvertently stricken out without consideration when few were present, and I hope that the views of the committee in keeping it in the bill will be supported when it is offered in the House.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the bill with amend-ments to the House, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GARNER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 26680, the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, and had directed him to report it back with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and amendments to its final pas-

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask a separate vote on the amendment striking out lines 1 to 7, inclusive, on page 65.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment,

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 65, by striking out lines 1 to 7, inclusive, which read as Amend, page 65, by striking out lines 1 to 7, inclusive, which read as follows:

"Assay office at Deadwood, S. Dak.: Assayer in charge, who shall also perform the duties of melter, $2,000; clerk, $1,200; assistant assayer, $1,600; assayer's assistant, $1,400; in all, $6,200.

"For wages of workmen and other employees, $3,000.

"For incidental and contingent expenses, new machinery, etc., $1,500."

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MONDELL) there were 63 ayes and 26 noes,

So the amendment was agreed to.

The remaining amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Speaker, I move to recommit the bill with instructions to report it back with the following amend-

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman from Massachusetts opposed to the bill?

Mr. GILLETT. I am as much opposed to the bill as anybody could be.

The SPEAKER. That is not the question. The question is whether the gentleman is opposed to the bill. Mr. GILLETT. I am in favor of the bill with this amend-

The SPEAKER. The rule provides that in making motions to recommit preference shall be given to some Member opposed to the bill. There is nobody on earth who knows whether the gentleman from Massachusetts is opposed to the bill except himself. If he says he is, the Chair will recognize him.

Mr. GILLETT. I will not say more than that I prefer it with this amendment. I do not know how anyone can say more. Mr. MANN. No honest man can say more, and the gentleman from Massachusetts is to be commended for it.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from Massachusetts will say that he is opposed to the bill, the Chair will recognize him.

Mr. GILLETT. I will not say any more, Mr. Speaker, than

I have stated.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the gentleman from Massachusetts can be recognized to move to recommit the bill for a specific object, to add an amendment or a provision to it, provided always that there is no one who demands recognition because he is opposed to the bill in its entirety. I apprehend there is no such one, and therefore I submit the gentleman would be entitled to be recognized under the rule.

The SPEAKER. There is no question in the world about what the rule is. If the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Gar-RETT], who is clamoring for recognition, says he is opposed to this bill, with the answer of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gillett] standing as it is, the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Tennessee, but if he makes the same answer, and all the rest who are asking recognition, then the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I wish to submit an observa-tion upon that, if I may be so permitted.

The SPEAKER. The previous question has been ordered. Mr. GARRETT. Is there not tentatively a point of order pending, the point having been made by the Speaker? The SPEAKER. There is no point of order pending. The Chair has already settled it.

Mr. GARRETT. I can not, Mr. Speaker, of course, go further than the gentleman from Massachusetts goes. No man can on an appropriation bill.

Mr. MANN. No honest man can. Mr. COX of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. COX of Indiana. I am opposed to that portion of the bill to which my motion applies.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's motion must apply to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

Mr. COX of Indiana. My preferential motion applies to a part of that bill.

The SPEAKER. So does the preferential motion of the gentleman from Massachusetts, and he is recognized.

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Speaker, I move to recommit with the following instructions, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 138, after line 6, insert as a separate paragraph the follow-

C., and elsewhere, and furnishing same for the United States Commerce Court; for books, periodicals, stationery, printing, and binding; for pay of bailiffs and all other necessary employees at the seat of government and elsewhere, not otherwise specifically provided for, and for such other miscellaneous expenses as may be approved by the presiding judge, $35,000; in all, $54,500."

The previous question was ordered.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COX of Indiana. Is a motion to recommit amendable? The SPEAKER. Not after the previous question is ordered. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. GILLETT) there were—ayes 33, noes 83.

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

On motion of Mr. Johnson of South Carolina, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted-To Mr. Brown, for four days, on account of serious illness.

To Mr. TURNBULL, indefinitely, on account of sickness.

To Mr. Harr, for two weeks, on account of illness. The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following communication, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Speaker: The managers on the part of the House of Representatives in the matter of the impeachment of Judge Robert W. Archbald, the trial of which cause is now pending and in progress before the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment, beg to say:

1. That said cause is called for trial daily in the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment, beginning at the hour of 1.30 p. m. and generally continuing until the hour of 6 p. m.

2. The managers find that it is necessary for the proper trial of such case for them to have the permission of the House from 12 m. for consultation and arrangement of the presentation of the case, and that their presence is required in the Senate daily from 1.30 p. m. until, as a rule, the hour of 6 p. m.

We respectfully ask that we be excused from attendance upon the sessions of the House until such impeachment trial shall have been completed.

Henry D. Clayton.

HENRY D. CLAYTON. EDWIN Y. WEBB, JOHN C. FLOYD, JOHN W. DAVIS. JOHN A. STERLING, PAUL HOWLAND. GEORGE W. NORRIS.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the managers on the part of the House will be excused from further attendance on the sessions of the House.

There was no objection.

MONTICELLO.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following privileged resolution from the Committee on Rules, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up for consideration at this time the Indian appropriation bill, which I gave notice that I would do immediately upon the conclusion of the legislative bill. I therefore move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. These two motions are of equal dignity. The Chair has promised to recognize the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Henry. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Stephens, as soon as the resolution of his colleague is out of the way. The Clerk will report the resolution of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Henry]. The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 740 (H. Rept. 1266).

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution the House shall preceed to consider Senate concurrent resolution 24, providing for an inquiry as to the purchase of the home of Thomas Jefferson at Monticello, Va., and that at the end of one hour's debate the previous question shall be considered as ordered on said Senate concurrent resolution and the House shall vote upon the same without any intervening motion, except the motion to recommit under the general rules of the House intervening motion, rules of the House.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker—
The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Robinson). For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. For a parliamentary inquiry. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it. Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I think I addressed the Chair

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has been recog-

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I want to know if the passage of this motion precludes the opportunity to offer an amendment to the resolution?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on moving the previous question-

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I desire to offer an amendment to this resolution, and I want to know whether under this

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair can not put that question now; the Chair will pass upon the parliamentary inquiry when it is in order. The question is on the ordering of the previous question.

The question was taken, and the previous question was ordered.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I asked the Chair a moment ago a parliamentary question, and I did not understand that the question was answered. I do not know whether it is in order now to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is in order to make a parliamentary inquiry, and the Chair will answer the question when the inquiry is in order.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Under the status of the resolution now will there be an opportunity to offer an amendment-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will answer that question when it is in order to answer it; it is not in order now. Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, in order that such a question may be cleared up, I ask that the rule may be again reported.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will again report the resolution.

The resolution was again reported.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Now, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Moore] will state his parliamentary inquiry

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I want to know if I will have an opportunity now or at the conclusion of the debate to offer an amendment.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. If the gentleman will allow me just a moment, I will state this is for the consideration of the rule; the concurrent resolution, No. 24, has not been read, and I will ask unanimous consent that it be now read.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman will pardon me, the resolution which was read clearly states that at the end of an hour's debate on the concurrent resolution the previous question shall be considered as ordered, so if the resolution is adopted that ends any chance to amend the concurrent resolution.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That is my understanding, and for that reason I made inquiry. The gentleman from Texas has helped a little bit; but it would seem, even with his explanation, there would be no opportunity to amend this resolution at any time.

Mr. MANN. There is none, unless it is voted down.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Then it will be necessary to vote down this resolution to get an opportunity to amend the concurrent resolution.

Mr. CULLOP. May I make an inquiry of the gentleman?
Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to answer these questions without it being taken out of my time, as I understand it is a parliamentary inquiry that is being addressed to the Chair. I will be glad to answer, if the Chair will not take it out of my time.

Wr CULLOP. The inquiry I wanted to make was this: As of an hour the previous question shall be ordered.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Yes.

Mr. CULLOP. But by a motion to recommit the resolution itself or rule it could be amended if that motion should carry? Mr. HENRY of Texas. Of course that will be a matter for the Chair to pass on.

Mr. CULLOP. Well, it provides for a motion to recommit. Mr. HENRY of Texas. I think it would be in order; yes.

Mr. CULLOP. Then the gentleman from Pennsylvania, if he desires to amend it, would have an opportunity to offer his amendment in the nature of a motion to recommit with instructions

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, we might as well have read, for the information of the House, Senate concurrent resolution to be considered at the expiration of the 40 minutes' debate which is now to be had, provided the special rule be adopted by the House. This resolution was unanimously passed by the Senate of the United States on July 17, 1912:

Senate concurrent resolution 24. Senate concurrent resolution 24.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the President of the Senate be, and is hereby, authorized to appoint a committee of five members of the Senate, to act in cooperation with a similar committee to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to inquire into the wisdom and ascertain the cost of acquiring Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, as the property of the United States, that it may be preserved for all time in its entirety for the American people.

Mr. Speaker, the Senate of the United States last summer unanimously adopted the concurrent resolution. The one sent to the Clerk's desk, and which has just been read, is a resolu-tion providing for the consideration of the concurrent resolution now held by me.

Mr. Speaker, at the end of the hour's debate provision is made that a motion to recommit Senate concurrent resolution No. 24 may be made, in order that the House may amend it if it sees proper.

roper. So far as I am personally concerned—
Mr. SHERLEY. Will the gentleman yield for a question? It would only be possible to amend it by one motion to recommit with instructions. It would not be possible to consider it for amendment in the ordinary course.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. No; it would not; but a motion to recommit with instructions can be made, and I apprehend any gentleman can express his views in a motion to recommit. Mr. Speaker, this resolution only provides for appointing a joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives for the purpose of inquiring into the wisdom of acquiring the home of Thomas Jefferson. I can not see how any gentleman on this side of the House or the other side of this body can object to a resolution unanimously passed by the Senate, which simply seeks to ascertain whether it is wise or not for this Government to acquire the home of Thomas Jefferson. Let this House vote upon the resolution and express its choice. I shall gladly cast my vote in favor of the Senate concurrent resolution in order that a proper inquiry may be made into the proposition. [Applause.]

It has been said that we are now endeavoring to take Monticello from the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. LEVY], who now holds the legal title to those premises. I deny that there is anything in the special rule or in the concurrent resolution looking to that end. The gentleman from New York should gracefully bow to the will of the American people and let this House pass a resolution that has passed the Senate of the United States, looking into the wisdom of such a simple [Applause.] I have great respect for the proposition as this. gentleman as my colleague, and would do no violence to his rights on the floor of this House, nor to the rights of any colleague of mine, but it seems to me that the name and fame of Thomas Jefferson are far above any personal consideration in this day and generation, and we may well inaugurate a plan looking to the acquisition of his grave and the premises that were owned by him. Therefore, I have interested myself as an individual and in an unofficial way to bring this matter before the American Congress, and hope the House of Representatives will adopt this rule and let us have a vote on the other resolution-No. 24-and see whether or not the representatives of the people are in favor of the proposition.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Dalzell], a member of the Committee on Rules, is recognized.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Rules has twice passed on this proposition, first, as an original legisla-tive proposition, which was favorably reported to the House and went on the calendar. Since that time the Committee on Rules has adopted this resolution making the consideration of the original proposition privileged. I was not able to be present at either of those meetings. Had I been present I would have voted against both resolutions—both the resolution to report.

the concurrent resolution and the resolution now before the House to make that resolution privileged. And I shall vote against this proposition now and shall vote against the original proposition when the time comes.

The original proposition provides for the appointment of a committee to do two things, first, to inquire into the wisdom of purchasing the home of Thomas Jefferson; and, secondly, to ascertain the cost of acquiring that home. Now, as to the first proposition, there is absolutely no necessity for this resolution. The question of the wisdom of purchasing the home of Thomas Jefferson is a question for the individual judgment of each Member of this House, and it is a question that every Member of this House will determine without any regard to the report of any committee on the subject. The question as to how much the home of Thomas Jefferson may be purchased for is a question the answer to which does not require the appointment of any committee. The home of Thomas Jefferson is to-day in the legal ownership of a Member of this body. That gentleman has declared publicly, is ready to declare now, that the home of Thomas Jefferson is not for sale at any price. This resolution, therefore, is unnecessary and inopportune, unless it have an ulterior purpose.

That it has such ulterior purpose has been authoritatively declared both privately in conversation and publicly in the press, and that ulterior purpose is to compel a private citizen against his will to part with his property by means of legislation. In other words, it is to declare that the doctrine of Federal eminent domain shall be sufficient to carry the compulsory sale of the property of an individual who is unwilling to part with it. I do not believe-I can not believe-that the House of Representatives is willing to make such an assault upon the fundamental right of private property.

The question as to whether or not the Government should own the home of Thomas Jefferson is a question about which there might be differences of opinion. But without respect to differences of opinion at all, it is apparent that that home can not be owned by the United States in the present condition of things unless by the passage of legislation which, in my judgment, would be a disgrace to any civilized body, and especially disgrace to the House of Representatives of the United States. [Applause.] reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SAUNDERS].

Mr. SAUNDERS. I wish to oppose the resolution. I have risen for that purpose.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. I did not understand that. Mr. DALZELL. Does the gentleman from Virginia want

Mr. SAUNDERS. Yes. I desire a few minutes. Mr. DALZELL. How much time does the gentleman desire? Mr. SAUNDERS. I do not know how much is available.

Mr. DALZELL. I yield five minutes to the gentleman. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Virginia

[Mr. SAUNDERS] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. SAUNDERS. Mr. Speaker, as a Representative from Virginia, the State that claims Jefferson as a son, and cherishes his memory, I wish to say that I am opposed to this resolution. The name and the fame of the dead are being used to oppress the living. I am opposed to any movement that looks to the acquisition of this property by means of the power of eminent domain. The Federal Government possesses this power to the extent to which it is expressly, or by necessary implication given by the Constitution, but it has never been settled that the right of condemnation may be applied to the acquisition of private homes within the States to be used as parks, or as shrines of No rhetorical references, however fervid to the memory and the greatness of Thomas Jefferson, for in this regard are all agreed, should avail to blind us to the fact that fundamentally the power to which appeal must be made, to render this movement effectual, and deprive the present owner of his property in Monticello is, to say the least of it, one of doubtful existence.

It is bootless for the advocates of this resolution to insist that the pending proposition is merely an inquiry to ascertain whether Monticello is for sale, and the propriety of its purchase. If such be the sole and only purpose of the resolution, then this House is doing a vain and futile thing to create a committee to ascertain a fact already within our knowledge. owner of this property has already declared in the hearings, and repeated his declaration in terms of the most emphatic emphasis upon this floor, that Monticello is not for sale on any terms, or under any circumstances. Is the committee willing to accept an amendment to the effect that the committee created by this resolution, shall be limited in its investigation to the mere inquiry whether the property is for sale, and if so the price at which it may be acquired? The terms of the resolution are of much more extended import, and will empower a more extended inquiry than the amendment I suggest, though this amendment is in harmony with what is asserted on the floor to be the scope and intent of this movement. It is very clear to one who has followed the course of this resolution through the committee hearings, and read the matter submitted in support of the same, that in the ultimate the power of condemnation is intended to be invoked to secure this property, should the owner decline to sell, and the action of to-day is merely the initial step in that direction.

If we look to the terms of the resolution, as it passed the Senate, it will be manifest from the wording of the same, that the committee for which it provides, was not intended to be limited to the mere inquiry whether the home of Jefferson could be obtained by simple purchase. But if it is now contended that such is the limit of the inquiry, then why waste the time of the House with this debate, or create a committee to obtain information which this body can secure first-hand? The owner of Monticello is now on this floor, and with all the fervor of which he is capable, declares that Monticello is not for sale. Surely this should be sufficient?

Confronted, therefore, with so emphatic a statement, of so authoritative a character; in possession of the very information that this resolution supposedly will secure, why should we do so vain a thing as appoint a committee to ascertain a fact of which we are all apprised?

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SAUNDERS. Certainly.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Why did the Senate pass the resolution, then?

Mr. SAUNDERS. I do not know why the Senate passed the resolution. I am dealing with the proposition that confronts us, but will say that this is neither the first resolution, nor the first bill that has passed the Senate to find defeat in this body. I do not know what motive animated the Senate in passing this resolution, but I do know that to-day we are in possession of information with respect to the merits of this proposition that was not before the Senate. I know that some of the descendants of Jefferson in no remote degree, have given formal expression to their attitude of opposition to this movement to invoke the power of eminent domain to strip the present owner of Monticello of a property which for many reasons is dear to his heart, and which he maintains in a manner at once honorable to himself, and creditable to the memory of Jefferson. The name and authority of this great man should not be invoked to sustain a movement to call into exercise the power of the Federal Government to take over private property for a use which in the contemplation of the Constitution has not been clearly ascertained to be a public one. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. James]. [Applause.]

[Mr. JAMES addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. DALZELL. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania

[Mr. Moore] five minutes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. James], who has just taken his seat, seems to misunderstand the language of this resolution. It is not a resolution to remove the remains of Thomas Jefferson to the city of Washington in order that a monument may be erected over them, but it is a resolution to take over the property belonging to a private citizen. If this resolution passes it will destroy every precedent that this House has followed in matters of this kind for half a century. There are a number of historic spots of ground all over this land that will have claims upon the Congress of the United States if this resolution shall be enacted into law. Bills have been brought in here to take over the Hermitage, the home of Andrew Jackson. Long arguments and strong fights were made upon this floor to secure that property by similar means, but the House has set its face against taking over these properties as Government charges, because they carry with them not only the patriotic questions involved, and those of gallantry, too, if you please, but they take over the practical, cold question of maintenance, which is a very serious one to the Government. All over the eastern coast we have sites hallowed by the lives of distinguished men, which would at once command the attention of Congress, and every one of them would have an equal claim upon this body. It would mean additions to the pay rolls of thousands of caretakers at salaries that would have to be provided by the people of the United States. If we are to take over Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, and take it away from its private owner, then why not take the Betsy Ross flag house in which was made the first flag of the United States, woven by the deft fingers of Betsy Ross back in 1774? We had a bill here for that purpose, but it was not favorably considered.

Why not take over the battle field of Appomattox, upon which was sealed the fate of this Nation, now the property of a private individual? Why not take over Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington, now in the hands of patriotic women of this country, who contributed therefor from their own means, maintaining it as a shrine? Independence Hall is not the property of the Government, but the Government has an interest there; it is maintained by the city of Philadelphia. The old statehouse in Boston, the scene of some of the most heroic passages in history, is not the property of the Government of the United States. The Daughters of the American Revolution, patriotic women all of them, are organized for the very purpose of taking over these historic spots and making them shrines for the people.

What will be the cost incident to taking over Monticello? The Government in appropriation bills must annually provide for a certain number of caretakers to maintain the upkeep, and then will follow an almost unlimited demand for the recognition of patriotic institutions, until the pay rolls are burdened by thousands of new places-holders that our friends on the other side, if they pass this bill, will have to provide for in the very near future. [Applause.]

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Garrett].

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that gentlemen who are opposing this resolution are opposing it not because of what is in it, but because of things that are not in it. not prepared, Mr. Speaker-and I say it very candidly-to commit myself to the doctrine that the Government has the right or the power to exercise eminent domain in regard to this estate for the purpose stated in the Senate resolution. that question I have yet to reach a conclusion. But this resolution does not in any respect whatsoever provide for that, nor does it by any fair implication look to that.

So far as the policy of the Government owning estates of great men of the past is in question, there may be difference of opinion, but so far as I am concerned, Mr. Speaker, if the Government can acquire this property in a legitimate manner I do not think it would hurt my country. I do not think any man would ever think less of this country because it owned and cared for the home and the grave of the author of the Declaration of Independence. [Applause.]

I do not shrink from the policy that may be involved in its purchase or in its care and ownership, but as I have said, I do not commit myself and am not prepared to commit myself to the doctrine that the Government would have the legal right to condemn and take it. But that is not involved in this resolution. For reasons that are sound, in my opinion, it is wise at this time to have a committee composed of Members of this House and of Members of the other body make an elaborate investigation of the legal question that is involved here, and let it be determined in a formal, official way once and for all what the power of the Government may be in this regard. [Applause.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has five minutes.

Mr. DALZELL. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Johnson].

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, no American worships at the shrine of Thomas Jefferson more than do I. One of his most earnest requests was that he be taken care of when he was dead. I believe if he could speak now that he would be the first to raise his voice in opposition to that which is about to be undertaken here, to-day. In my honest judgment the best way to take care of him when he is dead is to refuse to do that which he would not do, either for himself or for another, if he were living. It has been referred to by my distinguished colleague when he said that it might become possible to ask the consent of the present owner of that property to go to the shrine of Thomas Jefferson that he might there worship. Is he not now compelled to pay even to get within the gates of Mount Vernon, where lie the remains of George Washington? [Applause.] I predict for the owner of the estate of Thomas Jefferson that he will never demand a fee of admission there. He admits now-and I have no doubt he and his successors in ownership of that property will continue to do as a patriotic society does in Kentucky which owns the home of and my abhorrence of the unjust fight Mrs. Littleton is waging to Abraham Lincoln-every man, woman, and child of this land, and every other nation, to go there and worship at the shrine, if you choose to call it that, of the greatest perhaps of all Americans.

[Applause.]

This patriotic society that owns the home of Abraham Lincoln We will make the American people a present of it. We will put with that an endowment for them of $50,000 to take care of it," and no man I believe should ask that that property should be taken away from these people if they wish to retain it, and I for one would stand in the way of it to the fullest extent [Applause.]

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. CLAYTON].

Mr. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I can not hope to say very much in the limited time I have. There is no occasion, Mr. Speaker, for anyone to be alarmed, and there is less occasion for excitement over the consideration and the adoption of this resolution. It is simply a resolution of inquiry. It is not a condemnation proceeding. It is merely to furnish information to the Congress of the United States, to the American people, as to the wisdom and as to the cost of acquiring this property. That, Mr. Speaker, will be considered by the committee, and of course, as a corollary of the main question, the legal rights of the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. Levy] will also be ascertained and dealt with by the joint committee. have no doubt, Mr. Speaker, that every phase of this question, the wisdom of acquiring and the cost, as well as the rights of the gentleman from New York, will be fully considered and reported to the Congress by the committee. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, if Congress has not the power to acquire this property, I hope that patriotic impulses will yet spring in the heart of the gentleman from New York, who claims ownership of this property, and let the American people have free access, and not some sort of permissive access, to the shrine of the greatest statesman that ever graced American history. [Applause.]

Mr. LEVY. They do have free access to it now.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired. Each side has three minutes re-

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SAUNDERS].

Mr. SAUNDERS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to bring to the attention of the House one or two matters which of necessity I was unable to discuss in the few minutes accorded to me from the brief time prescribed for this debate. First, I challenge the statement that this resolution does not directly or by any fair construction contemplate the acquisition of this property by condemnation proceedings. In answer to this contention I will read the language of the resolution itself:

The committee shall ascertain the cost of acquiring Monticello.

Mr. JAMES. Oh, read the first part of it.

Mr. SAUNDERS. That portion of the resolution is not relevant, or helpful in this connection.

Mr. JAMES. The resolution says the wisdom of doing it. Mr. SAUNDERS. I am discussing the authority given to the committee, and assert that when the resolution uses the words: Shall ascertain the cost of acquiring Monticello," such language is broad enough to cover not only peaceful purchase, but the harsh procedure of condemnation. In this conclusion I think every lawyer in the House will concur.

In addition I wish to say that since this movement was inaugurated a great change has taken place in the public attitude, growing out of increasing knowledge on the part of the public of the real purpose of this agitation. That great editor from the State of Kentucky, Henry Watterson, was willing to be associated with this propaganda so long as it was limited to the acquisition of Monticello by private purchase, but when its real aims were disclosed, he withdrew his support, and within the last few days has announced in the most emphatic terms that he is opposed to proceedings in condemnation. On its inception many persons favored this movement under the mis-conception that an association was to be formed for the purchase of Jefferson's home. To the formation of such an association, and to the development of an organization so limited, there can be no valid objection. Certainly I offer none. In order that I may fairly put before the House the attitude of one who is certainly entitled to speak with a measure of authority, as a descendant of Thomas Jefferson, I wish to read a portion of a letter from Frank M. Randolph, to Mr. Jefferson Levy. We have heard much of the "one wish," of a distinguished advocate of this resolution. The concluding "wish" of the writer of this letter may be fairly opposed to this "one wish." Mr. Randolph writes:

seize your home. I am sure that all my family, to whom you have always been so courteous and kind in offering the hospitality of Monticello, feel the same way. We all feel that it is a travesty on justice, a direct infringement on American liberty, and directly opposed to the principles and sentiments of the great builder of Monticello.

The care and preservation you have bestowed on this dear old place shows your faithful and sentimental appreciation of your charge.

You have evinced always a desire and interest to care for Jefferson's tomb.

May you win your just cause in this fight, is the hope and the one wish of your friend and neighbor,

FRANK M. RANDOLPH.

I can not put before the House my own attitude more forcibly than by reading this letter.
Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. How is Mr. Randolph related to Mr. Jefferson?

Mr. SAUNDERS. He is a great-great-grandson. Like this descendant of Jefferson I hold that this proceeding is directly opposed to the principles and sentiments of the great builder of Monticello. It is difficult to relate the authority for the condemnation of Monticello for use as a shrine, or park to any one of the powers afforded by the Constitution. While such authority might be deduced from that instrument by appeal to the principles of liberal interpretation, such a deduction would be opposed to the historic attitude of Jefferson. No greater wrong could be done to the memory of this great man, than to secure this property by a perversion of the plain meaning of the Constitution, and resort to the principles of a school of constitutional interpretation to which he was flatly opposed.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, if the concurrent resolution providing for the acquirement of Monticello, now under consideration, involved our affection for Thomas Jefferson, we would all stand on the same side of the question together, but such is not

If the defeat of this resolution would dim one glory to his long line of achievements, we would all oppose it together, but such is not the case.

If the resolution provided for a task that was within the power of Congress, we would then have but the problem of advisability to solve, but to be asked to undertake to do a thing which no friend of this resolution, either in speech or print, has asserted they can do is too much.

To pass a resolution of inquiry when the facts are patent to all of us is certainly asking Congress to do a useless and idle thing. It is well known by all of us here this day that the property is owned by one of our colleagues who does not at this time wish to sell it. It is scarcely less than a senseless thing to ask Congress to do a thing which not even its friends will assert can be done; that of taking it by force.

If this proceeding was a resolution to ascertain what we could in an orderly way secure the property for, it would then be questionable as to whether we should purchase Monticello before we purchase Mount Vernon, the home of the Father of our Country, we at least are not more derelict in one case than the other.

This proposed investigation can and will never result in anything but headlines and should go no further. Congress should not be asked to do on the ground of sentiment, emotion, and commotion a thing which can not be done within our powers.

This resolution comes to us under whip and spur. Few of us can even be heard at all upon it by reason of the gag rule; none of us may amend the resolution even partially, therefore the whole matter should wait until it is known that Monticello can be acquired in an orderly way for a reasonable price and without any coercion or other strong-arm methods. Congress can ill afford to do things from the standpoint of might and totally abandon right. Congress sometimes ovesteps their powers unwittingly; surely we should not overstep our powers when there is no disagreement among us as to our powers.

Some well-meaning persons, wrought up with emotion and commotion, will be disappointed at this action this day, but surely this Congress in its entirety can ill afford to be driven by emotion or forced into undertakings of doubtful authority by commotion.

This rule should first be defeated, so that when this matter does come on for consideration it will be subject to amendments and other painstaking considerations which a gag rule will not permit of.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, before the gentlemen on the other side proceed I ask unanimous consent that the time be extended for five minutes on each side.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that the time be extended for five minutes on either side. Is there objection?

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY].

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Speaker, great deference is due one of the lineal descendants of Thomas Jefferson, but we remember that the spiritual descendants of Thomas Jefferson number many millions [applause], and those who worship at that shrine, those who have learned the great lessons of civil liberty from that immortal teacher, have a right to be heard and a right to be considered. It is not for the sake of the dead, but for the sake of the living, that we desire to make this home a sacred shrine to all who seek or who love liberty anywhere in the world, without let, without hindrance, without cost. You would think, sir, from what has been said here that this Congress was preparing without further ado to seize Monticello. Nothing is further from the truth, nothing is more remote from the facts in the case. If this place can not be secured legally, does anyone believe, does this House believe, that the without one dissenting voice, would do this unconstitutional thing? Why, it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a constitutional question to get through the Senate. If there were any such trouble as that which seems to stalk like a hobgoblin through this House, it would never have passed the Senate. Mr. Speaker, they are objecting not to the taking of this place by condemnation proceedings—I would not approve of that—but here is a new idea of the sacredness of property. I have the greatest deference for my colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. LEVY], but I do not believe that he holds this property by such a peculiar and unique title that it is against the law to ask him what it is worth and if he will not sell it, and yet that is all that this resolution contemplates

Mr. MANN. Do it now; ask him.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. Speaker, I can not be interrupted in the three minutes time I have. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired; all time has expired, and the question is on agreeing to this resolution from the Committee on Rules.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Division, Mr. Speaker.

The House proceeded to divide.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, to save time I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas demands the yeas and nays; evidently a sufficient number and the yeas and nays are ordered.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 101, nays 141, answered "present" 10, not voting 138, as follows:

Mr. Speaker, I ask for the reading the resolution. The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution. The Clerk read as follows: House resolution 739. Resolved, That there be printed 2,000 copies of the Digest and fanual of the Rules of the House of Representatives for the third ession of the Sixty-second Congress, the same to be bound and disributed under the direction of the Clerk and Doorkeeper of the House. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this resolution? There was no objection. The resolution was agreed to. RESIGNATION FROM COMMITTEE. The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication: WASHINGTON, D. C., December 9, 1912. Washington, D. C., December 8, 1818.

Hon. Champ Clark,
Speaker of the House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

Sir: I hereby respectfully tender my resignation as a member of Elections Committee No. 3 of the House of Representatives, the same to take effect immediately.

Yours, truly,

Henry Allen Cooper, Mr. GREGG of Texas with Mr. Hughes of West Virginia. Mr. Hughes of Georgia with Mr. Humphrey of Washington. The SPEAKER. Without objection, the resignation is accepted. There was no objection.

SITE FOR COURTHOUSE, HELENA, ARK.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. Speaker, I beg to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 3436, and move to agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

Mr. MANN. I hope the gentleman will let it go over until we see what the Senate does about it in the RECORD.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senate has done nothing about it, but asks for a conference.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 8436) granting to Phillips County, Ark., certain lots in the city of Helena for a site for a county courthouse.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas moves to take the bill from the Speaker's table and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced the following conferees: Mr. Rob-INSON, Mr. GRAHAM, and Mr. VOLSTEAD.

INVESTIGATION OF THE PATENT OFFICE.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying documents and illustrations, referred to the Committee on Patents and ordered to be printed: To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith a report relating to an investigation of the United States Patent Office made by the Commission on Economy and Efficiency pursuant to the joint resolution approved August 21, 1912.

WM. H. TAFT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 9, 1912.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the bill (H. R. 26874) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and ask that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for its consideration.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 26874, the Indian appropriation bill, with Mr. ROBINSON in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill, which the Clerk will report by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 26874) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I move to dispense with the first reading of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Steph-ENS] moves that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, may I inquire of the gentleman from Texas whether, if the first reading of the bill be now dispensed with, it is his intention to at once move that the committee rise?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. It is. To-morrow the bill will be read under the five-minute rule for amendment.

Mr. MANN. May I inquire further, whether it is the intention of the gentlemen in charge of the House to go ahead with the Indian appropriation bill to-morrow, or to go ahead with the election contest case, according to the notice given by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ANSBERRY] the other day?
Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I will state that we desire to finish this bill as speedily as possible and to regard it as unfinished business. We desire to proceed with the bill.

Mr. MANN. That is not what I am asking. I am asking whether the gentlemen in charge of the House have agreed as to which measure shall come up. I think it is but fair to this side of the House that we should know. May I ask the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ANSBERRY] whether it is his intention to proceed to-morrow with the election case?

Mr. ANSBERRY. It is.

Mr. MANN. I do not object to dispensing with the first reading of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to dispensing with the first reading of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Then, Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Robinson, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 26874, the Indian appropriation bill, and had come to no resolution thereon.

COMMITTEE ON ARRANGEMENTS, INAUGURAL CEREMONIES.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I call from the Speaker's table Senate concurrent resolution No. 31, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate concurrent resolution 31.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That a joint committee, consisting of three Senators and three Representatives, to be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, respectively, is authorized to make the necessary arrangements for the inauguration of the President elect of the United States on the 4th day of March next.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman if he has examined the resolution to ascertain if this is the usual form of resolution for this purpose?

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, it is in the precise language used four years ago and eight years ago.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Gar-RETT] asks unanimous consent to take this Senate resolution from the Speaker's table and consider it now. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints Mr. Rucker of Missouri, Mr. Garrett, and Mr. McKinley as members of the joint committee on the part of the House.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that those Members who have addressed the House on the resolution reported from the Committee on Rules concerning Monticello be allowed to extend their remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] asks unanimous consent that those who have addressed the House on the Monticello resolution be allowed the privilege of extending their remarks in the RECORD-for how long?

Mr. HENRY of Texas. For five days.

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, I wish to say that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Dalzell] in charge of the time in opposition to the resolution had agreed to give me a few moments of time. It passed out of his mind, and he gave out all the time. Subsequently he conferred with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Henry] in reference to extending the time for five minutes in order that I might have the opportunity of addressing the House, and at the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. James] or the suggestion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Garrett] the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] and the gentleman from Kentucky objected.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Is the gentleman sure that I made If he is not, he ought not to make the statethat objection? ment, because the statement is not correct.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman says that he did not make the suggestion, I withdraw the statement.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman from Illinois objecting to this request?

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Furthermore, I will say that I had no objection.

Mr. MANN. But the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. James], who had addressed the House, having five minutes of time him-self—one-quarter of the time on that side of the House objected to letting anybody else address the House.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. It was not at my instigation. The gentleman must not make that kind of statement.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mann] object to the request of the gentleman from Texas for unanimous consent that all gentleman who have made speeches on the Monticello resolution may extend their remarks in the RECORD at any time within five days?

Mr. MANN. I shall not object, lest people might think it was on account of what I said; but I desire to give notice now that there will not be as many extensions of remarks at this session as there were at the last session. It has been run into the ground.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I shall be glad to have the gentleman's aid in the attempt to economize.

Mr. GARRETT. Reserving the right to object, I wish to ask the gentleman from Illinois if in referring to "the gentleman from Tennessee" he referred to this gentleman from

Mr. MANN. I did not refer to the gentleman from Tennessee. Mr. GARRETT. The gentleman used the expression "the gentleman from Tennessee.'

Mr. MANN. But I immediately changed it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEVY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there

There was no objection.

Mr. RAINEY. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. FERRIS. I make a similar request.

Mr. MANN. I shall object to any further requests. If we must have drastic rules brought in here, and the time limited to 20 minutes, I do not propose to let anybody else get into the

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the requests of the gentleman from Illinois and the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. MANN. No; I am not objecting to these requests that are already made. I stated that I would object to any further When gentlemen are not courteous enough to give other gentlemen the opportunity, I shall object.

The SPEAKER. Three gentlemen were in that first proposition. the gentleman from New York [Mr. Levy], the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rainey], and the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS]. Is there objection to those three?

There was no objection.

Mr. CARTER. I make a similar request.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] has made a similar request, but did not come in the first proposition.

Mr. MANN. I object to any further requests.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 19 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Tuesday, December 10, 1912, at 12 o'clock noon.

SUBSTITUTION OF COTTON FOR JUTE.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I present a petition and ask that it be read and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the petition was read and referred to the Committee on Finance, as follows:

Owen, United States Senator, Muskogee, Okla.; Hon. Thomas P. Gore, United States Senator, Lawton, Okla.; Hon. Robert Broussard, New Iberia, La.; Hon. James P. Thornton, United States Senator, Alexandria, La.; and Hon. Joseph E. Ransdell, M. C., Lake Providence, La.

Alexandria, La.; and Hon. Joseph E. Ransbell, M. C., Lake Providence, La.

Gentlemen: We, the undersigned, have been appointed a committee by the National Farmers' Union for the purpose of assisting in the work of a "greater consumption of cotton," and from our interview with the Secretary of the United States Navy, the United States Secretary of War, and the Postmaster General, we are of the opinion that while these departments are perfectly willing to have cotton-made materials used instead of those made in jute, they have not authority to do so, as our existing laws demand of them that they use the cheapest materials in ordering supplies.

We took the matter up with the American Sugar Refining Co., which firm, after investigating, reported to our committee that while cotton sacks would cost them a little more money than jute sacks, at the same time they recognized the fact that American citizens should use cotton-made articles and that they would absorb the difference in price and would agree to sell their sugar in double cotton bags, instead of jute bags, at the same price they charge for sugar in jute sacks.

The Navy and War Departments of our Government use supplies which annually consume thousands of sacks and thousands of tons of wrapping twine and rope made of jute, and the Post Office Department uses hundreds of tons of wrapping twine and rope made of jute, and the Post Office Department uses hundreds of tons of wrapping twine and rope made of jute, and the Post Office Department uses hundreds of tons of wrapping twine annually made in jute.

Cotton is no longer a sectional question. It is an interstate proposition. In fact it's importance can not be overestimated to the welfare of the United States Government, as to-day it is the one farm product which turns the world's balance of trade in favor of the United States of America and brings from foreign shores to the United States of America annually more cash than any one farm product.

The raisers and manufacturers of cotton are citizens of the United States and spend all their money here and contribute to the support of our National Government.

All of the money spent for cotton made articles remains in the United States. Ninety-five cents of every dollar spent by American citizens for jute and jute made articles is consumed abroad and never returns to the United States of America.

Many years ago the English Government passed a law specifying that all goods made from wool and used by any part of the English Government should be made only from English grown wool.

For the above and many other reasons we ask you gentlemen to at once take steps when Congress convenes in December to have the law so amended that all departments of the United States Government specify "cotton bags" when ordering supplies that come packed in sacks, and that "wrapped in cotton cloth" be added for such supplies as come wrapped in cloth, and cotton wrapping twine and cotton rope be substituted for rope and wrapping twine made from jute.

The importance of this will certainly appeal to every sober-thinking American citizen, and we request your earnest, careful, and constant attention until cotton made articles entirely take the place of those made in jute in goods ordered in the use of the United States Government.

We further ask that you take this matter up with other Members of made in jute in goods ordered in the use of the United States Government.

We further ask that you take this matter up with other Members of the House of Representatives from your respective States and enlist the cooperation of all the Senators and Representatives from other States, and we request that you write your views to each of us, and also mail copies of any letters you may write to different parties on the subject to the chairman of our committee at Paris, Tex.

The American Sugar Refining Co. stated that they will request their customers to specify "in cotton bags" when ordering sugar, but the charge will be the same for sugar packed in cotton bags as it is for sugar packed in jute bags.

We further request that you have this letter read before the Senate and House of Representatives and entered in the Journals of each branch of Congress, and kindly send several copies of the Journals containing it to each member of our committee, and also to Mr. Charles S. Barrett, Union City, Ga., and Mr. A. C. Davis, secretary National Farmers' Union, Rogers, Ark.

Awaiting your advices, we remain, yours, respectfully,

RELIEF OF PERSONS ERRONEOUSLY CONVICTED (S. DOC. NO. 974).

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I introduce a bill for reference to the Committee on the Judiciary, and in connection with the bill I ask to have printed as a Senate document certain matter which pertains to the merits of the bill and some information in respect to it. I ask that it may be printed as a Senate document for the use of the Judiciary Committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator from Utah indicate the nature of the paper which he wishes to have printed as a document?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It is an editorial and other matter. Mr. CULBERSON. Before the request is put, let the bill be

The bill (S. 7675) to grant relief to persons erroneously convicted in courts of the United States was read the first time by its title.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The papers which I send to the desk are an analysis of the bill, which will be of use to the Judiciary Committee in the consideration of it, together with some editorial comments, a short article by Prof. Wigmore, and some other matter. I ask that these be printed as a Senate document for the use of the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. CULBERSON. Is the bill a long one?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is a short bill, Mr. CULBERSON. I ask that it be read.

The bill was read the second time at length, as follows:

The bill was read the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any person who, having been convicted of any crime or offense against the United States, shall hereafter, on appeal from the judgment of conviction or on the retrial or rehearing of his case, be found to have been innocent of the crime with which he was charged and not gullty of any other offense against the United States, or who, after inquiry by the Executive, has received a pardon on the ground of innocence, may, under the conditions hereinafter mentioned, apply by petition for indemnification for the pecuniary injury he has sustained through his erroneous conviction and imprisonment.

SEC. 2. That the claimant may, within six months after he has been finally acquirted or pardoned on the ground of innocence, petition the Court of Claims for the relief granted in this act.

SEC. 3. That the court is hereby authorized to make all needful rules and regulations consistent with the law for executing the provisions hereof.

SEC. 4. That the claimant shall have the burden of proving his in-

SEC. 4. That the claimant shall have the burden of proving his in-nocence, in that he must show that the act with which he was charged was not committed at all or, if committed, was not committed by the

SEC. 5. That the claimant must show that he has not, by his acts or failure to act, either intentionally or by willful misconduct or negligence, contributed to bring about his arrest or conviction.

SEC. 6. That the Court of Claims shall examine the validity and amount of all claims included within the description of this act; they shall receive all suitable testimony on oath or affirmation and all other proper evidence; and they shall report all such conclusions of fact and law as in their judgment may affect the right to relief.

SEC. 7. That upon proof satisfactory to the Court of Claims that the claimant is unable to advance the cost of court and of process, the cost of obtaining and printing the record of the original proceedings and of securing the attendance of such witnesses as the chief justice or the presiding judge of the Court of Claims shall certify to be necessary, and the service of all notices required by this act, shall be paid out of any general appropriation made by law for the payment and satisfaction of private claims, on presentation to the Secretary of the Trensury of a duly authenticated order, certified by the clerk of the Court of Claims and signed by the chief justice or, in his absence, by the presiding judge of said court.

SEC. 8. That the court shall cause notice of all petitions presented under this act to be served on the Attorney General of the United States, who shall be authorized, by himself or his assistant, to examine witnesses, to cause testimony to be taken, to have access to all testimony taken under this act, and to be heard by the court. He shall resist all claims presented under this act by all proper legal defenses.

SEC. 9. That the Court of Claims in granting or refusing the relief demanded shall take into consideration all the circumstances of the case which may defeat or in any other way affect the right to and the amount of the relief herein provided for, but in no case shall the relief granted exceed $5,000.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, while I think that is an extraordinary bill, I do not feel like objecting to the publication of the papers sent by the Senator from Utah to the desk.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The proposed law is, of course, new in this country. It is a law which is in operation in half the countries of Europe, however. I understand the Senator from Texas does not object to the printing of the matter which I have sent to the desk.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Did I understand the Senator from Utah to ask for the printing of a sufficient number of the document to supply the Senate, or simply to have a sufficient number printed to supply the Judiciary Committee?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I understand when an order is made for the printing of a document a sufficient number are printed for the use of the Senate

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. The Senator's request was that it might be printed for the use of the committee, and I thought probably he had not clearly indicated that it should be printed as a Senate document, when the usual number are printed. With the understanding that that will be done, I have no objection.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That was my desire.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Utah asks that the papers sent to the desk shall be printed as a Senate document. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The bill will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

AMENDMENTS TO LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. BORAH submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $8,050 for the maintenance of an assay office at Boise, Idaho, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, etc., appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SMOOT submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $7,100 for the maintenance of an assay office at Salt Lake City. Utah, intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, etc., appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CURTIS submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $400 to pay Etta A. Griffin, assistant librarian in charge of the blind, her salary for the months of July, August, September, and October, 1912, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, etc., appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

Mr. LODGE submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $500 to enable the assistant doorkeeper of the Senate to compile a history of the desks of the Senate Chamber, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, etc., appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF COURT OF CLAIMS PAPERS.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The Court of Claims has requested that certain papers and exhibits that were offered with a Senate bill in the Fifty-seventh Congress and which are with the file clerk of the Senate and which are Court of Claims papers that are needed for examination there in connection with certain other matters be returned to the Court of Claims. I offer the following order and ask for its immediate consideration.

The order was read and agreed to, as follows:

Ordered, That the papers accompanying the bill (S. 132) for the relief of Elisha Nelson, Fifty-seventh Congress, first session, which were taken from the files of the Court of Claims in the Fifty-fifth Congress, be returned to the said court.

SERGEANT AT ARMS OF THE SENATE.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 405), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That E. Livingstone Cornelius, Assistant Sergeant at Arms, be, and he hereby is, chosen Sergeant at Arms of the Senate, vice Daniel M. Ransdell, deceased.

THE PRESIDENTIAL TERM.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President-The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning business is closed. The Senator from California. AS IT AFFECTS THE INCUMBENT.

Mr. President, I have considered this question of Mr. WORKS. the advantages of a second term as it affects the public interests. I would like the further attention of the Senate while I consider it as it affects the incumbent of the office. Is it better for the man? Of course if it is true that he can render his country better service by reason of the experience his first term has given him, that is a satisfaction to him as well as an advantage to the Nation. Besides, the fact urged by Senators, weak as it seems to me, as an objection to this proposed amendment that a man is entitled to the reward of public approval, evidenced by a reelection for duty well done, should be taken into I am impressed with the belief that the alleged public account. approval by a reelection that is obtained by personal endeavor and the influence of the millions of the ill-gotten gains of the corporations, the machinations and manipulations of the corrupt political machine, and the help of the officeholders whose support is the result of patronage and the sense of loyalty to a political chief is a species of approval that to a right-minded man would not amount to very much. An exhibition of popular approval, obtained in that way, costs too much, not only of actual money, but what is of vastly more importance, of self-respect. It may be conceded, for the purposes of the argument—indeed, I think it is true—that some of our Presidents were peculiarly fitted to serve their country at the time of their election, and under the existing conditions. And where those conditions and the prob-lems to be met continued, there might be strong reasons for continuing them in office for a second term. I think this may fairly be said of Washington and Lincoln. Madison, Monroe, and Jefferson were trained statesmen when they entered upon their first terms. They were just as competent to perform the services required of them as President the first day of their service as they were the last. Their second terms were no better than their first and added nothing to their fame nor to the esteem in which they were held.

ANDREW JACKSON FAVORED ONE TERM.

Jackson was a soldier and not a statesman, and was always at war. Hostilities did not cease when he was transferred from the Army to the Executive Department. One of the things for which he will be long remembered is that he was the father of the doctrine that to the victor belongs the spoils, which will soon be put into operation again by his followers. It is a practice that has been the plague of public men and discreditable to the Nation. It is one of the things that has made the amendment now proposed necessary for the public welfare. But even in those earlier days public sentiment, it seems, was against the use that was then being made of the power to appoint to office. Jackson himself recognized and made note of it in his first inaugural address, in which he said:

The recent demonstration of public sentiment inscribes on the list of Executive duties, in characters too legible to be overlooked, the task of reform, which will require particularly the correction of those abuses that have brought the patronage of the Federal Government into conflict with the freedom of elections and the counteraction of those causes which have disturbed the rightful course of appointment and have placed or continued power in unfaithful or incompetent hands.

Jackson was a great man, a sincere patriot, and a good President, albeit a little hot-headed and contentious. He favored both the direct election of President by the people without the intervention of electors and an election for a single term of either four or six years. He took this ground at the beginning of his service as President and reiterated his views on other and later occasions. In his first annual message to Congress he said:

In this as in all other matters of public concern policy requires that as few impediments as possible should exist to the free operation of the public will. Let us, then, endeavor so to amend our system that the office of Chief Magistrate may not be conferred upon any citizen but in pursuance of a fair expression of the will of the majority.

I would therefore recommend such an amendment of the Constitution as may remove all intermediate agency in the election of the President and Vice President. The mode may be so regulated as to preserve to each State its present relative weight in the election, and a failure in the first attempt may be provided for by confining the second to a choice between the two highest candidates. In connection with such an amendment it would seem advisable to limit the service of the Chief Magistrate to a single term of either four or six years.

There are, perhaps, few men who can for any great length of time enjoy office and power without being more or less under the influence of feelings unfavorable to the faithful discharge of their public duties. Their integrity may be proof against improper considerations immediately addressed to themselves, but they are apt to acquire a habit of looking with indifference upon the public interests and of tolerating conduct from which an unpracticed man would revolt. Office is considered as a species of property, and government rather as a means of promoting individual interests than as an instrument created solely for the service of the people. Corruption in some and in others a perversion of correct feelings and principles divert government from its legitimate ends and make it an engine for the support of the few at the expense of the many. The duties of all public officers are, or at least admit of being made, so plain and simple that men of intelligence may readily qualify themselves for their performance; and I can not but believe that more is lost by the long continuance of men in office than is generally to be gained by their experience. I submit, therefore, to your consideration whether the efficiency of the Government would not be promoted and official industry and integrity better secured by a general extension of the law which limits appointments to four years.

In his second annual message, of December 6, 1830, he has

In his second annual message, of December 6, 1830, he has this further to say on this important subject:

this further to say on this important subject:

It was a leading object with the framers of the Constitution to keep as separate as possible the action of the legislative and executive branches of the Government. To secure this object nothing is more essential than to preserve the former from all temptations of private interest, and therefore so to direct the patronage of the latter as not to permit such temptations to be offered. Experience abundantly demonstrates that every precaution in this respect is a valuable safeguard of liberty, and one which my reflections upon the tendencles of our system incline me to think should be made still stronger. It was for this reason that, in connection with an amendment of the Constitution removing all intermediate agency in the choice of the President, I recommended some restrictions upon the reeligibility of that officer and upon the tenure of offices generally. The reason still exists, and I renew the recommendation with an increased confidence that its adoption will strengthen those checks by which the Constitution designed to secure the independence of each department of the Government and promote the healthful and equitable administration of all the trusts which it has created. The agent most likely to contravene this design of the Constitution is the Chief Magistrate. In order, particularly, that his appointment may, as far as possible, be placed beyond the reach of any improper influences; in order that he may approach the solemn responsibilities of the highest office in the fift of a free people uncommitted to any other course than the strict line of constitutional duty, and that the securities for this independence may be rendered as strong as the nature of power and the weakness of its possessor will admit. I can not too earnestly invite your attention to the propriety of promoting such an amendment of the Constitution as will render him ineligible after one term of service.

He said, on the same subject, in his fourth annual message of December 4, 1832:

I beg leave to call the attention of Congress to the views heretofore expressed in relation to the mode of choosing the President and Vice President of the United States and to those respecting the tenure of office generally. Still impressed with the justness of those views and with the belief that the modifications suggested on those subjects if adopted will contribute to the prosperity and harmony of the country, I earnestly recommend them to your consideration at this time.

He renewed the subject in his fifth and sixth messages in similar language. In the latter he says, after urging the change suggested by him in the mode of electing the President and Vice President:

Could this be attained and the terms of those officers be limited to a single period of either four or six years, I think our liberties would possess an additional safeguard.

It was much to the credit of Jackson that he urged this amendment at the very beginning of his first term, when he might be, and actually was, called by his countrymen to serve a second term as their Chief Magistrate. It would have been equally to the credit of Congress if it had listened to and acted favorably on this wise and patriotic recommendation.

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

Grant was another President whose place in the hearts of his countrymen comes from his service as a soldier in the Army and not from anything accomplished by him as President. soldier he had few equals and no superiors. His administration as President was commonplace, partly because the times were such as necessarily to render it so. There was nothing in his second term, so far as I know, that was superior to his first. The reward of a second term he did not need. He had made the best of his record at that time. His place in public estimation was secure. There was nothing in his career as President to support the objection to this resolution that I am now considering.

ABRAHAM LINCOLY.

Abraham Lincoln was a great man; one of the greatest of the great men, not only of his own country, but of the world. There were two sides to his nature that seemed to be inconsistent and at war with each other. On the one side he was patient, forbearing, sympathetic, and humane. On the other he was a man of stern resolve, uncompromising in his convictions and firm in maintaining them. He was a man of profound sympathies on the one side and of determination and decision on the other.

Each of these sides of his nature and its characteristics was a check and balance on the other. His decisions, however strongly and unswervingly he maintained them, were tempered with justice and mercy. On the other hand, the sympathetic side of his nature that often resulted in acts of mercy was guarded from weakness and overindulgence of that disposition by his high sense of right and justice. He tempered justice with mercy and mercy with a right sense of justice. Grover Cleveland, in speaking of the objections of the military authorities to his sympathetic attitude toward individual delinquents and his frequent pardons, had this to say of him: "Notwithstanding all that might be objectionable in these, what was he doing? He was fortifying his own heart. And that was his strength, his own heart; that is a man's strength." In the great trials that he passed through, when thousands of his countrymen were being slain in a fratricidal war, his heart, that was as tender as the heart of a woman, was wrung with anguish that brought him much sorrow. But through it all he never faltered in the performance of his duties. He insisted upon the vigorous prosecution of the war, however much it grieved him to witness all the suffering, sorrow, and sacrifice of human lives it entailed. Nothing could move him from his fixed determination to save the Union, no matter how much it might cost in life and treasure. His warm sympathies, his humane disposition, his ever-active human affection and heartfelt desire to avoid and ameliorate human suffering did not swerve him from this lofty and patriotic purpose. the one side his life was pathetic, on the other it was sublime. His tender sympathies, his kindliness of heart, his great and abounding love for his fellowmen, his rugged honesty, his austere and uncompromising principles of right and justice, his inflexible determination, his undying patience under unjust criticism by his friends and foes alike, made up a combination of great and honorable qualities that made him one of the greatest men of all history. The more tender and sympathetic characteristics of the man brought him the tender and lasting affection of the American people. His lofty patriotism, his rugged honesty, and his consecration to duty created for him in the minds of his countrymen the most profound trust, respect, and admiration. career was cut short by the hand of an assassin. He was then at the height of his power, the zenith of his fame.

Do Senators believe that Abraham Lincoln could have added to the luster of his fame or added to the love, respect, and admiration entertained for him by the American people by a second term as President? Is there one here who will say that he would have made a better President during the second term than he had proved himself to be during the first?

No, Mr. President; his place in the hearts of his own people and of the civilized world was made secure by the service he rendered the Nation in his first term.

I have often wondered, sir, what would have been Lincoln's place in history and in the estimation of the people if he had been called upon to meet the great problems growing out of the reconstruction of the Government and the bringing back into the Union of the seceded States. Andrew Johnson was not a weak man, but he failed utterly to meet and solve those problems. He left the office in disgrace because of his conflict with the Congress of the United States growing out of those questions. He was disposed to be merciful and liberal in dealing with the people of the South. We have a right to believe that Lincoln would have been influenced by like feelings of sym-On the other hand, there were men in the Congress who were vindictive and revengeful-men who insisted upon impos ing upon the people of the South the most humiliating conditions as a preliminary to their readmission into the Union. This sentiment was backed by the most powerful influences and encouraged by the natural feelings of the people of the North whose homes had been made desolate by the ravages of the war. The reconstruction period is one of the darkest pages of the history of the country. The spirit of hatred and revenge that ruled in the Congress of the Nation made it possible. At this day it would be impossible. Could Lincoln, with all his determination, with the trust and confidence of the people behind him, have withstood this tide of hatred and malice that, with him in his grave, swept everything before it? It may well be doubted.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Grover Cleveland was another of our great Presidents. served a second term. He consented to be a candidate for the third time with great reluctance. He felt that his first term had been a success and that he had rendered his country valuable service. He was a conscientious public servant and governed by high ideals. He was solicitous about entering upon a second term. Concerning his reelection he said:

Second term. Concerning his reelection he said:
Why should I have any desire or purpose of returning to the Presidency? It involves a responsibility almost beyond human strength for a man who brings conscience to the discharge of his duties. Besides, I feel somehow that I made a creditable showing during my first term, all things considered, and I might lose whatever of character and reputation are already gained in it. I do not want the office, and, above all, I do not feel that I can take the risk involved in a second term after the intervention of one by another man and an opposing party. It would be necessary for me to start new again, and I do not feel equal to it.

His fears and his hesitation to take upon himself the cares and responsibilities of the Presidency were fully justified by subsequent events. His second term, through no fault of his, was not a success, and brought disaster to his party. It was a disappointment to him and his political associates. He performed the duties of the office during the second term with the same fidelity, courage, and consecration to duty that characterized his first term. But some of his most cherished policies were disapproved by his party and the opposition and bitterness that grew out of these differences of opinion caused him to feel that his efforts had failed and that his second administration of the great office of President was a failure. In December. 1894, he said in a letter to his friend Richard Watson Gilder:

I am so depressed during these days that the thought of my lack of deserving any thought of my friends is strangely mixed with the gratification caused by the evidence that you have thought of me.

I am sure I never was more completely in the right path of duty than I am now, and more sure that I never did better public service than now; but it is depressing enough to have no encouragement from any quarter.

I believe I shall hold out, but I doubt if I shall advise anyone to lose the support of party in the hope of finding support among those who beyond partisanship profess a patriotic desire for good govern-

Again, in March, 1899, he says:

As day after day passes, full of trouble and annoyances with such small surface results, I find myself again and again saying, "How flat, stale, and unprofitable."

If occasional words of encouragement did not reach me like a breath of fresh air in this dreadful atmosphere I would be in danger of sinking into a condition of mere anxiety for my release from the things that surround me here.

But two years more will quickly pass.

When he came to surrender the office to his successor, he said to Mr. McKinley that he hoped that his administration would be successful and that he would not have so many reasons as he (Cleveland) had to feel glad when he came to go out.

On another occasion he wrote to Mr. Gilder:

Of all men in the world, you know best that I do honestly try to "keep the compass true," and I am convinced that you appreciate better than others how misleading the fogs sometimes are. I frequently think what a glorious boon omniscience would be to one charged with the Chief Magistracy of our Nation.

Cleveland thought that he had reason to feel disappointed at the lack of understanding and appreciation of his public services. It troubled him, and he often spoke of it. But the masses of the people understood him better than did the politicians, and therefore appreciated him and his public services the better. But I think it may be fairly said that his second term added nothing to his fame, and it is certain that it added nothing to his peace of mind. I am glad to bear witness to my very high regard for Mr. Cleveland and appreciation of the great service he rendered to his country. His great moral courage and his determination to stand by his convictions, founded on principle, have always appealed to me very strongly. But, Mr. President, there is nothing in his experiences that gives the slightest weight to the argument of Senators that a second term is beneficial to the public interest.

PUBLIC APPROVAL BY SECOND ELECTION.

But it is said that a President who has rendered acceptable service in his first term is entitled to a second as an evidence of public approval, and the hope of such a reward is an incentive to better service. I have already remarked, incidentally, that the strenuous and sometimes objectionable methods resorted to to secure a second term render it wholly valueless as an evidence of approval of past services, and I must confess to some surprise that it could be supposed that any man worthy, of being President of this Republic would be influenced to render better service by the hope of thereby securing the office for a second term. This is certainly placing a very low estimate on the standard of official duty and obligation that may well be supposed to govern the incumbent of that great office. strikes me as being not only a very weak argument, but a reflection on the honorable men who have held the office. Any man who thus seeks public favor with a second term in view and makes that hope or prospect an incentive to better public service is unfit for a first term and certainly should never be elected to a second.

Mr. President, this position taken by Members of this body confirms my conviction that there should be no second term for any man. His service should be wholly independent, disinterested, and without hope or thought of reward. If he is weak enough to vary his conduct for better or for worse because of any desire or expectation of an election to a second term he is unworthy of the high honor that has been bestowed upon him. For that reason he should be relieved of any temptation to do so by making him ineligible to a second term. The first elec-tion to so high an office and the consciousness of duty well done should be reward enough for any man. Besides, he need not wait for a second election to know whether his service has been understood and appreciated or not. Mr. Cleveland knew, or believed he knew, that he was neither understood nor appreciated, but he never swerved from what his own conscience told him was right, and he was in the end honored the more for it. I am sorry that such an argument as this has been advanced on the floor of the United States Senate, however sincerely it has been urged.

We have in this country an organization known as the Anti-Third Term League. There has never been any particular necessity for any such lengue. The people of this country have never yet chosen a man as Chief Magistrate for a third term, and probably never will. But this league now proposes to so amend the Constitution as to prevent the election of a President for a third term in lieu of the amendment here proposed. This would be absurd. We need no such amendment as that, for the reasons I have stated. The people will take care of that question without any change in the Constitution. sides, to my mind, the objection to the holding of a second term is just as strong as to that of a third term, with the single exception that it arouses the fear that the third-term election may some time lead to a life tenure. All the evil effects of allowing a reelection of the incumbent, some of which I have brought to the attention of the Senate, apply with just as much force to a second as to a third election.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF 1787.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. Boran] has contended that the Contitutional Convention of 1787 had under consideration the length of the presidential term and that of the ineligibility of the incumbent to a second term, and determined against the limitation now sought to be imposed. On the 24th day of May, 1912, I had printed in the RECORD the proceedings before that convention relating to those subjects, together with a letter from James Madison to Thomas Jefferson, explaining the views of members of that body that finally led to the adoption of the present provision of the Constitution. I now submit the proceedings and that portion of the letter relating to the subject now in hand for the information of the Senate:

RANDOLPH'S PLAN.

Resolution.

May 29, 1787: 7. Resolved. That a National Executive be instituted, to be chosen by the National Legislature for the term of — years; to receive punctually at stated times a fixed compensation for the services rendered, in which no increase or diminution shall be made so as to affect the magistracy existing at the time of increase or diminution, and to be ineligible a second time.

June 1: It was moved and seconded to proceed to the consideration of the seventh resolution, submitted by Mr. Randolph, namely:

"Resolved. That a National Executive be instituted, to be chosen by the National Legislature for the term of — years; to receive punctually at stated times a fixed compensation for the services rendered, in which no increase or diminution shall be made so as to affect the magistracy existing at the time of such increase or diminution, and to be ineligible a second time; and that, besides a general authority to execute the national laws, it ought to enjoy the executive rights vested in Congress by the Confederation."

On motion by Mr. Wilson, seconded by Mr. C. Pinckney, to amend the first clause of the resolution by adding after the word "instituted" the words "to consist of a single person," so as to read:

"Resolved, That a National Executive, to consist of a single person, be instituted."

It was moved and seconded to postpone a consideration of the amendment; and on the question to postpone it passed in the affirmative.

It was then moved and seconded to agree to the first clause of the resolution, namely: "Resolved, That a National Executive be instituted;" and on the question to agree to the said clause it passed in the affirmative, as may from time to differ the word: "Instituted." to add the words: "With power to carry into execution the national laws, to appoint to offices in cases not otherwise provided for, and to execute such other powers, not legislative or judiciary in their nature, as may from time to time be delegated by the National Legislature," it passed in

It was then moved and seconded to postpone the consideration of the following words, namely, "to be chosen by the National Legislature," and on the question to postpone it passed in the affirmative.

The seventh resolve, "That a National Executive be instituted," agreed to. "To continue in office for seven years," agreed to. "A general authority to execute the laws," agreed to. "To appoint all officers not otherwise provided for," agreed to. "To appoint all officers not otherwise provided for," agreed to. "To appoint all officers not otherwise provided for," agreed to. June 13: Report of the Committee of the Whole on Mr. Randolph's propositions.

Virginia, aye; North Carolina, aye, South Carolina, aye; Georgia, aye—ayes 9, noes 1.

July 25: Mr. Pinkney moved that the election by the legislature be qualified with a proviso that no person be eligible for more than 6 years in any 12 years. He thought this would have all the advantage and at the same time avoid in some degree the inconveniency of an absolute ineligibility a second time.

Col. Mason approved the idea. It has the sanction of experience in the instance of Congresses and some of the executives of the States. It readered the Executive as effectually independent as an ineligibility after his first election and opened the way at the same time for the advantage of his future services.

On Mr. Pinkney's motion that no person shall serve in the executive office more than 6 years in 12 years it passed in the negative: New Hampshire, aye; Massachusetts, aye; Connecticut, no; New Jersey, no; Pennsylvania, no; Delaware, no; Maryland, no; Virginia, no; North Carolina, aye; South Carolina, aye; Georgia, aye—ayes 5, noes 6.

July 26 it was moved and seconded to amend the third clause of the resolution respecting the National Executive so as to read as follows, namely: "For the term of seven years, to be ineligible a second time," which passed in the affirmative—ayes 7, noes 3.

Col. Mason: In every stage of the question relative to the Executive, the difficulty of the subject and the diversity of the opinions concerning it have appeared.

* * * He conceived at the same time that a second election ought to be absolutely prohibited, having for his primary object, for the pole star for his political conduct, the preservation of the rights of the people, he held it as an essential point, as a very palladium of civil liberty, that the great officers of State, and particularly the Executive, should at fixed periods return to that mass from which they were at first taken, in order that they may feel and respect those rights and interests which are again to be personally valuable to them. He concluded in moving that the constitution of the Executive, as reported by the Committee of the Whole, be reinstated, viz, "That the Executive be appointed for seven years and be ineligible a second time."

Question on Col. Mason's, as above, which passed in the affirmative: New Hampshire, aye; Massachusetts, not on the floor: Connecticut, no: New Jersey, aye; Pennsylvania, no; Delaware, no; Maryland, aye; Virginla, aye; North Carolina, aye; South Carolina, aye; Georgia, aye—ayes 7, noes 3, absent 1.

On the question on the whole resolution as amended in the words following: "That a National Executive be instituted to consist of a single person to be chosen by the National Legislature for a term of seven years; to be ineligible a second time: with power to carry into execution the national laws; to appoint to offices in cases not otherwise provided for; to be removable on impeachment and conviction of malpractice or neglect of duty; to receive a fixed compensation for the devotion of his time to the public service; to be paid out of the National Treasury; "it passed in the affirmative: New Hampshire, aye; Massachusetts, not on the floor; Connecticut, aye; New Jersey, aye; Pennsylvania, no; Delaware, no; Maryland, no; Virginia, divided—Mr. R. (Blair) and Col. M. (Mason), aye; Gen. W. (Washington) and Mr. M. (Madison), no; Mr. Randolph happened to be out of the House—North Carolina, aye; Georgia, aye—ayes 6, noes 3, divided 1, absent 1.

COMMITTEE OF DETAIL.

There was connected with the work of the convention what was known as a committee of detail. Documents preserved and set out in Ferrand's Records of the Convention show the following relating to this question, and mostly in the form of resolution submitted to and acted upon by the convention, covering the time from July 14 to 26, 1787:

Resolved, That a National Executive be instituted to consist of a single person, to be chosen for the term of six years, with power to carry into execution the national laws; to appoint to offices in cases not otherwise provided for; to be removable on impeachment and conviction of malpractice or neglect of duty; to receive a fixed compensation for the devotion of his time to public service; to be paid out of the Public Treasury.

LETTER FROM MADISON TO JEFFERSON.

NEW YORK, October 24, 1787.

You will herewith receive the result of the convention, which continued its session till the 17th of September. I take the liberty of making some observations on the subject, which will help to make up a letter if they should answer no other purpose.

As to the duration in office, a few would have preferred a tenure during good behavior; a considerable number would have done so in case an easy and effectual-removal by impeachment could be settled. It was much agitated whether a long term—seven years, for example, with a subsequent and perpetual ineligibility—or a short term, with a capacity to be reelected, should be fixed. In favor of the first opinion were urged the danger of a gradual degeneracy of reelections from time to time, into first a life and then a hereditary tenure, and the favorable effect of an incapacity to be reappointed on the independent exercise of the Executive authority. On the other side it was contended that the prospect of necessary degradation would discourage the most dignified characters from aspiring to the office, would take away the principal motive to the faithful discharge of its duties—the hope of being rewarded with a reappointment would stimulate ambition to violent efforts for holding over the constitutional term—and instead of producing an independent administration and a firmer defense of the constitutional rights of the department would render the officer more indifferent to the importance of a place which he would soon be obliged to quit forever, and more ready to yield to the encroachments of the legislature of which he might again be a member.

Mr. President, it will be seen that there was a very strong

Mr. President, it will be seen that there was a very strong sentiment in favor of but one term. At one time this sentiment was so strong that a majority of the States represented in the convention voted in favor of one term of seven years with a clause rendering the President ineligible to a second term

VIEWS OF LUTHER MARTIN.

Luther Martin, another member of the convention, and afterwards attorney general of the State of Maryland, had this to say on the subject in an address delivered by him before the Legislature of Maryland:

Legislature of Maryland:

On these subjects (mode of electing the Executive, his powers, and his tenure of office) there was a great diversity of sentiment; many of the members were desirous that the President should be elected for seven years, and not to be eligible a second time; others proposed that he should not be absolutely ineligible, but that he should not be capable of being chosen a second time until the expiration of a certain number of years. The supporters of the above propositions went upon the idea that the best security for liberty was a limited duration and a rotation of office in the chief executive department.

There was a party who attempted to have the President appointed during good behavior, without any limitation as to time, and not being able to succeed in that attempt, they then endeavored to have him reeligible without any restraint.

It was objected that the choice of a President to continue in office during good behavior, would be at once rendering our system an elective monarchy; and, that if the President was to be reeligible without any interval of disqualification, it would amount nearly to the same thing, since with the powers that the President is to enjoy, and the interest and influence with which they will be attended, he will be almost absolutely certain of being reelected from time to time as long as he lives.

as he lives.

As the propositions were reported by the Committee of the Whole House the President was to be chosen for seven years and not to be eligible at any time after. In the same manner the proposition was agreed to in convention, and it was so reported by the committee of detail, although a variety of attempts were made to alter that part of the system by those who were of a contrary opinion, in which they repeatedly failed; but, sir, by never losing sight of their object and choosing a proper time for their purpose, they succeeded at length in obtaining the alteration, which was not made until within the last 12 days before the convention adjourned.

It is norfactly evident sir that the present provision in the

It is perfectly evident, sir, that the present provision in the Constitution was a compromise of strongly conflicting views of strong men, and, like most all compromises, it has proved unsatisfactory; and being a compromise, it affords but little, if any, support to the objections made to the proposed amendment. The letter of Mr. Madison, giving the conflicting views of members and their reasons therefor, is peculiarly interesting in this connection.

PRESIDENT TAFT FAVORS ONE TERM.

The present Chief Magistrate has declared against a second term in emphatic terms. He was quite willing to accept that honor for himself, as who would not have been under the same circumstances? Indeed, he labored strenuously, altogether too strenuously as I think, to obtain it. Having himself made the attempt, he is better able than most men to understand and appreciate the evils growing out of the temptation to run a second time and the campaign made in furtherance of that ambition. I have no doubt of the entire sincerity of his views. I commend them to the consideration of the Senate. At a meeting of the Lotus Club, of New York, held since the last presidential election, he has this to say on the subject:

I venture the suggestion that it would aid the efficiency of the Executive and center his energy and attention and that of his subordinates in the latter part of his administration upon what is a purely disintenested public service if he were made ineligible after serving one term of six years either to a succeeding or a nonconsecutive term.

I am a little specific in this matter, because it seems necessary to be so in order to be understood. I do not care how unambitious or modest a President is, I do not care how determined he is that he himself will not secure his renomination (and there are very few, indeed, who go to that extent), still his subordinates, equally interested with him in his reclection, will, whenever they have the opportunity, exert their influence and divide their time between the public service and the effort to secure their chief's renomination and reelection.

It is difficult to prevent the whole administration from losing a part of its effectiveness for the public good by this diversion to political effort for at least a year of the four of each administration. Were this made impossible by law, I can see no reason why the energy of the President and that of all his subordinates might not be directed rather to making a great record of efficiency in the first and only term than in seeking a second term for the purpose.

Four years is rather a short time in which to work out great governmental policies. Six years is better.

I do not desire to consume the time of the Senate unnecessarily or to trespass unduly on the patience of Senators, but there is another idea advanced here that needs at least a little attention. The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Crawford], for whose judgment and sincerity I have great respect, tells us that if we are going to render a President ineligible for reelection because of the opportunity he has to use patronage for that purpose, the same disqualification should be made to attach to Senators. It is not because a President has appointed men to office as a means of securing their support, or upon the theory that any incumbent of that great office would himself appoint men with that object in view, that I think he should be rendered ineligible to a second term. It is because this pernicious system has grown up, a system that in a political sense makes it the duty of every appointee to support his chief who gave him his office. The President himself has little, if any, control over it. It has become the fixed, unwritten law of politics. It is a detriment to the President as well as to the country. He can not free himself from this obnoxious condition if he would, and there is every temptation to let things take their course and say nothing. I do not remember of a single case where a candidate for a second term has protested against it. The system is not only detrimental and discreditable to the office of President, but it is demoralizing to the whole public service.

Mr. President, I agree with the Senator from South Dakota, that if any Member of this body is recommending men to office with a view of securing their support in his candidacy for a reelection or is otherwise using his office and conducting himself in such way as to secure a reelection, without regard to his duty as a Senator, the doctrine of ineligibility should apply to him with full force. Not only that, but he should be expelled from his present seat in this body. But that has nothing to do with this question. It is begging the question to say that if you make a President ineligible you should do the same as to Sena-We are not dealing with Senators now. If the Senator thinks the rule should extend to Senators he can offer an amendment to that effect. The issue can not be clouded in that way. That the rule should be applied to the presidential office I have no doubt, and that is the only question before the Senate.

The Senator from Idaho has discussed the question of business tranquillity and insists that the effect of the amendment on business in one way or another should receive no consideration whatever. I agree with the Senator entirely. This is too important a question to be influenced by any consideration of dollars and cents. I had not supposed that any Senator would advance any such reason for making the proposed change in the Certainly that never occurred to me as a reason for introducing the resolution, and I do not press it now. The same may be said, without commenting upon it, with reference to the cost of elections. I place no weight upon that as a ground for making this proposed amendment.

The objection mentioned that the extended term might continue an objectionable man longer is too fanciful in the light of past experience to call for refutation.

LENGTH OF TERM.

There remains to be considered the question of the length of the term to be fixed in case of ineligibility. I said on another occasion that I was not greatly concerned as to the time fixed. I would not object to four years. I would much rather have one term of eight years than two terms of four years each, as we may have it now. But six years seems to me to be a reasonable term. To give that length of time will meet the claim of the value of experience, if any weight is given to that contention. It also meets the objection, entertained by some, to too frequent elections, although, as I have said, I believe that is hardly worthy of consideration. Weighing all these things, it seems to me that a six-year term is better and more reasonable.

Mr. President, my one desire is to so amend the Constitution as to insure the best and most satisfactory service to the country. This is not a question of men or of politics, but of principle. I am sure every Member of this body so considers it. I hope this resolution will be passed by Congress and ratified by the States, because I believe the amendment proposed is for the good of the country.

OMNIBUS CLAIMS BILL.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I move that the Senate resume the consideration of House bill 19115, known as the omnibus claims

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 19115) making appropriation for payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims, reported under the provisions of the acts approved March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and the Tucker Acts.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I suggest the absence of a quorum, because there are several Senators who have amendments, I know, that they want to offer who are not in the Chamber. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK of Wyoming in the chair). The Senator from South Dakota suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Mr. WORKS. I desire to announce that the senior Senator from Washington [Mr. Jones] is necessarily absent on business of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] had an amendment pending the other evening.

Mr. LODGE. I offered an amendment to pay to D. M. Carman the sum of $2,876.42. My interest in that claim, as I stated the other day, arose simply from the fact that it came before the Committee on the Philippines when I was chairman. had then occasion to look into it very fully.

Carman provided the Government with certain cascos for carrying freight from the steamships to the shore. They were compelled to go in all sorts of weather. These boats were of very light build, and were seriously damaged on one occasion by being forced to go in a storm and lie alongside the steamer, when they were driven against the sides of the steamer by the waves and were crushed in. Therefore a large proportion of them had to be repaired. They were taken to the yard and repaired.

Carman made claim not only for the injuries done but for the loss of rental during the time that these boats were laid up. The local officer declined to recognize the claim on the ground that the Government was not liable for rental, but the superior officer stated that while he thought the claim was unfounded for rental he did think there was an equitable claim for damages.

It was brought to the department on the report of Capt. Knight, sent to the Quartermaster General, and the Quartermaster General made an allowance of this amount on the claim. It was reported to the Secretary of War, and by the Secretary of War it was reported to the President and was sent to the Senate December 21, 1906. An appropriation was made in the military appropriations act of March 2, 1907, for the payment of 256 approved claims for damages to a list of private property in the United States, Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines, in which provision was made for the payment of five claims for damages to cascos at Manila, two of which grew out of the same contract as the one involved in this claim. At that time the claimant would not accept the reduced allowance made by the Quartermaster General, or did not accept it until on or about February 27, 1907, he cabled to his attorney, but it was too late, and it did not get into the bill.

The matter then went into the Court of Claims, and they sustained the claim for the amount of $2,876, and that it was an equitable one.

Mr. President, claims of a precisely similar nature were paid many years ago by the Government. This claim has been recommended by every executive officer to whom it has been submitted. It has been recommended by the Court of Claims; was approved by the Philippine Committee of the Senate, and, I think, by the Committee on Military Affairs. It simply did not get into the bill with the others owing merely to the delay in the acceptance of the claimant.

seems to me if any claim can be a fair and honest one it is this claim, and I think it ought to be included. I notice in reading the report of the committee that they do not state that they have taken adverse action upon it.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, I will say this about the claim: Two of these boats of exactly the same character involved under the same facts have been paid for. This claimant was not satisfied with the amount which the Quartermaster General was willing to allow to him, which was the only reason why it was not paid. He afterwards wired to the department his consent that he would accept this lower amount, but it was not received here until the closing days of that session of Congress, and on account of that fact it was not acted upon.

Now, those are the facts in the case. As representing the committee I can not accept the amendment. We did not have it at the time we passed on all the items of the bill in the regular way and settled upon our report. Afterwards, when the amendment was submitted, I made this report upon it so that the committee could put the Senate in possession of the facts. I am perfectly willing to abide by whatever decision the Senate may make of the matter upon this report. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I do not want to have it accepted as a precedent here for a general opening of the bill for amendment, because if we do that we will be involved in such a wilderness of amendments that we might as well abandon the attempt to pass the bill.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I understand the chairman's feeling about opening up the bill, but this is a claim that I think is admitted to be a good claim by all who have examined it, and the only thing is that it came in too late. It occupies a different ground certainly from many of the other claims that were adversely reported on by the committee. In fact, it has not been acted upon by the committee.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the reason why I objected to the inclusion of the claim was because the agreement made between the Government and the claimant was that any damages done without the fault of the owner were to be repaired at the expense of the United States, the action of the elements excepted.

These boats were damaged by the action of the elements, and that is the reason why I objected to the amendment at the time and thought that the claim should not be included in the bill.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, that agreement did not mean that this man was to have no claim. If they took his boats and sunk them, it would be destruction by the action of the ele-ments, by water. He was compelled to go out by the orders of the Government in weather when it was entirely unsafe for him to go, and it was owing to that that the boats were crushed. Of course, the means by which it was done were the waves. If he had been let alone, the elements would not have destroyed the boats.

Mr. SMOOT. He was only fulfilling the requirements of his contract when he undertook to go out the 5 miles he did go. It does seem to me that, strictly speaking, under his contract with the Government of the United States the damage came about by the action of the elements, and that was excepted in the contract.

Mr. LODGE. The elements drove the boats against the side of the vessel. The Government vessel was not an element of nature. It was an element of destruction on that coast.

Mr. SMOOT. It was the typhoon that was raging at the time.
Mr. LODGE. All the officers there admitted—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will suggest that the debate is degenerating into a conversation. The Senator from Utah has the floor.

Mr. LODGE. I have no desire to have it degenerate into a conversation, no matter how interesting.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah can only be interrupted by his consent.

Mr. SMOOT. I have read the report very carefully—every word of it—as far as that is concerned. I see it is stated that under the circumstances they think this claim ought to be paid, and I shall not say anything more about it. But I wanted simply to say that it was not strictly in accordance with the agreement between the claimants and the Government of the United States.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, my chief concern is that we shall not open the door here. I would not consent to this, or I do not consent to it, but I would oppose it if it were not for the fact that these people came to an agreement. The Quartermaster General allowed this man the amount of money that he is asking for here. He was not willing to accept it at that time, but later on he did accept it by telegraph. His claim did not get into the bill because it was in the closing hours of Con-There seems to be nothing further to adjust between them. On that account I am not opposing it, but I am not consenting to it, because I want to warn the Senate against the opening of the door here to claims outside of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr.

LODGET.

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, in connection with the amendment of the Senate committee striking out the House provision in regard to the claim of Jacob Samuel Weaver, I ask to have printed in the RECORD the findings of the Court of Claims in that case. I shall not ask to have it read, but merely ask to have it printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the order to do so will be made

The document referred to is as follows:

JACOB SAMUEL WEAVER.

LETTER FROM THE ASSISTANT CLERK OF THE COURT OF CLAIMS, TRANS-MITTING A COPY OF THE FINDINGS FILED BY THE COURT IN THE CASE OF JACOB SAMUEL WEAVER AGAINST THE UNITED STATES.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE. Washington, December 9, 1905.

Hon. Joseph G. Cannon,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Sir: Pursuant to the order of the court, I transmit herewith a certified copy of the findings filed by the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883, known as the Bowman Act.

I am, very respectfully, yours,

John Randolph,

Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

[Court of Claims. Congressional, No. 10826. Jacob Samuel Weaver v. The United States.]

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 14th day of May, 1992. The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 6th day of November, 1905.

Messrs. Pennebaker and Jones appeared for the claimant, and the Attorney General, by James A. Tanner, Esq., his assistant and under his direction, appeared for the defense and the protection of the interests of the United States.

The claimant in his petition makes substantially the following allegations:

The claimant in his petition makes substantially the following allegations:

1. That he is a citizen of the United States and resident in the county of Bourbon, in the State of Kansas.

2. That he, being the first sergeant of Company M, Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, was duly appointed or commissioned by the governor of the State of Pennsylvania as second lieutenant thereof, to take rank from October 1, 1864; and that from and after said date he assumed and performed all the duties of his said grade until November 5, 1864, when he was mustered in as second lieutenant. Said regiment was continuously below the minimum number prescribed by law and regulation, and for this reason and no other he was refused muster and recognition in the grade of second lieutenant during said period.

3. That during said period he was allowed and paid only the pay and allowances of a first sergeant, although he was in the continuous per formance of the duties of second lieutenant.

Upon the reports furnished by the War and Treasury Departments and upon other evidence and upon briefs and arguments of counsel the court makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

1. Jacob Samuel Weaver, the claimant in this case, is a citizen of the United States and resident in the county of Bourbon, in the State of Kansas.

2. On October 1, 1864, the said Jacob Samuel Weaver was first lieutenant of Company M, Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavairy. On that date and until he was mustered into the service, to wit, on November 6, 1864, the same was and continued to be below the minimum number prescribed by General Orders, No. 182, of the War Department, of June 20, 1863, carrying into effect section 20 of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1863 (12 Stat. L., p. 734).

The second lieutenant of said Company M, Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, being then and thereafter out of service in said grade, the duties of second lieutenant devolved upon this claimant, who then and thereafter assumed and performed all the duties of second lieutenant of said Company M, Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, until November 6, 1864, when he was mustered as such.

1864, would amount to $82.26, without any deduction for income tax, as reported by the Auditor for the War Department.

7. Income tax would amount to $2.80, and if to be deducted would leave $79.46.

Filed November 1, 1905.

JOHN RANDOLPH,

JOHN RANDOLPH, Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] has an amendment proposing to insert the French spoliations claims.

Mr. LODGE. I have two or three amendments here which I was going to offer, but I understood the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Johnston] was going to offer an amendment. I am perfectly willing, however, to go on with my amendments now. I send to the desk an amendment which I now offer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts will be stated.

The Secretary. As an item from Massachusetts it is proposed to insert on page 264 the following:

To Thomas B. Flower, of Greenville, Mass., $5,538.

Mr. LODGE. I ask to have the report of the Court of Claims in that case read.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is that a longevity claim?

Mr. LODGE. No.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

FREDERICK L. GREENE, ADMINISTRATOR.

COURT OF CLAIMS FINDINGS FILED BY THE COURT IN THE CASE OF FRED-LRICK L. GREENE, ADMINISTRATOR OF THOMAS B. FLOWER, DECEASED, AGAINST THE UNITED STATES.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE, Washington, February 14, 1902.

Hon. WILLIAM P. FRYE,
President of the Senate pro tempore.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court, I transmit herewith a certified copy of the findings filed by the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the resolution of the Senate of the United States under the act of March 3, 1887.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

JOHN RANDOLPH, Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 10161. Frederick L. Greene, administrator of the estate of Thomas B. Flower, deceased, v. The United States.]

STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

186 acres of timber, at $20	$3, 720 1, 995 300
1 dwelling house, 20 by 35 feet. 3 kitchens, two 16 by 25 and one 10 by 12 feet	1, 200 600 75 30
Total	7, 920

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. The claimant's decedent. Thomas B. Flower, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from who the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

II. There was taken from the claimant's decedent, in Dinwiddle County, State of Virginia, during the War of the Rebellion by the military forces of the United States for the use of the Army property of the kind and character above described, which was then and there reasonably worth the sum of $5,538, for which no payment appears to have been made.

III. The claim was not presented to the Southern Claims Commission, and no evidence has been offered by the claimant under the act of March 3, 1887, "bearing upon the question whether there has been any delay or laches in presenting such claim or applying for such grant, gift, or bounty, and facts bearing upon the question whether the bar of any statute of limitation should be removed or which shall be claimed to excuse the claimant for not having resorted to any established legal remedy."

BY THE COURT.

Filed February 3, 1902.

A true copy. Test this 14th day of February, 1902.

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, in this case, as to the court findings, there was no question of the loyalty of the claimant, or the deceased in whose name the claim is made. I observe the committee say that there was no statement of authority. The court found that the property was taken by the United States troops by proper authority, and there was no question raised as to the actual taking of the property. The court put the valuation on it which I have placed in the amendment. point against it is that the claim was not made until 1900, and that it did not come before the Southern Claims Commission; and that the day of the month is not stated, although the year is stated. It seems to me that this claim is as good as any of the other claims of that character can be, and that it is a hardship to reject it simply because it was not filed before the Southern Claims Commission and was not brought to the attention of the Government until the year 1900.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, the adoption of this amendment will mean that this whole question of laches, long delay, failure to present the claim at a time when witnesses were alive, and the general uncertainty of dealing with claims for property in a generation later than the one in which the original acts grose will involve the discussion of the whole subject.

I want to be perfectly frank in saying, after going over these claims personally, taking the findings of the Court of Claims personally and inspecting them in relation to every one of these cases rejected, my convictions have become so firmly fixed with reference to the allowance of a large class of these claims that if they were put into this bill I could not, even as chairman of the committee, record my vote in its favor.

I merely want to call attention to this situation: This claim was not referred to the Court of Claims until the year 1900. When was the property claimed to have been taken? In 1864-65.

Mr. President, I see the hour has arrived for the impeachment proceedings, and as I shall make remarks at a little length upon this subject I ask that the amendment may go over to-day and come up for discussion to-morrow in connection with the

IMPEACHMENT OF ROBERT W. ARCHBALD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (Mr. Bacon) having announced that the time had arrived for the consideration of the articles of impeachment against Robert W. Archbald, the respondent appeared with his counsel, Mr. Worthington, Mr. Simpson, and Mr. Robert W. Archbald, jr.

The managers on the part of the House of Representatives appeared in the seats provided for them.

The Sergeant at Arms (Mr. E. Livingstone Cornelius) made the usual proclamation.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Utah suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll of the Senate.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Crane	Lea	Pomerene
Bacon	Crawford	Lodge	Richardson
Borah	Cullom	McCumber	Sanders
Brandegee	Curtis	McLean	Smith, Ariz.
Bristow	Fletcher	Martine, N. J.	Smith, S. C.
Brown	Foster	Myers	Smoot
Bryan	Gallinger	- O'Gorman	Stephenson
Burnham	Gronna	Oliver	Sutherland
Chilton	Johnson, Me.	Page	Thornton
Clapp	Johnston, Ala.	Perkins	Tillman
Clark, Wyo.	Kenyon	Perky	Townsend
Clarke, Ark.	La Follette	Poindexter	Wetmore

Mr. KENYON. I desire to state that the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. Cummins] is detained at home by the serious illness of his father.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine. I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. GARDNER] has been called from the Chamber on business of the Senate.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. Briggs] is detained from the Senate by illness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the call of the roll of the Senate 48 Senators have answered to their names. A quorum of the Senate is present. The Secretary will read the Journal of the last sitting of the Senate as a Court of Impeachment.

The Secretary read the Journal of Monday's proceedings of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there any inaccuracies in the Journal of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment? If not, it will stand approved.

Mr. Manager WEBB. We should like to recall Thomas

Howell Jones for one question. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will be recalled. TESTIMONY OF THOMAS HOWELL JONES-RECALLED.

Mr. Thomas Howell Jones, having heretofore been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager WEBB.) Mr. Jones, after you had secured the 10-day option on the Katydid culm dump for $25,000 on the 6th day of April, 1912, did you see Mr. Williams again?-A. Yes, sir.

What did he say to you, if anything, relative to this matter and Judge Archbald?-A. He told me not to go to the judge's office again; that the judge had nothing at all to do with it;

that he had the papers.
Mr. Manager WEBB. That is all, Mr. President.

Cross-examination:

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Who was present?-A. Sir? Q. Was there anybody else present when that was said?-

- A. No, sir.

 Redirect examination:
 Q. (By Mr. Manager WEBB.) Can you state when it was;
 how long after the 6th of April?—A. I could not state.
 Q. Was it one, or two, or three days?—A. I could not tell; maybe it was two, three, or four days. I do not remember the date.
- Q. That was before you came down here to testify before the Judiciary Committee?—A. Yes, sir.
 Mr. Manager WEBB. That is all, Mr. President.
 Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, the next witness we desire to have called is Mr. H. C. Reynolds.

TESTIMONY OF HARRY C. REYNOLDS.

Harry C. Reynolds, being duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Please state your name and place of residence.-A. H. C. Reynolds; Scranton, Pa.

Q. What is your business or profession?-A. I am an attornev at law.

Q. Are you acquainted with the Marian Coal Co.?-A. I am, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state if you have ever represented them in the capacity of attorney in any suits?—A. I have, sir.

Q. Were you their attorney in a suit pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission?-A. Two actions.

Q. In one or more suits pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission ?- A. I filed on their behalf two complaints one against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. individually and another against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. and certain delivering carriers.

Q. State as briefly as you can the nature of those suits—what was claimed.—A. We sought in the first case which I have mentioned to obtain a reduction in the rates charged for the hauling of anthracite coal on all points on the line of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. covered by its tariff then known as No. 6095. We also endeavored to point out certain discrimination which we alleged we had suffered at the hands of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. and certain acts upon their part which we alleged were in oppression of my client's rights to ship his coal to points on the line of that railroad.

In the second action we sought to obtain a reduction in the joint through rates charged at some points where there were a few joint through rates in effect, and to obtain generally joint through rates to all points on the lines of the various delivering carriers defendants in the complaint.

Q. When were these petitions or suits filed?-A. I forwarded the first petition against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad August 12, 1910. The letter was received a few days later in Washington. The second complaint I forwarded, I think, August 15, 1910. They were returned to me by the secretary of the commission with a statement that I should attach detailed statements of claims for reparation, among other things, and they were returned; and I caused my client to prepare the detailed statement, showing the car number, the weight, the date of shipment, the car initial, and thus showing the amount of damages claimed. I might say

Q. Right at that point, Mr. Reynolds, what was the total amount of damages claimed?-A. We only claimed damages in reparation in the complaint against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, and that claim was for upward of $53,000.

Q. State when that suit was finally disposed of by the Interstate Commerce Commission.-A. There was an opinion filed on the 8th day of June, 1912, reducing the rates on prepared coal 25 cents per ton, on pea coal 19 cents per ton, and on buck-wheat, I think, 15 cents per ton. The commission, I thought, overlooked the fixing of rates on rice and barley coal, and I filed a brief on the 23d of August pointing out the fact that our complaint had complained particularly of those rates, and pointing out on numerous pages of the testimony where it was shown, as we thought, that they were unjust and unreasonable.

And later, early in the month of November——

Q. What year?—A. 1912; they reduced the rates on rice and barley coal; so that we obtained a reduction on all the rates complained of.

In the second case, the joint through-rate case

Q. Just a moment, Mr. Reynolds. Then, if I understand you, from the time you filed your petition before the Interstate Commerce Commission up to the 12th of November, that matter was pending in some form before the Interstate Commerce Commission for determination?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you can state about the other case, briefly .- A. In the joint through-rate case, after we had had a few hearings, the railroad companies proposed, voluntarily-at least some of them did-to absorb the 30-cent switching charge for a service from the breaker or property of the Marian Coal Co. to the connecting carrier, and we agreed upon what I termed an armistice, that we would permit the joint through-rate case to stand undisposed of until the disposition of the case against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., upon the understanding that they would during such interval absorb the 30cent-a-ton switching charge that we had been subjected to theretofore. So in both cases-in one case by a voluntary concession—we obtained the absorption of the switching charge.

Q. Kindly state what you mean when you say that they absorbed the 30-cent switching rate. Do you mean the carriers agreed to become responsible for it instead of the shipper?—A. I mean that the carrier, the originating carrier, made some arrangement, no doubt with the originating carrier, whereby it agreed to transport the coal from the washer to the junction point, paying out of the total freight rate to the originating carrier for that service.

Q. The effect of that arrangement, then, as I understand you, was to relieve the shipper of that 30 cents switching charge?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Reynolds, I will ask you to state if you were attorney of record and in control of these cases before the Interstate Commerce Commission throughout the entire pendency of those proceedings?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have an associate with you?-A. No, sir.

Q. You were the sole attorney?-A. Yes, sir.

I will ask you to state if you have any knowledge or information about an effort being made on the part of the Bolands to have this matter compromised by a Mr. Watson, an attorney of Scranton?-A. Well, I only know from information that Mr. W. P. Boland gave me with reference to that,

Q. I am not asking you what the information was. You did have information that such negotiations were being carried on?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were the owners and principal stockholders of the Marian Coal Co.?—A. I never saw their stock books, but I understood and understand now that C. G. Boland and James N. Boland and W. P. Boland were the principal stockholders. Q. In representing the Marian Coal Co. they were the individual members of the corporation that you dealt with?—A. That I dealt with directly, although I talked with other stockholders of the company.

Q. Now, I will ask you to state whether or not you had anything to do with the negotiations on the part of a Mr. Watson to bring about a settlement of the differences between the Marian Coal Co. and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.?—A. No, sir; not at any time.

Q. Were you at any time consulted by Mr. Watson for information, or for any other reason, concerning the transaction ?-A. No, sir.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. That is all.

Cross-examination:

Q. (By Mr. SIMPSON.) You spoke, Mr. Reynolds, of a 30cent switching charge. That was 30 cents per car?-A. Thirty cents per ton.

Q. Thirty cents per ton, was it?-A. Yes, sir.

- Q. In what way was your claim of $53,000 or thereabouts made up? I do not mean to ask you to go into the detail, but in a general way how was it made up?-A. On the complaint as originally filed we alleged that the rate on prepared coal ought not justly to exceed $1 per ton. My recollection is that we averred the rate on pea coal should not exceed 90 cents, and that the rate on buckwheat-I had better speak from the record-
- Q. I do not care about the details.—A. Well, 85 or 87 cents, or something like that. And the rate on rice and barley something less, perhaps 75 or 76 cents. Taking that difference between the established rate of $1.58, $1.43, and $1.28 and $1.13 as the difference, we claimed our damages for that difference upon the number of tons we had shipped for a period two years prior to the 18th of October, 1910, which aggregated—the exact figures I can give you—something like $53,000.

Q. That is near enough for our purposes here.-A. Yes, sir. Q. Is it not true in point of fact that you were asked to go with Mr. Watson to meet Mr. Truesdale in relation to this matter?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Mr. Truesdale to whom I have referred is president of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.?-A.

Yes, sir.

Mr. SIMPSON. That is all, Mr. President.

Redirect examination

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) I desire to ask the witness a question. You say you were asked to go to this conference with Truesdale?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Watson?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who asked you?—A. Mr. W. P. Boland called at my office and stated that Mr. Watson had asked him to ask me to go with Mr. Watson and Judge Archbald to present the case to Mr. Truesdale.

Q. Why did you not go?-A. I told him I would not go because I did not believe that Judge Archbald ought to be interested in that case in the light of what he told me that day as to the matter.

Q. What had he told you that day?

Mr. SIMPSON. I object. The objection, as you may see, sir, is that it is what Mr. Boland said that Mr. Watson had said, so that it might be carried to this witness. That is the question really, and the objection is it is double hearsay.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will request the manager to name the parties.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) What did Mr. Boland say?—A. Mr. W. P. Boland——

Mr. SIMPSON. Wait, please.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Wait.

Mr. SIMPSON. I object to what Mr. Boland said in the absence of Judge Archbald or something to connect Judge Archbald with it.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I should like to be heard in this connection.

In the examination in chief this witness was asked whether or not he had participated in an attempted settlement, and then on cross-examination respondent's counsel asked if he were not requested to attend that conference before Mr. Truesdale, and accompanying Mr. Watson at that conference, in an effort to settle these matters; and I was simply inquiring into that transaction, which was brought out by the respondent's attorney. I think, in view of the manner in which this matter has come out in the testimony, it is entirely proper that he should state the conversation referred to. It is a part of the reason why he did not go. I think it is competent as showing why this witness refused to go to that conference. That is our position.

Mr. SIMPSON. You will perceive, sir, the question which is now asked has no relevancy. He had been asked in chief whether or not he had taken any part in the conference, said "No." He was then asked on cross-examination who said "No." He was then asked on cross-examination whether he had not been asked to go, and he said he had. He was then asked what was said in relation to asking him to go, and as to that no objection was made. But he is now asked to give his reasons for not going. He may have ten or fifteen or a hundred reasons, or only one, and they may all be valuable to him and may not be valuable to anybody else. Judge Archbald can not be in the slightest degree affected by the reasons which operated upon this man's mind in determining that he would not go. He was only asked about the fact and he has answered the fact, and certainly he can not go beyond it to give reasons which could not have affected the parties in interest in this proceeding.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I shall not insist upon the question at

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there any further questions to be asked the witness?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. No further questions.
Mr. Manager CLAYTON. The witness may be discharged.

Mr. Manager CLATION. The withess may be discharged.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under his subpœna?
Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Yes, sir.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. We do not desire to have this witness discharged. It is very likely that when we come to take evidence, if that time ever arrives, we shall want to cross-examine

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Mr. Reynolds, have you been subpænaed by the respondent?

Mr. REYNOLDS. No, sir.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. In that case we would have to issue a subpœna and make some arrangement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. So far as the subpœna with which he has been served is concerned, the witness is discharged.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. Reynolds, you are not likely to go where you can not be reached?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Oh, no; I can come when reached by telegraph any time. I may go now?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes. Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, before the examination of the next witness is proceeded with I desire to say on behalf of the managers that we have consented that Miss Blackmore, a witness subpensed on behalf of the managers, may be finally discharged. We think we will not need her as a witness in this case. I desire to make this statement, so that the counsel for the other side may have her subpænaed if they desire her presence and testimony.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. We have no objection to her being discharged.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On that suggestion Miss Blackmore will be discharged.

TESTIMONY OF CHRISTOPHER G. BOLAND.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. The next witness we desire to call on the part of the managers is Mr. C. G. Boland.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will be summoned to appear.

Mr. C. G. Boland entered the Chamber and was conducted to the witness stand.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Give your name and address to the stenographer.

Mr. Boland, Christopher G. Boland, Scranton, Pa.

C. G. Boland, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Mr. Boland, please state your name and address.—A. Christopher G. Boland, Scranton, Pa.

Q. What is your occupation or business, Mr. Boland?-A. Insurance and real estate.

Q. Are you in any way interested in the banking business?-A. And banking; yes.

Q. At what point or location?—A. At Lackawanna, N. Y.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not you are interested in the Marian Coal Co.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is the Marian Coal Co. a corporation?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. In what business is it engaged?—A. In the business of winnowing coal from a culm dump or pile at Taylor, near Scranton, Pa.

Q. And who are some of the other stockholders in the Marian Coal Co.?—A. I do not know whether I can recite all their names to you.

Q. I do not care about all. You are one?-A. William P. Boland is the principal stockholder.

Q. Have you another brother also a stockholder?—A. James

M. Boland, of Wilkes-Barre.

Q. There are also other stockholders?-A. Other stockholders. Q. Who is president of the Marian Coal Co.?—A. At this time William P. Boland is president.

Q. Were you at any time during the existence of the corporation the president of the company?—A. From its organization, in 1904, until May, 1910, I was president.
Q. Since that time William P. Boland has been president of that coal company?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Boland, I will ask you to state briefly whether or not a suit was brought against the Marian Coal Co. by one John W. Peale, and if so, state about when that suit was brought.—A. A suit was brought by John W. Peale against the Marian Coal Co. I could not tell you now the exact date without refreshing my recollection.
Q. About when?—A. It was about 1909, I think; in the early part of 1909 and the latter part of 1908.

Q. Where was that suit brought—that is, in what court?—A. It was brought in the Federal court for the middle district of Pennsylvania at Scranton.
Q. Who was the judge of the court at the time the suit was brought?—A. Hon. R. W. Archbald.
Q. The respondent in this case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state what you know about a certain promissory note for $500 that was presented to you some time in 1909 for discount and bore Judge Archbald's name upon it. Tell it in your own way.—A. The note you mention was brought into my office in the Republican Building, at Scranton, Pa., some time, I believe, in the fall of 1909, by Edward J. Williams, who asked me to take the note and advance the cash upon it.

Q. Please describe the note, Mr. Boland.—A. As I remember the note, it was made by John Henry Jones and indorsed by Judge Archbald. I am not quite clear as to whether or not it was also indorsed by Mr. Williams.

Q. To whom was the note made payable, if you remember? A. I am not quite clear on that; possibly to Judge Archbald. I am not quite clear. It was made by John Henry Jones, I am

Q. It was indorsed by Judge Archbald?—A. It was indorsed by Judge Archbald.

Q. What was the amount of that note?—A. $500.

Q. Did you discount it?—A. No, sir.
Q. Was this suit of John W. Peale against the Marian Coal
Co. pending at that time?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Before the court——A. Yes, sir.
Q. Of which Judge Archbald was judge?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Why did you dealing to discount the note. Mr. Boland?

Q. Why did you decline to discount the note, Mr. Boland?

Mr. SIMPSON. I object, sir. The reasons which actuated the witness are a matter of no moment in this controversy.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The manager will please state the purpose of the question.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I will put the question in a different form. [To the witness:] What did Mr. Williams say about that note when he presented it to you for discount?

A. Mr. Williams, as I remember now, told me that he was joined with Mr. John Henry Jones and Judge Archbald in the acquirement of a large tract of land in Venezuela and they wanted this amount in order to enable Mr. Jones to go either to Venezuela or to London to complete the acquirement of the property, and he wanted me to advance the cash on the note.

Q. What did you say to Williams?—A. I remember very well telling him that under other circumstances I might advance the amount, but I felt it would be very improper under the circumstances existing at that time; that I was an officer of the Marian Coal Co. and had a suit before Judge Archbald, and I did not feel on that account that I could consider the matter

Q. Now, Mr. Boland, I desire to ask you about another transaction. I will ask you to state whether or not you employed one Mr. Watson, an attorney, G. F. Watson——A. George M.

Watson, I think it is.

Q. An attorney of Scranton to attempt to negotiate a settlement between the Marian Coal Co. and the Delaware, Lackament between the Marian Coal Co. and the Delaware of the Interest of Company of the Interest of the Interest of Company of the Interest of the Inte wanna & Western Railroad Co. pending in the Interstate Com-merce Commission, and also all differences between the railroad company and the Marian Coal Co., and, further, a transfer of the stock of the Marian Coal Co. to the railroad company? Yes; I made an arrangement with him to act for parties holding two-thirds of the stock of the Marian Coal Co. at the time.

Q. I will ask you to state in your own way that transaction, the circumstances leading up to it, and all about it.-A. Well, the circumstances leading up to it-

Q. I do not mean in any lengthy detail, but just the immediate circumstances?-A. It covered several years of difficulty in which the Marian Coal Co. or the majority stockholders were involved.

Q. Mr. Boland, will you pardon me? I do not want to go into a history of your affairs for years previously, but the circumstances leading immediately up to that transaction, and in a general way you might state about your litigation previously.—
A. At the time of employing Mr. Watson there was pending in the Federal court the case of John W. Peale against the Marian Coal Co., and there was also pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission here in Washington the case of the Marian Coal Co. against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. and a number of other railroads for discrimination in freight rates against the company. I might say that previous to employing Mr. Watson we feared an adverse decision against the Marian Coal Co. by the court from information obtained by my brother, William P. Boland. So Mr. Edward J. Williams called at my office one day and suggested that we could be gotten out of our difficulty and dispose of our interest if I saw Mr. Watson. He believed that Mr. Watson could dispose of our interest to an advantage and urged me to see him. I talked with William P. Boland, who, together with his own stock, had control or options on a majority of the stock of the Marian Coal Co., to see if he would be agreeable to my doing so. At first he was opposed to it, but after talking with his attorney, Mr. H. C. Reynolds, who just preceded me on the witness stand, he said I might go and see him and see what he would propose

Q. That is, to see whom?—A. See Mr. Watson. I accordingly called on Mr. Watson, who talked with me about the matter and several other matters in connection with the troubles we had. He told me he believed he could dispose of our interest. He wanted to know what we wanted for our interest, and I told him I would have to discuss that further with my brother, William P. Boland. So I went away, and later called on him again after talking with William P. Boland, who agreed that we ought to obtain $100,000 for our two-thirds interest in the Marian Coal Co. My brother wanted to know what Mr. Watson would charge us for his services, and I told him I would ascertain. I again talked with Mr. Watson. I told him the price which I felt we ought to have for our stock; that is, two-thirds of the stock, which amounted to $50,000; the entire stock at that time being $75,000, one-third of it being held by John W. Peale, of New York and Pennsylvania, who had this suit pending in the Federal court against the company. After talking with Mr. Watson he agreed to accept $5,000 for his fee, giving us $95,000 in the event of his selling the property. I remember a day or two after that, I think the day after that, being called over to Judge Archbald's office.

Q. Proceed.—A. Where I met Mr. Watson and Judge Archbald. After some discussion of the matter there the judge informed me that he was going to assist Mr. Watson in an effort to dispose of the property and to release us from the difficulty in which we were involved at the time, referring particularly to this Peale case, which was in his court-I think he was judge at that time-saying he would give it a good deal of consideration and saying it was a good case to settle out of

Q. You say "judge." What judge do you mean?-A. Judge Archbald. It was Judge Archbald's office in the Federal building to which I was called.

Q. How came you to go to Judge Archbald's office on that occasion?-A. Some one there called me on the telephone.

Q. Who was in the room when you got there?-A. Mr. Watson and Judge Archbald.

Q. When was that, as near as you can fix the time?-A. It was within a short time after I had arranged with Mr. Watson as to the price he could sell our interest for in the Marian Coal Co. and the fee he was to obtain.

Q. Now, fix the time as near as you can when it was that you arranged with Mr. Watson to make an effort to settle this matter for you .- A. You mean the month and year? Q. The month and year; yes .- A. It was in August, I believe,

Q. That is, you mean to state that Judge Archbald was judge of the middle district?-A. I mean 1911.

Q. I am asking you now what is your recollection about whether Judge Archbald was judge of the district court at that whether Judge Archadt was Judge of the district court at that time?—A. No; I am thinking of the time when this note was presented to me. He was judge of the court at that time, but this other transaction was in August, 1911, when, I believe, Judge Witmer was judge of the Federal court.

Q. What position did Judge Archbald hold?-A. Judge Archbald was judge of the Commerce Court.

Q. Just state all that occurred and was said in that conversation at Judge Archbald's office when he was present, between yourself, Judge Archbald, and Mr. Watson about the judge going to assist Mr. Watson in this settlement.—A. My recollection is that Mr. Watson recited the fact that he had spoken to the judge about the matter and that the judge had agreed to assist him. The judge stated to me that he would do what he could in the matter. But during the course of the talk a suggestion was made to me that there ought to be some paper furnished to Mr. Watson guaranteeing him, in the event of his disposing of the two-thirds interest or stock, that he would be paid this $5,000.

Q. Who made that suggestion to you?—A. I am not quite positive on that, but we all joined in the discussion, Judge Archbald, Mr. Watson, and myself. I informed both of them that as my brother controlled a majority interest of the stock to be disposed of, I had consulted him and he had agreed that this payment should be made, but if they thought a paper ought to be made reciting the agreement I would endeavor to obtain it, and it was agreed that I should do so. I went to my brother from the judge's office and told him what I had been asked to do, and he gave me a paper reciting that in the event of George M. Watson selling our two-thirds interest, or the two-thirds of the stock of the Marian Coal Co., the Marian Coal Co. would pay him, or the stockholders would pay him, $5,000.

Q. You procured that from your brother and delivered it to Mr. Watson?—A. I did.

Q. Now, did you retain a copy of that agreement or writing?—A. I have no copy with me. I believe it was presented to the Judiciary Committee.

Q. I will ask you to examine that paper, Mr. Boland [presenting paper]. The original of that was signed by whom?—A. (Examining.) By William P. Boland.

Q. The copy was not signed?-A. I do not think any copy

Mr. Manager FLOYD. This we offer as a copy, Mr. President, and we want it marked as an exhibit, and then ask to

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It has not been identified? Mr. SIMPSON. That is the copy. We have no question about it. Mr. Manager FLOYD. There will be no question about its identification.

The paper was handed to the Secretary, and marked "Exhibit

No. 32.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) I will ask you to examine this paper marked "Exhibit 32" and state whether or not that is a copy of the writing that was given to Mr. Watson?—A. (Examining paper.) Yes, sir.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we desire to offer this paper in evidence at this point and have it read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read it. The Secretary read as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 32.]

SCRANTON, PA., August 23, 1911.

C. G. BOLAND, Esq., Scranton, Pa. C. G. BOLAND, Esq., Scranton, Pa.

DEAR SIR: In reference to the matter of G. M. Watson being taken into the case of the Marian Coal Co. against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, would say in confirmation of what I told you heretofore, that if through the efforts of Mr. Watson a satisfactory settlement is brought about the Marian Coal Co. agrees to pay him $5,000 for such settlement.

Of course Mr. H. C. Reynolds has been in this case from the beginning and will be attorney in it until its final settlement.

Very truly, yours,

Marian Coal Co.

MARIAN COAL Co., President.

A. That was signed by William P. Boland as president, I believe.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) It has been introduced as evidence, and you testify it to be a true copy of it according to your best recollection?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I will ask you to state whether or not anything else was done or said by Judge Archbald at this interview, which you have described, when Mr. Watson and yourself were present in Judge Archbald's office.—A. I do not remember that. I do not know whether it was at that or a subsequent call at Judge Archbald's office the judge called on the telephone to the Scranton office of Mr. E. E. Loomis, who was the vice president of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., to arrange an interview with him in reference to this matter.

Q. Now, to refresh your memory, was it the conference you have been detailing or was it a subsequent conference?—A. I am not positive as to that. Q. Anyhow, you testify that he did, either on that occasion or on some subsequent occasion, call for Mr. Loomis?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or called up his office on the telephone with a view of arranging an interview?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Watson also present at the time when the judge called up Loomis?—A. I believe so. I am inclined to believe it was that time when I was called from my office over to the judge's office. Some one suggested that Mr. Loomis was in Scranton on that day, and it was considered advisable to reach him and arrange a conference with him.

Q. What was your understanding as to whether he did reach Mr. Loomis and call him on the phone?—A. He did not reach him. They reported, as I understood and as I remember now, the judge said he was not at his office at the time.

Q. You state, Mr. Boland, that in that conversation Mr. Watson informed you that Judge Archbald had agreed to assist him in the settlement, and that Judge Archbald stated that he had agreed to assist him and do all he could to assist him in the matter?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had agreed to pay Watson $5,000 in the event he secured that settlement, had you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, was there anything said in that conversation, either by Mr. Watson or Judge Archbald, as to what interest Judge Archbald had in making that settlement or the reason he was taking part in making that settlement, or in an effort to make that settlement?—A. No, sir; not to my recollection.

Q. You knew that you agreed to pay Watson a money consideration of $5,000?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Judge Archbald agreed to assist him in the negotiation of that settlement in your presence?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And no explanation was made about why he was doing it, the motive that prompted him, or the consideration that moved him?-A. Not at that time.

Was there at any other time?-A. Yes; by-

Mr. SIMPSON. One moment, please.

Mr. Manager FLOYD (to the witness). Well, when Judge

Archbald was present?—A. No, sir.

Q. Now, I want to ask you to state whether or not, in pursuance of that agreement, any efforts were made on the part of Mr. Watson or Judge Archbald or both of them to negotiate a settlement with the people of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. About what length of time did those negotiations continue?-A. From this time in August, the date of which I fixed by that letter, up until some time in October, I think, when this interview or conference occurred between Mr. Watson and the officials of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.

Q. And that was about what date?-A. I think that was in October; I am not positive; but I remember on the day of the conference Mr. Watson sent a telegram to Judge Archbald here at Washington. If I had that record, I could state about what

Q. I will refresh your memory.—A. I think it was in October.
Q. Just wait a moment, Mr. Boland, and I will refresh your memory. [Handing paper to witness.] Examine that telegram, Mr. Boland, and see whether that is the telegram referred to.

The Witness (after examining). Yes, sir.

In whose handwriting is that telegram?—A. In Mr. George Watson's handwriting.

Q. Were you present when he wrote it?-A. I was.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we desire to have that paper marked as an exhibit and read in evidence at this point. The WITNESS. It is dated October 6. So that was about the time the negotiations ended.

The Secretary read the paper, which was marked "Exhibit 33," as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 33.]

THE WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH Co., October 6, 1911.

To Hon. R. W. Archbalb, Judge Court of Commerce, Washington, D. C.: Wire me East Stroudsburg what time to-morrow I can meet you in G. M. WATSON.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) That telegram, you say, was sent on the day or about the time of the conference with Truesdale, Loomis, and others?-A. Yes, sir.

And that was sent by Mr. Watson to Judge Archbald?-

Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state, if you know of your own knowledge, of any part that Judge Archbald took to bring about or to further those negotiations other than what you have testified to up to this point in your testimony?-A. I have only the information-

Q. I am asking you of your own knowledge.-A. I do not recall any information of my own knowledge; but we consulted after that interview with Mr. Watson, my brother probably holding more interviews with him than myself.

Q. Well, did you understand that the judge was assisting Mr. Watson in these negotiations, from any information you had?—A. I did.

Q. Did you see any letters that he had written in connection with the matter in any way?—A. I do not remember now having seen any letters to Mr. Watson.

Q. Did you have any conference with the railroad company; that is, with any of the officers or agents of the Delaware, Lackawanna, and Western Railroad Co., during the pendency of these negotiations—that is, from the time in August when they were instituted up to the 5th or 6th of October?-A. Yes,

Mr. SIMPSON. One moment, please. I object, if the court please.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I am just asking the witness whether

Mr. SIMPSON. Yes; but he went on. That is the reason I interrupted him. The question was quite proper. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will answer the question, but should not proceed further.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) During the time you had the conferences with him?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I will ask you to state if, in any of these conferences with the railroad people, you were shown any letters that had been written by Judge Archbald concerning this negotiation?-A. No, sir; not to my recollection.

Q. Did you understand that this negotiation was attempted to be brought about by Mr. Watson assisted by Judge Archbald? Mr. SIMPSON. I object, unless it is shown that Judge Archbald was a party in some way to that understanding. One can not tell from whom this gentleman gets his understanding.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President-

Mr. SIMPSON. If you will excuse me, Mr. Manager Floyd, if you will state that the witness got his understanding from anything that was said by Judge Archbald, or in his presence, of course the question will be wholly unobjectionable.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we can not agree with counsel for the respondent on that proposition. We have shown by the testimony of this witness that he employed, for a consideration of $5,000, Mr. Watson to bring about a settlement of the disputes, or certain disputes, between the Marian Coal Co. and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. He has further testified that within a very short time thereafter a day or two—he was called to the office of Judge Archbald; that he there met Mr. Watson and Judge Archbald; and that Mr. Watson, the man whom he had employed to negotiate this settlement, or to attempt to negotiate this settlement, stated to him that Judge Archbald had agreed to assist him in bringing about the settlement in the presence of Judge Archbald; and that Judge Archbald agreed to assist him, and stated that he would do all he could to assist him.

The witness has further testified that either on that occasion, or on some subsequent occasion, Judge Archbald called up the office of Mr. Loomis, the vice president of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., in an effort to get in touch with him to confer with him about this particular matter. therefore, it is perfectly competent, having laid that basis, to ask this witness whether or not he understood that Judge Archbald was continuing his efforts to bring about this negotiation or whether he dropped out of the transaction altogether, and what was his understanding about it. It seems to me that it is entirely competent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks that counsel has proved the fact of the statement being made in the presence of Judge Archbald, and the presumption of law would continue unless proof were offered to the contrary. The Chair does not see what counsel would have to gain by making further proof of the fact.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Very well, Mr. President, we shall not insist upon the question upon that ruling of the Chair. I desire to say that I fully agree with the law as indicated by the Chair, and do not wish to press that particular question further.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Now, Mr. Boland, I will ask you to state whether or not during the course of these negotiations you had any conversations with Mr. Watson relative to Judge Archbald's interest or participation in this settlement, and particularly as to whether he was to share in the fee or receive any money or other pecuniary consideration for his services in attempting to make that settlement?

Mr. SIMPSON. We object, unless it is intended to prove either that the conversations referred to took place in the presence of Judge Archbald or that they were in some way indicated to him and not dissented from by him.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Upon that proposition, Mr. President, we desire to be heard. I will state that we regard that question as a very material one in this case. We shall therefore ask the indulgence of the Senate to present our views of the law quite fully upon that proposition at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Before the argument proceeds, the Chair will ask that the stenographer be permitted to read the question so that it will be clearly presented.

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager Floyd.) Now, Mr. Boland, I will ask you to state whether or not during the course of these negotiations you had any conversations with Mr. Watson relative to Judge Archbald's interest or participation in this settlement and particularly as to whether he was to share in the fee or receive any money or other pecuniary consideration for his services in attempting to make that settlement?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we think that we are entitled to prove, under the circumstances, conversations of and declarations made by Mr. Watson. If that question had been answered, it would have been followed by another question, "What were those conversations?" or "What was said in those But this raises the question, and I suppose that counsel for the respondent will not be technical about that. What we are insisting upon is the right to prove conversations and declarations made by Mr. Watson during the course of these negotiations concerning Judge Archbald's relation to that trans-

In support of that proposition we submit that there are three principles of law under which, according to our view of the law, that character of testimony is admissible in this case. In the first place, under article 2 Judge Archbald is charged with an unlawful act in assisting one George M. Watson to make a settlement for a consideration. If Judge Archbald's act is unlawful, then the act of the man who assisted him in the performance of that act is unlawful; and on the ground of criminal conspiracy we think declarations made by Watson concerning the transaction would be admissible.

We insist, further, that under the simple rules of contract, whether there is any conspiracy or not, this evidence is admissible, for the question of inquiry is as to certain negotiations had in an attempt to make a settlement of the affairs of the Marian Coal Co. with the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. It is in proof here that Judge Archbald agreed to assist the attorney to do all he could to aid him in making that settlement and associated himself with him. I know of no different rule for a contract to do one particular thing than contract to engage in business or a contract to do various When two or more persons enter into an agreement to carry into effect a common design, the same rules and principles of law apply, as I understand, whether it is to carry on a business or to do some particular thing. In this instance the agreement was to do, or to undertake to do, a particular thing, namely, to bring about an adjustment or a settlement between the Marian Coal Co. and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.—a settlement of their differences over certain lawsuits and over certain property.

The third principle upon which we think this character of evidence is admissible is that it is a part of the res gestæ, a part of the transaction itself. In inquiring into this settlement and into the various steps that were taken by those concerned in an effort to bring it about we contend that it is perfectly competent to prove what the participants in that settlement did and said when we have once established the fact that Judge Archbald entered into an agreement to assist Mr. Watson or to participate in that settlement; it becomes entirely immaterial, under our view of the law, whether Judge Archbald was present or whether Judge Archbald was not present when these declarations were made by Watson, his associate and partner.

Under the testimony already established, it is shown that Judge Archbald was present at a conference at which Mr. C. G. Boland, the witness on the stand, and one Mr. Watson were present, and that he undertook or agreed or stated that he had agreed to assist Mr. Watson in this settlement; and we will show by incontrovertible testimony that will be introduced later in this case that Judge Archbald did attempt to assist Mr. Watson in negotiating that settlement; that he continued his activity throughout the entire period of these negotiations almost up to the day of the final conference. We will show by letters and by witnesses who were officers of the railroad company that Judge Archbald sought and obtained personal interviews with railroad officials and wrote them various letters concerning the proposed settlement.

I say that, in addition to what we have already shown, we will produce witnesses to prove those facts, which will be a further basis for the admissibility of this evidence.

As to the law, I read from Greenleaf on Evidence:

As to the law, I read from Greenleaf on Evidence:

Declarations of conspirators: The same principles apply to the acts and declarations of one of a company of conspirators in regard to the common design as affecting his fellows. Here a foundation must first be laid by proof sufficient in the opinion of the judge to establish prima facie the fact of conspiracy between the parties, or proper to be laid before the jury as tending to establish such fact. The connection of the individuals in the unlawful enterprise being thus shown, every act and declaration of each member of the confederacy, in purusance of the original concerted plan and with reference to the common object, is, in contemplation of law, the act and declaration of them all, and is therefore original evidence against each of them. (Greenleaf on Evidence, 14th Ed., Vol. I, pp. 149, 150.)

Now, in regard to declarations of congrinors. I read from the

Now, in regard to declarations of copartners, I read from the same work as follows:

Declarations of partners: This doctrine extends to all cases of partnership. Wherever any number of persons associate themselves in the joint prosecution of a common enterprise or design, conferring on the collective body the attribute of individuality by mutual compact, as commercial partnerships and similar cases, the act or declaration of each member, in furtherance of the common object of the association, is the act of all. (Greenleaf on Evidence, 14th Ed., Vol. I, p. 151.)

In Roscoe's Criminal Evidence, volume 1, sections 429-430, the same doctrine is enunciated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would like for the manager to read from the authority just cited.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Very well, I will read. In volume 1, Roscoe's Criminal Evidence, page 570, eighteenth edition, we find the following:

Proof of the existence of conspiracy in general: It is a question of some difficulty how far it is competent for the prosecutor to show, in the first instance, the existence of a conspiracy amongst other persons than the defendants without showing at the same time the knowledge or concurrence of the defendants, but leaving that part of the case to be subsequently proved. The rule laid down by Mr. East is as follows: "The conspiracy or agreement among several to act in concert for a particular end must be established by proof before any evidence can be given of the acts of any person not in the presence of the prisoner; and this must, generally speaking, be done by evidence of the party's own act and can not be collected from the acts of others independent of his own, as by express evidence of the fact of a previous conspiracy together or of a concurrent knowledge and approbation of each other's acts." (1 East, P. C., 96.) But it is observed by Mr. Starkle that in some peculiar instances, in which it would be difficult to establish the defendant's privity without first proving the existence of a conspiracy, a deviation has been made from the general rule, and evidence of the acts and conduct of others has been admitted to prove the existence of a conspiracy previous to the proof of the defendant's privity.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the manager will pardon the Chair, the point upon which the argument is desired would be as to the right to prove the sayings of one party connected with the transaction as against the other. Mr. Manager FLOYD, Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. And the Chair would say that, so far as the present view of the Chair is concerned, the circumstances here would hardly justify its being brought within the rule of conspiracy. Whether or not it is within the rule of partnership is another question.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I will submit authorities upon that point a little later.

In the case of Wiborg and others v. The United States (163 U. S., p. 632) we find a decision which we think in point upon this question. I will state the case briefly.

On an indictment for violating the neutrality laws v. the captain and mates of the steamer Horsa. Held that declarations of the men taken on board as members of a filibustering expedition that they were going to Cuba to fight Spaniards, though made in the absence of defendants, are admissible.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the manager will pardon the Chair, the Chair will state that if the manager can establish the fact that there was a pecuniary interest of Judge Archbald in this matter, then, in the opinion of the Chair, the testimony would be admissible—if the manager can point to evidence which shows that Judge Archbald had a pecuniary interest in this fee.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. That is one of the purposes of this very evidence, namely, to show that fact in connection with other facts and circumstances. The managers will have no difficulty whatever in establishing the fact of Judge Archbald's connection and participation and activity in an effort to bring about this settlement from the beginning of the contract he had with Mr. Watson up to the final conclusion, when the proposition was turned down by Mr. Truesdale, the president of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.; and we have proven, as we understand, that he entered into an agreement with Mr. Watson, and Mr. Watson, according to the undisputed evidence, was to receive a pecuniary consideration for his services

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the manager will point to the testimony where a pecuniary or valuable interest is shown, it will then be competent by this testimony to show the extent of that interest.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Perhaps, Mr. President, the Chair misunderstood my statement. My statement was to the effect that it was in proof that if Mr. Watson undertook to secure this settlement on a basis of $100,000, and if he succeeded then Mr. Watson was to receive a pecuniary consideration of $5,000 for his services.

It is further in proof that immediately following that agreement on the part of the Bolands with Mr. Watson, Mr. C. G. Boland is called to Judge Archbald's office and there, in the presence of the judge, Mr. Watson states to Mr. Boland, his client, for the specific purpose, that Judge Archbald has agreed to assist him in bringing about the negotiation of a settlement of the matters in dispute between the Marian Coal Co. and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.; and it is in proof that Judge Archbald stated to Mr. Boland that he had agreed with Mr. Watson to assist him and that he would do all he could to bring about the settlement.

It is further in proof that on the suggestion of some one of those three men the question of a written contract was discussed as to whether or not Mr. Watson ought not to have some writing to guarantee the payment of this $5,000 in the event he should be successful in bringing about the negotiation.

It is further in proof that, in keeping with that suggestion, whether it was made by Mr. Watson or Judge Archbald, it was made in Judge Archbald's presence, a written agreement or guaranty was prepared and signed by W. P. Boland, president of the Marian Coal Co., and delivered to Mr. Watson.

Now, Judge Archbald did not explain in that conference, according to the testimony, what his interest was. He had made an agreement to assist an attorney who was undertaking to bring about a negotiation for a fee. Now, we insist, under those circumstances, that we ought to be permitted to prove the celarations of Mr. Watson—to show what interest Judge Archfald had in the contract and whether or not he was to share in the fee.

We have some authorities here bearing on the question of the admissibility of such declarations. Mr. President, in the case of Nudd and others v. Burrows (91 U. S., 438), this principle is discussed. I am reading from page 438, Ninety-first United States, Otto:

States, Otto:

In general, the rules of evidence are the same in civil and criminal cases. (U. S. v. Gooding, 12 Wheat., 469.)

Where two or more persons are associated for the same illegal purpose, any act or declaration of one of the parties in reference to the common object and forming a part of the res gestæ, may be given in evidence. (American Fur Co. v. United States, 2 Pet., 365.)

The bill of exceptions does not purport to give all the evidence. What proof had been given of the alleged concert and conspiracy on the part of the defendants when the declarations of Emmons were offered to be proved does not appear.

It is to be presumed it was sufficient to lay the proper foundation as to them for the introduction of the evidence. The declarations were competent to prove the whole case as against Emmons.

In that case it was contended by counsel that these declarations were not admissible unless the defendants were present, and as I understand the contention on the part of the attorneys for the respondent it is that these declarations are not admissible because the respondent was not present. To each and all of the questions asked with this view the counsel for the defendants objected "on the ground that they called for the declarations of Emmons not made in the presence of either of the defendants or brought to their knowledge."

Was this ground of objection well taken?

And the court holds that it was not in that case.

As a further authority we desire to submit the case of Clune v. the United States (159 U. S., p. 590). This was an indictment against Clune and others for conspiracy to obstruct the passage of the mail. Held, that telegrams from third parties and declarations of certain parties not parties to the record in carrying on or attempting to carry into effect the conspiracy were admissible against the defendants.

Beginning at page 592, near the bottom, are quoted the telegrams from other parties entirely disconnected with defendants, and then the court says:

Although all the evidence does not appear to have been preserved in this bill of exceptions, enough is disclosed to show that the Government was seeking to establish a conspiracy by circumstantial testimony, and telegrams of this character, if identified and brought home to the defendants, were obviously circumstances tending to show such conspiracy. It is familiar law that where a case rests upon that character of evidence much discretion is left to the trial court, and its ruling will be sustained if the testimony which is admitted tends even remotely to establish the ultimate fact.

Another series of objections is to the admission of the declarations and acts of parties other than the defendants, to wit, Gallagher and Buchanan, on the ground that they were not parties to the record. The indictment charged the defendants with conspiring and combining together and with other persons. Now, if Gallagher and Buchanan were conspirators with defendants, evidence of their acts and declarations in carrying or attempting to carry into effect the conspiracy was competent, and we must assume, in the silence of the record, that it was shown that they were engaged in the conspiracy and that their acts and declarations were in execution thereof.

In the case of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. v. Hillmon (188 U. S. Repts., p. 208) we have the same principle discussed in a life insurance case. In that case the policy was a policy upon the life of Hillmon. Suit to recover was instituted by his wife and beneficiary, who was not alleged or shown to have been a party to the conspiracy to defraud the company. The defense by the insurance company was conspiracy to defraud by pretense of death and substitution of body between Hillmon and the insured.

Baldwin, Brown, and others made declarations. held that the declarations of Baldwin, Brown, and these other witnesses that testified to declarations concerning transactions with Hillmon were admissible, although it was not charged that Mrs. Hillmon, the party to the suit, was present or that such declarations were ever brought to her attention or knowledge.

The court says, at page 215:

The court says, at page 215:

Several assignments are based upon the exclusion of the testimony of the witnesses Phillips, Blythe, Crew, and Carr as to acts performed and declarations made by the alleged coconspirators John W. Hillmon John H. Brown, and Levi Baldwin after evidence had been introduced establishing such conspiracy. That considerable evidence of a conspiracy between these three parties had been introduced, and at a very considerable length is not denied, and the main objection to the introduction of the acts and declarations of the above witnesses was based upon the ground that the plaintiff, the wife of Hillmon, was not alleged to have been a party to such conspiracy.

The proposed testimony of Phillips, who was a physician, and had been called professionally by Baldwin to his house in the summer or fall of 1878, related to certain inquiries made by Baldwin as to the effect of death upon bodies. In this connection defendant offered to prove that Baldwin asked the witness if he had any insurance upon his life, and said he had been thinking about taking out some himself, and in the same conversation asked Phillips how long a dead body would decompose after it was buried. He further asked if it "would not be a good scheme to get a good insurance on your life and go down South and get the body of some Greaser and pawn it off as your body and get the money."

Now, the testimony regarding the declarations of other witnesses was along a similar line. The plaintiff, the wife of Hillmon, was not charged to be connected with this conspiracy in any way; but this testimony was admitted in evidence as a part of the transactions and declarations of conspirators to show that Hillmon and these parties were in the fraud.

Now, one more authority, Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state to the manager that there is no question at all about the correctness of the rule for which he is reading authorities, as to cases where there is a conspiracy shown or where there is a partnership shown. The only question in the mind of the Chair is whether or not the foundation has been laid by this evidence as to whether or not Judge Archbald had a material interest in the fee. So the manager will please confine his argument to that. There is no question about the rule of law.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, at the present stage of the evidence, in so far as the question of the conspiracy is concerned, I believe I have said about all I wish to say on that I have recited the facts and circumstances in detail. But in regard to the common agreement, I contend that where two men undertake a common purpose, whether it be to go into a mercantile business or a mining business or to settle a law-suit, when we have established that they have undertaken to work together for a common purpose, to bring about a common design, a common result, that then these rules apply and the evidence of one is admissible against the other throughout the entire transaction; that by an agreement to undertake a common design they become partners. And I can see no distinction between being partners in compromising a lawsuit and partners in bringing about any other particular purpose.

So we think the testimony offered is clearly admissible upon that principle, and we believe we have established sufficiently the basis for its introduction when we have shown that Judge Archbald agreed to assist Mr. Watson and that they did undertake to bring about this settlement, and that they worked together in an effort to bring about such settlement, to admit the testimony on that ground; and if the Chair does not think we

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has not said

Mr. Manager FLOYD. It is in regard to the other point I am speaking; if the Chair does not think that a sufficient basis has been laid to admit this testimony upon the ground of conspiracy, and if the Chair should so hold, we wish to serve notice now that at a latter stage, when we have gotten all our testimony in, we will ask to repeat the question to the witness.

But upon the other proposition, and on the ground that it is a part of the res gestae, the settlement in question, we think the testimony offered is clearly admissible, entirely regardless of the fact whether there is any criminal act on the part of Judge Archbald or anyone connected with it; and these authorities which we have submitted, in our judgment, bear out that contention.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, you were quite accurate in saying there can not be any controversy on the law either of conspiracy or of partnership, but that the acts or doings of one conspirator or one partner are binding on all of them, or at least may be offered in evidence against all of them. But there is at the root of that the primary thing that you must first establish, either the conspiracy in the one case or the partnership in the other.

The basis upon which the allegation is made here that there is either a conspiracy or a partnership is simply that at an interview at which Mr. Boland was present in Judge Archbald's office, Judge Archbald said, or somebody else said and Judge Archbald assented to it, that he would assist Mr. Watson in obtaining a settlement, for the benefit of the Bolands, of the litigation which they then had pending. That litigation, you will remember, sir, was not, either branch of it, in any court with which Judge Archbald was in any way connected, and I know of no principle of law, nor have the managers called attention to any principle of law, that would prohibit Judge Archbald or judge anybody else, any more than it would prevent you or me, from saying "We will agree," if you choose, or "We will assist in bringing about a much-desired settlement of pending litigation." There is nothing unlawful in such There is nothing unlawful in such a thing. There is in it nothing that can be said to be detrimental to any man's character.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Counsel will pardon the That would be a Chair, but that is not now the question. question for argument to the Senate-as to the effect of it.

Mr. SIMPSON. Of course, but there has to be brought out something to show a partnership, if you choose, or a conspiracy, if you choose, in relation to the thing in regard to which the question is asked.

You will remember, sir, that the question here is not whether Judge Archbald did in fact assist in bringing about the settlement; whether he saw Smith, Jones, Brown, or Robinson in regard to it; whether he spoke to Smith, Brown, Jones, or Robinson or wrote them in regard to it, but the question here is whether Mr. Watson said to this witness, in the presence of Judge Archbald, that Judge Archbald was to receive a portion of the consideration for bringing this settlement to pass. That is the very question which is here asked and which is objected to.

Now, if that question were to be followed up by some evidence that would tend to show that to Judge Archbald's attention this matter was called, quite another question would arise: but there is no attempt to show that here and no pretense of it.

It is said by Mr. Manager Floyd that they may ask this question in the future, after they have introduced some other proof. I think it is quite sufficient for our purposes to say that we need worry over that if the time arises. But unless there can be found here in the evidence already in something from which there can be found fairly as a conclusion of fact that Judge Archbald was to receive some portion of this consideration this question can not be asked. Otherwise you are in precisely the situation as if you asked this witness to state whether or not Watson did not say he was to receive some part of the consideration for the purpose of showing that he was, in fact, to receive it and not as a concomitant thing growing, in fact, out of that which precedes; and you are in precisely the situation which Mr. Manager Floyd might have read from section 111 of Greenleaf if he had read a little further in regard to it, where this is said. I will have to read two sentences in order to get the matter squarely before the court:

Sometimes, for the sake of convenience, the acts or declarations of one are admitted in evidence before sufficient proof is given of the conspiracy, the prosecutor undertaking to furnish such proof in a subsequent stage of the cause. But this rests in the discretion of the judge and is not permitted, except under particular and urgent circumstances, lest the jury should be misled to infer the fact itself of the conspiracy from the declarations of strangers.

That is exactly what this question undertakes to do. undertakes to prove to the Senate that Judge Archbald was to get a portion of this $5,000 because Watson said he was to get a portion of it, and thereby prove that there was a conspiracy and the fact both, and that, I submit, sir, he can not do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is not free from doubt, but the Chair is of the opinion that proof that Judge Archbald was assisting counsel is not proof that he had an interest in what was to be the reward for that service. Whenever that proof is made, then the evidence undoubtedly would be admissible; but until it is so made, in the opinion of the Chair, it is not admissible.

Mr. Manager STERLING. If I may, I want to make just one brief suggestion with reference to that.

While we believe and the proof already in and the proof to come in will satisfy the Senate that Judge Archbald was to share in the fee, yet I do not understand that it is necessary, that Judge Archbald should share in the fee in order to be guilty of the offense charged to this count. If it was an offense on the part of Judge Archbald to engage in this class of undertaking, to sell this property, and to make this settle-ment with a view of himself getting some consideration for it, it was just as much an offense for him to engage in it with a view of helping a friend to get some compensation for it.

Our position is this: That a judge on the bench has no more right to do improper things or to engage in improper transactions for the assistance of a friend or of a partner than he has for the assistance of himself; and if he did this with a view of assisting his friend Watson, or if you desire to call him a partner, his partner Watson, with a view of helping him to get a consideration for his work, he has committed the offense charged in this article.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That does not relate to the question of the admissibility of the evidence here. That would be a question for argument, which is legitimate argument, the Chair recognizes.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. It is hardly necessary for us to say, since the manager on the part of the House has undertaken to anticipate what will come at the end of the evidence, that we do not agree with his proposition of law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hopes counsel and the managers will postpone argument on this question until the time comes to present it in argument. The managers will produce their next witness.
Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Just a moment, please. Mr.

Boland, will you state any other fact in regard to this proposed settlement that you know? You are not allowed to answer the question that I asked you some time ago about the conversation, but were you present at the final conference of Mr. Watson with the officers of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.?-A. No, sir.

Q. You were not present?—A. No, sir.
Q. Did you know what was the proposition submitted at that time, of your own knowledge?—A. Of my own knowledge, no; only as Mr. Watson informed me and as I was subsequently informed by officials of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.

Q. You were not present at that conference, and of your own knowledge you do not know just what the proposition was that he submitted to them-I mean the amount?-A. I was not present at the conference. He told me the amount he submitted as the consideration.

Q. Did you receive at any time during this negotiation or after the negotiations were closed from Judge Archbald any letter in regard to this settlement?-A. At the former hearing I had forgotten about that circumstance, but I have reason to believe that I did receive a letter from Judge Archbald, a copy of which was presented to me in the hearing before the Judiciary Committee.

Q. I will ask you to examine that copy [presenting paper], Mr. Boland?-A. (Examining.) That is a copy of the letter undoubtedly.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we desire to have this marked as an exhibit at this point and read in evidence.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be marked and read. The Secretary read as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 34.]

SCRANTON, Pa., November 13, 1912. C. G. BOLAND, Esq., Scranton, Pa.

C. G. BOLAND, Esq., Scranton, Pa.

My DEAR CHRISTY: I had an interview with our friend this afternoon, and I regret to say that I did not succeed in doing anything. I tried to get him to make a counter proposition to the one which had been submitted upon your side. But he seemed to feel that the amount which he would be willing to offer was so inconsiderable that it was hardly worth the while. I regret to report this as the final outcome of the efforts at settlement which have been made, but I see nothing to be attained any further here.

I return herewith the papers which you let me have.

Yours, very truly,

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) You state that you had forgotten that letter, but that afterwards your memory was refreshed?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not that letter was produced at the hearings before the Judiciary Committee by Judge Archbald or his counsel?-A. It was.

Q. And after it was produced and you examined it, then you remembered about receiving such a letter from Judge Archbald?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you the original letter?-A. I have not.

Q. The letter that has been read in evidence is a copy that was shown you?-A. A copy that was shown me, I believe, before the Judiciary Committee.

Q. And you remember now that you did receive such a let-

Q. What is the date of that letter?—A. It is dated November 13, 1911. That is the correct date, is it not?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. That is right.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) What settlement does he refer to or did you understand him to be referring to in that letter when he regretted that the adjustment or settlement could not be brought about?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. There is no question but that he referred to the investigation Mr. Watson was engaged in.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Do you have any knowledge about what the judge meant by this language:

I had an interview with our friend this afternoon, and I regret to say that I did not succeed in doing anything. I tried to get him to make a counter proposition to the one which had been submitted upon your side.

Did you have any knowledge or do you have any knowledge now or understanding of what that referred to?-A. My understanding is that it referred to the negotiations started by Mr. Watson for the sale of our stock in the Marian Coal Co.

Q. He says further down:

I regret to report this as the final outcome of the efforts at settlement which have been made, but I see nothing to be attained any further here.

Did you understand that that language also referred to these Watson negotiations?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I will ask you to state, Mr. Boland, whether or not you had any other negotiations with Judge Archbald about settling any other matter that that could have referred to?-A. No. sir.

Q. There was no other matter it could have referred to?-A. No, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state whether, after the failure of Watson to secure a settlement by his negotiations with the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., you did in person undertake to effect a settlement with the railroad people?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?-A. Following closely the failure of Mr. Watson to make a settlement.
Q. About what time, if you can remember?—A. In October or November, 1911. Q. Then, immediately following the termination of the negotiations on the part of Mr. Watson, you took the matter up?— A. Yes, sir.

Q. With whom?—A. I took the matter up with Mr. Reese A. Phillips, the superintendent of the coal-mining department of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.

Mr. SIMPSON. Do not state what was said, please.

answer the question.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I am not asking him as to what was

The Witness. Also with Mr. E. E. Loomis, the vice president of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., and at that time president of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Coal Co.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) I will ask you to state if you made any proposition to them and if they made any counter proposition to you. Just state what your proposition was and what theirs was.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, that is objected to, unless it is proposed to show that Judge Archbald was present at the time or it was subsequently brought to Judge Archbald's attention or shown that he authorized it in some way.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will ask that the question be read so that the matter may be brought out clearly.

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) I will ask you to state if you made any proposition to them and if they made any counter proposition to you. Just state what your proposition was and what theirs was.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the managers specify the parties? The question should be changed to that extent by inserting the names.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Did you, in conferring with the officers of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., namely, Mr. Phillips and Mr. Loomis, make a proposition of settlement to either of them and did they make a counter proposition to you? If so, state what the propositions were.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will inquire of the managers whether they propose to connect Judge Archbald with that?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, I will explain the purpose in asking this question. We expect to show that after Mr. Boland entered into an agreement with Mr. Watson to settle the disputes and differences between the Marian Coal Co. and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. for $100,000, for which he was to receive a fee of $5,000 if he succeeded, when he had arranged a conference with the officers of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. he submitted a proposition of settlement for $161,000.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Watson?
Mr. Manager FLOYD. Watson submitted a different proposition of settlement for $161,000, an entirely different amount, $61,000 in excess of the amount that the Bolands, representing the Marian Coal Co., had agreed to take; and afterwards Mr. Boland made a proposition of settlement and the railroad company made a counter proposition. We simply wanted to show what those propositions were. We think, when the evidence is all in, that this evidence is necessary to a proper understanding of this whole transaction. The Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment must determine from all the facts and circumstances in regard to the transaction whether or not there is any criminality in the acts of Judge Archbald. We insist that, under our view of the case, we expect to establish the connection of Judge Archbald with this first negotiation, the one that was carried on by Watson, by incontrovertible evidence, by his own letters written to railroad officials, and it is proper for us to ask the witness this question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Do the managers expect to onnect Judge Archbald with this particular matter in any way?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. With this particular proposition that was made, we do not. This was a proposition made by Mr.
Boland on his own responsibility after the negotiations in which Judge Archbald had participated had entirely failed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not the purpose, then, to hold Judge Archbald responsible?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Not to have way for this particular transaction.

When the particular transaction is the control of the Chair, and the chair and the chair, and the chair and the chair

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The testimony on the part of the managers might be admitted, in the opinion of the Chair, to complete their witness.

Mr. SIMPSON. But, sir, how can Judge Archbald be affected by a complete narration of any kind or character after admittedly his connection with the transaction has ended except by something the witness says was said in his presence?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair may be wrong, but he has ruled to admit it.

Mr. SIMPSON. If the Chair has ruled, of course, I can not argue the question further.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The decision of the Chair is always subject to the decision of the Senate. The Reporter will read the question.

The Reporter read as follows:

Did you, in conferring with the officers of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., namely, Mr. Phillips and Mr. Loomis, make a proposition of settlement to either of them, and did they make a counter proposition to you? If so, state what the propositions were.

The WITNESS. I might say yes; but I should like to be permitted to explain this, please, Mr. President. May I explain it? Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Just explain what the propositions were.-A. Yes.

Q. That is a part of the question.—A. Very well; but leading up to that-

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, I object. We object to leading up to it, since it has been stated that this evidence is not to be used against Judge Archbald at all, and the time of the Senate should not be taken up with what offers and counteroffers were made. It seems to me that it is doubly a waste of time to find out what led up to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will simply answer the question asked.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Just answer the question asked as to what proposition you made and what counterproposition they made. You need not explain what led up to it.—A. It was not wholly to make them a proposition as to the sale of the property I called on either or both of them. It is a part of my reason, and I would like to state it all.

Q. Mr. Boland, I have asked you what the proposition was that you made to these officials named, if you made any, and what counterproposition they made to you. Can you not answer those simple questions? That is all I am asking.—A In reference to Col. Phillips and my interview with him, I called upon him. His office is at Scranton, Pa. The office of Mr. Loomis is at New York, but he visits Scranton frequently. I first called on Col. Phillips and expressed my regret at the negotiations having fallen through.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the witness can answer briefly, the Chair will admit it simply as a part of the general narrative, in order that it might be connected up; but if he is proposing to go into a prolonged, detailed narrative, the Chair would feel compelled to hold that it is not admissible.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) We are not insisting upon the witness going into any detailed narrative. I will again ask the witness, Can you not state what the proposition was that you made to the railroad company and what was the counterproposition that they made to you without going into any details. about it? Was the proposition reduced to an amount?-A. remember stating to Col. Phillips, after discussing with him the previous negotiations had with Watson, that I believed—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness is not answering the question. Answer the question which the manager propounded to you.

The WITNESS. I then might say I made no proposition of the sale of the property to Col. Phillips, but suggested that I believed I could have my brother agree to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is out of the line of the question.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Then you did not make any proposition to Mr. Phillips?—A. I told him what I believed it could be had for by his company.

Q. Did you make any proposition to Mr. Loomis?-A. I asked Mr. Loomis what was the maximum amount they would be willing to give, and he said that it was so inconsiderable he did not care to mention it. That is as far as any negotiations for the sale went to me.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This is not on the line of the question which was submitted.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I realize that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair rules all that out. The Witness. Then I have to answer I was not authorized when I called on those two gentlemen to make any proposition.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness must stop. He was not asked that question.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. That is all to be asked this witness on the part of the managers now.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I send a question to the desk to be asked the witness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Florida asks that the following question be submitted to the witness, and it will be propounded by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

Did the Marian Coal Co. collect any damages in its suit against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railway Co.; and if so, how much?

The Wirness. They did not up to this time.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. The counsel for the respondent willtake the witness.

Cross-examination:

(By Mr. SIMPSON.) I understand, Mr. Boland, that you did not see Judge Archbald at all in relation to the $500-note transaction?—A. I did not.

Q. And you never told him what Mr. Williams had said to you in regard to it?—A. I did not.

Q. You never referred to the matter at all in any way in Judge Archbald's presence?—A. No, sir.

Q. And never heard anybody else ever refer to it in any way in Judge Archbald's presence?—A. No, sir.

Q. What was it you say Mr. Watson was employed to settle with the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.?— A. All of the differences that the Marian Coal Co. had with the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. and with Mr. -John W. Peale, of New York.

Q. That is to say, he was to undertake to settle the case of Peale against the Marian Coal Co. and the case of the Marian Coal Co. against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything else?—A. Well, that was enough. That was all.

Was there anything else?-A. There was nothing else. Q. Was there not included in that settlement the question of the sale of the washery of the Marian Coal Co. and the culm bank connected with that washery?—A. The question was as to the sale of the stock held, the two-thirds of the stock of the Marian Coal Co. That was what he was to do, to release those who held the majority interest of the Marian Coal Co. from any further connection with it.

Q. But you see you do not answer my question. Was it not in fact to effect a sale of the washery of the Marian Coal Co. Was it not and the culm bank which was being used in connection with that washery?-A. In effect, yes.

Q. How was that settlement to be carried into effect, so far as the Marian Coal Co. was concerned?—A. It was intended that the case of John W. Peale against the Marian Coal Co. would be adjusted in some way, and that by the sale of two-thirds of the stock of the Marian Coal Co. by Mr. Watson the case of the Marian Coal Co. against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. for excessive freight charges, which was pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission, should also be settled, and that it would carry with it in the settlement with Peale, who held one-third of the stock of the Marian Coal Co., the sale of the company, which carried with it the sale of the washery and the coal connected with the washery and the culm dump.

Q. Then it was not in fact a settlement of anything, but simply a purchase of stock; is that the idea?-A. That was the idea, but the purchase of stock necessarily would carry with it the purchase of the company and all that it owned.

Q. But how do you make that out? You were only to sell, you say, two-thirds of the stock. That left the remaining onethird of the stock standing in outside hands, did it not?-A. In the hands of John W. Peale.

Q. And, of course, Mr. Peale would have the same right to whatever recovery was had in the suit against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Rallroad Co. pending before the Inter-state Commerce Commission that he had before the sale was made, would he not?-A. If no settlement were made with him; yes.

Q. Was there any writing whatsoever showing what Mr. Watson was to do except this paper which you have produced to-day?-A. I do not know of any.

Q. Will you let me have that paper, please? [The paper was handed.] I notice that this paper of August 23, 1911, which you said was prepared by or for you, says:

In reference to the matter of G. M. Watson being taken into the case of the Marian Coal Co. against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, would say, in confirmation of what I told you heretofore, that if through the efforts of Mr. Watson a satisfactory settlement is brought about the Marian Coal Co. agrees to pay him $5,000 for such settlement,

You will observe there is nothing whatever said in this letter about these other matters. Have you any explanation as to how, when you dictated that letter, you omitted these other matters?—A. I might say that the whole matter was understood by the gentlemen who signed and made that paper. I do not think I dictated it. I think it was dictated and signed by William P. Boland.

Q. What was done with it after William P. Boland dictated and signed it?-A. The original was placed in the hands of Mr.

George M. Watson. Q. It must have gone through somebody to Mr. Watson,

How did it get to Mr. Watson?-A. I gave it to Mr. Watson, Q. This paper, I see, is directed to you?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it dictated in your presence?—A. I believe so.

Then you knew its contents?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then can you explain why these other matters to which you have adverted were left out of it?-A. It was fully understood by Mr. Watson.

Q. I am not asking you what Mr. Watson understood .- A. The paper was drawn on his suggestion, as I have already explained.

Q. But what I want to know is if you have any explanation why these other matters were left out of it?-A. Only this: That the paper was designed to secure Mr. Watson and his $5,000 fee, and it was deemed unnecessary to go into any long explanation on that account. He did not require it. He said that the paper was entirely satisfactory, and it was the paper that was handed me by William P. Boland to be given him to show in writing that he was to receive that fee.

Q. Do you not know that he testified he never got that -A. I do not.

- Q. Did you not hear him so testify?-A. No, sir; I was not here when he testified.
- Q. When was it, you say, that he said the paper was entirely satisfactory to him?—A. When it was presented to him by me. Q. When was that, relative to this date of August 23, 1911?

I presume it was on that date.

- Q. And where was it presented?—A. At Scranton, in his office at the Connell Building.
- Q. Who else were present, if anybody?-A. I do not recall that there was anyone present.

Q. Did you not testify before the Judiciary Committee-

Mr. Manager FLOYD. The page, please.

- Mr. SIMPSON. You will find it in two or three placespages 991, 992, and 1001.
- Mr. Manager FLOYD. When you read, just give the page. Mr. SIMPSON. The exact page I read from is page 901. I will read only one of them. There are three of them, all alike, substantially.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the witness a question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asks that the following question be propounded to the witness, and the Secretary will propound it.

The Secretary read as follows:

Did not the sale or disposition of the stock cover all the property of the Marian Coal Co. and everything connected with it?

The Witness. Yes. Mr. SIMPSON. As far as I can see, sir, that is a question

The WITNESS. Well, that is my understanding. I am not a lawyer, but I understand that the ownership of the stock of a corporation carries with it the ownership of all that the corporation owns.

- Q. (By Mr. SIMPSON.) So we all understand, but you were only selling two-thirds of the stock, were you not?—A. Twothirds; but it was understood by Mr. Watson he should also with Mr. Peale, who had a case pending against the Marian Coal Co., and held one-third of this stock.
- Q. I will not enter into any controversy with you about that, especially after the Chair's suggestion. I am going to read from page 1001. I am reading about one-fourth of the way
- Mr. WEBB. Can you fix the month it was that you and Watson and the judge had this conference with reference to the sale of the property? Mr. BOLAND. Either July or August, 1911.

That is the interview you spoke about, is it not, when you went to the judge's office?—A. The interview; yes. I have since fixed in my mind that it was in August, not in July.

O. No matter when it was, what I read to you is what was talked about at that interview, was it not?-A. I did not pay attention to what you read.

Q. I thought you would do so as a witness. Let me read it again :

Mr. Webb. Can you fix the month it was that you and Watson and the judge had this conference with reference to the sale of the property? Mr. Boland. Either July or August, 1911.

A. The sale of the-

Q. The sale of the property. That is what was talked about, was it not?—A. The sale of the stock is what I meant.

Q. Not the property?-A. That meant, of course, also the sale of the property, divesting us of our property rights in the company.

Q. I read the second question and answer immediately below that:

Mr. Webb. In that conference you spoke of selling this property through the influence of the judge and Mr. Watson and others to the Lackawanna Railroad Co.?
Mr. BOLAND. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you say the same thing as to that—when you said selling the property" you meant selling the stock?—A. I did; certainly.

Q. That is what you meant, was it? Did you not testify before the Judiciary Committee that Judge Archbald took hold of this matter to effect a settlement as a friend of yours?

Mr. Manager WEBB. On what page is that?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. On page 247.

Mr. SIMPSON. Not before the Judiciary Committee, but before Mr. Wrisley Brown. [To witness:] Is not that so?

The Witness. When I was called into his office on that day in August that was my belief.

Q. That the judge took hold of that matter as a friend of yours?-

ours?—A. Yes, sir. Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we have no objection to counsel repeating the question from the book and submitting it to the witness to to whether he testified to it or not; but we submit that it is hardly proper for the counsel to state what it was. If he is going to refer to the book and to previous testimony of the witness, I think, in fairness to us and to the witness also, he ought to read from the book.

Mr. SIMPSON. I think, sir, I might put it either way in cross-examining a witness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks the proper course is, if counsel is going to ask the witness as to his testimony, to call his attention specifically to it.

Mr. SIMPSON. But in order that Mr. Manager Floyd may have it upon the record if he wishes it there in the language of the witness

Mr. Manager FLOYD. From what page is counsel reading?

Mr. SIMPSON. At the bottom of page 247.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would think that the proper course is the one now going to be pursued by counsel; that if he is going to ask the witness as to his testimony, he should call his attention specifically to it and be as exact as practicable. Q. (By Mr. SIMPSON.) The question is, did he so swear; but as Mr. Manager Floyd wants the exact words, I have no objection at all to giving them:

Mr. Brown. Well, in your judgment did Judge Archbald have any legitimate incentive or reason to intervene in this matter?

C. G. Boland. Well. in my talk with him he told me that he would intervene in it as a friend of Mr. Watson and of my own.

Do you remember so stating?-A. I think that was not before the Judiciary Committee, but it was before Mr. Brown when he was at Scranton.

Q. The question is, do you remember so stating?-A. I suppose I did. Mr. Brown, as I understand it, has had some notes printed in this testimony which I was not wholly conversant with until I saw them printed in the book. I made, as I understand it, a signed statement to Mr. Brown. I do not know whether it is in the book or not. I have not read that book.

Q. But this statement that is in this book was in fact prepared by you, was it not?—A. No, sir. The notes were taken by a stenographer, and I signed a statement.

Mr. Manager WEBB. His name is not signed to this statement. Mr. SIMPSON. No; it is not signed to it. [To the witness:] Did you not testify to this before the Judiciary Committee:

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Did you make a statement to Mr. Wrisley Brown in Mr. BOLAND. I did.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. That was written out and signed?
Mr. BOLAND. He asked me to have it reduced to writing and I did,

A. Yes; it was taken by a stenographer who was there at the time that he was examining myself, and my recollection is that I signed the statement.

Q. But the question is, is it frue what you testified there, that Mr. Brown asked you to have it reduced to writing, and that you did it at his request?-A. That may be so. I am not positive now.

Q. You are not positive after this lapse of time? Do you remember appearing before the Judiciary Committee in this matter?-A. I do.

Q. Do you remember testifying as follows?—I am reading from page 143-

I have nothing to say that would impugn Judge Archbald's integrity in any way, excepting what has already been said about Mr. Williams presenting Judge Archbald's note to me to be discounted.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember also testifying as follows as found on page 1007:

Mr. Graham. If you have any reason to give other than you have given why you did not mention these things to the judge himself or make him aware of what Williams was saying, you might give it now. Mr. Bolam. I have no explanation to make of it, only that I felt probably Mr. Williams might have approached me without the authority or knowledge of Judge Archbald, notwithstanding his statement that he was authorized to do so, and I felt rejuctant to mention the matter to the judge. he was autho

Do you remember testifying to that before the Judiciary Committee?-A. I do.

Q. Do you remember also testifying thus before the Committee on the Judiciary, on page 977:

As stated before the Attorney General, I said that I might under other circumstances or conditions consider the proposition that he presented to me, but that I dld not feel warranted in doing so at that time, and so I refused to discount the note. Now, I do not think it is fair that I should recite the conversation between myself and Mr. Williams, because, in the light of recent events, I do not feel that it would be fair to reflect on any man by anything Mr. Williams might say at that time or any other time.

Do you remember so testifying before the Judiciary Committee?-A. I do.

Mr. Manager STERLING. Mr. President, I think we ought to object to pursuing this any further. This is not in contradiction of anything that this witness has said to the present time. He has not said anything that disptues the proposition which the counsel has read from the last four or five pages, and if it is to be pursued further we want to object.

Mr. SIMPSON. I think that would not apply, Mr. President, except, perhaps, to the last question which I read, and if the gentleman had objected it might have been ruled on or argued in due course.

Mr. Manager STERLING. None of them are contradicting the witness

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the rule, as the Chair understands, counsel will confine himself in cross-examination to matters as testified to by the witness on direct examination.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I want to state another reason why we think it is improper to pursue that as the counsel is now doing. We have undertaken to shorten the examination of these witnesses. Now, if the counsel is going into all the testimony that the witness has given before, necessarily it will protract the examination of the witness. We have undertaken to examine the witness only on matters that we think are admissible and material to the case.

Q. (By Mr. SIMPSON.) Mr. Boland, you testified that you were president of a bank in Lackawanna, N. Y., at the time these transactions were going on?-A. I did.

Q. Will you tell us whether Mr. Williams, at the time he brought the note to you, knew that you were president of that bank?—A. I do not know; I presume he did. Q. Did you not testify before the Judiciary Committee-I am now reading from page 977:

Mr. McCoy. The bank was not mentioned? Mr. Boland, No. Mr. Williams knew that I was president of the

A. If it be there, I testified to that fact or to my belief.
Q. Who was counsel for the Marian Coal Co. in the Peale case?—A. Do you mean on both sides? Well, the Marian Coal Co.'s counsel-

Q. Counsel for the Marian Coal Co.?-A. Their counsel was Frank E. Donnelly.

Q. Had Mr. Reynolds or Mr. Watson any connection with that case?-A. No.

Q. Who was counsel for the Marian Coal Co. in the suit before the Interstate Commerce Commission against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co.?-A. H. C. Reynolds. Q. Had Mr. Watson or Mr. Donnelly any connection with that case?-A. No. Q. Mr. Boland, do you know Clarence L. Woodruff?—A. It might be Clara L. Woodruff.

Q. No; Clarence L. Woodruff, attorney at law in Scranton?— A. Oh, C. L. Woodruff; yes, I am acquainted with Mr. Woodruff; he is my neighbor.

Q. He is your next-door neighbor on the same floor in the office building in Scranton, is he not?-A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember having a conversation with him about the 1st of November of this year in relation to this pending proceeding?—A. The 1st of November of this year?
Q. About that time.—A. Well, I had numerous conversations with him. Our offices adjoin.

Q. I am speaking about the 1st of November of this year and in relation to this particular proceeding .- A. Here before the Senate, you mean?

Q. Yes, sir; in relation to the proceeding pending before the Senate.—A. I do not recollect that we had any talk with particular reference to this proceeding or the contemplated

Q. Let me see if I can refresh your memory in any way in regard to it. Do you remember on or about the 1st of November of this year going to Mr. Woodruff and asking him to see Judge Archbald, and to state to Judge Archbald for you that if the suit of the Marian Coal Co. against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. was settled you would withdraw from the impeachment proceedings against Judge Archbald, and asking him to see Judge Archbald about it?-A. Well-

Q. That is easily answered-yes or no.-A. I say no; but that would appear ridiculous, would it not?

Q. You say you did not have such a conversation?-A. Not in those words, certainly.

Q. Well, in substance those words?—A. No; not in substance. Q. And did not he report to you after you had returned from a visit to New York what the result of his interview was?—A. I remember having some talk with Mr. Woodruff, but not in the way you put it.

Q. Nor in substance the way I put it?—A. Nor in substance the way you put it; no, sir.

Q. Do you remember at or about the same time asking Mr. Woodruff to see Maj. Warren and to say the same thing to him?-A. No. sir.

Q. Neither in words nor substance?—A. Neither in words nor substance. I might say, on the contrary, he wanted me to go and meet Maj. Warren in connection with the Marian Coal Co. troubles, and I refused to go. Q. You say "he." Whom Whom do you mean by "he"?-A. Mr.

Woodruff-Attorney Woodruff.

Q. You testified a while ago to a telegram which was sent by Mr. Watson to Judge Archbald in Washington on, I think, October 6, 1911. The paper which was shown to you was the original telegram, was it not?—A. I so understand it; yes. Q. And that original telegram, which is Exhibit No. 33, is in the handwriting of Mr. Watson, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you get that original telegram?—A. It was handed to me by Mr. Watson as I was leaving his office, with the instruction that I should forward it to Judge Archbald.

Q. Well, you did not forward that original telegram, did you?-A. No; I did not, certainly.

Q. Why did you keep that original telegram?-A. I did not

Q. What did you do with it?-A. I informed my brother when I went over to the office

Q. When you say your brother, you mean William P. Boland? A. William P. Boland—in reference to it. I might say that he was opposed to Mr. Watson proceeding any further in the matter of attempting to settle the matter of the Marian Coal Co. differences or the sale of its stock or property, and he suggested that he would take the telegram and send it; and I handed it to him, as I recollect.

Q. How did you get it back?—A. I did not get it back.

Q. You did not get this back from him?-A. I do not recall having seen it before until you presented it, unless I saw it at the Judiciary Committee hearings.

Q. Did you know that a photograph was made of this telegram?-A. I saw the photograph presented before the Judiciary Committee; yes, sir.

Q. Did you make any copy of the telegram?-A. No, sir; not that I remember; no, sir.

Q. Did you know that William P. Boland was going to make copy of the telegram and retain the original?—A. No, sir. Mr. SIMPSON. That is all, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there any further questions for the witness

Mr. Manager FLOYD. We desire to ask him a few questions.

Redirect examination:

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Now, Mr. Boland, the attorney for the respondent, as I understand, has questioned you concerning certain statements made before the Attorney General. Mr. Simpson read a statement that you made before the Attorney General. I will read the question and answer. read a portion of it; I want to read it all, and ask you about it. It is on page 143 of volume 1 of the proceedings before the Attorney General:

Attorney General:

The Attorney General. Mr. Boland (Mr. C. G. Boland), have you anything to add to this?

Mr. C. G. Bolant. Mr. Attorney General, the matter came on me as a great surprise yesterday when I was told in the afternoon that these papers were to be presented to the Attorney General's office. My instinctive feeling was that it was not the proper thing to do or the proper time. I want to add to what my brother said, that the most friendly relations exist between myself and Judge Archbald. I have nothing to say that would impugn Judge Archbald's integrity in any way, excepting what has already been said about Mr. Williams presenting Judge Archbald's note to me to be discounted; and, of course, in this case in which the Marian Coal Co. was involved, in which it has been known that my brothers and myself were interested as stockholders, it made me feel that it would be a most grievous indiscretion on my part to discount the note for the judge in whose court our case was pending. Under the circumstances."

Mr. WORTHINGTON. "Under other circumstances." Mr. Manager FLOYD. It is "under the circumstances."

The WITNESS. I had that corrected before the Judiciary

It was a mistake of the stenographer.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. As corrected it would read "under other circumstances," but I am reading it as it is. Correcting it, it would read "under other circumstances"—

Under other circumstances if the judge had asked for $500 from me he could have had it; but I refused to discount the note. Then the statement that Judge Archbald called me up to his office, where I found Mr. Watson, whom we talked about, and whom Mr. Williams told me could take this case away from the courts where it had been so long. The judge called me up, and I met Mr. Watson there, and I was asked if I had authority from my brother to agree to pay Mr. Watson $5,000 in the event of his settling the case for $100,000, and I told him I would have to speak to my brother, who was a majority stockholder. stockholder.

Was not that your full statement to the Attorney General?

A. Yes, sir; so far as it goes there, as I remember it.

Q. So you said in that statement that you had nothing to say that would impugn Judge Archbald's integrity in any way, excepting the things that were stated following ?- A. That is correct

Q. That is your statement before the Λttorney General?—Λ.

Yes, sir.

Q. And is that correct?-A. That is correct.

Q. You have already explained that you corrected the statement before the Judiciary Committee by inserting the words "under other circumstances" in reference to that $500 note?—A. Yes, sir. The stenographer got it "under the" when it should be "under other circumstances."

Q. So that I understand that you refused to discount the $500 note because you had a case pending in Judge Archbald's court, namely, the case of John W. Peale against the Marian Coal Co.?—A. That is correct.

Q. And that under other circumstances, on account of the friendly relations between yourself and Judge Archbald, you would have gladly discounted the note, or would have discounted it; is that your statement?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, I desire to propound a question to the witness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas submits a question, which will be read by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

Q. State fully any conversation you may have had with Mr. Woodruff about which counsel for the respondent have asked you.

The WITNESS, My recollection of the conversation with Mr. Woodruff, who is an attorney at law and was a classmate of President Taft, and whose office adjoins my own—or that of my brother, W. P. Boland, whose office adjoins mine—was in reference to an attempt made by a gentleman named Morgan Davis, jr., who during the past summer or fall took up the sale of the Marian Coal Co. stock or property with parties in New York, and who reported some time about the 1st of November or in October that he had failed in his negotiations. Mr. Woodruff was aware of the fact that he was negotiating for the disposition of the property, and in a conversation we had I informed him that Mr. Davis reported to me that the negotiations had fallen through. I might say Mr. Davis first stated that he represented a syndicate in New York, but afterwards he revealed to me the fact that he was dealing with Mr. Loomis, of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. He did not want my brother, William P. Boland, to know that. I expressed my regret to Mr. Woodruff, and he also appeared regretful, and suggested to me that if I would go with him to Maj. Everett Warren, of Scranton, who was counsel for the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., it might be possible to take it up with him; but I refused to go. He said he would go and talk to Mr. Warren, to which I offered no objection at all. I think, before I saw him again, I made a trip to New York, and on my return he told me that he had talked with Maj. Warren about the matter, but that Maj. Warren did not believe that he could take up the matter himself. In our talk Mr. Woodruff always understood-and I think he referred to it-that the troubles and difficulties and injustices that he believed practiced on him by the companies in his effort to work the Marian Coal Co. affected him very much, and Mr. Woodruff suggested that possibly he might talk to Judge Archbald about it again. I felt that was treading on very dangerous ground, and I told him that, so far as I was concerned, I would not have any connection with that whatever. That, I think, embodies all the conversation Mr. Woodruff and myself had with reference to this matter that the counsel has asked me about.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Was there anything said-Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, I offer another inquiry in the same connection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas submits a question, which will be read to the witness by the Secre-

The Secretary read as follows:

I refer generally to the question of counsel for the respondent to the effect that you had offered in a certain contingency to withdraw from this prosecution.

The WITNESS. In the first place, I hope the Senate will realize that I am not the prosecutor; that I am merely a witness; and, in the next place, I never made that statement to Mr. Woodruff or anyone else, because I was in the hands of the Congress, who were investigating into this matter and carrying on this proceeding, and it would, as I said before, be ridiculous for me to make such a proposition, because it would be impossible for me to carry it out.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Mr. Boland, did you in that Woodruff conversation say anything that could be construed to be a proposition on your part to withdraw from this case?

Mr. SIMPSON. I object, I have no objection whatever to the witness stating all that occurred, and if the manager will state that he has not stated it all, I have no objection to his leading him in order to bring out the balance; but the question is objectionable in the form in which it was put.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I am willing for the President to pass on the question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understood the witness to have replied, in answer to a question from the respondent's counsel, that he had not stated anything substantially to the effect that he had asked him if he had stated. Now, I understand the question of the manager to be substantially along the same line; and if one is admissible the other is. The witness will answer the question.

The WITNESS. I made no statement that would justify the question asked me by the respondent's counsel.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. That is all.

Recross-examination:

Q. (By Mr. SIMPSON.) Did you not give Mr. Watson $50 to come down to Washington at the time of the sending of the telegram that has been offered in evidence?-A. Not to come down to Washington. I remember giving him $50.

Q. For what purpose?—A. Because Mr. Watson, when the negotiations fell through, told me of his desire to go to Washington, but said he had incurred expense in the matter, and, while I was not under any legal obligation to him at all, he felt he ought to have $50 to help defray the expenses he had incurred up to that time in our service.

Mr. SIMPSON. That is all.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, that is all for this witness, and he may be excused.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Do you wish this witness to be retained?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Yes, sir; we wish him retained, but he may be excused from the witness stand at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He will be excused, subject to recall at the order of the Senate.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. We will next call Mr. W. P. Boland as a witness.

TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM P. BOLAND.

William P. Boland, being duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Please state your name and place of residence.-A. My name is William P. Boland; Scranton, Pa.

Q. State your business and occupation.-A. My business for the last 14 years has been coal operations.

Q. State whether or not you are one of the stockholders of the Marian Coal Co.; and if so, state your connection with it.—A. I have been connected with the Marian Coal Co. since its inception, and president since April, 1907, up to date.

Q. Who are the principal stockholders of the Marian Coal Co.?-A. C. G. Boland, James M. Boland-two brothers of mine-and myself.

Q. How much of the stock of the Marian Coal Co. do you and your brothers own?—A. I think we own $45,000 of the $75,000—between $45,000 and $47,000; I am not exact on the figures.

Q. The Marian Coal Co. is a corporation, is it?—A. Yes, sir; a Delaware corporation.

When was this corporation organized?—A. I think it was in 1904.

Q. I will ask you to state if John W. Peale, as plaintiff, instituted a suit against the Marian Coal Co., and, if so, when was that suit instituted and in what court, and so forth?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, I was going to suggest sometime ago to my friends the managers that there is in the record of this case before the Judiciary Committee a certified copy of the docket entries in that suit. Witnesses have been asked about the dates of the suit, and the whole thing could be put in from the House record, so far as we are concerned. That would be much more convenient.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Does that cover the whole thing? Mr. WORTHINGTON. It is on page 206.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. You have no objection?
Mr. WORTHINGTON. It is the same thing. It is all right.
Mr. Manager FLOYD. I will be very glad to put that right h here.

Mr. President, at this time we desire to offer different entries is shown by the court records as to the successive steps in the case referred to, the case of John W. Peale versus the Marian Coal Co., about which I asked the witness a question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the manager desire to have it read or simply to have it incorporated in the proceedings?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Simply incorporated in the proceedings and as a part of the record.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I think it ought to be read. The dates are quite important here.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. It is not very long, Mr. President. Mr. Manager FLOYD. I ask that it be read as evidence in

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Mr. Boland, I will ask you to state who was the judge of the court at the time that suit was brought in the district court?-A. Judge Robert W. Archbald. sitting here at present.

Q. The respondent?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was judge of the court at that time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he remain judge of that court until he was appointed circuit court judge and assigned to the Commerce Court?-A.

As I understand, he was.

Q. I will ask you to state what you know about a $500-note transaction—a note brought to you by E. J. Williams,—A. During the trial of this case before Judge Archbald, Mr. Williams called at my office one day with a note for $500. The maker, I think, was John Henry Jones, and the note was indorsed by Judge Archbald. He asked me to discount the note, and I refused to discount the note; I told him I was not a money lender, and I was in Judge Archbald's court at the time and would not think of doing it.

Q. About when was that?—A. I can not give the exact date. It was somewhere before Judge Archbald, to the best of my recollection, decided the demurrer. That has been my recollection always.

Q. What was your statement about the demurrer?-A. I say, I think it was some time before Judge Archbald decided against us on the demurrer that Mr. Donnelly filed. That has been my impression. I may be wrong on the date, but that has been my impression.

Q. Who was the payee in that note, do you remember?—A. I do not remember that. I only remember what impressed me in connection with the note was Judge Archbald's name connected with the note; and I believe the note was written in Judge Archbald's handwriting.

Q. He was an indorser on the note?—A. Yes. Q. The note was presented to you by Mr. Williams?—A. Yes. Q. For discount?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you refused to discount it?—A. I refused to discount it.

Q. Whether you are mistaken about the time during the proceeding at which it was presented, whether before or after the judge had passed on the demurrer, was it while that case was still pending in the judge's court?—A. It was.

Q. And while he was still judge of that court?—A. Yes, sir;

it was.

Q. You are positive of that, are you?-A. Yes; during that time.

Q. Mr. Boland, I will ask you to state if you know anything about a contract that was executed by E. J. Williams to you in reference to the sale of an interest in the Katydid culm dump to yourself or to your company?-A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. I will ask you to state if that exhibit is the contract referred to [indicating]?—A. That is the paper which Mr. Williams gave to me, giving me a one-third interest in the profits of whatever might accrue from the sale of the Katydid culm bank that was acquired through the influence of Judge

Q. Just a moment.—A. I beg your pardon.
Mr. Manager FLOYD. This paper is already in evidence;
but in order that it may come in at this point I ask that it may be read, as I desire to cross-examine the witness in reference to it. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read it.

The Secretary read as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 7.]

Assignment made this 5th day of September, A. D. 1911, by Edward J. Williams, of the borough of Dunmore, county of Lackawanna, and State of Pennsylvania, party of the first part, to William P. Boland and a silent party, both of the city of Scranton, county and State above mentioned, parties of the second part. For services rendered or to be rendered in the future by William P. Boland and silent party, whose name for the present is only known to Edward J. Williams, W. P. Boland. John M. Robertson, and Capt. W. A. May, superintendent of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., it is agreed by said Edward J. Williams, who is the owner of two options covering a culm bank known as the "Katydid," situate in the vicinity of Moosic, Pa., that he hereby assigns two-thirds of any profits arising from the sale of the above-mentioned property over and above the amounts to be paid John M. Robertson and the Hillside Coal & Iron Co., $3,500 and $4,500, respectively, to be divided equally between William P. Boland and silent party mentioned above, their heirs, successors, or assigns, and this shall be their voucher for same. E. J. WILLIAMS. [SEAL.]

W. L. PRYOR.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Mr. Boland, will you, in your own way, explain that contract, how it came to be made, and who was referred to as the silent party?-A. Why, I got that contract-

Q. (Continuing.) And what was said about it by Mr. Williams at the time of its execution?—A. The silent party mentioned there was Judge Archbald. His identity in that paper was there was Judge Archbald. His identity in that paper was only known to Capt. May, John M. Robertson, Mr. Williams, and myself. The paper was made at the suggestion of Mr. Williams, that I should have an interest, as I was partly responsible for finding the bank. sible for finding the bank.

Q. You state that the silent party or the person referred to as the silent party in that contract was only known to the persons named in the contract. Now, how do you know that?-A.

Well, as far as I knew, those were all who were supposed to know who the silent party was.

Q. Do you know that the parties mentioned—Capt. May and the other parties named—A. Mr. Robertson and Mr. Williams. Q. Mr. Robertson and Mr. Williams. Do you know that they knew it?-A. I only know that from the papers that Mr. Williams secured. I know that Mr. Williams got John M. Robertson to go over to Judge Archbald's office, and in Judge Archbald's office Mr. Robertson gave

Mr. WORTHINGTON. One moment. Were you there?
A. (Continuing.) Well, I saw them coming out of the office.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. I object to the witness testifying to what went on in the office when he was not there.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. He has not testified to what went on in the office when he was not there. He is explaining what he knew about it.

The Witness (continuing). I got the papers that were received through Mr. Williams and Mr. Williams's statement of how he obtained the papers. It was through Judge Archbald's influence

Mr. WORTHINGTON. One moment. If the witness is going to state what Mr. Williams told him about what Judge Archbald had told him (Williams) we object.

The WITNESS. I never met Judge Archbald in my life.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) I am asking you about that paper, that contract. Who wrote that contract which was brought out of Judge Archbald's office by Mr. Robertson?— A. It was in Judge Archbald's handwriting.

Q. Who witnessed it?-A. Judge Archbald, I had a photograph made of it.

Q. Go on with your statement.—A. Mr. Williams had secured an agreement to sell the interest of the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. in the Katydid property to Williams for $4,500, and Mr. John M. Robertson had agreed to sell his interest for $3,500, and whatever profit there was to be derived from the sale was to be divided by three in the beginning; but I saw the managers of the Pennsylvania Central Brewing Co. and offered this property for sale, and when they went to investigate and inquire of the Pennsylvania Coal Co., I believe they saw Capt. May—Mr. Kelly said he saw some of the officials—

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I object to the witness stating what

Mr. Kelly said.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. You need not tell that. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Do not state that,

Δ. (Continuing.) Well, the bank immediately shrank up; there was only 35,000 tons, according to Capt. May's report.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I object to that. I understand he is undertaking to tell what Capt. May did or said.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Just answer the question.

The WITNESS. Very well.

The Witness. Very well.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) I ask you to state about this silent-party contract. When you made that silent-party contract you were to have one-third?—A. I am only stating what a party to this contract stated to me. I had no knowledge of ever meeting Judge Archbald or Capt. May. I never met either one of them. I was dealing with Mr. Williams, and he was dealing through those two men.

Q. I ask you to state what occurred at the time of the execution of this silent-party contract. Were you to receive under that contract one-third of the profit under the option?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I submit that is shown by the con-act. The witness can not tell the legal effect of the contract. Mr. Manager FLOYD. I want to ask this as preliminary to another question.

The Witness. I can only answer that Mr. Williams representing

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I object to the witness stating anything that Mr. Williams said about Judge Archbald.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, testimony in explanation of a contract is certainly admissible. It is not in contradiction of it

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I submit it is not admissible if it is to the detriment of Judge Archbald. Mr. Williams has been here and told us himself what he knew, whether detrimental or to the advantage of Judge Archbald. We have had an opportunity to cross-examine him and to hear his testimony under oath. I submit that this is not competent.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I submit I have so far asked him no question in relation to Judge Archbald.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the manager to be asking the witness what was his interest under the contract.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Under the contract of Mr. Williams what was his interest?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I submit that that is shown by the contract. Under the contract, reduced to writing, he is to get one-third. He wants to prove that—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the contract specify the interest, that he is to have a one-third interest, the Chair would inquire of the manager?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I will have to examine the contract. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas is temporarily using it.

Mr. CULBERSON. Here it is.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. So far as the contract specifies the interest, it of course is the best evidence.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) This contract was executed Mr. E. J. Williams to you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you undertook to negotiate a sale under it?—A. I did;

Q. To the Central Brewing Co.?—A. The Pennsylvania Central Brewing Co., of Scranton, Pa.

Q. And failed?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then did you afterwards claim any interest under that contract?-A. When I found-

Mr. WORTHINGTON. One moment. I object to that, Mr. President. If it comes down to what this witness really knows of this transaction, it will take but a very few minutes to find it out. I submit the question calls for something by which we can not be affected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. As the Chair understands, the question asked the witness was whether he claimed any interest under the contract.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I submit that that is of no interest to us. Here is a contract that purports to give him one-third interest. That has not been brought to the attention of Judge Archbald, and even if it had been it would not be competent to affect him.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I think this evidence is entirely admissible. It is in proof that afterwards Mr. Williams—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is the question?
Mr. Manager FLOYD. I will ask the Reporter to read it.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. It was whether he claimed any interest under the contract.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Let the Reporter read the question.

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. Then did you afterwards claim any interest under that contract?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will hear what the respondent's counsel has to say.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I ask how it can possibly affect Judge Archbald in this case whether the witness claimed interest under the contract or not. If it was proposed to follow that by showing that Judge Archbald knew what he was claiming, we would sit down at once.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I think the whole transaction should come out. Even if it does not affect him, the Senate ought to have the full transaction in order that it may be understood.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Chair understands the purport of the question, it is legitimate.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I might explain-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not necessary. The Chair has ruled with the manager.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD:) Answer the question.—A. I afterwards withdrew or released Mr. Williams from any interest that I might have in the sale of that property.

Q. Do you know whether or not that contract was made in duplicate or triplicate; whether there was more than one copy made?—A. There were three copies.

Q. Do you know what was done with the copies?-A. Mr.

Williams took the other two copies.

Q. And do you know whether the other copies were signed or not?-A. I do not remember. Mr. Williams agreed to deliver one to Judge Archbald and keep the other himself. Q. You do not know of your own knowledge what he did with -A. No, sir; I do not. them?-

Q. What was the date of this contract?-A. I would have to refer to the paper to get it. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the contract show the

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Yes, sir. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then it is not necessary to ask it of the witness.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Now, Mr. Boland, I will ask you if you know anything about a letter written by Mr. Williams to Mr. Conn some time in April, 1912,

Mr. WORTHINGTON. March 13, 1912.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) March 13, 1912. Let me have that exhibit, Mr. Clerk. [The paper was handed.] Examine this letter of March 13, 1912.—A. (Examining.) I have heard this letter discussed here and I do know something about it.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. At this point I desire to have it read.

It is already in evidence.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read it. The Secretary read as follows:

[U. S. S. Exhibit 4.]

SCRANTON, PA., March 13, 1912. CHARLES F. CONN, Esq., Scranton, Pa.

CHARLES F. CONN, Esq., Scranton, Pa.

DEAR SIR: Regarding the culm bank located at Moosic, Pa., which you have been negotiating for, would say this matter has been hanging fire for some time, and the party who has been dealing with you is desirous of your having the bank. He believes that the title to this property is not a complicated one.

You as a business man understand the conditions under which the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. are operating under this lease. For any coal which they, their successors or assigns, take from this bank larger than pea coal they are to pay to the Everhart heirs a royalty of 20 cents per ton. Now, I think you do not intend preparing any of the larger sizes of coal; and if not, the Everhart heirs at al. would have no interest in the bank.

The Hillside Coal & Iron Co. and Mr. John M. Robertson, the only recognized owners of this bank, have agreed to sell me their interest, and I would be glad to have you let me know at your earliest convenience what you intend doing in the matter, as other parties are anxious to negotiate for it. I may say that should you have any doubts you could deposit one-half or two-thirds of the royalty in the bank or retain it for a reasonable time as a guaranty against any claims. I am making this at the suggestion of the party who has been dealing with you to assure you of our desire that you should sustain no loss.

Very truly, yours.

E. J. WILLIAMS.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Now, Mr. Boland, state what you know about the preparation of that letter and what, if anything, you had to do with it?—A. Well, I had something to do with the formation of that letter to Mr. Conn. Mr. James R. Dainty, Mr. Williams, and myself, and my niece, my stenographer, were in the office. I had been down here to Washington on the case of the Marian Coal Co. against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western February 20, and was called over to the Attorney General's office February 21 and was interrogated about certain charges that I made to the Interstate Commerce When I came back this deal was hanging fire with the Laurel Line, with Judge Archbald negotiating, as I understood from Mr. Williams, and I said to Mr. Williams that I was anxious to see him get a profit out of this deal, and unless he closed the deal quickly there was liable to be trouble, the Erie Railroad Co. withdrawing their offer to sell this property. Accordingly, I suggested to Mr. Williams that he get a definite answer from the Laurel Line so he might be released and deal with other parties. Along those lines I assisted him in writing that letter to Mr. Conn.

Q. Now, Mr. Boland, I desire to ask you about the suit or proceeding instituted by your company, the Marian Coal Co., against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. before the Interstate Commerce Commission?-A. Yes, sir; we had a suit against them.

Q. Just explain briefly what you were seeking in that suit.— A. We were seeking an existence from the Lackawanna and other coal-carrying railroads. We were embarrassed from shipping our coal. Our coal was followed to tide by the Lackawanna.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Are we to go into the details of the origin of that suit?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks it is not necessary. Mr. Manager FLOYD. It is not necessary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If it is not necessary, time ought not to be consumed.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I was not asking the witness to state the details.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The managers will please stop the witness when going beyond the direct question.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. The Chair, of course, will remember that that suit was never in the Commerce Court, and never in any court that Judge Archbald was connected with.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I simply desire, as preliminary to another question, to ask the witness to briefly describe the suit he had before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will state it as concisely as possible.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. As concisely as he can.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Answer the question.

The WITNESS. Oh, the cause of this whole suit was the Lacka-wanna's attitude toward this company.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Did you bring a suit or action before the Interstate Commerce Commission against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad in regard to rates and also in regard to damages?-A. Yes, sir; after five years' solicitation to get them to give us a hearing.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That it is not necessary to state.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. That is sufficient on that point. [To the witness:] I will ask you to state about when those suits were instituted

Mr. WORTHINGTON. As I suggested a moment ago, we have that in the record.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is a matter of record.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. We have the record with the statement of docket entries, full copies.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I withdraw the question. Mr. Worthington need not argue it. [To the witness:] I ask you to state, then, if at any time after those suits were instituted you undertook to secure a settlement by the intervention or assistance of Mr. Watson, an attorney in Scranton?-A. Mr. Edward Williams

Q. Answer my question. Did you?-A. Yes, sir. I never did-

Q. State what you know.—A. I never did myself; I never gave my consent to it; but other members of our company, other stockholders felt that they would like to get out of the difficulties, and accordingly I went with them, not of my own accord.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) You finally assented to it?—

A. I did. I assented to anything to get out of the trouble we were in.

Q. State what you know about that settlement or that attempted settlement.—A. Somewhere along in 1911 Mr. Williams came to me one day and told me he knew a lawyer that could settle these Marian Coal Co. differences with the Lackawanna and that he knew he could deliver the goods. I asked him who the lawyer was, and he said it was George M. Watson. I said I do not understand what influence Mr. Watson has-

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I object.

The Witness, I refused to have anything to do with Mr.

Watson at the time.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) I will ask you if afterwards you consented that your brother and the other members of the company

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness has already said he had.

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Do you know anything more about that settlement of your own knowledge, not what people told you?—A. Yes, sir. I was requested by my brother to give a paper assuring Mr. Watson a fee of $5,000; if he was able to turn over two-thirds of the stock at a maximum of $100,000, he would receive $5,000 as compensation.

Q. You did sign that paper?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. It has already been placed in evidence?—A. Yes; and I met Mr. Watson afterwards several times.

Q. Do you know anything more of your own knowledge about all those negotiations?—A. I do, through Mr. Watson. Mr.

Watson informed me that-Mr. Manager FLOYD. You need not state what Mr. Watson said. We have already raised that question once and it has been ruled to be not competent. That is all, Mr. President, for the present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The counsel for the respondent will take the witness.

Cross-examination:

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Mr. Boland, you said this $500 note was presented to you during the trial of the Peale You did not mean the trial in the court, but during the case. continuance of the case, did you not?-A. Oh, no; it was in the inception of the Peale case that the note was presented.

Q. Mr. Williams came to you with a note which was signed, as you remember, by John Henry Jones and indorsed by Judge Archbald?-A. The only impression I got of the note was Judge Archbald's name on the note. That was the only thing that impressed me about the note.

Q. Have you no recollection that John Henry Jones had anything to do with the note?-A. His name did not impress me as much as Judge Archbald's name did.

Q. Is it your recollection that John Henry Jones's name was on the note?-A. I think so, but I would not be so sure.

Q. Do you know whether or not at the same time there was some conversation between Williams and your brother, Christopher G. Boland, about that note?-A. I think it was after he had seen me.

Q. Was there more than one time when they were speaking to you about discounting a $500 note with Judge Archbald's name on it?-A, Only once.

Q. When we get the date of that transaction we will know whether it was on or after the demurrer was overruled in the Peale case.—A. That would not decide it, because I think they peddled the note a long time before they got it cashed.

Q. You think the date would not show anything about it?-A. I do not think that the note would show anything about it. Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask that the following question be propounded to the witness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri presents a question which will be propounded to the witness by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

What paper did you state was written by Judge Archbald in his own hand and witnessed by him?

The WITNESS. The option from John M. Robertson to Edward J. Williams.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. For what?

The WITNESS. For his interest in the Katydid culm bank. Mr. Manager CLAYTON. That paper is in evidence, Mr.

President.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Yes. I think it should be stated for the information of Senators, since that has been spoken of, that the paper by which Robertson agreed to sell his interest in the Katydid dump to Mr. Williams for $3,500 was prepared in the handwriting of Judge Archbald and is witnessed by him. Senators will remember the evidence. It was testified that the witness had it recorded of his own motion. [To the witness:] What do you mean by saying that the note was peddled for a long time before it was brought to you?-A. Well, I know at the time they were trying to get that money it was hard for them to get it. That is, they were refused in one or two banks, Mr. Williams told me afterwards.

Q. Were you at any bank when Williams presented the note?-

A. I was not.

Q. And discount was refused?—A. I was not.

Q. Do you know anything about it except what you heard from Williams?-A. I only know what the party to the note

Q. Mr. Williams you mean?—A. Yes, sir. Q. What did he tell you about having peddled it before he came to you?-A. He told me he was a little surprised that Judge Archbald's credit was not better in the banks than it

Q. I want to know if he told you he had peddled it before it came to you?-A. He said it took some time to get the money.

I can not give you a plainer answer.

Q. I want to know if Williams said he had peddled it about and taken it to banks before he came to you?-A. That is what I gathered from his statement, that it was hard for him to get a note for $500 cashed in any of the Scranton banks.

Q. Did he say that before he presented it to you and asked to have it discounted?—A. No, sir; he said it to me afterwards.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I should like to propound the following question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Ohio presents a question, which will be propounded to the witness by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

Can you give approximately the date of the Archbald note, or the date when it was presented to you for discount?

The Witness. I can not give you the exact date. I can only come so close to it-that it was shortly after or during the time of this Peale case in Judge Archbald's court.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I may say, Mr. President, it will undoubtedly be shown what bank discounted it, the exact date of the note, and all about it.

The WITNESS. That would not prove that that was the note. Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) You say it would not prove that that was the note. You make that argument, do you?—A. No, sir; I say I do not know that that is the note. I am not swearing to that note.

Q. I want to know whether there was more than one $500 note with Judge Archbald's name on it offered to you by Williams for discount?—A. No, sir; there was only one.

Williams for discount?—A. No, sir; there was only one.

Q. Now, about this silent-party paper, as we have called it, that was prepared in your office. Let me have that paper, Mr. Secretary, that we may have no misunderstanding. [Presenting paper.] This paper is dated the 5th of September, 1911, and is Exhibit 7 in this case?—A. I see it; yes; I recognize it.

Q. It is the same paper Mr. Manager Floyd showed you a few moments ago?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that there were two copies of that paper made besides this?—A. That is the best of my recollection, that it was made in triplicate.

Q. And Williams took both of them?-A. I think he did.

You said one was to be for him and one he was to take to Judge Archbald?—A. That is what he informed me.

Q. Have you been informed by anybody that during this trial Mr. Williams produced two copies of this paper here?-A. I saw it from the gallery the other day.

Q. You were in the gallery when you saw it?-A. Yes, sir; I saw him present those papers

Q. When you were testifying in the Judiciary Committee hearings, did you not say that Mr. Williams took only one copy?—A. Well, I would not say I did not say that. I might have been mistaken in the number of copies Mr. Williams took.

Q. Who were present when that paper was prepared?-A.

That paper?

Q. Yes.—A. The silent party. There was Edward Williams and W. L. Pryor, Miss Mary Boland, and myself.
Q. What is Miss Boland's full name?—A. Mary Boland.

Q. Your niece and stenographer?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would tell us just who put in the language that is in that paper. Who dictated it to the stenographer?—A. Well, I will answer you that Mr. Williams was very particular and tried to keep Judge Archbald's name out of any papers.

Q. Do you think that is an answer?—A. He was the one who suggested that. Mr. Worthington, I am trying to answer as best I know how.

Q. My question is, Who dictated that paper to the stenographer, and nothing else.—A. That part of it you asked me about—the silent party—was Mr. Williams. Other parts of it, I believe, I was responsible for—the formation of that paper.

Q. You dictated it all until you came down to the words—

A. No; I did not. Mr. Williams named the amount and how it was to be divided. He was the owner of the property, and he divided the property as he saw fit. He was satisfied to divide it in that way.

Q. Who dictated it to the stenographer? That is what I want to know.—A. I did a part of it, Mr. Williams did a part, and I think Mr. Pryor made some suggestions.

Q. You all participated?—A. Oh, yes; in fact we were not lawyers, but we did the best we knew how.

Q. I think you have stated that you never have met Judge Archbald. Is that correct?—A. I have known Judge Archbald for years, and respected him; but since I found out about his transactions here I never met him. I refused to meet him.

Q. Did you ever speak to Judge Archbald, or were you present when any other person spoke to him about this $500 note being presented to you for discount?—A. I never did. I never called his attention to it.

Q. You were never present when anybody else spoke to him about it?—A. No, sir; until in the House Judiciary Committee it was never in my mind.

Q. I mean before these proceedings began, of course?-A.

No. sir.

Q. About this so-called silent-party paper did you ever speak to Judge Archbald?-A. I never did.

Q. Did you ever hear anybody else speak to him about it?-A. Only as Mr. Williams, Mr. Pryor, and my niece, who had knowledge of it.

Q. I ask you whether you ever heard anybody speak to Judge Archbald about that silent-party paper?-A. I never was in Judge Archbald's company or heard any discussion or anything talked about it in over two years.

Q. Now, about the letter here of March 13 that was read a little while ago?-A. I do not remember the paper.

Q. To Mr. Conn?-A. Yes. I was a party to the formation of that paper.
Q. You said before that paper was prepared in your office you had been down to Washington to the Attorney General's office?-A. I was called-

Q. Now, that is it? You had been to the Attorney General's office about this matter?-A. I was not called to Washington to go to the Attorney General. I-

Q. You had been at the Attorney General's office about this business before that letter was prepared?-A. I was called to Washington by the Interstate Commerce Commission in finishing up our trial before the Lackawanna, and I was notified in the Interstate Commerce Commission office that the Attorney General wanted to see me. That is how I came before the Attorney General.

Q. You had been before the Interstate Commerce Commission and told them a great deal about Judge Archbald, had you not?-A. I did not. I went to the Interstate Commerce Commission-now, will I be allowed to explain this?

Q. I am not very much inclined to try to keep the witness from answering questions, because of the impossibility of it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will answer questions as briefly as he can.

The Witness. I will say that—
Mr. Manager STERLING. Mr. President, we object to the remark made by counsel for the respondent. I do not think it is the duty of the counsel to lecture this witness or make such remarks concerning him while he is on the witness stand.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Counsel will confine their questions to the testimony which they desire to elicit.

The WITNESS. What is the question?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. The question I ask now-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will answer as directly as possible.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Before you were at the Attorney General's office in February had you not been down to talk with Commissioner Meyer, of the Interstate Commerce Commission?—A. Never. Q. And his clerk, Mr. Cockrell?—A. No, sir.

Q. About Judge Archbald?—A. No, sir; I never went to any of the commission to talk to them about Judge Archbald.

- Q. Did you not go to them in January, 1912, and tell Mr. Commissioner Meyer and Mr. Cockrell, who is an assistant or a clerk there, that Judge Archbald had overruled your demurrer in the Peale case after you had refused to discount his note? A. I could not answer your question that way, because it is not true; it is not the fact. I went down to answer a letter that was written by John L. Seager, Interstate Commerce attorney for the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, who claimed to have advance knowledge of a decision that had not been handed down until the 30th of January. I went down to show the commission that it was absolutely necessary for a speedy trial of the interstate-commerce case against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, because the railroad was using a Federal court to put us out of business, and I showed them prima facie evidence that the railroads were using his court for the purpose of putting us out of business. I had no idea of coming down here to start an investigation; it was self-preservation with me. I did not want to do Judge Archbald any harm; but I was wiped out through the influence of the railroads with him. That is why I came down.
- Q. Without regard to why you came down, did you tell Commissioner Meyer, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in January last, that Judge Archbald had overruled the demurrer in the Peale case because you had refused to discount his note?-A. Yes; when he was about to throw me out of his office. I made a statement, and when I made the statement he was about to throw me out of his office for trying to come in there to influence the commission by making my statements against a Federal judge. I said, "Just wait a moment and I will prove it to you." I pulled the paper out of my pocket to show that Judge Archbald himself had admitted that he was dealing with the railroads. Then there was the fact that Judge Witmer laughed me out of his court. That was the reason why I came down, and that is the reason I am here. I did not have anything against Judge Archbald. He never done a thing to me in his life until the railroads began to use him.

Q. Did you tell the Interstate Commerce Commission or Commissioner Meyer in January last that Judge Archbald had overruled the demurrer in the Peale case because you had refused to discount his note?—A. I told him a whole lot—Commissioner Meyer and his secretary, Mr. Cockrell, a man I never met before.

Q. Did you tell Commissioner Meyer and Mr. Cockrell that Judge Archbald had overruled your demurrer in the Peale case because you had refused to discount his note?-A. I told the commission that Judge Archbald was being used by the railroads to crush us out of existence and to prevent us from getting a decision before the Interstate Commerce Commission; that is what I told the commission; and immediately they tried to get the Lackawanna to produce the evidence that they refused up to that time.

Q. Did you tell the Interstate Commerce Commission or Commissioner Meyer-issioner Meyer——A. I did.

Q. In January last——A. On January the 6th——
Q. One moment. That Judge Archbald had overruled your demurrer in the Peale case because you had refused to discount his $500 note?—A. I told them that. I said other things; that I thought he was the cause of our being held up for $34,000 by a fictitious judgment that could only be decided against us on technicalities with a dishonest lawyer acting with a corrupt

Q. Who is the dishonest lawyer?—A. Mr. Donnelly.

Q. He was your lawyer?-A. He was my lawyer, and if he playing fair-if he was the same kind of a lawyer that Mr. Reynolds was-neither Judge Archbald nor I would be here to-day.

Q. Mr. Donnelly was your lawyer in the Peale case?—A. Yes, sir: he apparently was.

Q. And he continued to represent you and ---- A. To misrepresent us.

Q. To represent you in court until what time?—A. There was one day given us to take an appeal. That was on the 19th and the judgment went into effect on the 20th.

Q. He was your attorney in that case until after you were before the Judiciary Committee was he not?—A. He was like a live wire that you could not let go of. I could not let go of I did not know anything about the case. He had me right in his power.

Q. What did you say about the 19th?-A. The 19th day of the month. The judgment went into effect on the 20th, or the time expired on the 20th.

Q. The 19th of what month?-A. The 19th of August of this year.

Q. The 19th of August of this year?-A. Yes; that is why I am here. Q. It was up to that time that Mr. Donnelly represented you?-A. I have been losing money. I could not afford to come down here

Q. I understand you to say that Mr. Donnelly was betraying you in that case?-A. That is my belief, because the Lackawanna Railroad Co. went out and reached out with their bribing methods. They gave his brother-in-law a great big chunk of coal.

Q. You said something about Mr. Donnelly and a corrupt judge just now. Whom did you mean?-A. I meant Judge Archbald. He was unfit for that position.

Q. You mean that your counsel and Judge Archbald were in -A. I believe that Judge Archbaldcorrupt collusion-

Q. Let me finish the question. Let me have just a word.-A. All right, I will do that.

- Q. Do you believe that Mr. Donnelly and Judge Archbald were in collusion together to defeat you in that suit?—A. I told Mr. Donnelly, "If Judge Archbald has made an honest mistake, go to him and tell him all we want is a square deal; tell Judge Archbald that I do not want to do him or his family any injury; but go and tell him." He said, "He will commit you for contempt." I said, "I am not afraid of contempt when I am right."
- Q. Well, when you came down here last January you told the Interstate Commerce Commission about Judge Archbald and your corrupt attorney?—A. I did not say anything about my attorney to the commission. I told what I thought concerned-

Q. About your attorney and a corrupt judge-A. Yes, sir; I did.

- Q. In handling your Peale suit?-A. In fact, I was sold out. Q. At that time Judge Witmer was the judge of the court— the court where the Peale suit was pending?—A. He is not much of an improvement on Judge Archbald. I will say that
- Q. You told them at the same time that Judge Witmer had been commanded to enter up an order or a decree in the Peale case by Judge Archbald?—A. Yes, sir; I told them that.

Q. And that he had done that under the dictation of Mr. Loomis?-A. That was my information.

Q. That is what you told them?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you went before the Attorney General you repeated all these statements, did you not? Did you not tell the Attorney General-A. I was chuck full of them; I have been chuck full of them for eight years.

Q. Did you not tell the Attorney General when you were there in February that Judge Archbald had overruled your demurrer in the Peale case because you had refused to discount his note?-A. I think I charged Judge Archbald with responsibility for all these embarrassments of the company. think I made it general that I held Judge Archbald accountable for all these things, all these troubles.

Q. All your troubles in the Peale case?—A. Yes, sir

O. You have not answered my question yet, Mr. Boland. You did tell the Attorney General that Judge Archbald had overruled the demurrer in the Peale case because you had refused to sign his note?-A. I told the Attorney General, Mr. Worthington, things that perhaps if I had had a little time-I was called to the commission's office without any preparation or without any expectation of being called before that high tribunal to make a statement against a Federal judge, and I might have made statements there that, if I had time to correct, I might have put in different form.

O. Can you tell us now whether, as a matter of fact, you did or did not tell the Attorney General that Judge Archbald had overruled the demurrer in the Peale case?—A. I think I did. Anything that the Attorney General says that I said, I will assume responsibility for.

Q. But the Attorney General is not here, and I want your recollection .- A. I have not got the notes, but if he says that I said it to him, I presume I did.

Q. Have you any recollection of what you did charge against Judge Archbald when you went before the Attorney General?—A. I charged him with ruining this company and everything that went with it; in aiding the railroads to wipe us out of business.

Q. And you told the Attorney General that Judge Archbald was controlling Judge Witmer and requiring him to decide the Peale case against you?-A. I told them that I thought the same influences controlled Judge Witmer that controlled Judge Archbald; and I say that to you now.

Q. Now, having learned what you told the Interstate Commerce Commission and what you told the Attorney General, I want you to tell the Senate one thing that you know that Judge Archbald has ever done in the Peale case that was not right and proper?-A. The first time that Judge Archbald convinced me that he was wrong was when he ordered me to New York to take testimony, 145 miles away from home, and I had no way of knowing who the parties were that had secured 70,000 tons of our coal, and I said in the presence of the judge to my lawyer: "Mr. Donnelly, will you please suggest to the judge that there is no need of a law suit if this agent of ours gives us an accounting. If he tells us where he has made those allowances, if they are honest allowances, we want to allow them; but if they are steals, or if he stands in with the railroad and has got a favored rate, as some of the men whom I know have, I want to know it." I asked my lawyer to state that so that Judge Archbald could have heard me, but he paid no attention to me. He said, "the judge has made the order and you have got to comply." I looked at Judge Archbald—I just looked at him, and I said then to myself, "You will wish you never saw me, for from your conduct I know now you are serving the rail-Then I went out to prove what I believed myself to be true; and I think I have fairly proved it.

Q. Well, now that is one thing. You have told me that he required you to go to New York to take testimony?—A. Yes,

Q. What else did he do that was wrong or improper?-A. I could not tell you the proceedings, but I was rushed along. The case lay there from the time the contract was broken on the 13th day of October, and until we began proceedings in the Interstate Commerce Commission there was scarcely a move in this proceeding. Mr. Peale did not take any active part for several months after, but just as soon as we started proceedings against the railroad Mr. Peale, who was the agent of the railroad, as well as for the Marian Coal Co., began this proceeding to put us out of business.

Q. How many months do you say the case lay idle?-A. From the 13th of October to about December, 1910.

Q. When?-A. From October, 1908, until about December,

There was scarcely anything done with it.

The suit was not brought until March, 1909, was it?-A. He supposed the contract was broken, and he decided that he had redress in the local courts, but he saw fit to go over into the other court.

Q. You hold Judge Archbald responsible for the delay before the suit was brought in his court?-A. I hold Judge Archbald responsible for taking away our trial by jury. He had no right to do so. This man had said how he wanted his redress, but by the usual method of the railroads, an injunction, he denied the man his rights of trial by jury. He did that to a nicety.

Q. Did Judge Archbald grant an injunction against you?—A. He did, I believe. It was a preliminary injunction until Judge Witmer made it permanent.

Q. Where did you get your information that Judge Archbald had enjoined you?—A. Well, Judge Archbald was the man who let the case come into his court. That is where he got it.

Q. You think that if he had done his duty the case would not have got into his court at all, do you?-A. That is what I was informed by reputable lawyers, but I did not know; I am not a lawyer. It might have been right, but able men have differed with Judge Archbald on that.

Q. You have always thought that Judge Archbald issued a preliminary injunction in that Peale case?-A. No, sir; I did not, because we were not prevented from working until August 24, 1911.

Q. That was long after Judge Archbald was out of that court, was it not?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want to find out what you know or what you charge that Judge Archbald did that was not right in the Peale case that caused you to come down here and make these awful charges against him before the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Attorney General. I will tell you very frankly, Mr. Boland, I want to know whether it was something in fact or whether you have a delusion in your brain about this .- A. .

I do not think it is a delusion.

Q. Wait a moment—a delusion about things that never had any real existence?—A. Well, I will tell you as well as I can. I might have been intoxicated from the attitude of the railroads to a certain extent, but I never had any reason to suspect Judge Archbald-he was a man I had a great deal of respect for-until this case came into his court, and then his right-hand bower, Mr. Williams, who I have seen in his office at all times of the day, would tell me what was going to happen and the influence that was back of Judge Archbald; and when Mr. Williams made so many statements to me I wanted to find out, before I dared breathe it against a Federal judge, that some of the statements were true, and I began to check up; I began to get information from the judge himself. I would not come in here and make a statement from anybody else against the integrity of Judge Archbald, but only from himself; and I was fully convinced from what he was doing and what he was ready to do and what he was willing to do. I did not pick out Judge Archbald's associates; I had nothing to do with the introduction of those. I had to check the information that they gave me. That was the kind of material that he picked out: it was not my selection, because I would not have gone along with him on that kind of a proposition. I got the information from his men, his associates, of what he was doing and what he was willing to do for the railroads; and, along with the things that had happened to the Marian Coal Co., I was fully convinced that Judge Archbald was not playing fair with that little com-

Q. Did Mr. Williams tell you that Judge Archbald had overruled your demurrer because you had not discounted the note, and that if you had discounted the note, he would have decided otherwise?-A. Mr. Williams told me that I made a mistake in not discounting that note; that if I had I would not have had any lawsuit.

Q. That is one of the things that you have --- A. Yes, sir:

and he told of several things.

Q. Did he tell you that Judge Archbald would have sustained your demurrer in the Peale case if you had discounted the note?-A. He told me that I would have saved all trouble; that there would not have been a lawsuit.

Q. When did he tell you that?—A. Some time in 1910. He told me a lot of things, and he told it to me so often that I had him reduce it to writing.

Q. In 1910? In 1911, was it not?—A. No; I think it was 1910. I think he made the statement in 1910 or 1911, I am not sure which; but I had him reduce it to handwriting. The paper will speak for itself.

Q. Then you came down to the Interstate Commerce Commission and to the Attorney General and told them that Judge Archbald had overruled your demurrer in the Peale case because you had not discounted his note, because Williams told you that it would have been better for you if you had discounted the note?—A. I do not think that would have interested the commission at all, if it was not for the fact that I stated to the commission that I knew that Judge Archbald was dealing with was the statement I made to the commission.

Q. I should like to have the question read, Mr. President, and the witness instructed to answer it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will answer the

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) I will repeat the question. Did you tell the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Attorney General that Judge Archbald had overruled your demurrer in the Peale case because you had not discounted his note on the strength merely of the statement that Williams had made to you that it would have been better for you if you had discounted the note?-A. Mr. Worthington, in order to answer you that I would have to have the statement I made before the Attorney General. If I said that in that statement, then I do not deny that I did say it; but on account of the absence of the statement here or the notes that were taken that day, I can not say what I did say. I did charge Judge Archbald with being responsible for the destruction of this company in a great many ways.

Q. How did you tell them Judge Archbald was responsible for the destruction of the company?-A. I felt that Judge

Archbald-

Q. Just a moment. Is it not a fact that Judge Archbald retired from that court while that case was pending-while the testimony was being taken-and no decision had ever been arrived at as to the merits of the case?-A. I felt that Judge Archbald injected himself in to prevent a decision being handed down by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Q. Tell me what you mean by that and what your source of information is, Mr. Boland.—A. Well, from his participation with the railroads, from his willingness to go along with the railroads.

Q. You say you felt he had injected himself into your case before the Interstate Commerce Commission?-A. He and Wat-That is why I kept Watson's telegram. I kept everything

I could which I did not consider larceny. Q. That brings me to another subject.

You suggested to Mr. Williams to go and get Judge Archbald interested in the Katydid culm dump, did you not?-A. No; Mr. Williams told me that if I knew of any property along the lines of the anthracite coal carrying roads Judge Archbald could get them for him; that he had influence with the railroads.

Q. Did you not tell Mr. Williams about the Katydid culm dump and suggest to him-A. Oh, I had-

Q. One moment—and suggest to him to get Judge Archbald to give him a letter to Capt. May?—A. I believe I did, Mr. Worthington, because I wanted to check up Judge Archbald and wanted to get from himself an admission that he was that kind of a man.

Q. Then, you knew that a letter had been given by Judge Archbald to Capt. May pursuant to your suggestion?—A. I think Capt. May suggested it to Mr. Williams also. Mr. Williams claimed that Capt. May had suggested that if he could get a letter from Judge Archbald it might help him.
Q. Well, you knew that Judge Archbald had given the letter pursuant to the suggestion and that Capt. May had not given the option or had not agreed to sell the property?—A. Yes, sir;

I did.

Q. Did you not then suggest to Mr. Williams in your office shortly after that to go to Judge Archbald and get him to go to the office of the Erie Co. in New York about the matter over Capt. May's head?—A. No, sir; I did not; but I will explain to you how that came about. When Mr. Williams came back from Capt. May he went up to Judge Archbald's office and told the judge, and the judge picked up some papers that were in the case—letters, typewritten papers—and he said, "Well, I will show that fellow. See the work I am doing for them. Here is a brief I am preparing for them"; and Mr. Williams came out and told me. That's all. I asked Mr. Williams, "Are you not mistaken, Mr. Williams, about a brief?" He said, "No; it is a Lighterage case." I said, "Mr. Williams, would you go out to Judge Archbald's office and show me the paper?" I wanted to get it and get a photograph of it; but I was afraid that Judge Archbald might come and find it gone and perhaps lock me up for it. But he showed me the paper from a window in Judge Archbald's office. I did not dare take that; I did not dare take the chances of taking that paper. I took other chances, though, in order to prove that he was just what he is.

Q. That is interesting, but the question I asked you was whether or not, after you learned that Capt. May had not given the option or had not agreed to sell the Katydid property when Mr. Williams first went to him-whether you did not then suggest to Mr. Williams to go back to Judge Archbald and have him use his influence with the New York office?-A. I would not say I did not, but I will say this to you, Mr. Worthington: That Mr. Williams would have lost his right arm before he would have done anything for me that would have been injurious He did not know that he was doing it. to Judge Archbald. There never was any of those fellows who gave me information that knew what I was using them for.

Q. I would like to know whether or not you made that suggestion?—A. I think I did. I will not deny that.

Q. So you suggested to Mr. Williams to go to Judge Archbald and get a letter to Capt. May, and then later suggested to him to get the judge to go to the New York office?-A. I do not think I had to make many of those suggestions

Q. Answer my question .- A. I will not deny that I did. I think I may have done so.

Q. Very well. Now, when the option was obtained from Capt. May in August following, did you not then busy yourself to find a purchaser to whom the property could be sold, so as to have Judge Archbald complete the transaction; did you not go to Mr. Conn?-A. I was not so much interested in Judge Archbald as in old man Williams,

Q. Did you not go to Mr. Conn?-A. I was selling coal to Mr.

Conn at the time.

Q. You went to Mr. Conn and suggested that the Katydid might be a good purchase for him?-A. I suggested that it was a bargain.

Q. And when you found he was interested, then you suggested to Mr. Williams to go to Judge Archbald and get a letter to Mr. Conn?—A. They had been dealing together before that.

Q. Did you not, after you had this conversation with Mr. Conn, and finding that he would consider the purchase of the Katydid, go to Mr. Williams and say, "Go to Judge Archbald and get a letter"?—A. I think I did. I wanted to button up Judge Archbald sure.

Q. And when Mr. Williams got that letter from Judge Archbald he brought it to your office instead of taking it to Mr. Conn, did he not?—A. Yes.

Q. And you took it and had a photograph made of it?-A. I had a photograph made of it; yes.

Q. How did he happen to bring that letter to you and show it to you?-A. I do not know. He came in and showed me the letter. He was proud to go around and show the privileges he had with a Federal judge. He thought that was a great thing to do.

Q. Was not that letter under seal?-A. No, sir.

Q. And did not you or Mr. Williams break the seal?-A. No, sir; I never did that in my life.

Q. You say that letter was not sealed?-A. I say so now and swear to it, that it was not sealed when it came to me.

Q. And you photographed it, and Mr. Williams passed it along to Mr. Conn?-A. I had three plates made of it and put them in a safe-deposit vault, so that I could not lose it.

Q. And then you told Mr. Pryor, who was in your employ at that time, to go along with Williams and listen to what was said?—A. I do not know that I told him to listen. I wanted to know that that letter was delivered to Mr. Conn.

Q. Do you think that is an answer to my question?—A. I asked Mr. Williams if he knew Mr. Conn, and I asked Mr. Pryor if he knew Mr. Conn, and he said he did, and I then said, or suggested, to Mr. Pryor that he go down with Mr. Williams to Mr. Conn's office. I did that.

Q. And did you not tell him to listen to what was said and report to you?-A. I do not remember that I told him to listen, but I told him to introduce Mr. Williams to Mr. Conn.

Q. Now, about the letter of March 13, who dictated that?
That was the second letter to Mr. Conn.—A. I told you that I had a part in it. Mr. Dainty told me that Judge Archbald had sent him down to Philadelphia to the Everhart heirs, to find

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I must object to this. I can stand for almost anything, but now we are going too far.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Just answer the question. The WITNESS. Yes; I had something to do with that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. You will very much abridge matters if you will answer the questions; and then, if you desire, you may make any explanation.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) That letter of March 13 was dictated in your office to Miss Mary Boland, was it?-A. That is a letter to Mr. Conn, asking him to release the bank or the sale of the bank.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Let us have the letter and then we will not have any question of what we are talking about.

(The letter was handed to Mr. Worthington by the Secretary, the same being Exhibit No. 4.)

Yes; I helped to dictate that letter. The WITNESS.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) You had been down to the Interstate Commerce Commission and to the Attorney General's office before that letter was written?—A. I was; yes, sir.
Q. Did you tell Mr. Williams that there was going to be a storm coming about that matter?-A. Mr. Williams knew it himself.

Q. Did you not tell him that, and to hurry up this letter to Conn?-A. I do not think I did.

Q. What was that?-A. I do not think I did. I told Mr. Bradley that.

Q. You did not tell Mr. Williams to hurry up this letter of March 13 to Mr. Conn?—A. I urged on him the necessity of disposing of the property in order to get his profit; yes, sir.

Q. Was not your real object to try and force the transaction through to a sale before the storm came?-A. Not necessarily; no. Q. Was not that one of the things you had in mind?-A. Not necessarily. Q. Was not that one of the things you had in mind?-A.

No; no. Q. How is that?-A. I wanted to see Mr. Williams get $6,000.

Q. And you wanted to see Judge Archbald implicated by having a completed sale?-A. I had him implicated before that.

Q. Did you not want him implicated by having a completed sale made before the storm broke?-A. No; I could have done it afterwards if I wanted to follow him up.

Q. I will ask you whether on the 1st of February, 1912, after you had been before the Interstate Commerce Commission, you wrote to Mr. Cockrell this letter:

MARIAN COAL CO., Scranton, Pa., February 1, 1912.

ALLEN V. COCKRELL, Esq., Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I have secured additional information along the lines that I spoke to you and the other parties about and will be ready on the date you mention.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were then looking up information?-A. I was; yes.

Q. And had arranged with Mr. Cockrell, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, that you would get information-

Mr. Manager FLOYD. What page do you read from?

Mr. SIMPSON. Page 146.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Volume 1?

Mr. SIMPSON. Yes. The Witness. I knew it took a whole lot to disturb a Federal judge, and I had to fortify myself before I would dare

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) You had arranged with the Interstate Commerce Commission, through Mr. Cockrell——A.

No arrangement

Q. One moment—that you would get more evidence for them implicating Judge Archbald?—A. I had made no arrangements with the Interstate Commerce Commission. I was informing the Interstate Commerce Commission-

Q. What did you mean by saying "I have secured additional information along the lines that I spoke to you and the other parties about, and will be ready on the date you mention"?— A. I told him I had other information and other lines out. knew the bait he was after, and if it was not checked up so soon I would have had it; so he would never have come before the Senate; he would have resigned if I had had a chance to button up all the things I had on him.

Q. What was the additional information you had obtained between the 5th of January--A. It is not in evidence now, and I have not any corroboration.

Q. Oh! Why was the sale of the Katydid to the Pennsylvania Brewing Co. not carried out?—A. The bank shrank up, because my identity with it was known.

Q. What do you mean by "the bank shrank up"?—A. Capt. May reported that there were only 35,000 tons in the bank when they inquired about the tonnage there was in the bank.

Q. Was that report of Capt. May verbal or in writing? I do not know whether it was verbal or in writing. That is what I was told.

Q. That is what you were told? Who told you?—A. Some members of the Pennsylvania Central Brewing Co., and I immediately dropped any further— Q. Who were they?—A. Well, I think that Mr. P. J. Casey, Mr. William Kelly, and they had a man who looked after the purchasing of their coal—I think he was the man; I do not know his name-who told me that the bank was not of sufficient size to warrant them going in on it.

Q. Oh, that was it?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was it you released Mr. Williams from your claim to a one-third interest in the Katydid bank?-A. Immediately after that report came that the bank was growing smaller.

Q. Did Mr. Williams tell you anything about Mr. Robertson objecting to your having anything to do in the matter?—A. No; he did not. Although Mr. Robertson knew that I would not be allowed, because I had talked with Mr. Robertson before, and he knew, on account of my asking the railroad for a reduction in the rates, that I could not get anything the railroads had.

Q. Did Mr. Williams tell you that Mr. Robertson had said that the sale would not be made if you had anything to do with it?—A. I do not know that he did, Mr. Worthington; I do not think that he did.

Q. In this March 13 letter it is said that the title to the Katydid coal dump is not a complicated one. Where was that information obtained?—A. It was not a complicated one, either.

Q. What was that?—A. It was not a complicated one.

Q. Are you a lawyer?-A. No; but I understand the contract slightly

Q. What was the title-who owned it?-A. The title to the bank, the possession of the bank—the Erie Railroad Co. had possession, and they were only accountable to the Everhart heirs for chestnut coal and all above. All the smaller sizes belonged to the one in possession; that was the Hillside Coal & Iron Co. And Mr. Robertson, according to the search, did not have anything to show, other than scales and a track, of his equity in the property.

Q. Your conclusion was, and is, that Mr. Robertson has not any interest in the dump?-A. He has some, not in the dump, but in the improvements that were there.

Q. Not in this coal that was the subject of this trade?—A. No; there was not anything he could show that would warrant him in claiming an interest in the dump.

Q. Was it upon that information of yours that was put into this letter to Mr. Conn that the title was not complicated—

A. No; I think that was Mr. Dainty's report from Philadelphia.
Q. Did you not know that Mr. Conn had consulted Messrs.
Wells & Torrey about the title and that they had advised him not to purchase it because the title was bad?—A. I think those lawyers were more afraid of Judge Archbald than approving it. They did not want Mr. Conn to take that property, on account of Judge Archbald's connection. That is what Mr. Williams told me—they were more afraid of offending Judge Archbald. That is the pretense they put up-that the title was not good.

Q. That is another idea of yours?-A. No; that is no idea of mine; that is Mr. Williams's statement to me. That is what was told me.

Q. You believe that, do you?—A. Yes. Q. Do you believe that Messrs. Wells & Torrey, attorneys to Mr. Conn, told him the title was not good because they were afraid if he bought the property from Judge Archbald that he would have trouble?—A. Well, there were a lot of people in Judge Archbald's court that had a whole lot of fear of him. They respected him out of fear, not because they thought he was any better than anybody else, but because they feared him.

Q. But you are under the impression now and really believe that Wells & Torrey's advice against that title was just a pretense?—A. I do not know. I never met Wells & Torrey, I was told that, and I am telling you what I was told.

Q. Did you know that Judge Archbald had prepared a contract with Mr. Conn?-A. I heard of it.

Q. A form of contract with Mr. Conn and submitted it to Wells & Torrey?-A. Yes; I heard of it.

Q. Did you see it?—A. No; I never saw it.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, I have quite a number of questions that I desire to ask this witness and it will take me quite a little time to look through my notes in order to segregate what I want to ask. Therefore, I would be glad to take an adjournment at this time, instead of at 6 o'clock, if there is no objection.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. We have no objection to suspending the examination of this witness, but we have another little matter we wish to bring to the attention of the Senate before adjournment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will be excused until to-morrow at half past 1.

JOHN HENRY JONES.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I would like the Sergeant at Arms to bring in the defaulting witness, John Henry Jones, and then desire to make a suggestion.

John Henry Jones appeared in the Chamber.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I suppose the Senate will want to know why this witness was not here and may desire to give him a reprimand or other punishment for not having obeyed the process of the court.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (addressing Mr. Jones).

Why were you not here to obey the summons?

Mr. Jones. It was on account of the serious illness of the wife.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Your wife?

Yes, sir. I have brought a letter from the doctor Mr. JONES. to that effect.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Let me see it.

(Mr. Jones produced the letter, which was examined by Mr. Manager CLAYTON.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Was your presence necessary?

Mr. Jones. Yes, sir.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. This is an unsworn certificate from a physician, who I suppose is a reputable physician. I suppose it would have been sworn to, if required. I ask, therefore, at this time, inasmuch as this physician says that Mr. Jones's presence is necessary for attendance upon his sick wife, that the witness be not kept in custody longer, but that he be given admonition to be here to-morrow and from day to day until discharged.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Mr. Jones, you will be careful to be present at all times when you may be needed to testify in this case.

Mr. Jones. I will, sir.

Mr. Jones thereupon withdrew.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there are other proceedings to be had, the hour of adjournment for the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment having practically arrived, the Chair will declare the sitting of the Senate as a Court of Impeachment ended.

Thereupon the managers on the part of the House, the respondent, and his counsel retired.

Mr. SMOOT. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 59 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, December 11, 1912, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Tuesday, December 10, 1912.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Infinite Spirit, God over all, in whose sacred presence we continually dwell, take away all hindrances from our minds and hearts and draw us by that influence which is ever emanating from Thy heart nearer to Thee that we may be able to fulfill in the daily walks of life that requirement which is to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly before Thee our God. In the spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ELECTORS FOR PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENT.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following letters, which were referred to the Committee on the Election of President, Vice President, and Representatives in Congress: Letter from the Secretary of State transmitting, pursuant to law, authentic copy of the certificate of the final ascertainment of electors for President and Vice President appointed in the State of Georgia at the election held therein on November 5, 1912, as furnished by the governor of said State.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. CRAVENS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States for his approval the following bill:

H. R. 20287. An act to amend section 5 of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Red Cross," approved January 5, 1905.

CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE-M'LEAN AGAINST BOWMAN.

Mr. ANSBERRY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up House resolution 687, declaring that Representative Charles C. Bowman is not entitled to a seat in the Sixty-second Congress.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Charles C. Bowman was not elected a Representative to the Sixty-second Congress from the eleventh district of Pennsylvania and is not entitled to a seat therein.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois raises the question of consideration. The question is, Will the House now consider this resolution?

The question being taken,

Mr. ANSBERRY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio makes the point of no quorum. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and fifteen Members present, not a quorum. The Doorkeeper will close the doors; the Sergeant at Arms will notify the absentees. All those in favor of taking up the contested-election case will, when their names are called, answer "aye," those opposed will answer "no," and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 166, nays 113, answered "present" 10, not voting 101, as follows:

The name of Mr. Mann was called, and he answered "Present."
Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Speaker, I voted "aye," but I am paired with the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. Langley. I desire to withdraw my vote of "aye" and answer "present."
The name of Mr. Fields was called, and he answered "Pres-

A quorum being present, the doors were opened.

Mr. ANSBERRY. Mr. Speaker, it has been agreed by the majority and minority, or rather between the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Prouty] and myself, that we divide the time and that five hours be agreed upon to debate this resolution and the time be divided, two and a half hours on each side, and that the gentleman from Iowa have control of two and a half hours and I have control of two and a half hours. That is our understanding. Having stated the agreement, I would ask that unanimous consent be given that this resolution be taken up and debated for two and a half hours on each side; that at the end of that time a substitute may be offered by the minority, and that the previous question be then considered as ordered and that the previous question be then considered as ordered and vote had on the resolution.

Mr. AUSTIN. When do you expect to get a vote on this proposition? It will take until 7 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent, and states that it is by agreement with the parties, that debate shall continue for five hours, one half of which time to be controlled by himself and the other half by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Prouty]; that at the expiration of that time anybody can offer a substitute, and of course the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Iowa to offer it, and the previous question shall then be considered as ordered.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to say I propose to offer a privileged resolution seating George R. McLean, the contestant, and I shall have no objection to this arrangement if it may include a vote upon that resolution immediately after the substitute offered by the minority and the resolution of the committee shall have been voted upon.

Mr. ANSBERRY. I have no objection to that and I hope that no one else will, so that we may get through with it.

The SPEAKER. The principal resolution, the Chair will state to the House for its information, is-

Resolved, That Charles C. Bowman was not elected a Representa-tive in the Sixty-second Congress from the eleventh district of Penn-sylvania and is not entitled to a seat therein.

And it does not provide anybody shall be seated. Of course, the Chair takes it that the gentleman from Iowa will offer a substitute declaring the contestee is entitled to his seat. does the gentleman from Pennsylvania desire?

Mr. PALMER. I offer a privileged resolution and ask that it be included in the agreement for unanimous consent.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman has not been recognized for that yet. Mr. Speaker, I suggest, under the circumstances, that the gentleman from Iowa be permitted to now offer his substitute and that the gentleman from Pennsylvania be permitted to offer his.

Mr. PALMER. That is my proposition exactly. The SPEAKER. Has the gentleman from Iowa his resolution ready?

Mr. PROUTY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer and have pending a resolution as a substitute for the one that has been reported by the committee.
The SPEAKER. The ge

The gentleman will send it to the Clerk's desk to be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the case of George R. McLean against Charles C. Bowman, from the eleventh congressional district of Pennsylvania, be dismissed for want of jurisdiction, because said alleged contestant gave no notice of contest within the time or in the manner prescribed by law, and because he has not asked or secured the consent of this House or the committee for proceeding in any other manner than that prescribed by law, and has not shown any equitable excuse for his failure to give the notice prescribed by section 105 of the Revised Statutes.

The SPEAKER. That is a substitute for the resolution of the committee. Now, the gentleman from Pennsylvania offers a resolution in the nature of an amendment to this substitute.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, my resolution is a separate privileged resolution, and I shall ask unanimous consent that all three of them be considered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will send his resolution to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 743.

Resolved, That George R. McLean, the contestant, was elected a Representative in the Sixty-second Congress from the eleventh district of Pennsylvania and is entitled to a seat therein.

Mr. MANN. As I understand, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ANSBERRY] asks that the time for debate be limited to five hours and at the end of that time the previous question be ordered on all the pending propositions?

Mr. ANSBERRY. Yes.
The SPEAKER. Yes; and the order of voting will be on the Ansberry resolution.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, on the substitute first.

The SPEAKER. On the substitute first.

Mr. MANN. And then on the committee resolution.

The SPEAKER. Then where would the Palmer resolution

Mr. MANN. The motion could not be considered until the other resolution was agreed to.

Mr. BARTLETT. I would like to know whether the resolution of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ANSEERRY] would not be a preferential resolution to all these motions? It is of the highest privilege and ought to be the first one to be voted upon. It is a resolution declaring a person entitled to a seat in this

The SPEAKER. All of them are privileged.
Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that the resolution which I have offered is in the nature of an amendment to the committee resolution, and therefore the vote should first be on the substitute, and after that on the amendment to the committee resolution, and then upon the committee resolution as amended

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, it is perfectly simple. The first vote would be on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Prouty] dismissing the contest. If that is not agreed to, then the vote comes as to whether the sitting Member is entitled to his seat. If he is thrown out, then the question would come on seating a new Member. You could not seat a new Member while another Member was in his seat.

Mr. PALMER. That is true. You must adopt both resolutions at the same time.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me the resolu-tion of the committee declares that the sitting Member is not entitled to his seat. There would follow, if the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Palmer] would offer his as an amendment to the resolution of the committee, the other resolution.

Mr. PALMER. I can see no objection to the plan I suggested.

Mr. BARTLETT. I have no objection.

Mr. PALMER. My resolution is in the nature of an amendment to the committee resolution. If the substitute is voted down, then the original resolution comes up, but the amendment must first be considered.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman must see that before you seat a new Member you must declare whether the present sitting Member is entitled to his seat. It always has been voted that way, I will say to the gentleman.

Mr. PALMER. I have no objection to its being voted that way, so far as I am concerned.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. If the Prouty resolution has the effect of dismissing the contest, does not that end the entire

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not understand the gentle-

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. If the resolution of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Proury] is in effect to dismiss this contest, does not that vacate the entire proceeding, and would the resolution either of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Ans-BERRY] or the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] be either in order or necessary?

Mr. KENDALL. Suppose the Prouty resolution fails?

The SPEAKER. These matters are all pending now by unanimous consent unless somebody objects, and then the three matters are pending here at once and the House has to vote on them in some way. The first thing to do is to vote on the Prouty substitute, and then the Chair will determine whether the vote shall be on the Palmer amendment or the other. The Chair will examine them in the meantime. It seems to be a difference between tweedledum and tweedledee. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ANSBERRY] is recognized for two hours and a half.

Mr. ANSBERRY. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, some time in August, in accordance with notice previously given by me, the contested-election case of McLean against Bowman, under resolution No. 687, was called up in the House, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Bowman, the contestee in this case, asked that the matter be passed until this session. At that time, under unanimous consent, I was given 20 minutes to make a statement with reference to this case. Most of you gen-tlemen heard that statement, and at this time I am not going to go into it as extensively as I did then. I expect to close the de-bate on this resolution, and then I shall present to the House evidence in support of the majority report of the committee. But at this time I shall make a brief statement with reference to the case and the evidence which sustains the allegations of fraud, corruption, coercion, and intimidation, so that any gentleman who was not present in August can follow the debates with full knowledge of the issue.

The contest arises over the election of a Member from the eleventh district of Pennsylvania. This district lies wholly within the county of Luzerne. This county is one of the hardcoal mining counties of Pennsylvania, and there are more than 60,000 miners residing in the district. Its population is something over 300,000.

The notice of contest was filed by Mr. McLean on the 11th day of January, 1911, and charged the contestee with procuring his election by fraud, corruption, coercion, and intimidation of voters, and also claimed that the votes cast for the contestee on the Prohibition ficket should not be counted for him because of the illegal way in which the contestee procured the substitution of his name on that ticket in place of the regularly nominated candidate of that party for the office of Representative in Congress. This notice of contest was some 30 days late, as under the rules adopted by the House for the guidance of persons who intend to contest the election of a Member of this House this notice must be served within 30 days after the determination of the result of the election. However, the contestee answered this notice on the 9th day of February, 1911, by a written notice objecting to the notice of contestant, for the reason that it was not served within 30 days, and alleged that there was no valid reason in law or equity why contestant should not have filed notice within the time specified in the rules of Congress governing such contests. He further answered and joined issue by stating that the notice was indefinite, vague, and uncertain, and denied any coercion, intimidation, or corruption on his part or on the part of his manager in said election, and specifically denied instances of coercion, fraud, and illegal acts on the part of the contestee, as set forth in the notice of said contestant, and claimed that the substitution of his name in place of the name of the regularly nominated candidate of the Prohibition Party, Mr. Robert R. Robinson, was strictly in accordance with law and the rules of said party under the laws of Pennsylvania. Certain statements were contained in the answer charging conspiracy and the corruption of voters on behalf of the contestant. Thereafter the testimony of contestant was taken under the rules of the House before two commissioners in Luzerne County, Pa., at which counsel for both sides were present, who examined and cross-examined witnesses with reference to this contest.

In passing I might refer to the fact that the record is silent as to any objection which the contestee may have had to the taking of depositions by the contestant at the time they were The testimony came to the committee in the form of some seven or eight hundred pages of closely printed matter, and in due time the matter was presented to the committee and fully argued by counsel. Thereafter the committee made its report, in which it was stated that because of the failure of the contestant to file his notice within 30 days the committee had not considered the testimony with a view of seating the contestant, but the committee was of the opinion that section 105, against which rule contestant had offended by not filing his notice within 30 days, was merely directory and not mandatory, and for that reason they went into the merits of the case and reported a resolution unseating the contestee, and gave as their reason many instances of violations of the law in both letter and spirit by said contestee and his manager in the procuring of the election of the said contestee to a seat in this House. The minority members of the committee filed a report largely devoted to a discussion of section 105, and stating that in their opinion contestee should not be removed for the reason that notice of contest was not filed in time. This law question will be fully discussed, and I think thereafter the House will be of the opinion that this technical objection to the unseating of the contestee is absolutely the only ground upon which they have to stand, as no one seriously questions the facts with reference to corruption and violations of the law employed by the contestee and his manager in this election.

The position of the majority, with reference to section 105 is, as I have stated before, merely directory and not mandatory, and there is not a precedent in this House for the position taken by the minority. Many times has this question been raised, and I assert that the House has never refused to consider a case where there were any facts which would warrant the conclusions to which this committee has arrived. In other words, the House has never taken the technical view and has always permitted a hearing on the facts, merely insisting that both sides be given the regular notice and that full op-portunity be had to get their testimony and to cross-examine witnesses. In this case the notice was served on the part of both contestee and contestant, the testimony was taken in the regular way, and the contestee was not injured one iota by reason of the failure of the contestee to serve his notice within the 30 days. Such being the case, the committee relies upon the House to take the common sense and not the technical view of this question.

The principal vehicle for fraud and corruption in this case was the employment of special watchers, the manager for the contestee having employed a large number of men and paid out a large sum of money for the employment of men which the committee thinks, under the evidence, was used for the corruption of voters and not for the employment of men to work

Contestee's manager made a statement of his expenditures under the laws of Pennsylvania and filed the same with the prothonotary of Luzerne County, and this statement and the cross-examination with reference to it disclosed the fact that Mr. Davis, the manager for the contestee, expended $2,300 for "special watchers," and he defines "special watchers" to be, "Possibly buying Democratic votes," and in connection with this cross-examination he made the further statement that, "Here is one that I bought and which went wrong," and gave the name of the person as Mr. Fred Shoemaker, of Parsons, and said that he gave Shoemaker $25.

In my closing statement I propose to show this House that these are not isolated instances. I said that upward of 60,000 miners live in this district. It becomes apparent that whoever could procure the services of those in authority over these men would have a big advantage in procuring the support of the miners, and a large part of this fund for "special watchers" was traced through these channels. These bosses manifested more than the ordinary amount of interest in this campaign. These bosses manifested In addition to the coercion and corruption, the election laws were violated, and this fact was one of the basic reasons for this resolution. In one election precinct the testimony of two men, both of whom I think were of the contestee's political faith-one an official in a bank, a cashier, I believe, and the other a doctor, who lived in the precinct in question-gave testimony of a character to convince any reasonable man or set of men that the election returns in this district were altered in the interest of the contestee. One of the election officials likewise impeaches these returns. Many other violations of the election laws will be read from the record by me in closing the argument in this case; and, in passing, I will say that I referred to them, or most of them, in my statement in August, and contestee will have an opportunity to reply to them, for they are set out in the committee's report and will be gone into more fully on behalf of the majority by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HOLLAND].

There were other violations of the election laws by officials in charge. They have in Pennsylvania the Australian ballot, and if a man has a physical disability he may ask that some one go in the booth with him for the purpose of helping him to mark his ballot. The election laws and the decisions on this question are as follows:

If any voter declares to the judge of election that by reason of any disability he desires assistance in the preparation of his ballot, he shall be permitted by the judge of election to select a qualified voter of the election district to aid him in the preparation of his ballot, such preparation being made in the voting compartment. (Act of assembly, approved 10th of June, 1893, P. L., 431. sec. 26.)

Mere ignorance of how to mark the ballot, however, is not a sufficient disability. (Fadden's contested election, 3 Lack, L. N., Pa., 74.)

If, after being allowed assistance, a voter prepares his ballot himself in the presence of his assistant, his vote should be rejected. (Fadden's contested election, supra.)

Showing his ballot disenfranchises a voter. (Fadden's contested election, supra.)

In a number of precincts men having the contestee's money in their pockets, and mine bosses, entered the booths at the request of men who asked for assistance—in one precinct 35 or 40—contrary to law, and marked these ballots. Briefly stated, this is the position of the committee.

Mr. HILL. Will the gentleman pardon me a moment just on that point?

Mr. ANSBERRY. Yes.

Mr. HILL. Does the gentleman mean to construe the law that a person can not go into a booth to assist a man who is disabled. either by blindness or paralysis, or anything of that kind, and mark the ballot in his presence in the booth with him? If that is the law, it is contrary to the law of one State certainly that I know of, and establishes a very bad precedent for future elections in the United States.

Mr. ANSBERRY. I make no such contention. Perhaps my statement was not as clear as it should have been.

Mr. HILL. As I understood the gentleman, he said the committee did not consider that a man could go into the booth with voter?

Mr. ANSBERRY. I meant to say that only in the case of physical disability could that be done. I think that is what the framers of the law had in mind-that only in the case of physical disability could any person be permitted to stay in the booth and watch and receive information as to how a man votes.

Mr. HILL. But the gentleman does not question the fact that man can do that.

Mr. ANSBERRY. Only in case of physical disability. man might have some disability other than that, but if his disability is educational or otherwise than physical, it is the contention of the committee, which I think is sustained by the law of Pennsylvania, as I think will be shown before the resolution is voted on, that no one can be present while the voter is marking his ballot.

Briefly, that is the committee's case. The law question which is raised in the resolution of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. PROUTY], should perhaps, in the regular order of events, be disposed of first, as the presentation of the facts should come up later on. For that reason I wish to yield to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Prouty] at this time, as I understand he wishes to present his side of that controversy,

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. Before the gentleman from Ohio takes his seat, will be yield for a question?

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Speaker, I wish to make an inquiry

Mr. ANSPERRY I wish to make an inquiry

Mr. ANSBERRY. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee. Mr. SIMS. Is it the gentleman's contention that all the watchers who were employed by the contestee were thereby corrupted and voted otherwise than they would have voted had it not been for their employment?

Mr. ANSBERRY. It is the contention of the committee that the entire sum of money that was used for special watchers was a corruption fund. I can not say how those men would have voted under ordinary circumstances, but many of them were described as Democrats.

Mr. SIMS. Many of the watchers were Democrats?

Mr. ANSBERRY. Many of the watchers who were employed

y this money were Democrats.

Mr. SIMS. I believe on the face of the returns the contestee was elected by something more than 500 votes.

Mr. ANSBERRY. He was elected by five hundred and some odd votes. The contestee was on two tickets—the Republican ticket and the Prohibition ticket-and the committee in passing call attention to the fact that he would have been defeated had it not been for the vote he got on the Prohibition ticket. Mr. McLean received some 200 more votes on the Democratic ticket than Mr. Bowman received on the Republican ticket. Bowman received some 700 votes on the Prohibition ticket.

Mr. SIMS. Under the laws of Pennsylvania was it not valid for him to be on two tickets?

Mr. ANSBERRY. Under the laws of Pennsylvania that was valid. The only question was the question of his procurement of the nomination. That is only referred to because of the fact that it helps to present the general scheme of fraud and corruption by which he obtained the support he received.

Mr. SIMS. Then the Prohibition votes are not challenged simply because they were Prohibition votes?

Mr. ANSBERRY. Oh, no. They were counted.

Mr. SIMS. The gentleman is going to leave the floor, and I wanted to get a fair idea of the matter.

Mr. ANSBERRY. I shall take the floor again with reference to the facts. I am only yielding now for the purpose of allowing the presentation of the question of law.

Mr. SIMS. I have been here 16 years, and when I first came here I used to see the Republican side unseating men on the Democratic side and electing the contestant in his place. saw so many Members unseated in the South that I got tired of seeing that thing go on, and now before I vote for anything of that sort I would like to see a clear case.

Mr. ANSBERRY. I shall not ask anybody to vote for this resolution because it is the committee's action.

Mr. SIMS. I suppose that my teeth are on edge because I have had a contest myself.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANSBERRY. Certainly.
Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. I am anxious to ascertain what the attitude of the committee is upon this proposition. It is divided into three chapters: A resolution offered by the gentleman from Ohio, one by the gentleman from Iowa, and one by the gentleman from Pennsylvania. When the resolution was offered by the gentleman from Ohio and by the gentleman from Iowa an agreement was made that the debate should continue for five hours, involving the unseating of Mr. Bowman. Subsequent to the announcement of that understanding a resolution offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Palmer] was read for the seating of Mr. McLean. The previous question was to be ordered at the termination of the five hours' debate.

Do I understand that the seating of McLean is to be effected if the votes can be had without any discussion on the subject?

Mr. ANSBERRY. I will say to the gentleman that the two propositions are so interlocked that it would be impossible to discuss one without touching the other.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman inform me whether the committee has taken any formal action with reference to McLean's right to a seat? Mr. ANSBERRY. The committee has necessarily taken that up because it is interlocked with the other, and you could not consider one without considering the other.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. I understand; but has the committee formally made any recommendation?

Mr. ANSBERRY. The gentleman knows very well that the committee has not formally made any recommendation. It is not in the resolution, and that is the only way that the committee could act. I would be glad to give my views as a Member of Congress and not as the chairman of the committee.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. Whether or not the proposi-tion to make a negative or an affirmative recommendation, as far as McLean is concerned, was presented to the committee and acted upon by the committee?

Mr. ANSBERRY. The gentleman will understand that that question is wholly improper. The gentleman from Pennsylvania can ask his question of the gentleman from Iowa, and, as far as I am concerned, he can answer it if he desires, but it is improper to state on the floor what took place in the committee. The committee speaks through its report.

Mr. BERGER. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. ANSBERRY. I will.

Mr. BERGER. The gentleman stated that the candidate for governor on the Prohibition ticket received 700 votes.

Mr. ANSBERRY. No; the candidate for governor received less than 300 votes—240.

Mr. BERGER. And the candidate for Congress received? Mr. ANSBERRY. Over 700.

Mr. BERGER. Does the gentleman mean to convey the idea or the impression that the 400 Prohibition votes were gotten by illegal means?

Mr. ANSBERRY. I do not mean to convey the impression, but my impression is it was used as a cloak for fraud.

Mr. BERGER. I am not a Prohibitionist, as everybody knows, nor do I come from a city where prohibition is very strong, but I believe as a rule, Mr. Speaker, that the Prohibitionists are honest and are actuated by principle and are hard to be bought.

Mr. ANSBERRY. But that is beside the question. The point I make is that the Prohibitionists being honest would vote for the candidate for governor, as they did, to the number of 242, but men could vote the Prohibition ticket for a candidate for Congress who were not Prohibitionists.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. ANSBERRY. I must decline to yield further, Mr.

Speaker.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I want to help the gentleman as to his attitude and that of the committee.

Mr. ANSBERRY. I appreciate that, but my time is very short. I will yield later to the gentleman.

Mr. PROUTY. Mr. Speaker, this case on its face is a simple contest between Mr. McLean and Mr. Bowman for a seat in this Congress from the eleventh district of Pennsylvania. There are two phases of this controversy, one a question of law or procedure and the other a question of fact. By common consent it has been allotted to me to discuss the parliamentary or legal questions. I would say for the benefit of the House generally that there is nothing in this case that appeals especially to either the prejudice or passions of men. I have no doubt but that there prejudice or passions of men. were technical violations, perhaps, of the statutes of Pennsylvania in the conduct of this campaign, but the amount of money spent and the quality of the expenditure on the part of both the contestant and contestee was so nearly alike that the majority members of this committee-and that showed their sincerity and consistency-while recommending the unseating of the Republican did not recommend the seating of the I make this statement in view of the somewhat preliminary discussion that has taken place already. The question I intend to confine myself to is the question of the jurisdiction of this committee. I raised the same question in committee, and I now desire to raise it on the floor of this House, and that is that there is no contest pending either before the committee or before this House.

I first wish to call the attention of the House to the law. Section 105 of the Revised Statutes provides:

Whenever any person intends to contest an election of any Member of the House of Representatives of the United States, he shall, within 30 days after the result of such election shall have been determined by the officer or board of canvassers authorized by law to determine the same, give notice in writing to the Member whose seat he designs to contest, of his intention to contest the same, and in such notice shall specify particularly the grounds upon which he relies in the contest.

Mr. Speaker, there is no claim on the part of the contestant that he complied or attempted to comply with that provision of the law. The final result of the election was declared by the canvassers on the 12th day of November, 1910, and the notice in this case, and the only notice or only pretense of a notice, was served on the 14th day of January, 1911, 32 days after the time provided by the statute. I am not unaware of the rulings of this House upon the question involved. realize that under the Federal Constitution the House is the sole judge of the qualifications, elections, and returns of its Members, and that that could not be taken away even by a statute enacted by the House and Senate and signed by the President of the United States, because it is a constitutional right. But the proposition that I wish to call to the attention of the House is this, that until the House does modify that rule, until the House grants some other manner in which a contest can be brought before it, until this new rule is not only adopted but complied with by the Member wishing to press his contest, there is absolutely no contest pending; and I make the broad statement now, so that any gentleman can go to work upon it, that there is not a record of a case in the American Congress where a man has been allowed to present his case and oust the other man unless he has given this notice, or unless he has come into the House and asked for a new method of procedure and has been granted that privilege.

The real fight that I am making now, the real appeal that I am making to this House at this time, is not so much for Mr. Bowman, although I like him, but for the future of the proceedings in this Assembly. If you adopt the rule that the majority here would force you to adopt, it allows any man at any time to start a contest in this House without having given any notice. All the testimony may be taken. It may then be presented to the House, even two years after the man's election or claimed election, and if some committee should then report that this man ought to have a seat, if you establish this precedent that is asked here to-day, it will be the duty of the House to con-

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. PROUTY. Certainly. Mr. SHERLEY. What does the gentleman say of the effect of the vote of the House just taken to consider the contest? Mr. PROUTY. That does not prescribe the rules under which it should be taken.

Mr. SHERLEY. But the point the gentleman makes is this: He admits the power of the House to deal with the matter without regard to the statute, but contends that inasmuch as the statute was not complied with and the House had made no other rule, therefore it should not be considered. I now call to his attention the fact that the question of consideration was based on whether a contest between the two gentlemen should or should not be considered, and on that question the House has just had a roll call and has determined to consider the contest. Does the gentleman consider that act a mere nullity?

Mr. PROUTY. What I claim is this: That question was not discussed in this House. It was not before the Members of this House, and the House had no real opportunity of deciding the question I am now presenting and urging. I had not presented my resolution; I had not offered the suggestion to the House. So that the gentleman and I have an understanding at the start. I concede the power of this House to do anything with its Members that it sees fit. It is limitless. There is no court in the world to which any man can take his case. That does not bar him, however, from making an appeal to the Members of this House to decide these questions along the lines of certain precedents. I assume and shall assume in my discussion that the gentlemen on that side of the House are just as ready and willing to follow the rules and regulations and precedents of this House as they are upon this side. If I can convince them, or if I can convince the gentleman, that there has never been a case like this ever heard in this House, I suspect that I will get their votes, notwithstanding they did vote a little while ago to take up the consideration of this matter.

Mr. SHERLEY, Mr. Speaker, the point I desired to bring to the gentleman's attention was simply this: Whether the question of consideration that he is now pressing should not have been presented prior to the other vote, and whether he is not now in effect asking a reconsideration on the part of the House.

Mr. PROUTY. I think not. What I am going to argue and prove by the precedents before I get through is that there is not a case where they have not prescribed that a notice shall be given, and the time and manner in which it shall be given. I do not believe I care to discuss with the gentleman the technical points that he raises, because it does not appeal to me, and I apprehend it does not appeal to the calm judgment of this House, that simply because you have voted to take up this resolution thereby you establish a new rule of contest in the

Now, I repeat what I said before. First, the statute fixes the manner in which this contest will be taken up. I grant that the House has the power to fix another and different rule, but it can not make that rule until the party desiring it shall appeal to the House or at least to the committee for the right to proceed in a different manner from that authorized by the statute, and by the rules and precedents of this House. The very furthest that is hinted at is in a case where an agreement was made between counsel outside fixing a different rule that it ought to have been presented at the first opportunity to the House for its ratification. The most that could possibly be done now under any rule established by the precedents would be for some one to offer a resolution here to ratify what these people have done and bring the matter up in that way. I repeat, that I defy the gentleman on that side to produce a precedent, in the long history of this legislative body, in which Congress has gone any further than that. They have never gone that far, but hinted that that was at least necessary.

Mr. SHERLEY. If the gentleman will permit, the gentleman does not mean to insist the power of Congress is limited to the initiative of a contestant?

Mr. PROUTY. I say to the gentleman Congress is limited by nothing except conscience.

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman said that, and immediately afterwards the gentleman said you could not go ahead until the contestant had by some motion undertaken to get Congress to establish a rule.

Mr. PROUTY. Of course I am assuming all the time that side of the House and this side of the House desired to move along the lines of law, order, and precedents. If these things arong the lines of law, order, and precedents. It these things appeal not to you, I say to you now your power is limitless.

Mr. BARTLETT. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. PROUTY. With pleasure.

Mr. BARTLETT. When was the suggestion first made that this notice was not filed in time; when the testimony was first taken or begun?

Mr. PROUTY.

Mr. PROUTY. Its.
Mr. BARTLETT. Or since Congress—
Mr. PROUTY. It was made at every stage of the proceedings; the record is perfectly full of it.

Mr. BARTLETT. Protesting against the proceedings to take testimony

Mr. PROUTY. All the way through; yes.

Mr. BARTLETT. So the contestee, then, has made the point from the beginning?

Mr. PROUTY. Certainly he has. Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. And no waiver?

Mr. PROUTY. And no waiver.
Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is not that point entirely conceded by the majority of the committee in its report, on page 3? Mr. PROUTY. The facts are.

Mr. BARTLETT. May I ask the gentleman another question?

With pleasure.

Mr. BARTLETT. Taking for granted that the gentleman's position is correct—and I do not grant it except for the question—that this contest is irregular and not in accordance with the statutes and is not before us in the way Congress may have heretofore or may hereafter have the power to inaugurate a proceeding of its own, has not the House got before it in a legal way what it could have had before it if it had instituted a contest by a memorial or application of the contestant to inaugurate and obtain this testimony; that is, we get all we could get about this case?

Mr. PROUTY. So far as that is concerned, I am not able to answer that question, that because a man does not serve notice upon me and gets into court is not any proof that if he had served the proper notice I could have gotten more proof. The question is upon the precedents of this House. Does this House now want to establish a precedent that would to-day allow some fellow to file a contest for your seat, and take evidence, you protesting at every stage, and then, because there was such a large majority on one side of the House as to make it possible, have you unseated? That is the problem you are up against. If you are not going to have orderly procedure, what kind are you going to have?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PROUTY. With pleasure. Mr. ALEXANDER. What right of the contestee has been prejudiced by the procedure adopted by a majority of the committee?

Mr. PROUTY. In reply to that I will say the majority of the committee has adopted no procedure. He has not asked the committee for any course of procedure; he has not asked to be permitted to do it in some other way. He went ahead after giving this notice and took his testimony, dumped it into the hands of the committee, and against the protest of some of the committee it was considered by the good members of the committee. The point I am raising now is that there was nothing there legally for them to consider any more than to dump a wastebasket into the committee room to-morrow from the seventh district of Iowa.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Assuming that is true and the action of the committee was irregular from beginning to end, yet what right of the contestee has been denied him or what privilege by their method of procedure?

Mr. PROUTY. I announced frankly to this House in my opening statement that I was here more for the purpose of fighting for a correct principle and to give a precedent in this House affecting all future time, than perhaps for this particular case. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Bowman] has only a couple of months to serve at the best, and it is not so vital to him except as a question of real right. But I say, and I repeat, if you adopt the principle and vote down the resolution I have offered, you have established a precedent that will harass many good men for many years yet to come.

Now, the provision of the Constitution to which reference is always had in this class of cases, and to which reference will be had often in the discussion, is section 5 of Article I:

Each House shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own Members.

Now, as I have said before, I concede that the House has unlimited power. Under that you will find this footnote:

The statutes of the United States provide specific methods for the institution of a contest as to the title to a seat in the House-

Citing Hinds' Precedents, 678, 697, and 706-

But the House regards this law as not of absolute binding force, but rather a wholesome rule not to be departed from except for cause—

And then it cites cases, all of which I will call to your atten-

And it sometimes by resolution modifies the procedure prescribed by the law. (I, 449 and 600.)

With the amount of time I have and with the questions that are being asked of me, I can not cite all these authorities that I would like to cite.

Mr. POWERS. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. PROUTY. I prefer not to do so at this time.
I first call attention to the case of Williams against Sickles, Hinds' Precedents, first volume, section 597. This was in the Thirty-sixth Congress, and I believe the first time that this question was raised after the passing of the statute of 1851. This case was in 1858. The party had not given the notice, and it was a question as to when the time would begin to run. It was a case of the board of canvassers not having made the ordinary returns. Therefore there was a question as to when it began. There was not a real chance for a man to give a notice within 30 days, and so application was made to the House for a new time in which to give a notice. After full consideration, which I can not have time to read-or at least all of it-I will quote what they said:

There obviously can arise cases not within the provision of that act in which the parties must apply to the House itself for authority to take any other than voluntary testimony.

And the House adopted the following resolution:

And the House adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That A. J. Williamson, contesting the right of Hon. D. E.
Sickles to a seat in this House as a Representative from the third district of the State of New York, be, and he is hereby, required to serve upon the said Sickles within 10 days after the passage of this resolution a particular statement of the grounds of said contest, and that the said Sickles be, and he is hereby, required to serve upon the said Williamson his answer thereto in 20 days thereafter; and that both parties be allowed 60 days next after the service of said answer to take testimony in support of their several allegations and denials before some justice of the supreme court of the State of New York, residing in the city of New York, but in all other respects in the manner prescribed in the act of February 19, 1851.

The next time the matter was considered was in the Thirtyninth Congress. In all of these cases that I have read, and I think I have read or examined every one in which this question has been up, no one has claimed that a contest could be had without some kind of notice. There was a strong contention when this matter was first up that even the House had not power to change those rules. On the other hand, there were a certain number of gentlemen who claimed that the Constitution gave the right to the House to proceed at any time and under any circumstances. I think that last provision is practically conceded by every man who has carefully considered this proposition. But in all of these cases the House has said that to maintain its orderly procedure it must insist either upon the party complying with the statute or asking and receiving new instructions and complying with them. As I have said before, I challenge any man on that side of the House, or on this side, for that matter, to show a precedent that has gone further than I have named. This matter came up again in the Thirty-ninth Congress, and the point was raised that as there was not given any notice there could not be any contest. But the committee that had the matter in charge reported:

The committee were therefore of the opinion that this case could not be heard by them in its present position and that it must be dismissed unless the House should authorize the parties to make up an issue and submit the same, with such evidence as each may be able to produce in relation to the same, to the committee of the House.

It was thereupon claimed by the contestant that he had been led into noncompliance, and so forth, by reason of the stipula-tion that was entered into. But the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That Dorsey P. Thomas, contesting the right of the Hon. Samuel M. Arnell to a seat in this House of Representatives from the sixth congressional district of Tennessee, be, and he is hereby, required to serve upon the said Arnell, within 8 days after the passage of this resolution, a particular statement of the grounds of said contest, and that said Arnell be, and he is hereby, required to serve upon said Thomas his answer thereto in 8 days thereafter, and that both parties be allowed 18 days after the service of said answer to take testimony in support of their several allegations and denials in all other respects in conformity to the requirements of the act of February 19, 1851, except that not more than 4 days' notice shall be required for the taking of any deposition under this resolution.

Now, I do not know that it would either interest or convince any Member of this House if I should go ahead and read all the other precedents, but I repeat the challenge that there is not a precedent in the American Congress that will sustain the course pursued by the majority of the committee in this case.

Mr. NYE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman permit me a question?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. PROUTY. Yes; I yield.

Mr. NYE. There was an issue made up, as in ordinary cases, by an answer to the notice, was there?

Mr. PROUTY. Yes.

Mr. NYE. And did the answer raise the objection that the notice was unauthorized by reason of being too late?

Mr. PROUTY. Yes; I think that in every pleading that was filed, and in every answer that was made, and in every appearance that was had, that objection was raised. You know I would not be able to speak with real accuracy as to all of them. But it appears throughout all the records.

Now, it must be apparent that there is some wisdom in this rule of the House, either that a man must give the notice prescribed, or appeal to the House for the authority, because, under the rules of this House, the House practically pledges $4,000 expenditure of money for every contest, and therefore every man, before he goes ahead and incurs that expense, before he requires his opponent to incur that expense, ought to appeal to the House and see whether they were going to allow him to present his case—whether they thought there was enough merit in it to justify it.

But as I say, no record was had for that, not a syllable of testimony was taken within the time or in the manner pre-scribed by statute. Not merely the notice, but everything else, went away beyond the time. But, so far as this case is concerned. I am confining my argument to the notice, because that is the jurisdictional question.

Now, I come to what may be considered as the second phase of this controversy.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. PROUTY. With pleasure.

Mr. PALMER. I want to understand the gentleman's contention on that. As a matter of fact is it not true that the statute provides that the testimony shall be taken within a certain number of days after the answer of the contestee has been served?

Mr. PALMER. Wa Was not all the evidence in this case so taken?

Mr. PROUTY. Yes; if you will take the 14th day of January as the date for serving notice, I will concede that all was regular from that on.

Mr. PALMER. The statute prescribes the time of notifying as to the contest.

Mr. PROUTY. The gentleman is begging the question. Mr. PALMER. I think the gentleman from Iowa is begging the question.

Mr. PROUTY. If you take January 14 as the starting point, then it is regular. But it started 32 days too late, and, according to my theory, it never caught up.

But now I come to the second question. Even if now the contestant were in this body you would not grant to him the right to enter a contest if you decided the question on its merits. In other words, he does not make an equitable showing as to why he did not file the contest in time. He does not bring himself within any equitable rule. As I called to the attention of the House a few moments ago, this election was held on the 8th of November. The results were declared on the 12th of November. The notice in this case was served on the 11th day of January, 1910.

The paper excuse that the gentleman gives for not filing his notice sooner was poor health. The sworn answer, as I will show by his testimony, is that neither he nor his attorney knew when the notice should be served, and I assume that we are all familiar with the proposition that ignorance of the law does not excuse anyone, and certainly not even Democratic candidates for Congress.

But Mr. McLean was not so disqualified that he was unable fairly to consider this matter of contest and to have given sufficient orders to start it. The evidence introduced in this case shows, if you will examine page 7, that Mr. McLean was taken with some intestinal trouble on the 31st day of October, eight days before the election. It further shows that on the 5th day of November, three days before the election, he had so far recovered that two of his political friends, Messrs. McKenna and Kehoe, visited him, and they had a conversation in regard to the campaign. You will find that stated on page 624 of the evidence.

On the same day, or the following day, the editor of the Times-Leader, a newspaper published in that town, had a conversation with him, and during the time that they were in consultation they were discussing a letter to be written, and which was written, in reply to certain things appearing in the This you will find stated on page 183 of the newspapers. evidence.

The day before the election, on the 7th of November, Mr. McLean read, examined, and approved an article that was to appear in the paper.

On the day of the election he rode out to the polls and voted. On the next day after the election, the 9th, he personally wrote and signed a check (p. 567)

On November 12 he examined bills and wrote and signed several checks, some of them for political bills (p. 716). On that day he learned the official results of the election (pp. 682-683).

Evidently the contestant was taken some worse after that, as is shown by the testimony on page 716, but during that time he signed at least one political check.

The contestant, however, improved rapidly, as is shown by the testimony. On the 28th day of November he had so far recovered that he began checking over his political bills and making checks for the same. On that day he personally drew and signed 30 political checks.

On November 29, 17 days after he knew the result of the election and 13 days before his time was up for serving his notice of contest, he personally, in his own handwriting, made out his expense account, as required and provided by the statutes of the State of Pennsylvania. This paper contained 43 items. On the 30th of November the contestant gave five political checks, all of which were written in his own handwriting and signed by him, as you will find stated on page 716 of the testimony.

On December 1 he drew one check, and had so far recovered that his doctor consented that he might go South. Before going he drew two checks, the morning that he left. He went South, and during the time he was down there he wrote numerous letters home, and yet never took any action in regard to this matter until either the 7th or 9th of January.

In addition to that here was his brother, a good lawyer, who was the manager of his campaign, who had had personal charge of the financial part of the campaign and, I guess, had had charge of all parts of it. His father was a good lawyer and they were members of the same firm. A mere word from him was all that would have been necessary: "Prepare a notice of contest in this case."

But you will find, by reading the testimony, that the real cause of this delay was admitted by the contestant on page 720, and that was that he did not know that the law required that the notice should be given within 30 days. If you will examine page 683 you will find that it is admitted that contestant's brother-manager did not know until in January that the 30 days' notice was required.

Not one of these facts is disputed. Does the House wish to go on record as saying that because a man does not know the law, and for 60 days allowed himself to become unacquainted with the law, when he is himself a good lawyer, shall excuse him from giving the notice that the law requires?

That is the proposition of law in a nutshell. I have not re lied upon my opinion as to this proposition, for I have a dozen authorities that I can call to the attention of the House. I have sent to the desk a resolution which I want the House to pass upon. I want you to pass upon it as lawyers. I want you to pass upon it as men. I do not wish any of you to pass upon it because it is Mr. Bowman, because it is Mr. McLean, or because it is a Republican, or because it is a Democrat. I want you to pass upon it because you are here now making a record that will bind this House for many years to come. It is as follows:

Resolved, That the case of George B. McLean against Charles C. Bowman, from the eleventh congressional district of Pennsylvania, be dismissed for want of jurisdiction because said alleged contestant gave no notice of contest within the time or in the manner prescribed by law, and because he has not asked or secured the consent of this House or of the committee for proceeding in any other manner than that prescribed by law and has not shown any equitable excuse for his failure to give the notice prescribed by section 105 of the Revised Statutes.

[Applause.]

Mr. LONGWORTH. Before the gentleman takes his seat I want to ask him a question. I observe that the majority of the committee lay a great deal of stress on the fact that the contestee made no protest to the House, although the gentleman says that he made protest to the committee. In any of the other cases which the gentleman has cited was a protest made by the contestee to the House?

Mr. PROUTY. Nobody seems to have thought of the question. I did not think of it and I did not suppose anyone would think of making a protest to the House against some one not bringing him here. My contention is that he has never been brought to the bar of this House or to the committee.

Mr. WILLIS. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. PROUTY. Certainly.
Mr. WILLIS. I had thought of that question and I looked over the casis carefully, but there is not a single one where that action was taken. Consequently it ought not to be expected to be done in this case.

Mr. ANSBERRY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 45 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, the majority of the committee report a resolution declaring that Charles C. Bowman was not elected a Representative in the Sixty-second Congress from the eleventh district of Pennsylvania and is not entitled to a seat therein, and fail to report any resolution bearing upon the right of the contestant, George R. McLean, to the seat which he claims as the duly elected Representative of that district. The reason for this rather unusual report on the part of the committee, as stated by the majority, is that the committee is not satisfied that the reasons alleged by the contestant are sufficient entirely to excuse him from serving upon the contestee his notice of contest within 30 days from the 12th day of November, 1910, and not believing that he should be a beneficiary of his own negligence, under the findings of the committee, they have not considered the case from the viewpoint of reporting a resolution to seat the contestant.

The contestant served no notice of the contest until 63 days after the result of the election had been determined by the board authorized by law for that purpose, and therefore failed to bring himself within the letter of the statute which provides that any person intending to contest an election of a Member of the House of Representatives shall give notice in writing within 30 days after the result of the election shall have been determined by the board of canvassers. The committee is undoubtedly right in its interpretation of this statute as merely directory and intended to promote the prompt institution of contests and to establish a wholesome rule not to be departed from except for cause. This interpretation is amply supported by the decisions of the House extending over many years, and must necessarily be correct in view of the constitutional provi-sion making the House the judge of the qualification and elec-tion of its own Members. The statute is in the nature of a rule intended for the guidance of a contestant, the protection of a contestee, and the convenience of the House itself.

Each of these purposes can be served in this case without Mr. PALMER. I would like to get started, but I will yield to the gentleman.

I want to ask the gentleman if, even though the rules of the House are subject to be changed by the House itself, until they are changed are they not binding on the House?

Mr. PALMER. Yes; but the House, being the sole judge of the qualifications of its own Members, has decided time after time, as the gentleman perfectly well knows, that it may and will waive this particular rule in order to get at the merits of the case and carry out its right and power as defined in the Constitution.

Mr. PROUTY. I would like to have the gentleman cite the case in which they made that waiver.

Mr. PALMER. In every case which the gentleman has cited

Mr. PROUTY. Not waive, but modify.
Mr. PALMER. In every case which the gentleman has cited the House has either expressly waived the rule by adoption of a new rule at the time or has impliedly waived the rule by a decision upon the merits of the contest, and I will get to those cases in a moment.

Mr. PROUTY. Is not the distinction this, that instead of waiving it they make a new rule?

Mr. PALMER. That is a waiver of the rule.

Mr. PROUTY. I think not. Mr. PALMER. If a man has failed to file his contest within 30 days and he comes into the House, or upon the report of the committee the House permits him to file the notice within 8 or 10 days after the passage of the resolution or the presentation of the report, while that is a new rule for him to operate under, of the report, while that is a new rate for him to operate under, it constitutes a waiver of the statute of 1851.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMER. Certainly.

Mr. DALZELL. In this particular case did the House take any action?

Mr. PALMER. No.
Mr. DALZELL. It did not?
Mr. ANSBERRY. Yes; the House referred it to a committee.
Mr. PALMER. Except, of course, that the contest was referred to a committee, but I imagine my colleague desires to inquire whether the House took any action permitting the contestant to have more than 30 days in which to file his contest.

Mr. DALZELL. That was my question. Mr. PALMER. The House up to this time has taken no such action, unless, as I think it entirely proper to argue, the House has now by the vote to consider these resolutions waived the strict compliance with the statute. As I understand the argument of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Prouty], he admits that the House has the right to do this thing.

Mr. PROUTY. That the House has the power to do it.
Mr. PALMER. He admits that the House has done it time after time, but he contends that the way in which it ought to be done by the House is on the application of the contestant himself sometime before the report of the committee comes into the House. It seems to me that is an argument which can only be characterized as absurd. In this case Mr. McLean could only go for consent to file the notice after the 30 days to the House to which he claimed to have been elected and of which he claimed to be a Member. 'The Sixty-first Congress, which was then in session, had nothing in the world to do with the thing. Each House is the judge of the qualifications of its own Members, and the first time that this House was open to him when he or somebody on his behalf might ask permission to extend the time in which to file the notice was on the 4th of April, 1911, after his notice had actually been served, after it had been answered upon the merits, after the testimony in chief had all been taken. So that he would have been asking a perfectly futile thing to have come then and asked to be permitted to have 30 days more in which to file his notice of contest.

Mr. PROUTY. Will the gentleman submit to a question just there? Might he not have appeared and had a ratification of what he had done?

Mr. PALMER. That is exactly what we are proposing now. If the gentleman's argument is correct, that the House might under the precedents-ought to, perhaps, where there is a meritorious case and where reasonable excuse has been offered by the contestant-in advance give this permission, certainly the House can and under the same circumstances has ratified the failure of the contestant to comply with the law; and we are now here asking the House to do precisely that thing, declaring to you two things—that upon the merits of the case Mr. McLean is entitled to the verdict of the House and upon the excuses which he offered he is entitled to equitable relief at the hands of the House, or, at least, he has made such a case as calls upon the House to ratify failure on his part to comply with the strict letter of the statute.

Mr. PROUTY. This House has been in session most of the time for 18 months and he has made no application, and yet, as a matter of fact, does not the gentleman know it to be a fact that much of this testimony was taken after this House convened?

Mr. PALMER. No; all of contestant's testimony in chief was taken before the first session of the Sixty-second Congress.

Mr. PROUTY. And much of it afterwards.
Mr. PALMER. The testimony in rebuttal was taken after the House met on the 4th of April, 1911.

Mr. PROUTY. If the House had had a chance to pass upon that question then, it might not have been necessary to have taken any testimony.

It seems to me this is the fairer way to do Mr. PALMER. the thing. The House has the right to know when an application comes to it to waive one of the strict requirements of its rules what are the merits of the contestant's case. It goes right to the root of the thing.

If he has no case the House ought not to waive the rule; if he has an absolutely good case or where it appears to the majority of the House that he has, or if it appears that he has a reasonable excuse for his failure to comply with the statute it constitutes good grounds for the House to waive the rule, because, after all, as one of the cases cited by the gentleman himself declares, the question which the House is interested in is not how these men file their pleadings, but who was legally elected to this House in the district. And that question can certainly be better considered by the House after the record is made up and the evidence all submitted than at the beginning of the proceedings. Now, I say from the standpoint of the rights of the sitting Member there can be no possible objection to the House considering this case upon its merits. The constitutional right of a Member to a seat in this House, whether he be a returned Member or one who knocks at its doors, because he claims to be the legal representative of his people, is a matter of too great importance to be decided upon the mere technicalities of pleading. It would develop a case of manifest injustice both to the Member and to the constituency which might thus be disfranchised in the House if the mere failure of a party to file a pleading within the period fixed by the rule should deprive a Member of his seat to which otherwise his title may be perfectly clear. There are many cases in the books where the House has taken this view of the statute, and especially where a reasonable and proper excuse is offered for the

Now let me recur for a moment to the cases cited by the gentleman from Iowa. In each of these cases, as I said a minute ago, there is in the committee report a statement to the effect that the House should follow this rule, yet in each one of these cases the House did what we are asking it now to do-waive the requirements of the rule, either impliedly or expressly.

For instance, take the first case cited in the gentleman's minority report and to which I think he referred in his oral argument. In the case of Bradley against Hynes, section 901, volume 2, Hinds' Precedents, the gentleman quotes the syl-

The notice of contest being served after expiration of the legal time and the testimony taken without regard to the statutes, the committee did not examine the case.

Well, I have long since gotten by the time in my life when I believed everything a syllabus writer declared was the law, or was so laid down as the law in the opinion of the court in the case which the syllabus covers. In that particular case they say:

There was no evidence to show that contestant had been elected, but, on the contrary, there was evidence that the sitting Member was entitled to a larger majority than the returns gave him.

Now, that is the finding, so that instead of it being true that the committee did not examine the case, the committee found upon the merits of the case and brought their report upon that finding before the House. Again, the gentleman cites Williamson against Sickles in 1 Hinds', 597. There was another case where the House expressly waived this rule, so that instead of being authority for the gentleman's position it comes back to the support of what I have said, that where a proper excuse is offered or the merits of the case are good the House will always waive the rule. In that case the committee reports:

The committee do not consider the law of 1851 as of absolute binding force upon this House, for by the Constitution "each House shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own Members," and no previous House and Senate can judge for them. The committee, however, consider that act as a wholesome rule, not to be departed from except for cause. * * There obviously can arise cases not within the provisions of that act, in which the parties must apply to the House itself for authority to take any other than voluntary testimony.

And, therefore, the committee reported a resolution permitting the contestant to serve notice within 10 days and con-testee to answer in 20 days, and the House agreed to the resolution.

In other words, the House refused to hold the party to the strict letter of the statute.

And the gentleman cites Thomas against Arnell, in volume 1, Hinds' Precedents, 680, which is the same kind of a case, except in that case neither notice nor answer had actually been served. Well, I can understand why the House might hesitate if a contestant failed to file any notice of contest or the contestee failed to file any answer, for, as said, in some of the cases the House will not permit the parties to agree to waive this law and make rules for themselves for the guidance of the House. And yet even in that case, despite the fact that there had been no notice and no answer, the committee recommended a resolution that the contestant be allowed 8 days in which to serve his notice of contest, and that the contestee be required to serve his answer within 8 days thereafter, and that both parties be allowed 18 days next after the service of said answer to take testimony in support of their several allegations and denials, according to the resolution. Now, I do not care whether it was before the testimony was taken or after the testimony was taken. The fact remains that again the House waived the strict requirement of its rule.

Mr. PROUTY. Will the gentleman yield to a question? Mr. PALMER. Yes; I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. PROUTY. Have you found any case where there was no notice given within the time that the House considered it, unless they prescribed another kind of notice, and that was given?

Mr. PALMER. Well, here is the proper way to put an inquiry about these cases.

Mr. PROUTY. I put the inquiry.
Mr. PALMER. Has the gentleman ever found a case where man was refused a seat in this House because he did not file notice of contest in time?

Mr. PROUTY. Plenty of them. Mr. PALMER. I beg the gentleman's pardon, but I would like to have him produce them.

Mr. PROUTY. I will. There is McDonald against Jones, and Pearce against Bell, in Hinds' Precedents, volume 2, section 1073

Mr. PALMER. Are those the gentleman's cases? Mr. PROUTY. That is one of them.

Mr. PALMER. Neither of them sustains the gentleman's proposition.

Mr. PROUTY. That may be true, but now I would like to have a definite answer to my question.

Mr. PALMER. Wait a minute until I finish this matter. Take Pearce against Bell, which the gentleman has cited. That was a case where no notice was given. The report says:

In this case the contestant gave no notice of contest, as required by law, and has taken no evidence to sustain the allegations of fraud and intimidation claimed by him to have been committed.

The official returns show that the contestee received 47,703 votes; that Thomas M. Bowen received 42,369 votes; that W. A. Rice received 2,032 votes; and the contestant received 157 votes.

On the merits of the case they refused to seat the contestant, and they so declared in their report in exactly the same way as McDonald against Jones, but they also say that the rule was not complied with. But you can not find a case where the refusal to seat a man who otherwise had a good case upon the merits was based upon the ground that he had failed in his pleading in the case

Mr. PROUTY. Now, will you be so kind as to answer another question?

Mr. PALMER. I will not go into that any further. the gentleman can cite any other case in his time which shows the contrary, I shall be glad to have him do it.

Mr. PROUTY. Does the gentleman refuse to yield? Mr. PALMER. I have read these cases with just as much care as the gentleman has read them, I have no doubt, and I assert, and the reading of the report in these cases will show that in all of them, where these remarks by the committee in reference to complying with this notice have been contained, the contestant has been refused a seat upon the merits of the case.

Mr. PROUTY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. PALMER. Yes; for one question.

Mr. PROUTY. Have you found a case reported in the books where no notice was given, where the contest was entertained by the House without prescribing another notice and compliance? Mr. PALMER. No; bu No; but that was not this case at all.

Mr. PROUTY. Within time?

Mr. PALMER. Well, there was a notice given in this case. The gentleman may or may not be familiar with the case of Moore against Funston, cited in Hinds, volume 2, section 1052, where the contestee failed to file his answer in the time required by the statute, and the House refused to disregard his case because he had not complied with the statutory requirements as to his pleading. Nor did the House, by formal resolution, waive the requirements of the statute. It was a waiver as is here asked, by action on the merits, despite the defective pleading.

In that case the committee said:

In that case the committee said:

The law requires that the notice of contest shall be served within 30 days after the determination of the result of the election, * * * and shall state specifically the grounds upon which contestant relies in the contest. It is also required by the law that a copy of the answer of contestee shall be served upon contestant within 30 days after service of the notice of contest.

If service by copy * * is to be regarded as a service contemplated by the statute, then the notice of contest was served on December 26, 1892, and the answer and countercharge 32 days after, on the 27th day of the following January. Or if personal service be required, it is found that such service of the notice of contest was made on December 28, 1892, and such service of the answer and countercharge 31 days later, on the 28th day of January, 1893. So in either case the answer was out of time.

If, then, we should closely apply to the notice of contest the rule of pleading upon which contestee insists and should apply to the answer, and would have to ascertain whether, upon the grounds of contest undoubtedly specified in the notice, contestant has made good his contention that he and not contestee was really elected in Congress from the second district of Kansas. If we should take this view of the matter, our labors would be greatly lessened, a considerable portion of the huge record in the case would be eliminated, and the finding would necessarily be in favor of contestant. We believe, however, that the real question to be determined is not so much whether this or that bit of evidence offered by contestant as a ground upon which he relies, nor yet whether contestee's answer and countercharge were made in due time, but rather which of the two claimants according to the record was really elected and is really entitled to a seat in the House of Representatives.

There the rule was waived where the contestee had failed to comply with the statute. Here it is the contestant who is dilatory. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander in this proposition.

Now, the gentleman cites the case of O'Hara against Kitchin, and I think with my reference to that I have referred to all the cases he has cited, either in his verbal or in his written argument. That case is reported in 1 Hinds, 730. That was a case where the contestant had not served his notice, and there was alleged to have been an agreement to waive, which the committee did not consider. But the point is that the committee says-and its report was adopted by the House-that the "committee might, indeed, in a case where testimony had been taken out of time, but with full opportunity to the other party to cross-examine the witnesses and submit evidence in reply, and where it was evident that this had been fully done, recommend to the House, if they find sufficient reason therefor, that the testimony be considered as if taken in time"; and the committee, upon the facts of the case, say that even if considered the testimony is insufficient to establish contestant's case.

You will find in all the reported cases that where the committees add to their findings the additional protection of this rule they always say they have considered the merits of the case sufficiently to declare to the House that no harm is done the contestant, because upon the merits he would not be seated, even if the preliminary formalities were all proper.

Now, this seems to be the committee's view; but the committee failed to consider the contestant's right to a seat upon the merits because of its belief that the excuses offered by the contestant were insufficient. I can think of no better excuse for the failure of a contestant to begin his proceedings in time than his physical incapacity to do the necessary work in connection therewith. A reading of the testimony makes it plain that McLean, before the election and for a period of nearly 60 days after the election, was a very sick man. Taken, in the middle of the night, a few days before election day, with a malady which, according to the physicians, made it not only imprudent but practically impossible for him to do any work, he continued under the care of his physicians, and under their orders to abstain from any effort, until after the time for filing the contest had expired. All that he was able to do—and this was against his physicians' orders-was to sign his name to a number of checks and state a simple account of his election expenses, copied from a check book. The performance of these slight tasks, which made no call upon his strength and subjected him to no mental effort, is not sufficient to rebut his own and his physicians' statement that the reason for his failure to bring the contest within the statutory period was that he was too ill to do so.

The bringing of a contest required a considerable examination of facts which must have developed and come to light only after the election; called for a decision upon a matter of large moment, which might involve the contestant in months of labor and great expense; and required an examination of the law and the decisions of the House of Representatives with respect to the reasons which might be alleged as grounds for the contest all of which were entirely beyond the mental and physical strength of a man so sorely beset with a serious illness as was

Mr. McLean at the time.

Immediately upon his return from Florida, where his physician had ordered him and where he continued to be under doctors' care, he undertook a consideration of all the facts in connection with the proposed contest and prepared and served The contestee was in no wise injured by the delay the notice. and does not claim that he was. No evidence which he otherwise might have secured to free him from the charges made had been in the meantime destroyed or its effect in any wise diminished. He has had all the opportunities for presenting his case upon its merits that he would have had if the notice had been served within the 30 days, and he has accepted those opportunities to present his case, which has been thoroughly argued upon the merits both in the committee and on the floor of the House.

In my judgment the record presents a case which so clearly convicts the contestee of many of the charges made against him that it would amount to an outrage upon the people of the eleventh congressional district of Pennsylvania if this simple technicality of the failure of the contestant to serve the sitting Member with notice within the statutory period should continue in this House as a Representative of the district one whose election was plainly secured by fraud and corruption; and it would be as great an outrage if the House, having purged itself of one whose election was thus secured, failed for a like reason to seat him who was duly and honestly elected by his people to serve them here.

I have studied with considerable care the voluminous record in this case, and I am satisfied that the most casual reading of the testimony would convince any Member that the committee is fully justified in its finding that the contestee was not honestly elected and is not entitled to the seat. While I do not wish to present myself as a witness in the case, my judgment is confirmed by my knowledge of conditions long existing in that district, gained from personal observation over many years. I am a native of Luzerne County, which is the eleventh congressional district, and I now live in an adjoining county. I have been interested in the observation of its political conditions ever since I have known anything about politics, and have reached the conclusion, which is shared by all observant citizens of the State, that nowhere in Pennsylvania have fraud and corruption and crime so thoroughly permeated the elections and so consistently thwarted the will of the people as in Luzerne Whether George R. McLean shall find himself a County. Member of Congress or not, he may have the satisfaction of knowing that he has performed a greater service for his people than many of those who have represented the district in the past in bringing this contest and exposing to the State and the country the deplorable conditions which there exist, for we can only hope for improvement when the people are forewarned by exposure and forearmed with publicity.

The three principal methods which have been employed for years in that county to control elections have been-

First. The intimidation of voters by mine bosses and foremen, of whom there are about 900 in the county.

Second. The use of the Prohibition Party column upon the ballot as a makeweight in a close contest between the two leading parties.

Third. The excessive use of money in the employment of men who, by bribery or otherwise, could control the votes of the more ignorant of the mine workers.

The county is the very center of the anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania. Mining is its principal industry, and mine of Pennsylvania. Milling is its principal industry, and mine workers make up the bulk of its voting population over an extensive part of the county. The mines are owned almost entirely by corporations which have believed that their interests could best be protected in Congress by Republican Members, and it is significant of the value of the process of intimidation by mine bosses and foremen as a factor in the result of the elections that in 20 years the Democratic candidate for Congress has only twice been elected, although the county is admittedly Democratic, and every successful Republican candidate has been either a coal operator or official, or an admitted representative of the coal-mining corporations.

All of the methods which I have mentioned were employed to secure the election of Mr. Bowman, and each of them, without question, changed a sufficient number of votes to control the

Mr. FARR. Mr. Chairman, how many of the mine foremen does the evidence show were interested in this contest?

Mr. PALMER. The testimony of Davis was that there was only one mine foreman whom he went after that he did not get, and according to the testimony he went after a big lot of them. Mr. FARR. Will the gentleman state the number of them?

Mr. PALMER. I can not give the number of them. I take it from Davis's own statement that he was entirely successful in his efforts to line up the mine bosses of Luzerne County.

Mr. FARR. Will the gentleman permit me to say that there were only 52 who were interested in this contest, and that there were 900 mine foremen in Luzerne County.

Mr. PALMER. I have stated that there were 900 foremen in Luzerne County.

Mr. FARR. And according to the evidence only 52 were interested in the contest.

Mr. PALMER. Oh, the gentleman is mistaken about that.

Mr. FARR. I am not mistaken.

Mr. PALMER. There is, in fact, no Prohibition Party in the county. Its organization has long since fallen into decay, but in practically every contest its name has been captured by the Republican Party in order to give to the election officers in the notoriously crooked districts a handy instrument to change the result of the contest where more votes have been returned for the Democratic candidate than for the Republican candidate. The method of using it is simple, reasonably safe from detection, and absolutely certain in its results. It is the custom when the ballots have been counted for the election officers to send in to headquarters at the county seat the number of votes cast for the candidates in the columns of the two chief parties. If these returns from the entire county indicate that the election is close, the election officers then return votes cast for the Republican candidate in the Prohibition column, and the present case is not the only instance in the county where a sufficient number of votes has been returned for a Republican candidate in the Prohibition column to give him a majority on the face of the full returns. McLean, as the Democratic candidate, received 13,834 votes; Bowman, as the Republican candidate, received 13,661—173 less. McLean's lead, however, was overcome by the 722 votes received by Bowman in the Prohibition column on the ballot. In my judgment the facts and circumstances surrounding this Prohibition vote returned for Bowman constitute such a fraud as would amply justify the House in throwing out the entire Prohibition vote. The original candidate of the Prohibition Party for Representative in Congress was one Robert P. Robinson, and the name of Bowman was substituted on or about the 21st day of October, 1910. This substitution was, without question, illegal, contrary to the rules of the Prohibition Party, and should be held void. The courts of Pennsylvania have uniformly recognized the right of a political party to make rules for its guidance and have received such rules in evidence as a guide to the courts in determining the validity of contested nominations. The rule of the Prohibition Party in Luzerne County prohibited the substitution for one of its regularly nominated candidates of a candidate of another party. The substitution in this case was, therefore, another party. The substitution in this case was, therefore, flatly against the party's rule, and, besides, was made by de facto officers of the party organization, who were totally un-authorized to make it, acting as individuals and not as the executive committee of which they were members—a method which is directly contrary to the decisions of our State courts. The certificate of substitution was not framed in accordance with the statute permitting the substitution to be made, and according to the evidence was not verified by affidavit, as required by the same statute. No reported case in Pennsylvania can be found which would have supported Bowman in his contention that he was the legal nominee of the Prohibition Party and entitled to a place upon the ballot in the Prohibition Party column if it had been attacked in the courts of the State.

I admit the force of the argument that this question should have been settled in the State courts in advance of the election, and that McLean, having taken the chance of a verdict at the polls, is estopped from now questioning the validity of Bowman's nomination upon the Prohibition ticket; but it must be remembered that these substitutions are a sort of "star chamber" proceeding. They are filed in the office of the secretary of the Commonwealth at Harrisburg, and unless a careful guard is maintained constantly over that office the public is kept in ignorance of the name of the substituted candidate until the official ballots appear on election day. As a matter of fact, McLean learned of this substitution before election day, but not until after the expiration of the time, fixed by the statute, for the filing of exceptions to substitutions. He, therefore, never had his day in court upon this proposition, and the Prohibition nomination, which otherwise would have gone down under the dead weight of the unanimous decisions of the Pennsylvania courts, became the instrument for accomplishing Bowman's election, when it became clear that the voters who agreed with his political convictions, as Republicans, were in the minority in the county. Bowman was not a Prohibitionist and there was nothing in his record which would urge Prohibitionists to support him. On the contrary, there was much in his methods of conducting the campaign and in his frank catering to the liquor interests of the district which would have alienated the support of real Prohibitionists, if, indeed, there were any such in the county.

Mr. FARR. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. PALMER. I am quoting from the evidence.

Mr. FARR. Does the gentleman not know that Mr. Bowman was president of the Antisaloon League in the State of Pennsylvania?

Mr. PALMER. Yes; but I also know that according to the evidence his conduct in the campaign could not have secured for him the support of the antisaloon people in the district, as the gentleman knows.

It needs only a glance at the returns to show that the Pro-hibitionists in fact did not vote for him. While Bowman re-ceived 722 votes on the Prohibition ticket, the Prohibition candidate for governor, M. F. Larkin, whose name was at the head of the ticket, received but 242 votes. Yet Mr. Larkin lived in a neighboring county, was and is one of the best known and most consistent Prohibitionists in the country, and was and is admittedly held in high esteem by all of the men of that faith, who have uniformly supported him, when a candidate for effice, to the limit of their strength.

In one district, the third ward of the borough of Plymouth, Bowman received 28 votes on the Prohibition ticket, although no vote was cast for any other Prohibition candidate in the district, and only 1 vote had ever been cast for a Prohibition candidate at any previous election. In another, the sixth west district of the township of Plymouth, Bowman received 6 votes on the Prohibition ticket, while no other Prohibition candidate received any vote, and no Prohibition candidate at any election had ever received a vote in the district. These are simply two instances, showing a condition which obtained in many other districts. In some of them Prohibition votes had been returned in previous elections, because resort was made to the same trick as was here prepetrated, although the districts are not of a kind where men would vote the Prohibition ticket, for the voters are in many cases made up entirely of foreign-born mine workers whose views upon the temperance question are well known in the community.

The illegal substitution of Bowman's name as the Prohibition candidate is of itself probably insufficient to justify the throwing out of the Prohibition vote, but taken in connection with his conduct during the campaign in catering particularly to the nonprohibition vote, and with the well-known reluctance of the Prohibitionist to refuse to vote for one who openly espeuses the cause of the liquor traffic, and with the well-known habit of the Prohibitionist to vote his straight party ticket, it is inconceivable that Bowman should have received in the Prohibition column three times as many votes as were cast for the head of the ticket.

The fact admits of no better proof than that which was adduced in this case. It is circumstantial, but it is convincing; and the conclusion is simply irresistible that the Prohibition column was used to pad the total vote to be returned for Bowman, in order to accomplish his election upon the face of the returns. Taken in connection with the illegal substitution of Bowman's name for the regular Prohibition candidate, which was the entering wedge of the fraud intended to be practiced, it constitutes as complete and perfect a fraud as ever changed the real result of a popular election.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman briefly describe the

Mr. FITZGERALD. Pennsylvania ballot?

Mr. PALMER. The Pennsylvania ballot, which the gentleman asks me to describe, really beggars description. It is a blanket ballot with the name of the candidates for the various offices segregated into what are called groups around the name of the office for which the parties are candidates. In most elections it is upon a sheet of paper a yard long and sometimes a yard wide, and they have been very much larger than that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RANDELL of Texas). The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. ANSBERRY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman 15 minutes more.

Mr. PALMER. On the first column appears the names of all the parties with what is called the party square immediately after the name. In each of the other columns appear the names of the separate candidates for office in the different parties. A vote in the party square will vote all the candidates for office, wherever found, upon the ballot who are there as candidates of the party beside whose name the cross is made. So that in this instance the man who desired to vote the straight Prohibition ticket would, of course, vote opposite the word "Prohibition," in the first column of the ticket. If he desired to cut his ballot and vote the Republican ticket for all except Congressman, we will say, he was obliged to mark all the candidates for whom he desired to vote upon the ballot.

But even if the House should determine that McLean lost his right to complain of the illegal substitution of Bowman as the Prohibition candidate by his failure to contest that question in the State courts, or if the House should be of the opinion that the fraud in connection with the vote returned for Bowman on the Prohibition ticket is not sufficiently proven, still there can be no question that the same evidence which justifies the unseating of the contestee makes it follow logically that McLean was duly and honestly elected and is entitled to his seat.

In other words, the corruption evidenced by the liberal use of money by Bowman and his campaign manager for the hiring of "special watchers" and workers largely in excess of the number allowed for each district by the corrupt practices act of Pennsylvania, the fraud perpetrated in the filling of vacancies on election boards, the violations of law found in the absence of ballots from the official ballot boxes before the polls were opened, and in the conduct of watchers who entered the polls to see that they voted the way the watchers desired," and in the failure to seal the ballot boxes after counting all ballots for the evident purpose of making it easy to change the returnsall were present in districts which gave to Bowman in the aggregate a larger majority than he was given on the face of the full returns in the entire district. These evidences of fraud, of crime, and of corruption in particular instances in these various districts are such as under all the decisions of Pennsylvania and most of the precedents of the House not only justify but compel the rejection of the entire poll of the districts affected.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. PALMER. Yes; although I have but little time.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Would the gentleman apply that same argument with the same eloquence and force to the case of a Democratic nominee who secured a place on a Republican ballot? Would it apply to a case of that kind?

Mr. PALMER. I do not propose to be led off into a discussion of the gentleman's Philadelphia political troubles. It is notorious, it is common knowledge all over Pennsylvania, that in Luzerne County the Prohibition Party column has been used for the purpose I here state.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman would not throw out the whole 700 Prohibition votes?

Mr. PALMER. I would, for fraud.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. If a Democrat was nominated on the Republican ticket-

Mr. PALMER. It would make no difference if he was a Democrat or a Republican. I am not discussing politics. If the Democratic Party in any part of Pennsylvania had been in the habit of resorting to this trick to thwart the will of the people, either of Luzerne County or of Philadelphia, I would be as strongly opposed to it as I am when Mr. Bowman, a Republican, had used the trick.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I wanted the gentleman to be fair with regard to the 700 voters; he surely would not deprive the voters of their right of franchise.

Mr. PALMER. They do not represent voters; there are no Prohibition votes in the districts where these votes were re-turned in the Prohibition column. They were returned in the column for the purpose of changing the effect or the result.

Mr. AINEY. Will the gentleman yield right there? Mr. PALMER. I am sorry, but I have not the time.

I have read all of the testimony which bears upon the fraud and corruption in the various districts of the county, and have picked out those districts where the evidence of fraud, crime, and corruption is so complete that no reader of the testimony could doubt the result was largely influenced, if not entirely controlled, thereby. These districts are

The ninth ward of the Borough of Nanticoke. The second ward of the Borough of Duryea, Hazle Township, twelfth district.
Nanticoke, eleventh ward.
Foster Township, northwest district.
Foster Township, Hazlebrook district.
Plymouth Township, sixth west district.
Hazle Township, third district.
Duryea, fourth ward.
Foster Township, Griffton district.
Wilkes-Barre, sixth ward, second district.

In these districts, upon the face of the returns, Bowman received 1,114 votes while McLean received 383, a majority for Bowman of 731. If it be true, therefore, that in each of these districts there was present such an excessive use of money as to indicate that it was a purchase of influence or votes and therefore "unlawful" in the language of the Pennsylvania courts, or such irregularities in the composition of election boards, accompanied by the liberal use of money, or the employment of watchers who, according to the evidence, went into the ballot booths to see that the electors voted the way the watchers desired, or such other improprieties as are sufficient under the decisions to reject the poll, a sufficient number of votes would necessarily be lost to Bowman to change the result of the election and compel the conclusion that McLean was elected by a majority of the honest and uncorrupted vote of the district.

Mr. MURRAY. May I ask the gentleman to give us such information as he can as to the Pennsylvania decisions in cases of this sort?

Mr. PALMER. I have quoted the Pennsylvania decision in my résumé of the irregularities here presented to show fraud and corruption.

Mr. MURRAY. "And it is customary to throw out the votes in the district so affected?

Mr. PALMER. Yes. For the irregularities I have stated as being present in this case, following the language of the courts of Pennsylvania.

Mr. FARR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield at that

Mr. PALMER. I can not yield. I want to finish what I have to say.

Mr. FARR. This is just a simple question.

Mr. PALMER. Of course, it is a simple question; but it is going to take time.

Without going into detail or reading the testimony bearing upon the frauds in these various districts, it may be well to cite some instances which are simply typical of the conditions which existed in all of the districts which I have named. For instance, in the ninth ward of the borough of Nanticoke, though the law of Pennsylvania expressly restricts the number of watchers for a party at each polling place to 3, the evidence shows that 15 men were paid to work for the contestee, 1 of them being a mine boss; that another man was paid as much as $150 to employ watchers in the district which embraces this voting place, and despite the plain mandate of the Pennsylvania statute, which requires bystanders to fill vacancies on the board existing at the time the polls were opened, a Republican was appointed minority inspector by a Republican judge and majority inspector, leaving the Democratic Party without representation on the board.

In the second ward of the borough of Duryea the contestee and his campaign manager paid the president of a Polish club $25 to "treat the boys," and gave to the chief of police of the town $150 to secure special watchers in excess of the number allowed by law, while other men received altogether as much as $745 for use in the district. Here again were fraudulent and illegal proceedings with relation to the formation of the board and the absence of the ballots from the ballot books before the polls were opened.

Mr. FARR. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. PALMER. No. In Hazle Township, twelfth district, there were at least nine special watchers employed, and a considerable sum of money paid by an officer of a mining company, who instructed the men employed as watchers in a way that leaves no doubt of the purpose for which the money was paid.

In addition to the special watchers mentioned one person, a local superintendent of schools, was given $150 to pay either the teachers or for watchers, it does not plainly appear which.

In the borough of Nanticoke, in one ward, there were 8 extra watchers, in another 11, in another 4, while as much as $550 was paid to one man for the purpose of employing special watchers.

In Foster Township, Hazlebrook district, the superintendent of mines received $110, a district where only 73 votes were cast ship, northwest district, there were five Republican watchers at the polls who marked ballots, according to the evidence, entering the booths "to see that they voted the way the watchers desired." In this district no other evidence of frank need here presented when it is stated that 118 votes were returned as cast, while the entire registration in the district is 118, an outpouring of the citizenship in this district which is phenomenal.

In the township of Plymouth, sixth west district, it cost Bowman $550 to pay the special watchers unauthorized by the law to receive a mere 74 votes in the return to McLean's 17.

In Hazle township, third district, there were at least five special watchers who entered the voting booths and marked the ballots of the voters, notwithstanding the protests of the Democratic watcher, and against the provisions of the law of Pennsylvania, which provides that no man can receive assistance in the booth unless he asks for it and declares his physical inability to mark his ballot. In this district there was the evidence of at least one case of open and flagrant bribery with the way for fraud made easy by a board composed of Republicans only.

In the fourth ward of the borough of Duryea at least $55 was paid for special watchers, the usual price being $5 each, enough to take care of one out of every five of those who voted for Bowman. In addition at least $50 seems to have been used in this particular district, and perhaps a part of the $150 given to the chief of police of Duryea, so that from $105 to $255 was used in this small district to produce the 63 votes for Bowman, while McLean received 33.

In Foster township, Drifton district, a coal company foreman was given $50 by Bowman's manager, with instructions to "go out and get Democratic votes." Apparently six men were employed and paid for acting as special watchers in the district, and the mine foreman went out and got the votes to the extent of Bowman 40, McLean 15.

In the second district of the sixth ward of Wilkes-Barre the Democratic election officers were apparently persuaded to absent themselves from the polls, while the sum of at least $142 was furnished to various persons to pay special watchers in this and one or two adjoining districts. Some of this money went to one of the election officers, who, though a former Republican county chairman, was appointed a clerk by a member of the board who was supposed to be representing the Democratic Party.

The corrupt practices act of Pennsylvania is that in name only, and it has come to be a joke throughout every part of the Commonwealth. It permits the expenditure of moneys for such highly elastic purposes as the "dissemination of information," the "employment of watchers to the number allowed by law," and the "transportation of voters" to and from the polls. employment of watchers to the number allowed by Under the protection of these broad terms, much outright bribery has been perpetrated in some districts of Pennsylvania. The law has been entirely inadequate to prevent, if, indeed, it was intended to prevent, the kind of corruption which has been common in districts like certain portions of Luzerne County. But where a candidate or his political manager boldly goes beyond the broad bonds of our corrupt practices act and finds even its liberal terms insufficient to cover all the ramifications of his improper practices, the conclusion of fraud and corruption sufficient to vitiate an election must be certain.

In all of the districts which I have named, though the law permits but three watchers for a political party, the contestee, or his political manager, hired and paid, in some instances, as many as 15 watchers for a single district, who served no purpose covered by the law of Pennsylvania which permits their payment, but who were paid as a convenient, well-appearing method of not only bribing the individual who received the money, but controlling the ignorant vote of those whose ballots the watchers would succeed in marking,

All of the irregularities which I have here mentioned appear in the testimony of the witnesses in this case absolutely uncontradicted. They must be accepted as the facts, and they show in the aggregate in the districts mentioned such willful and open violations of the law as lead certainly to the conclusion that the result announced was not the honest vote of an uncorrupted electorate but a return purchased with money and made possible by crime.

I want to say in conclusion, my colleagues in this House, that if after a careful study of this case I were not entirely convinced that it is only a simple act of justice that Mr. Bowman should be deprived of this seat and Mr. McLean put there to represent his people I would not argue for Mr. McLean. I am not influenced by the fact that he will sit upon this side of the House. The political phase of it has nothing to do with bringing my mind to a conclusion upon the study of the testimony in this case and my knowledge of what has happened in Luzerne County. Mr. McLean has done a service not only to his own people but to the people of Pennsylvania in exposing the corruption, the fraud, and crime which have been rampant in Luzerne County for years; and I ask you, not in the name of any Democratic Party in Pennsylvania but in the name of the decent citizenship of our State, to put your stamp of disapproval on this sort of conduct, so long prevalent in that county, and seat here a man who was honestly and fairly elected to the place. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. PROUTY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Towner].

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker, section 105 of the Revised Statutes provides-

Whenever any person intends to contest an election of any Member of the House of Representatives of the United States he shall, within 30 days after the result of such election shall have been determined by the officer or board of canvassers authorized by law to determine the same, give notice in writing to the Member whose seat he designs to contest, of his intention to contest the same, and in such notice shall specify particularly the grounds upon which he relies in the contest.

I desire to call attention, in the first place, to the fact that this is not a rule of the House alone. This is a law of the United States that was passed by the House of Representatives with the concurrence of the Senate and the approval of the President. It stands as the law of the land until it shall be abrogated or repealed. I know that the House of Representatives may disregard and violate this law. I know that the Constitution gives to the House of Representatives the power to be exclusively the judge of the qualifications of its membership, but certainly all rules of right and of justice and of a due regard for proper and lawful procedure ought to call upon the House of Representatives to regard the law.

Commenting upon this provision of the statutes a majority of the committee make a few observations that I desire to call to the attention of the House. First, they say that under a strict construction of this section of the statute the committee would have dismissed the case, but the statute is, in fact, merely directory. I decline to follow that statement of the committee as the law. There is no rule that I know of directly in point as a precedent; neither is there a precedent in other similar portions of law where notices of this kind are required.

I believe the notice that is required to be served in this case is analogous to the notice that is required, for instance, by municipalities, that no claim shall be prosecuted against them unless it shall have been presented within a certain length of Such statutes exist all over the United States, and it has been time and time again contended that such a provision of the law was merely directory, but the courts have universally, so far as I know, held that such a provision of the law was not directory, but that it was absolutely jurisdictional; that it was important to save to the municipalities the right to know when claims should be presented, in order that it might preserve its evidence if need be, and the same rule and the same reason exist in the case that we have here. It is not a directory provision. It is a jurisdictional provision, upon which the right to hear and determine a contest exists, and unless it shall be complied with, then the law has not been complied with. The committee go on further to say that it was intended-to establish a wholesome rule, not to be departed from except for cause.

There is no provision of law that says the departure shall be made for cause. There have been departures made for cause, but, as has been well shown in this debate, the departures have been such as do not constitute a precedent for this case. But under the law there is no provision for an exception of the case, and it is only because this House of Representatives is both the judicial tribunal that hears the cause and the legislative body that makes the law that it can at one and the same time make a law and hear the cause about which the law is made. Under ordinary circumstances a judicial proceeding proceeds from the law-making power, which is a distinct body separate and apart from it.

In the case here we have the right-not the right; but the power, being both the lawmaking power and the judicial body that shall determine the question under the law, to determine what shall be the rights of the parties to it. Now, if we turn to the precedents of the House of Representatives, we shall find that the law has been departed from in certain cases. Those cases have all been cases where for some reason or other the notices were not served at all or not served in time, as has been shown in this case. Then the parties have come before the House of Representatives and asked them to make a new law, or rather a new rule, that would allow them the opportunity of serving legally the notice within the contemplation of the law, and in all such cases there has been a rule of the House fixing the time for notice, so that there shall be in such case, first, an opportunity for the House to determine whether it ought to grant the hearing, and second, the right of fixing a time that shall be under the particular facts in that case a reasonable and proper time. This House, in this case, ought to have the right, first, to determine whether or not it would be fair to the defendant and proper under the circumstances to bring him before the bar of the House to answer to the charge. If, under the circumstances shown, the House of Representatives should have been satisfied that it would be unfair to him to allow notice to be served and to bring him before the bar of the House for trial, then I judge that the House would not have gone further with the proceedings. But nothing of the kind has been attempted, and we are now asked to take this further and certainly unwise and unjustifiable step that has never before been taken by the House of Representatives, and say that it is not necessary in any case to serve notice; that at any time during the service of a Member of the House of Representatives a contest may be instituted, long after the witnesses may have been spirited away by the contestant, and the contestee would have no opportunity to prove his right to his seat,

This is now the precedent that is sought to be established by the House of Representatives.

Mr. BARTLETT. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. TOWNER. Certainly.
Mr. BARTLETT. I understood from the inquiry I made of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Proury] that the contestee in the beginning and all the way through had protested against this contest by reason of a noncompliance of the statute in filing a contest. That is true, I suppose?

Mr. TOWNER. Yes; I understand so. Mr. BARTLETT. Now, is there any statement in the record-I have not had my attention called to it in the report-in which the contestee undertakes to say that he is at a disadvantage by reason of the lateness of the filing of the contest or that his witnesses would not be accessible and evidence obtainable as they would have been had the contest been filed in the time prescribed by law? Does he say that he is put at a disadvantage by reason of that fact? I am inquiring of the gentleman for information.

Mr. TOWNER. I do not know of anything of that kind in the record, I will say to the gentleman, but the gentleman is too good a lawyer to contest the proposition that the law never requires that.

Mr. BARTLETT. I know this to be the fact. When I first came to this House I served upon the Committee on Elections for six years and we had quite a number of cases to consider and quite a variety of questions. One of the first cases which came before that committee was a case from Virginia, in which the contest had not been filed for quite a long time. the case of Jones against some one from Virginia.

Mr. TOWNER. I think that is the case of MacDonald against Jones to which the gentleman refers.

Mr. BARTLETT: It was a case from one of the Virginia districts.

Mr. TOWNER. In that case he served notice of contest, but it had not been served within the time required by the statute, and the committee concluded that with reasonable diligence the notice might have been served within the prescribed time, and therefore the application in that case was denied. In other cases it has been granted, but this is the proposition: There has never been an opportunity for this contestant to appear before the House and show whether or not this was or was not unreasonable. There never has been an opportunity for him to consider and defend himself against the proposition until now that this case should be heard upon a contest that was filed. I judge that every man here who is a Representative would say that in any case where there might be a contest 30 days after the period had elapsed which the statute prescribes he would have the right to say, "There is no longer any necessity for me to preserve my evidence or to make my defense, because the time has gone by when notice of a contest can be served under the provisions of the law."

The law of the United States is express upon the proposition that these notices must be served within 30 days. And there is no longer any reason to preserve his testimony, or his defense, or to make ready for a contest and trial. That certainly is the law, and it is only fairness and justice as well. Mr. BARTLETT. May I ask the gentleman another question? I do not desire to take up his time.

Mr. TOWNER. I yield.

Mr. BARTLETT. I understand the committee itself concluded that the contest was not filed in time?

Mr. TOWNER. I understand so. I am going to comment on

Mr. BARTLETT. I will not anticipate the gentleman's argu-

Mr. TOWNER. Thirty-two days later than the law-

Mr. BARTLETT. Then, having the testimony before the committee, obtained in this way, which is said to be the way prescribed by law, the committee goes on and inquires into the right of the contestee to his seat, and they report that he is not entitled to it, according to the testimony obtained. Is that the case?

Mr. TOWNER. Yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Towner] has expired.

Mr. PROUTY. I yield five minutes more to the gentleman from Iowa

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker, it is not necessary for us to consider the equitable circumstances that are alleged and urged now by gentlemen on the floor of this House. The committee considered that, and they found that insufficient. Here is the language of the committee itself:

The committee is not, however, satisfied that the reasons alleged by the contestant are sufficient entirely to excuse him from serving upon the contestee his notice of contest within 30 days from the 12th day of November, 1910, and not believing that he should be a beneficiary of his own negligence under the findings of the committee they have not considered the case from the viewpoint of reporting a resolution to seat the contestant.

In other words, they act upon the grounds and go just as far with regard to the rights of the contestee as if the notice had been properly served. They do not give him any benefit from it. But they punish the contestant for his negligence and say that he shall not have his seat because he has not legally served a notice. I submit the committee is unfair to the contestant. If the notice is sufficient to deprive the contestee of his seat, it ought to be sufficient to sustain the contestant's right. And if it is insufficient to sustain the contestant's right, it ought to be considered insufficient to deprive the contestee of his right. The committee found the contestant guilty of negligence in not serving the notice as required by law, and his equitable excuses valueless, and punish him therefor by depriving him of his seat. But they find the notice good and sufficient to deprive the contestee of his seat, notwithstanding the negligence and want of equitable grounds excusing it. But these facts, if utterly illogical and indefensible, are significant in showing that the majority of the committee knew that the contestant was guilty of negligence in not filing his notice of contest in time.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman permit?
Mr. TOWNER. Certainly.
Mr. COOPER. I think that which the gentleman has just read is the most significant thing in their report. The majority says, does it not, that it not only knows, but expressly finds, that this contestant was guilty of contributory negligence? The report says:

And not believing he should be a beneficiary of his own negligence under the findings of the committee.

Is not that an express finding of this committee?

Mr. TOWNER. It certainly is. Not only is that true— Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. TOWNER. If you will allow me to finish this sentence.

Not only is that true, but it shows that the committee had carefully considered the equitable reasons that have been urged by the contestant in support of the proposition that he was urging, that he ought to have the right to be heard, notwith-standing his own negligence. They say they admit his own negligence. They say that the reasons he urges excusing it are not good, which disposes of the equitable feature of the case, and punish him for his negligence and his want of equitable features by saying he shall not have a place in the House of Representatives himself.

I will now yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr.

MOORE].

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. And the majority of the committee having conceded that the contestant had no right in the premises, would not the effect of the passage of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Palmer] to seat the contestant, Mr. McLean, be to pay out of the Treasury of the United States substantially two years' salary to a man who had not qualified as a contestant in this House? And would it not, in addition to that, mean that there would be paid to him also a premium of $2,000, which is offered by the Congress of the United States to every contestant who undertakes to harass a sitting Member?

Mr. TOWNER. It certainly would have that effect.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Towner] has again expired.

Mr. ANSBERRY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HOLLAND].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Virginia

[Mr. Holland] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. Speaker, I have reached a conclusion in this case after a very careful consideration of all the evidence and arguments of counsel, and I feel that it is my duty as a member of the Committee on Elections No. 1 to give the reasons for that conclusion. I shall endeavor, however, to discuss this case upon its merits only, and shall not consider the technical questions that have been raised by my friends on the other side.

The contestee in this case made a motion to dismiss this contest and suppress the testimony upon the ground that the contestant had not filed his notice of contest within the time prescribed by statute. The contestant alleged that he was prevented by serious illness from serving his notice of contest at an earlier date. This may or may not be under the circumstances of this case a sufficient excuse, but the motion, in my opinion, should be denied for the following reasons:

First. It is conceded that the evidence was fairly and regularly taken and completed. While it was being taken the contestee was at all times represented by able and astute counsel. There is not a particle of evidence to show that the contestee was in any way prejudiced by the delay. It follows, therefore, that this record of the testimony presents contestee's case as fully and as completely as if it had been made under the direction and supervision of a committee appointed by this House. Under such circumstances I am unwilling to allow a mere technical objection to prevent its consideration for any legal purpose

The House has an undoubted right at any time to examine into the facts and circumstances upon which the credentials of one of its Members may rest. And if upon such examination the facts disclose that a sitting Member has secured his seat by corrupt and fraudulent practices, the House should have, and I believe has, an undoubted right to unseat him. And it has this right whether a valid contest is pending or not. The question of the sitting Member's title to his seat is the only question involved, and not the right of another thereto.

I believe, therefore, that this evidence, thus fairly taken and completed, should be examined for the purpose of determining the contestee's right to a seat in this body. Any other conclusion would establish a precedent which would permit a mere technical objection to conceal the grossest frauds and most glaring political irregularities.

Second. The corrupt practices act of Pennsylvania provides that if upon certain proceedings it shall be ascertained that a randidate has incurred illegal election expenses or has consented to the incurring of illegal election expenses, then his tlection shall be declared void and his seat vacant. The great State of Pennsylvania has determined that such a law is necessary to secure the purity of its elections. This law ought to be rigidly enforced. The practice of expending large sums of money in all congressional elections in this district has become a custom. Upon such a practice this House should place its seal of disapproval. If, therefore, the evidence submitted shows that the sitting Member has incurred illegal election expenses or has consented to the incurring of such illegal expenses, then he should suffer the penalty prescribed by the statute of his State. This should be done in the interest of pure elections and for the purpose of securing to every candidate for Congress the protection of the laws of his own State. Otherwise, in the absence of Federal statute, a man might retain his seat in this body although he had not been fairly and honestly elected.

For these reasons I believe that this evidence should be examined and upon such evidence the right of the sitting Member to his seat determined. An examination of the evidence shows the following facts:

First. A candidate for Congress willing to spend any amount of money necessary to secure his nomination and election.

The contestee knew that candidates for office in Luzerne County were expected to make large expenditures of money for election purposes and expressed a willingness to follow the When he sought the indorsement of his candidacy by the Prohibition committee he told Ricketts, "That anything that was necessary he would furnish" (p. 14); but Ricketts declined for the reason that "the Prohibition Party was not in for graft in any manner or form" (p. 14). When he sought the indorsement of the Keystone Party he told Long that "He was in this thing to win, and that he was going to win"; and he told Hendershot, "I am as good a fighter as you are. I will spend $30,000" (p. 297). When he approached Jonathan R. Davis and requested him to act as his campaign manager and Davis told him it would be an expensive campaign, the contestee replied, "When C. C. Bowman takes a bath he don't stop at washing his feet" (p. 217). [Laughter.]

These facts show a commendable ambition to go to Congress, but they likewise show a willingness to have that ambition gratified by the illegal purchase of a seat in Congress, and this should be severely condemned.

Second. The selection of one Jonathan R. Davis, a corrupt and unscrupulous politician, to place his money.

This same Jonathan R. Davis had been the chairman of the Republican Party of Luzerne County for years and had conducted many campaigns in which large sums of money were used. In 1906 this same man Davis was chairman of the Republican Party and conducted the campaign in that county for the elec-tion of the Republican ticket. After the election "there was a storm of indignation over the alleged falsification of the returns and the corrupt use of money" (p. 764). Certain election officials were indicted and convicted, and the expense accounts of this same man Davis were excepted to. The contestee in this case contributed to the fund for the prosecution of these officials and must have known that the campaign conducted under the leadership of Davis was very generally condemned by the good people of Luzerne County (pp. 764-765).

In the contestee's own primary election it was found that

Davis had expended large sums of money in the conduct thereof and that certain election officials at Warrior Run, presumably selected by him, had been guilty of such glaring frauds that they were indicted and convicted therefor (p. 489).

In the regular election it is shown by his own evidence that Davis acted the part of a corrupt politician. His illegal expenditures of money, his falsification of his expense accounts (p. 90), his efforts to secure Democratic influence and votes by the questionable use of money, and his contradictory and evasive answers to proper questions relative to his political acts in the conduct of the election tend strongly to prove his guilt. And yet the contestee continued this man as his political manager and allowed him, in the conduct of his election, to expend larger sums of money than could have been necessary for legitimate purposes.

Third. A corrupt electorate in Luzerne County willing to take the money.

The contestee, when told by Hendershot that if he expected to go to Congress with the Heffernan tag on him he would be fooled, replied, "I am opposed to this gang the same as you are, and it don't make no difference whether I am elected or not. I am in politics, and I am willing to spend $5,000 a year to clean up the corruption in Luzerne County."

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield at that point?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLAND. No; I can not yield.

This statement is an admission that the contestee knew that there was a "corrupt gang" in Luzerne County.

Before the primaries Davis, the contestee's political manager, handed Chester Kerbaugh a check for $25, and when Kerbaugh wished to know what it was for replied "You ought not to ask me that. That is all right. You take this" (p. 467). And afterwards, when Kerbaugh told him he did not want it Davis replied, "You should not hesitate to take it; everybody else is taking it. I don't know what you mean. If that is not enough, I will double it" (p. 467).

This statement shows, if Davis can be believed, that "every-body" was willing to take money for election purposes, and that Davis was anxious to secure the political services of certain parties in Luzerne County by the corrupt use of money. The fact that they have a corrupt electorate in Luzerne County is further shown by the number of people who were willing to accept from Davis money for election purposes. The high sheriff and his deputies, the register of deeds and his deputies, the jury commissioner, the State constabulary, county constables and detectives, superintendents of schools, inspectors of elections, and apparently every other officer of Luzerne County who had public duties to perform accepted money from Davis, became his employees or hired partisans, and aided in the distribution of his corruption fund (pp. 91, 92, 95, 98, 105, 111, 112, 154, 230, 291, 358, 359, 478, 479).

Mine inspectors, mine superintendents, mine foremen, fire bosses, and other mine officials accepted money and checks from Davis and used them for their own and for corrupt political purposes. Hundreds of voters, Democrats and Republicans alike, were employed at the same prices to go out and get Democratic votes (p. 399). In fact, "everybody," as Davis stated, seemed to be willing to take money and to use it as Davis directed. Only a corrupt and purchasable electorate could have made it a custom for years to spend large sums of money in the conduct of elections in Luzerne County."

But it may be said that these facts alone do not show that money was corruptly used or in violation of law. That makes it necessary to further examine the evidence and ascertain for what purposes it was used. The evidence shows the following facts:

First. Under the laws of Pennsylvania a candidate is allowed three special watchers at each polling place.

These watchers allowed by law were employed, and employed especially for Bowman (p. 69). But in direct violation of the law the sum of $2,393 was illegally expended for additional watchers. This amount, according to the evidence, was sufficient to employ nearly 500 additional watchers. These additional watchers. tional watchers were not only employed in violation of law but were employed for the purpose of purchasing influence and votes. When Davis was asked, "What do you mean by special watchers; do you mean money to go out and buy Democratic votes?" he replied, "It is possible" (p. 63). It is true that he subsequently withdrew this statement, but the evidence conclusively shows that the statement was true.

On page 432 of the record one Walter Richards, one of Davis's hired partisans, testified as follows:

Q. You were to go out and get Democrats?—A. Yes. Q. And he gave you $50 with which to get Democrats?—A. Certainly. Q. And you went out and got Democrats?—A. I certainly did.

Q. Tell us how you went about it.—A. I hired some Democratic watchers.
Q. Tell us the Democrats you hired.—A. Now, that is a pretty hard proposition. You have been in the game long enough.
Q. And it is a game?—A. It is a game.
Q. And it is a pretty crooked game sometimes?—A. Sometimes it is.
They were not employed "to disseminate Republican information," but as special watchers. A special watcher's duties were not specified; he was given money and not required to render service. For what purpose, then, were Democrats hired as watchers? Can it be said that they were thus indirectly hired to vote for contestee? They had all the Republican watchers allowed by law; they needed Democratic votes.

When Davis was testifying about the employment of special watchers we find that he made the following statement (p. 263):

watchers we find that he made the following statement (p. 200):

Q. State what the purpose was, Sheriff.—A. For the employment of extra workers, extra voters for the Republican ticket.

Q. And the extra vote and the extra work were directed to the men whom you had reason to thing were of Democratic affiliation?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was in this instance that you sought these men because you thought they were Democrats?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was in this instance that you dealt with these men, because you thought they were Democrats?—A. Yes, sir.

Here is an admission by Davis that he had certain dealings with Democrats for the purpose of securing not only extra work from them, but extra votes as well. Here is also an admission that he employed them to do certain work with the expectation that he would secure their influence and their votes. He testified that he could have employed Republicans at the same price. Why didn't he employ Republicans?

Davis testified relative to one Shumaker (p. 65), "Here is one I bought and which went wrong." It is true that he sub-sequently withdrew this statement, but that he did try to secure Democratic votes, and was willing to pay for them if necessary, is sustained by the following admission:

Q. Is it not a fact, Mr. Davis, in conducting this campaign, that you went to every Democrat of supposed influence that you thought you might be able to induce to support Mr. Bowman?—A. No, sir; I did ot. Q. Could you give me any idea of what you mean by a few?—A. I as out to see two or three prominent Democrats.

Q. Only two or three in the county?—A. That is all I can recall.
Q. You were willing to pay them money, too?—A. Yes (pp. 399, 400). For what purpose was he willing to pay them money except for the purpose of thereby inducing them to support the contestee? And that his hired partisans were willing to purchase Democratic votes is shown by the uncontradicted statement of Nathan Charles, who, on page 435, testified as follows:

I received $2 for my vote. It was paid to me by Daniel Conlin, who asked me to vote for Brehem and Bowman particularly.

And this same witness, when asked if he saw anybody else getting money that day, replied: "I didn't see them, but I seen them going around the corner."

Second. The law of Pennsylvania allows the use of money for the "dissemination of political information." It does not allow its corrupt use for that purpose. Any person with any experience in everyday practical politics will have no trouble in reaching a conclusion as to the fraud and corruption that may be perpetrated under the guise of disseminating political information. Such a provision in any law is a mere cover for buying influence and votes, and that a large sum of money was used by Davis for that purpose and to great advantage is shown by his own evidence.

On page 93 of the record Davis was asked the following ques-

Q. Disseminating good Republican information in this State means purchasing Democratic votes?—A. I don't know.

Was he afraid to deny the purpose for which this money was being used and unwilling to say that it was being used for legitimate purposes?

On the same page he was asked why he gave some men more money than others for the dissemination of political information, and he replied: "There are some men worth more money than others in every respect with reference to any position. Men were paid, therefore, by Davis according to the supposed influence of each and not for the service which each one might perform. The fact is that the evidence fails to show, and possibly for some good purpose, what services were to be formed by many of the parties to whom money was paid (p. 93). I might mention numerous instances in which this was the case, but I think it sufficient to refer to only one. The record shows that a check for $150 was sent by Davis to one Cosgrove, a Democrat. Neither Davis nor contestee testified for what purpose this money was to be used. In answer to the question, "Did you talk with him?" Davis replied, "I said 'How do you do' to him" (p. 69); and when contestee was asked the question, "Did not Jonathan Davis give it to him at your request?" he replied, "No; he did not, except in the sense that when I told him about Cosgrove, to whom he gave the money, that I said he should probably, or should not, give it to him as county chairman" (p. 169). Neither one seems to recall for what purpose the money was given to Cosgrove, and Cosgrove was not asked to tell.

From Frank E. Williams a receipt for $150 was taken, but instructions were given to take the money to one J. C. Lewis, a saloonkeeper, with directions to use it wherever his judgment might dictate (p. 75). To one Crooks the sum of $75 was given, although Crooks stated that he knew nothing about politics, and with instructions to do the best he could with it (p. 423). To the sheriff and his deputies, to the deputy recorder and his deputies, to constables, detectives, and other officers money was paid for the alleged dissemination of political information paid for the alleged dissemination of political information (pp. 91, 92, 94, 95). But what these officers did with the money the evidence fails to disclose. It seems that some were paid money to "sing Bowman's praises" (p. 88); some to "write newspaper articles" (p. 89); some to "work among saloon-keepers"; some to work among the Jewish population" (p. 92); some to "work among the Polish population"; some to "work among the secret societies" (p. 94); some "with instructions to use the money for the Republican ticket" (pp. instructions to use the money for the Republican ticket" (pp. 99-196); and some without instructions as to what to do with it (pp. 87-96). Surely no court would place on this provision of corrupt-practices act a construction which would be so liberal as to legalize expenditures of this character. It would certainly require satisfactory evidence that such money had been expended for legal purposes.

The contestee and his political manager not only failed to disclose but actually concealed the purposes for which much of this money was expended. The conclusive presumption, therefore, is that the money was not properly expended.

Third. Money was corruptly used among a large number of men employed in the mines.

Davis admits that "he landed," with one exception, all the mine bosses of the district (p. 396), and the evidence shows that it cost him a little more than $2,000 to do it. What did he mean by "landing the bosses"? Is the answer found in the amount of money expended for that purpose? Corruption can rarely be proved by direct evidence. It must generally be done by proof of independent circumstances. Fortunately, in this case, two of contestee's supporters, one a district superintendent of mines, and one a mine boss, frankly stated the purposes for which they used the money furnished to them. On page 221 James Wallace, a district superintendent of mines, testified in part as follows:

Q. And all this money, with the exception of $5, was paid by you to men who worked for you?—A. Yes.
Q. And many of them were Democrats?—A. That is what I was

Q. And many of them were Democrats?—A. I wanted to give them
Q. You were looking for Democrats?—A. I wanted to give them

For what purpose did he wish to give them money? The only legitimate inference is that he wished to do so in order to secure their votes for contestee.

Q. You gave him this money to use in Avondale?—A. It was immaterial to me. I told him to do what he could for Bowman. It made of the could for Bowman. It made Q. You know, as a mine boss, that he know what On page 192 John C. Lewis, a mine boss, testified as follows:

or difference.

Q. You know, as a mine boss, that he knew what to do with it?—A. I suppose that he did.

Q. And you did not care especially in what respect he used it if he used it to get votes for Bowman?—A. That was the idea exactly.

Q. Who was the next one?—A. G. C. Lewis.

Q. What is his business?—A. He is a miner.

Q. You did not give the miner as much as the mine boss?—A. No; he could not deliver the goods.

Q. You knew that when a mine boss bought a fellow he stayed bought?—A. That is up to him.

Q. Then, why did you give the mine boss more than the miner?—A. I thought he knew more that could turn out the goods.

Q. You mean that he could hold them better?—A. That is up to him. I did the best I could to deliver the goods.

Could evidence be stronger to show that money was corruptly used among the miners? More than 60,000 men are employed in the mines in this district. How many of them were bought and "delivered" to the contestee the evidence fails to show, but that many were so "delivered" I have not the slightest doubt.

Fourth. But it may be contended that contestee did not know that his money was being used for corrupt purposes

Davis testified that he gave one F. H. McConna $100 to purchase services of special watchers for contestee, and that contestee knew it (pp. 67-68)

Davis testified that he mailed to one Cosgrove, chief of police of Duryea and a Democrat, a check for $150, to be used, presumably, for the purchase of the services of special watchers or the dissemination of political information, and that this was done by direction of contestee (p. 69). In the presence of contestee Davis, after asking certain representatives of a Polish club to support contestee, gave one of them a check for $25 with instructions to spend it "treating the boys" (p. 482). Subsequently contestee visited the club with Davis and some one again "treated the boys" (p. 107). And for the money so used in "treating the boys" a receipt for special watchers was taken.

And one T. J. O'Brien was put on the contestee's pay roll at the beginning of his campaign at a salary of $60 per month, and his salary and expenses for political activities were charged to "house" accounts (pp. 267-276).

The fact is that contestee was indifferent as to the uses to which Davis put his money. He was anxious to win and to win by such methods as Davis might be disposed to use.

On page 294 Matthew Long testified as follows:

Then Mr. Trembath or Chairman Smith—I am not positive as to which of them it was—called Mr. Bowman's attention to statements that had been made to his actions in the primary election, and the spending of some seven or eight thousand dollars for the primary election expenses, a portion of which had been to help the machine candidates, and Mr. Bowman said he had put that matter in the hands of Mr. Davis, Jonathan R. Davis, the chairman, and that it was not his affair how Davis had disposed of that money, or some words to that effect. It might not have been his exact words, but words to that effect.

In the regular election this same man Davis was continued as manager. On page 168 of the record contestee testified as I said that I had nothing to do with the handling of money in connection with the campaign; that it was all handled by the county chairman, Jonathan R. Davis.

The contestee knew that there was a corrupt electorate in Luzerne County, and he also knew, because he furnished it, that Davis, as his political manager, was spending large sums of money in the county, more than was necessary for legitimate

Mr. FARR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield there? The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLAND. No; I have not the time.

And yet there is no evidence to show that he ever made a single inquiry as to the purposes for which his money was being Under such circumstances he ought now to be estopped from claiming that he did not know how his money was being used. It was his duty to know.

But I will not further discuss the evidence. Suffice it to say that it conclusively shows that the election laws of Pennsylvania were grossly violated by contestee, his campaign manager and political partisans; that political influence and votes were corruptly purchased under the guise of "disseminating political information"; and that many ignorant miners were improperly influenced and corruptly induced for a money consideration to give their support to the contestee. A candidate willing to furnish the money, a corrupt politician willing to place it, and a corrupt electorate willing to take it are the only necessary requisites for a corrupt election.

The temptation to commit fraud under such conditions is so great that some voters can not resist it, and it is no surprise that we have in this case evidence that frauds were actually committed. No such sum of money as was used in the conduct of this election was necessary to protect the interests of the contestee and disseminate essential political information. The only legitimate conclusion from the evidence is that it was used to corrupt the voters and control the election.

The ballots cast for the contestee do not, in many instances, represent the honest judgment and the honest conviction of the voters. The election in many respects was not honestly conducted, and many of the votes for contestee can not in all fairness be counted for him.

For these reasons I have reached the conclusion that the contestee has not a good title to his seat in this body, and I shall vote to unseat him. [Applause on the Democratic side.]
Mr. ANSBERRY. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Prouty] to utilize the balance of his time.

Mr. PROUTY. I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Bowman].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Bowman] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. BOWMAN. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives, I have written a connected narrative relating my connection with this campaign. I did not expect to answer any of the statements made by the gentlemen speaking upon the other side, but the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HOLLAND] has made such a definite statement regarding a conversation, alleged to be in the evidence, which I held with a man by the name of Hendershot that it is necessary for me to call attention to that, and also to the other statements which he made relating to my connection with the Keystone committee and with O'Brien, an employee of mine.

Let me read the testimony just as it is regarding Hendershot.

It occurs on page 297:

Mr. Bowman, if you will say this to me—that you are against the gang—it doesn't make no difference whether the Keystone people indorse you or not, I will be for you.

Mr. KENDALL. Against whom was that? Mr. BOWMAN. "Against the gang."

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is that a question of what on said?

Mr. BOWMAN. No. That is what Hendershot said to me: Mr. Bowman, if you will say this to me—that you are against the gang—it doesn't make no difference whether the Keystone people indorse you or not, I will be for you.

Here is my response in his language:

I am as good a fighter as you. I will spend $30,000. I am opposed to this gang, the same as you are, and it don't make no difference whether I am elected or not. I am in politics, and I am willing to spend $5,000 a year to clean up the corruption in Luzerne County.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That is quoted as having been said by you. Did you make any such ungrammatical and foolish statement as that?

Mr. BOWMAN. No, sir; I did not. That is Hendershot's version of my answer.

Mr. HOLLAND. I should like to interrupt the gentleman. Mr. BOWMAN. I have not the time. The gentleman would not yield to me.

The next reference was to the meeting before the Keystone committee. The statement was that I said I was willing to spend any amount of money to get a nomination, and in that connection was prepared to do anything; that when I prepared to take a bath I did not go in to wash my feet. I will state that conversation exactly as it occurred before that committee. I may say that I did not solicit the nomination of the Keystone Party from that committee. I did not want to go before them, but at the solicitation of the county chairman I did. The question arose as to how I had become a candidate. I stated I was solicited by a committee of citizens to be the candidate of the Republican Party for Congress and yielded to their wishes. I called Jonathan R. Davis on the telephone, whom I knew to be an honest Christian gentleman; he had conducted the campaign for the Hon. H. M. Palmer, who preceded me in this office. Many of you know him well. He conducted the Swayne im-peachment before the Senate. When I asked Mr. Davis to take charge of the campaign he said, "There are others who are looking for the place." I told him a citizens' committee had asked me to be a candidate; that I had agreed to do so; and that I would not back up, and in that connection I made the statement that when I got ready to take a bath I did not go in to wash my feet.

Mr. FARR. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. BOWMAN. Yes.

Mr. FARR. You had no thought, then, of spending money for corrupt purposes?

Mr. BOWMAN. Not a word had been said about money in any way, shape, or manner, and I had no thought of any such thing.

Now, with regard to O'Brien. O'Brien was a man who was working upon my place at a monthly salary, taking care of the lawn and doing other work about the place. Like all men of that name, he had always been interested in politics. I could not keep him on the place. He was posting cards and he wanted to get out and talk politics. He had been with me for a long time before, and is still in my employ. The amount of money paid him did not vary one cent whether he went out and talked politics or whether he was working about the place and taking care of the horses. That is the long and the short of any corrupt influence or any money corruptly spent by O'Brien or through O'Brien. He was questioned by persons in the interest of the contestant. Why was he not called as a witness?

When this election contest was commenced, started as it was over a month after the statutory time within which it should have been instituted, and only after the contestant had been here at Washington for some days, it was not considered seriously by those who knew the facts, among the inhabitants of the district generally. No one thought it would ever reach this House, and I say to you, gentlemen, that except for the insinuations of examining counsel for the contestant, his speeches before the committee, attacking the integrity of the entire judi-ciary of the county, blackening the character of its people and insulting their intelligence, and except for the unfair, unjust, and untruthful brief of the contestant, upon which it is apparent the gentleman from Ohio has based his remarks, and when considered in the light of the real and credible evidence judicially weighed, this whole matter is farcical. Read the testimony in the case, and save for a few instances where counsel and witnesses have joked about matters which should have been above such treatment, but which in every instance were fully explained, you will find nothing which supports the statements or conclusions of contestant's brief or of the majority report based thereon. Lacking time to read the evidence of almost 800 pages, read carefully the briefs of both parties and by verification in the record ascertain which brief is truthful and worthy of belief and which conclusions you would indorse were your character and that of your friends and your constituency in question.

The contestee upon principle has refused to take any but defensive action in this case.

His character for probity is established in his district, with those who know him in this House, and wherever he is known. The purpose of these remarks is to correct any false impression gained by the gentleman from Ohio or made by him upon the minds of others.

Democratic as well as Republican Members of this House, who have examined the law relating to this contest, agree with Judge Prouty, the ranking Republican member of the Elections

Committee, in his report,

Those who have read the testimony know that I have done nothing wrongful or illegal; others who know the source of this contest and who have read the majority report know what force to give to its statements and conclusions. I have already been vindicated by my constituents by receiving a larger vote for renomination at the primary election in April than I received at the primary preceding the election in question, while the contestant was defeated for renomination and repudiated by the people of the district—Republicans and Democrats alike—as he sought renomination upon both tickets.

It is safe to say that the trouble and expense which this contest has put me to have been largely because my right to this seat has been used as a pawn in the political factional game that has been in progress for the control of the Democratic Party in my State.

Those desiring to investigate the legal proposition are referred to the citation of contestee's brief, pages 30 to 33. The majority report does not give any citations to the contrary. In this connection it may be worthy of note that the majority report is not signed; it is a matter of great persuasion to me, since I infer that it means that the members of the committee who did not sign the majority view did not have the time to corroborate the statements in contestant's brief or the argument of his counsel before them, and thus they assumed the statements to be accurate, but do not vouch for them. Had they been able to give this case careful perusal I feel assured that they would never have permitted such a report to be written.

The entire membership of the committee were satisfied that the contestant did not comply with the law relating to the time for commencing his contest, a fact which is plainly shown by the contestee's brief, pages 2 to 30, and also briefly set forth in the minority view.

This unanimous agreement upon this jurisdictional fact legally and equitably causes this contest to fall, as it is condemned on principle and authority. I refer you to the cases cited at pages 32 and 33 of contestee's brief.

When the question of deferring consideration on this case was to be discussed it caused surprise and regret that the gentleman from Ohio should make that an occasion to go into the merits of the case and display an apparent bitter feeling which he has acquired in the matter rather than being marked by judicial poise such as might naturally be expected of one who before the committee acted as a judge in the case.

It is stated that the minority report "is the weakest report which has ever been written in answer to such an indictment as the majority has made in this case." I am willing to let the minority report speak for itself, with this statement, however: That it was forced to be prepared in such haste that it was found impossible to take up the consideration of each and every instance cited in the majority report, and this because of the delay in presenting the majority report and the absence of the ranking member of the minority committee and the short time allowed for the minority presentation. They will be taken up by members of the minority, however, in later discussion, and hence I will confine my remarks to the matters mentioned by the gentleman from Ohio.

It is stated that the money expended by Chairman Davis, of the Republican county committee, for "special watchers" contestee was "in violation of the laws of the State," and that "that money was expended for corrupt purposes." I am legally advised that the employment of such men is legal. There is no question but that it has been done from time immemorial in this district. Even contestant and his brother-manager, both of whom are lawyers, employed such watchers and accounted for expenditures as made. (See filed expenses of the "Treasurer for George R. McLean," Record, p. 707.) It was unquestioned when my predecessor in this seat was elected, as the filed expense account of the Republican treasurer shows disbursements for this very purpose. (Record, p. 704.) Even the present Democratic District Attorney Bigelow used money to procure watchers, and he distinguishes between "the best watchers and the best poll men." (Top p. 586, Record.) It would be worth your while to read this gentleman's testimony, as it gives a good insight into the methods and ways of this district. Yet, notwithstanding these facts, the contestant calls such expenses illegal, and the report following the brief says it is illegal and corrupt. I defy anyone to point out in the testimony proof that a single dollar of the money expended for such watchers was used to buy votes, which I assume is what is meant by "corrupt purposes." In many instances each hand through which money went was shown in the testimony until ultimately some actual worker was shown to have received $5 for his work in getting out the vote on election day.

I am not a lawyer, but I am advised that under the Pennsylvania statute money may be spent by a candidate and by a party committee; both must file accounts of expenditure under the corrupt-practice act, but only for the money expended by them. There is an attempt to confuse the expenditures made by the Republican Party through Chairman Davis for which contestee had no duty under the law to account with expenditures made by contestee personally, for which it was his duty to file and for which he filed an accurate account.

Under the Pennsylvania law the failure to include an item of expense does not work a forfeiture of the office; if the expense is legal the account would be re-formed. What, then, would become of contestant's claim as to the $700 auto payment or the $50 Giering payment? Both were legitimate, even if made for political purposes.

Money given one F. J. McCanna, a Democrat of Pittston, for special watchers, is cited as a corrupt use, and the statement made that "the record is silent as to the 'special watchers' that this man McCanna hired at Mr. Bowman's request." has been stated in the testimony, especially by Mr. Bigelow, party lines were broken in this election and the district was swept by the Keystone Party. The Democratic vote for State officers was only 3,444 for governor, 4,827 for lieutenant governor, and only 3,842 for secretary of internal affairs. With party lines so broken, with McCanna, a resident of my own town, associated with me as a member of Pittston council for years, helping me as he did in the primaries, is it strange that he should continue his support for the election? The contestant could have found out where the money he received went had he been called as a witness. As the testimony states, there is nothing which would support the statement of the gentleman from Ohio, except his own suspicions.

Money sent one Lawrence Cosgrove is mentioned. The circumstances were that I saw the burgess of the village—a personal friend but political opponent—where Cosgrove was chief of police and at the election this fall a candidate for the legislature. He told me if we wanted to have some one employ watchers and correct certain stories that were being circulated about me, Mr. Cosgrove was the best one to act. I reported my conversation to Chairman Davis and a check for $150 was sent. The burgess himself worked for the contestant. (Record, p. Why did not the contestant call Cosgrove as a witness and find out what he did with the money? One of contestant's witnesses seems to show that the gentleman was working for contestant on election day. (Record, p. 503.) Upon this proof the buying of votes is based. If one were suspicious, it would be more reasonable to suspect from the testimony money was used to further contestant's interests rather than contestee's.

The next subject taken up is the matter of an incorrect expense account having been filed by contestee. It is insisted that an item of $700 was left out. Why should it not be left out if it had nothing to do with political matters? If I purchase an auto from the Republican county chairman after election, what has that to do with my political expenditures? Other statements regarding this auto are incorrect. I knew the car, having ridden in it when the property of Mr. Shepherd, of my city. Before purchasing it Mr. Davis told me he paid $600 for the car, and that he had spent nearly $200 in improvements, new tires, and so forth, and that it was in good running order. He bought it to help a poor fellow support himself and family. I was glad to help Mr. Davis out by buying the car, as he managed my primary campaign and acted as chairman of the county committee without the promise of reward of any kind or character. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ANSBERRY] stated in his address to the House that there was an erasure on the stub of He was mistaken; no erasure has been made upon the stub of that check. The check book and check are here open for inspection. Jonathan R. Davis is incapable of a dishonorable act. He is a business man of means, a bank director, active in church work. During the last year he was appointed by the nonpartisan court as president of the board of assessment and revision of taxes for the whole county, called the richest natura! area in the world. In acquired wealth it is only exceeded in the State of Pennsylvania by the cities of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Another charge is that I wrongfully gave $50 to E. T. Giering, January 4, 1911, after election. Mr. Giering wrote editorials in the Wilkes-Barre Record of his own free will and accord, with no suggestion on my part, favoring my candidacy. I intended to present to him a watch at Christmas time, but forgot to do so. My attention was called to it after New Year's Day; told my bookeeper I wanted to make him a gift of $50. For many years I have kept a ledger account headed "Duty," under which gifts of this character are charged. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Ansberry], in his address to the House, stated: "The check was altered from 'political' to 'duty,' and Giering's name was erased." He was mistaken. See the testimony of the bookkeeper, page 49:

Q. When did you write "for duty"?-A. The first time that I wrote

Q. He didn't tell you it was a gift until after you had drawn the check up, did he? What I want to get at is this: You put on here a recognition of indebtedness and at the same time another entry indicating that it was simply a mere philanthropic bequest.—A. I understood from the first it was that,

The check was first drawn to the order of E. T. Giering. it was signed the bookkeeper wrote above his name, "C. C. Bowman for," so that I could get gold for it, as I desired to make the gift in that form.

In justice to Mr. Giering, who is one of the most conscientious, Christian gentlemen it has ever been my pleasure to know, I would state when I handed the gold to him he asked: "What is this for?" I answered: "In appreciation of the many favors you conferred upon me during the campaign in your editorials." He answered: "I can not take it; I have only done my duty." It old him he would offend me if he did not accept. He stated that he would in any event be obliged to consult Mr. Moore, the business manager of his paper. I waited in his office until he went downstairs to see him. Upon his return he reported that Mr. Moore did not object to his accepting the gift. This innocent transaction, occurring two months after election and nearly a month after this contest could legally be brought, has caused me more regret than anything else in connection with this whole contest. Mr. Giering is a very sensitive man; his grief over the misstatements regarding this gift seriously affected his health. At one time it appeared as though it would end his days.

In reference to the Prohibition nomination, the testimony does not support the serious statements of the gentleman from Ohio. The chairman of the Prohibition Party testified:

Q. You were willing that Mr. Bowman appear, as he did appear, as the Prohibition candidate for Congress of Luzerne County?—A. Yes, sir; of Luzerne County (p. 17).

The secretary of the party testified:

Q. When you came to signing up the paper you signed some kind of a paper for Mr. Bowman, you three officers did; that is, you signed the same kind of a paper that you signed for Mr. Palmer when he became the candidate in Mr. Ricketts's place?—A. I couldn't tell you what I signed for Mr. Bowman, but the paper looked all right.

Q. It was understood that he was legally and regularly put on your ticket?—A. Yes, sir (p. 21).

Comparison of the substitution papers for this election (p. 669) with those made in past years by the same men will show their similarity (pp. 712-715). It is surprising to find this matter taken up when the majority report treats of this matter as

With regard to the legality of the substituted nomination of the contestee by the Prohibition Party the committee has felt—

And so forth (p. 3 to the end of the paragraph).

There is no proof that either the contestee or the Republican county chairman, Davis, had anything to do with the Nanticoke newspaper article referred to by the gentleman from Ohio. Personally I can say that I never saw the article until this testimony was taken, and it was not paid for except from Republican funds in the hands of the Republican Party county treasurer. And right here I again protest, as I and my counsel have throughout this contest, to the statements made "regarding Bowman's manager and Bowman's money," when the testimony and facts are that they should say the "Republican county chairman or treasurer and Republican money. were other contributors to the Republican campaign that year than myself, and no differentiation was made as to the spending of said fund or keeping one contributor's money separate from the others

The testimony does not sustain the statement made by the gentleman from Ohio that the contestee would provide anything necessary to procure the nomination. The statement which I made at that time and which is not fully given in the testimony was that anything that was necessary to carry on the campaign for the Prohibition Party I would furnish, knowing, as I did, that these expenses would be small or nothing at all, as was the case.

Again referring to the newspaper article, which is assumed as emanating from myself or Chairman Davis, the testimony of the chairman of the Prohibition Party will show the injustice of the gentleman from Ohio's conclusion:

gentieman from Omo's conclusion:

Q. If you had become acquainted with this declaration coming from one of Mr. Bowman's organs, whether or not you would have joined in his indorsement on the Prohibition ticket?—A. I would have inquired of Mr. Bowman whether he knew anything of that, and if he said he did, I would not have joined. I understood at the time that the liquor men were in favor of Mr. McLean and that Mr. Bowman was on the temperance side (p. 17).

Q. If somebody had sent you copies of these papers or had written you, or had come to you and said to you what Mr. Lenahan has said to you, what you would have done is to ask Mr. Bowman whether he stood for that?—A. Certainly.

Q. And if Mr. Bowman told you, "No; I don't stand for that sort of thing," you would have done just what you did do?—A. Very probably.

Q. In other words, what you did do or what you would have done or should have done would be determined not by newspaper talk or rumor but upon direct inquiry?—A. Yes; I understood Mr. Bowman to be a Christian and an upright man, and I would have taken his word (p. 18).

The chairman of the Prohibition Party also stated that Mr. Bowman's reputation around this region for years and years was that of a thorough temperance man (p. 19)

The statement of the gentleman from Ohio that he had in his hand a list of mine officials, numbering about 50 names, leads me to believe that he had pages 29 to 32 of contestant's brief before him. The further statement made that these were men "who received all the way from $20 to $140" is not accurate. Of the 54 names on that list there were 12 whom the testimony shows received no money at all; 9 received but $5, and that from Republican funds. The money was not kept personally, but was expended for either Republican poll men or special watchers, and 3 of them were Republican Party officials whose duty it was to get poll men and pay their party subofficials or even the poll men themselves. It was pointed out in contestee's brief that, considering only 1 of each kind of mine official listed for every mine in the county, there are over 900 of such officials. What were the other 846 doing this election?

The further statement that two friends' names were kept out of the report means nothing. If he intended to say that the payments to them were kept secret, he is mistaken, as the money paid them was accounted for and their receipts filed with the county clerk. (Record, p. 78.)

It is gratifying to me that we can trace some of this money.

It is gratifying to me that we can trace some of this money which is stated to have been used to coerce men and buy votes. Mr. Hollister gave $15 of the $50 to one P. H. O'Brien, who was also a witness. O'Brien testified that he gave the money to three men, McKeown, Mullin, and Clifford. McKeown and Mullin were brought in as witnesses by the contestant and stated that they received the $5 each, and that they worked for the same. All of these men were personal friends of mine, and I ask that you read the testimony and assure yourselves of the mistake that has been made in this unsupported accusa-tion. The other friend, Mr. Jennings, is a neighbor of mine who spent $26 of his own, gave one Patrick Kelly, over whom he had no control, and who was not employed by him, $15 to work for Mr. Bowman, and one John Brown $11 for watchers in Port Griffith. Neither of these men were called to show that they had spent the money for any other purpose than that for which they received it. Nor is there any proof that they voted any differently for receiving said money. After election I paid Mr. Jennings for his disbursements. I believe when gentlemen of the character and standing in the community such as Mr. Hollister and Mr. Jennings enjoy are so infamously ac-cused of coercion and buying of votes, that it is time when all honest men of all parties should forget their prejudices and give such men the vindication which they deserve and expect. I feel that the gentleman from Ohio has not read the testimony regarding this matter, otherwise he would not have made such statements. His characterization must have been received from some source outside the evidence and from a source as base as the accusation itself.

It is with great regret that I have taken up these various statements of the gentleman from Ohio; but I have done so as briefly, carefully, and patiently as possible. If any of the gentlemen of the House are interested to know the real reason why the contestant in this case was defeated, he has only to read the testimony of the contestant's friend, Ernest G. Smith, chairman of the Keystone Party at this election, and editor of the Wilkes Barne Leeder the leading Democratic nearer in the disc Wilkes-Barre Leader, the leading Democratic paper in the district (pp. 325-329, 640-643).

In concluding I call attention to data which should be the best proof of the impossibility of the suspicions which have caused the conclusions of the majority. The Republican vete at this election was, governor, 12,389; lieutenant governor, 11,166; secretary of internal affairs, 11,181; Bowman, 13,661; while the Democratic vote was as follows: Governor, 3,444; lieutenant governor, 4,827; secretary of internal affairs, 3,843; McLean, 13,834. A perusal of the results for the various districts will show that the contestee ran about the same as the other Republican candidates, save in those parts of the district where he was well known or a resident; while on the other hand, there are many districts ordinarily Republican, which had a large vote for the State officers and the same vote for the contestant, showing, according to contestant's own counsel, returns which were prima facie fraudulent. (Contestee's brief, pp. 91–92.) In concluding I call your attention to other data well set forth in the minority report, proving conclusively that the election in 1910 was not only "quiet" (p. 81) but "clean" (p. 641), and that this House should confirm the result as given by the people voting and by the judges of the court of common pleas, which judgment has been still later affirmed by the results of the late primaries and by all parties. This election contest involves the county of Lazerne being

This election contest involves the county of Luzerne, being the eleventh Pennsylvania congressional district. It contains two State senatorial districts and seven State legislative districts, with a total of 311 polling places or voting precincts. At the time of the 1910 election its population was 343,186, and the number of voters registered for voting under the registration requirements was 59,352. There was to be chosen at this time a governor and other State officers, Congressman, State senator, and eight State representatives. This election saw the rise of an independent party known as the Keystone Party, a movement stated to be "without money and without patronage" (p. 641). Their candidates swept the county. They had no congressional candidate; that fight was waged between the contestant, C. F. Quinn, Socialist, and the present holder of the seat.

In common with other elections that fall, the vote was very light, only a total of 33,652 votes being cast, less than 57 per cent of the voters registered, and less than 10 per cent of the population. The congressional vote was especially light, that of the Congressman and contestant being but 28,218, less than 48 per cent of the registered vote, and less than 8 per cent of the population. It is also noteworthy that while the total vote for governor was 32,684, the total congressional vote was but 29,766, or less than 88 per cent of the actual vote cast. It may be interesting to compare these figures with the 1908 congressional vote of 40,565, or with the 1909 vote of 29,589 cast for one judge running on both Republican and Democratic tickets. Outside of contestant's vote the highest Democratic vote was for lieutenant governor, being 4,827.

While the Keystone Party broke the regular party lines, yet in the first senatorial district, comprising about one-half the county, there was another fight, in which, as stated by the Democratic chairman, "it was impossible to make a straight-out party fight on account of the local conditions" (p. 583).

The election has been summed in the testimony, in two terse expressions by disinterested people, as "one of the quietest elections" and also one of the "cleanest elections." These general considerations alone seem to refute and answer every claim and contention of the contestant, without requiring one to open the evidence and there finding the corroboration for these conclusive and indisputable facts and figures.

Elections in this district have always been expensive. An average of two or three poll men, or "watchers," usually have been employed at each polling place. One of the local Democratic chairmen in this election testified that he paid $10 per day apiece for 40 men. It will be noted that wages are relatively high throughout this entire district. Allowing three men to each district at only $5 per day, the usual rate, would amount to about $5,000 for that purpose alone. Deduct this from the amount spent by the Republican county chairman in this election, and there would only be left $4,000 for hall rent, bands, newspaper advertising, and other lawful expenditures, which amount would not be excessive for a district like this, containing more inhabitants than six of the entire States. At the county election following this, with no State candidates, the Republican county chairman filed expenses upward of $16,000 and the Democratic county chairman upward of $19,000.

That is surely a small sum with a district like this, with a population exceeding that of six of the States, where the highest wages in the world are paid for labor of similar character. My subscription to the election fund was $5,000. In this connection, directly after I made my subscription, a week or two before the election, a meeting was called of the county chairmen all through the whole district, with the candidates, and I told them that I had made a subscription of $5,000, and that every penny of it must be spent honestly; that if any man spent a penny for a bad purpose I would send him to State's prison just as quickly if he were a Republican as I would if he were a Democrat.

As stated, my subscription to the county election fund was $5,000, the county chairman having said that this amount would, with other subscriptions, be all the funds needed to carry on the campaign. However, he came to me a day or two before election and said that strong influences were working against me; that a number of his poll men and watchers had been hired away, and that he needed $1,500 to fill their places and for the employment of extra men in precincts where they had been placed by the other side. I made this additional subscription by check to him, as I did the original subscription of $5,000. At his request I also gave a check for $50 to W. H. Hollister to employ extra watchers at Avoca, Pa., a town near Pittston, and a check to W. P. Jennings of $26, refund of money he had expended for a like purpose.

Every dollar which I subscribed or paid in connection with Every dollar which I subscribed or paid in connection with this election went through my checkbook or petty cashbook, and all the books in my office, business and personal, were open to the inspection of the contestant and his attorneys. I had nothing to do with keeping the accounts, as they were entirely in charge of my bookkkeeper, an experienced person, who has been with me for years; who had, before the time of the election, a general power of attorney, and still has that authority. It is true I did, unintentionally and unknowingly, file an election account of expenses which was not technically accurate, the circumstances being that my account was prepared by the bookkeeper, who neglected a few items. Certain items paid by me personally were, as stated, given to the Republican county chairman and were accounted for by him in his filed account as his expenses. Certain items were only known or paid after the account was prepared by the bookkeeper, to be sworn to by me. I had no personal knowledge of the amounts, but trusted this matter entirely to my bookkeeper, who had entire control of the accounts and decided upon which one was to be charged any given item. It will be noted that contestant's account filed is also inaccurate in the same manner, although the expenditures and account were both made by him personally. My accounts were well and carefully kept, as any Member may see by personally examining the pages of the ledger containing the political expense account or the checkbook in question, which are here to-day and will show that alterations and erasures consisted in corrections made in the due course of business. No changes were made but which were discernible and which were explained in the testimony. No concealment or intent to conceal was shown.

A broad and comprehensive view of the testimony shows that my money and the money of the contestant were used for much the same general purposes, with one exception—contestant (pp. 567, 627, 629), his managers, and supporters distributed cigars and dispensed alcoholic liquors freely, election day being no exception. This is contrary to the corrupt-practice act of Pennsylvania. Practically all my money went into the hands of and was expended by the Republican county chairman. Contestant or his brother spent all but $700 of contestants money. The total expenditures which might properly be considered for my sole and personal benefit amounted to $2,761.50. Contestant showed expenditures of that character amounting to $4,209.15. I spent personally, through my office, $368.50—less than $25 of that amount myself. Contestant filed personal expenditures of $1,386.20. I had no outside and separate interests spending money in my behalf. Contestant was the recipient of the benefit of thousands of dollars spent by others.

The expenditures of Jonathan R. Davis, Republican county chairman, in this election were many thousands of dollars less than the ordinary, usual, or customary expenses therefor, and much less also that the amount expended by contestee George W. Shonk, Fifty-second Congress, which expenditures were approved by the Committee on Elections and by Congress.

The laws of the State of Pennsylvania gave opportunity to the contestant to test my right to this office. His attorneys were present at the canvass of the vote before the judges of the court of common pleas, where they had every opportunity to prosecute a contest, but abandoned it. Two members of the State constabulary were stationed by the Keystone Party at the polls in the fourth district of Pittston Township. They testified only 34 men entered the booth, besides the members of the board. One hundred and twenty-two votes were returned as cast for Repgesentative in Congress—3 for Quinn, 5 for Bowman, 114 for McLean, the contestant. (See evidence, pp. 735–744.) The laws of Pennsylvania are complete in covering fraud and corruption, and nothing is now known or proven that could not have been presented by contestant and his counsel when the judges of the court sat to receive the votes and hear all objections. The fact was that objections were made, withdrawn, and then a politically divided court unanimously decided there was a free and untrammeled choice by the voters. Even assuming everything that the majority report claims to be true, there is no such evidence as requires the seat to be declared vacant.

The evidence discloses that I contributed in 1906 to a fund to investigate alleged election frauds. I have always done everything that I could to protect the sanctity of the ballot. I could not think of any change in the conduct of the 1910 campaign that would have made it upon my part any cleaner or more honest. The stenographers' bill for the hearings in my county was about $1,500. Detectives were going about the district for months looking for evidence. My business associates were quizzed as to their relations with me. The contestant visited my office and questioned my employees during my absence. I would not wish to see you or even my worst enemy exposed to the persecution I have undergone. I am sure you would not approve of such action if taken against yourself, nor can you when taken against me. Considering the size of the district, it is not surprising that slight irregularities should have arisen, but none of them were of sufficient importance to affect the result.

The majority of this House do, not wish to establish such a precedent now, just as you are about to assume the Government of this great country. Under the procedure followed in this case, any one of you might be served with a notice of contest which you would be forced to defend, whatever length of time you may have held your seat, whereby you might be put to thousands of dollars' expense and untold anguish entailed upon yourself and family. Good men have been through this bitter ordeal, but I am advised never contrary to express statute, as in this case. I have always believed "the first thing a man owes his country is the integrity of his own life." ing has been proven against me or any person over whom I had any control. My hands have never been soiled with a dollar that would cause my fellow man to offend against the laws of my county or my God.

Since the 1910 election I have gone through two more campaigns—the primary election in April last, wherein I was chosen as a candidate of the Republican Party; the second, the election last November, in which my vote was double that of the head of the ticket and exceeded the vote given upon that ticket to the State senator who was elected in one portion of the district, and also exceeded the total vote cast for the eight candidates for the State legislature. These two elections were conducted in exactly the same way as the campaign in 1910, which is in question. Knowing my innocency, I did not attend the hearings in this contest, which extended for about four months, excepting as I was obliged under subpena as a witness for the contestant. Personally I took nothing but defensive action against him.

Many of the Members of this House are judges and lawyers, fully capable of separating the wheat from the chaff in this case. I depend upon your decision that there is no basis in law or equity for the bringing of this action. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. PROUTY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. AINEY].

Mr. AINEY. Mr. Speaker, I think it very fitting when a man finds himself in contempt by the criticism he heaps on others. It is with some astonishment, in view of the report of the majority members of the committee declining to recommend the seating of Mr. McLean, that I heard my distinguished colleague [Mr. Palmer] offer a resolution to accomplish that which the committee, after a careful investigation of all the evidence in the cause, refused. I am not able to solve the inconsistency of the position which proposes to unseat Mr. Bowman because it is claimed he employed special watchers in defiance of the laws of Pennsylvania and because he failed to prepare and file a complete and accurate account of his expenditures under the law of that Commonwealth, when the records in the cause clearly establish similar conduct on the part of Mr. McLean.

The Pennsylvania statute recognizes candidates and political committees. Both are required to file sworn statements of their expenditures to primary or regular elections. The candidate must itemize expenditures made by himself or through his agents. If his expenditures are not made personally or through his agents, but through a political or party committee, his sworn statement may be for the gross sum, because under such circumstances the party committee are in duty bound by law to make an itemized and sworn statement.

In that respect the political committees are the agents of the candidate. There is no authority in law for an agent to make a sworn statement for his principal.

I hold in my hand a certified copy of an account of expenditures, signed "William McLean, treasurer for George R. McLean," covering the contested election, made and filed in direct violation of the provisions of the Pennsylvania law. It violates that law in two respects: First, that an agent had no authority under the law to make this affidavit, because the statute provides that an oath to the accuracy of it on the part of the candidate is a condition precedent to his induction into office, and he may not avoid the pain of prosecution for perjury by shifting the responsibility upon his agent; second, the paper shows large sums of money expended by William McLean for poll workers and special watchmen, items not itemized or explained. If these constitute a violation of the law when done by Mr. Bowman, how can they be justified by this House when expended for these purposes on behalf of Mr. McLean? If the employment of special watchers is illegal, if there is no justification under the statute for the payment of poll workers, how stands Mr. McLean under his own showing? I quote from the certified copy of the election account of William S. McLean, jr., treasurer for George R. McLean, and ask your indulgent attention to the following unitemized and large expenditures for poll men and special watchers:

poll men and special watchers:
John Bigelow, Esq., poll man in first district.
John Bigelow, Esq., special watchers, first district.
Rodger Devers, Esq., special watchers, first district.
Rodger Devers, Esq., special watchers, first district.
William S. McLean, jr., poll man, second district.

Hon. M. J. Healey, special watchers, third district.
R. B. Sheridan, Esq., poll man, fourth district.
R. B. Sheridan, Esq., poll man, fourth district.
B. W. Davis, Esq., poll man, sixth district.
C. M. Honeywell, poll man, sixth district.

Mose Solomon, for special watchers.

[Applause on the Republican side.] 30 150 100

[Applause on the Republican side.]

It is true that Mr. McLean, the contestee, did make a sworn statement, in which he said he paid over a lump sum of $3,500 to William S. McLean, jr., "contributed to his brother as his chairman" as a part of the $4,860.95 expended in that election, but he may not avoid moral responsibility in that respect, for it was contestant's duty under the corrupt practice act to make oath to these items.

The right to make such expenditures is confined by the act to two classes, "namely, candidates and treasurers of political committees." Such was the utterance of the Pennsylvania courts in Bechtels election-expense case 39, Superior Court Report 292.

Surely it will not be argued that a treasurer of a candidate is a political committee.

In Umbel's election case, a recent deliverance of the Supreme Court, it was held that where Judge Umbel had paid five different persons sums aggregating $3,670 and filed their gross receipts, it was not a compliance with the law. He might pay out this money through agents, but he was duty bound to account for the items of expenditure in his own account.

In the Bechtel case Judge Bechtel paid Nichter $700, taking his receipt therefor and filing same as a gross item of expenditure in his account. Nichter was not a member of a political committee. This is exactly what McLean did in paying his brother, William McLean, $3,500.

The court held that this $700 must be itemized in Judge Bechtel's own account. The opinion so elucidated certain features of the law appreciable to this case that I ask your in-tures of the law appreciable to this case that I ask your indulgence to quote from the opinion:

Bechtels case 39, super 292, opinion of the court:

In my opinion it is lawful to employ and pay a voter to electioneer for a party or candidate either on or before election day, and that a candidate or party may lawfully employ poll workers, so that it be done honestly and in good faith. But it is a crime to buy or attempt to buy a citizen's vote or political influence.

The act of April 18, 1874, P. L., 64, is exactly similar, word for word, to the act of March 5, 1996, P. L., 78, so far as clause second above quoted, is concerned, to wit: "For dissemination of information to the public." And the supreme court, in Williams v. Com., 91 Pa., 493, holds that thereunder a candidate may employ and pay an elector to take interest for him before his election; in other words, to work for his election. In that case, Williams, while a sheriff of Armstrong County, had employed and paid voters to electioneer for him, and the county court beld such to ease and said it was not a violation of the law unless done corruptly.

The evidence in the case at har does not warrant the conclusion that said poll workers were corruptly employed, and this branch of the case is ruled in favor of the accountant on the authority above cited.

And where parties have been employed ostensibly as watchers or to disseminate information, the fact that they fail to do anything does not necessarily render the employment illegal.

Where a candidate contributes money to the treasurer of a political party or committee, his account should set out the name of the treasurer and the party or committee of which he is treasurer, but it is not necessary for the candidate's account to set out the specific purpose for which the money is used. But the treasurer's account should set forth not only each person to whom money is paid and the amount, but also should set out specifically for what purpose or purposes it was naid

Turning, then, to the statute we find that it recognizes as lawful the expenditure of money for "election expenses," provided such expenditure is confined to the purposes and objects specifically set forth in the act. But the persons who may make even such lawful expenditures are confined to two classes, to wit, candidates and treasurers of political committees. The individual citizen may still lawfully give his money to aid the success of the political party or the advancement of the political cause he deems most desirable. But he may not do this by undertaking himself the expenditure of even his own money for "election expenses." He must contribute it directly to a candidate or to a political committee, because only through one of these two channels can it lawfully be expended for even the purposes designated in the act. "No person who is not a candidate, or the treasurer of a political committee, shall pay, give, or lend, or agree to pay, give, or lend any money or other valuable thing, whether contributed by himself or by any other person, for any election expenses whatever, except to a candidate or to a political committee," is the comprehensive language of the statute. of the statute.

To conclude this branch of the case, there were two methods open to Mr. McLean under the law: To personally or through agents make his campaign expenditures, in which event he must personally account for the items, or contribute to a political committee, in which event he need only account for the gross amount, for the law deals directly with political committees, requiring them to itemize their expenditures.

He complied with neither alternative.

I regret exceedingly that our limited time will prevent full explanation of the political conditions which confronted not only Luzerne County but the entire State of Pennsylvania at the election in 1910.

Both the old political parties were torn asunder. The Republican Party, which usually carried the State of Pennsylvania by a majority of nearly half a million, elected a governor by a small plurality of about 15,000, while the Democratic Party did not have enough gubernatorial votes to make a mess

The Keystone Party, with Berry heading its ticket, almost swept the State—invading and depleting the ranks of Republican, Democratic, and Prohibition-so that when Larkin had but little over 200 votes in Luzerne County against Bowman's 700 it was in keeping with the political condition of the State.

The imagination of men-which had so largely taken the place of evidence in this case—seeks to find corruption in the difference between the Larkin and the Bowman vote. It must not be overlooked that under the law the election officers are required to write the names of each voter in a panel, and with these panels there is no difficulty in determining the name of every man who was reported to have voted. Such opportunity was opened to contestants.

If his contention was true, it could have been thus established—it would have substituted fact for inference, and the burden surely rested upon him to make out his case.

There was a three-cornered fight for governor and a two-cornered fight for Congress, with party lines broken and hardly discernible—it was not at all strange that former Democrats were occasionally found working for Mr. Bowman.

My time is too limited to discuss the evidence, but so much has been said about watchers and special watchers that I am inclined to think you may find some information in the consideration of the law relating to them.

I take issue squarely with the gentlemen on the other side of its controversy. Special watchers performing the duties dethis controversy. Special watchers performing the duties described in the evidence are to be distinguished from the watchers mentioned in the act of 1906, and may be lawfully employed and compensated either by a candidate or by a political party.

Section A of the corrupt-practice act defining legitimate election expenditures enumerates, under paragraph 6, "the employment of watchers to the number allowed by law."

Unfortunately, our legislature a number of years ago selected a term which had been theretofore used in long-established custom among the people of our State describing workers performing election duties. The term "watcher," as commonly used, included canvassers, poll-book men, vote solicitors, and persons employed in getting voters to the polls. It was usually limited in application to election-day workers, and answered to the term "vigilance men," used in certain localities.

The General Assembly of Pennsylvania selected the same term, "watcher," to define a position having entirely different duties and prescribing the method of his selection and the scope of his authority. Each political party had the right to select three watchers for each polling place; their authority came by virtue of certificates of appointment issued to them by the county commissioners. They had no right to electioneer in behalf of anyone while performing their duties (18 Pa. Co. |

Court, 520; act of 1893, sec. 23). Their special privilege under their certificate was the authority, one at a time, to be in the voting room outside the inclosed space where they were permitted to keep poll books (sec. 24) and challenge lists, and to be present during the counting of the votes (sec. 28).

If further authority is needed on this proposition, it may be found in the utterance of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in Parish petition, 214 State, 67. Bearing in mind, then, that the watchers defined by the corrupt-practice act and the prior act of 1893 are entirely distinct from the political workers now commonly designated special watchers to distinguish them from the statutory kind, the only question which can arise is whether it is lawful under the corrupt-practice act to employ men as canvassers, poll workers, or vote solicitors.

The evidence in the Bowman contest clearly establishes that the special watchers employed by the chairman of the Republican county committee performed the duty of canvassers, poll workers, and vote solicitors. Are such expenditures lawful under the Pennsylvania law?

Merely for the purpose of a starting point in this branch of the discussion, I desire to call attention to a decision of the Pennsylvania courts interpretative of the corrupt-practice act of This case is of some special interest because of the fact that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Palmer] appeared in court in advocacy of the position adopted in the case.

The court said concerning the act of 1906:

The court said concerning the act of 1906:

It may also be remarked that the general opinion of the public that the act of March 5, 1906, limits and circumscribes the lawful election expenses of a candidate, and that he can not now do what he would have been privileged to do before its enactment, is a mistaken one. The act, in a sense, codifies the law and provides a method to discover and establish the violations and punish the offenders, but substantially no more. If anything, it provides for expenditures about which there might have been some question before its passage. The act of April 18, 1874 (P. L., 64), denoted the privileged necessary expenses, how they might be incurred, and prescribed the oath of office to be taken and punishment for the violation of the law. What is now a violation of the election laws in any of these respects was a violation before the act of March 5, 1906.

The only apparent advantage of the act of March 5, 1906, is the power to inquire into alleged abuses.

I desire now to call your attention to several cases decided.

I desire now to call your attention to several cases decided in the Pennsylvania courts, wherein the term "watcher" is used to define the duties performed by special watchers in the Bowman case, or where these duties were performed by paid men under other designations:

In re Howard v. Jacoby (3 Pa. Co. C., 438).

The statute is not to be so construed as to prevent a candidate from employing a friend to canvass an election district for him, and by representations in regard to his qualifications, his claims for party support, or by legitimate arguments operate upon the minds of the voters and thus procure the return of delegates who will support him in the nominating convention. Such services are not illegal and are a sufficient consideration to support a promise to pay for them, including necessary traveling expenses.

In re Williams v. Commonwealth (91 Pennsylvania, 493).

This is the leading case in Pennsylvania, interpretive of certain features of the act of 1874. The opinion was rendered by a distinguished jurist of the State, Justice Trunkey, who, in speaking of the decision of the lower court in that case, said, reversing the lower court:

case, said, reversing the lower court:

But, not resting there, it was also held by the lower court that if he so paid or promised to electioneer for him, that was a violation of the statute; and the word "electioneer" was defined "to make interest for a candidate at an election; to use arts for securing the election of a candidate." Article 7 of the constitution requires an officer, before entering on the duties of his office, to take an oath containing, inter alia, "I have not paid or contributed, or promised to pay or contribute, either directly or indirectly, any money or other valuable thing to procure my nomination or election (or appointment), except for necessary and proper expenses expressly authorized by law; that I have not knowingly violated any election law of this Commonwealth, or procured it to be done by others in my behalf." Section 9 of article 8 imposes severe disabilities on "any person who shall, while a candidate for office, be guilty of bribery, fraud, or willful violation of any election law." The act of 1874, section 36, Pamphlet L., 64, authorizes a candidate to pay or contribute as follows:

(Act of 1874.)

(Act of 1874.)

"1. For printing and traveling expenses. 2. For dissemination of information to the public. 3. For political meetings, demonstrations, and conventions"; and section 37 declares that "nothing contained in this act shall be so construed as to authorize the payment of money or other valuable things for the vote or influence of any elector, either directly or indirectly, at primary, township, general, or special elections, nominating conventions, or for any corrupt purposes whatever, incident to an election." Both the organic law and the statute strike at bribery, fraud, and every corrupt act incident to an election, but leave the candidate free to use all honest means for the success of his party and promotion of his own election. He may disseminate information to the public respecting the affairs of state, the principles, the purity, and the corruptions of the several political parties, and the merits and demerits of candidates; and in so doing he may use every horable act of persuasion, eloquence, and reasoning. These are lawful, are within the very life of free government, and are not forbidden to a candidate, though they make interest for him at an election. The statute carries its own interpretation. In comprehensive terms it expressly authorizes the payments and contributions by candidates for printing, traveling expenses, dissemination of information to the public, political meetings, demonstration at conventions, and excepts out every direct and indirect purchase of the vote or influence of an elector, and every act for any corrupt purpose whatever incident to an election. What is clearly embraced within those terms and not excepted therefrom is lawful. Interest may be made for a candidate without taint of corruption. Art may be used in securing his election with pure motive and patriotic purpose. The statute forbids the perversion of art, not its use. We are, therefore, of opinion that it was error to unqualifiedly charge that if the defendant paid or contributed or promised to pay or contribute, either directly or indirectly, any money or other valuable thing to an elector "for the purpose that such elector should make interest for the defendant when he was a candidate before his election," * * " " or for the purpose that the elector should use arts for securing the election of the defendant as a candidate for sheriff." * * "

(In re Liebel's expense account No. 2, 16 District Reports, 938, Mayoralty contest—city of Erie.)

The opinion of the court recites the following facts:

The opinion of the court recites the following facts:

From the evidence taken, including the testimony of many witnesses, we find that accountant's expenses at said election, as shown by his account, were $3,253.35, of which $950 was paid to the treasurer of the Democratic city committee and $1,115 thereof was paid to James B. Yard, treasurer of a committee of Republicans, Mr. Liebel being on the Republican and Democratic tickets; that his account does not show for what purposes the money was paid to the sald treasurers, but Mr. Yard was the treasurer of certain Republicans organized in the interests of Mr. Liebel's candidacy and the Democratic treasurer, Mr. Bennott, was the regular treasurer of the Democratic city committee. The treasurers expended said money largely in the employment of watchers and also in the employment of parties to electioneer for Mr. Liebel at the polls and elswhere. Some were employed simply as poll workers. No one party was paid more than $10 for his services. Mr. Liebel was in close touch with the campaign and participated in the said employment of watchers and poll workers, etc. It does not appear that any of said money was used in the purchase of votes or political influence.

that any of said money was used in the purchase of votes or political influence.

Mr. Yard paid H. Ott $10 to electioneer for Mr. Liebel, and on election day Mr. Ott served as clerk on the election board to fill a vacancy. It does not appear that he was an election officer when employed by Mr. Yard. Mr. Bennett paid A. Calabrese $10 out of said fund, and, so far as appears, Calabrese performed no services. He testified that he was employed by Mr. Joe McCormick (I believe a member of the Democratic committee) as a watcher, but received no watcher's certificate; and that on election morning he accepted the position as clerk on the election board to fill a vacancy, and served there. He was not an election officer when engaged as a watcher.

Mr. Yard paid B. F. Russell, a constable, $10. Mr. Russell testifies that he was employed by Mr. William Illig to work for the Republican ticket, and that he did so prior to election day. He says he electioneered among his Republican friends and urged them to attend the election, etc., but that on election day he was at the election booth and did nothing but attend to his official duties.

(Umbel's election, 231, Pa. St. 96.)

This was a proceeding under the act of 1906 investigating the account of Robert E. Umbel, candidate for Democratic nomina-tion to the office of judge. The case having been appealed to the superior court, it was there decided in opinion by Judge Rice (43 Su. Ct., 598), and on appeal Judge Rice's opinion was sustained per curiam.

It should be noted in this case that the account was for expenses incident to the nomination, and the distinction remembered that as to nominations, expenditures are not authorized to be made through the medium of a political committee acting other than as the agent of the accountant. Hence, all the expenses must be itemized and appear in accountant's statement.

It should be further borne in mind that the watchers prescribed by the act of 1903 relate only to elections and not to primary elections, no watchers being authorized by law to serve at primary elections.

The opinion of Judge Rice is therefore of special interest. for it shows that inadvertently, or following the custom, he used the word "watchers" not in the sense in which it is used in the statute, but in the sense in which it had been used by much of the public for many years and to cover an entirely different

Preliminary to a discussion of the questions raised by the assignments of errors to rulings upon offers of evidence, it is important to determine whether the account filed by the respondent conformed to the requirement of the act of March 5, 1906, P. L. 78. The account embraced two classes of items, (1) expenditures made by the respondent personally, (2) payments made by him to certain individuals of certain sums of money "For expenditure in my behalf under the first, second, sixth, seventh, and eighth parts of section 4, act of March 5, 1906." There are 12 items of the latter class, showing payments to five different persons aggregating $3,670, and these give no further intimation as to the purposes for which the money was actually expended than is indicated by the words and the figures above quoted. The receipt given by the persons to whom the respondent paid the money are equally indefinite. The plain import of the account is that these sums of money were paid to these five persons, not as compensation for their services in disseminating information to the public or in acting as watchers or the like, but to be expended by them in the respondent's behalf for some or all of the purposes mentioned in these paragraphs of the act, or to reimburse them for payments made by them to others in his behalf for these purposes.

The distinguishing features of this case is that Judge Umbel

The distinguishing features of this case is that Judge Umbel paid five different persons a sum aggregating $3,670 and filed the lump receipts, not giving items of disbursement which they made. These men, not being a political committee or party, and no political party being authorized under the statute to disburse money for a candidate for nomination, it was held in this case that while it would be legitimate for Judge Umbel to pay in order to satisfy the desires of those who may seek to act through these agents he must include in his account the items severally expended by these individuals. Had it been an election and Judge Umbel a candidate for election and these sums paid to the political committee, his lumping receipts in his account and their itemized account as a committee would have been proper and sufficient.

It will be seen from the cases which I have quoted that there is a plain distinction between the certificated watchers authorized to be within the voting place, and limited in number, and the personal workers of candidates or parties soliciting votes or aiding the candidacy of anyone, and which, both by Mr. Mc-Lean and by Mr. Bowman, were designated "special watchers." As has been well pointed out, the Pennsylvania law is opposed to corruption-bribery of the voters-but it has never set its seal of disapproval upon the widest publicity or system of canvass in order to make interest in behalf of political parties or individual candidates.

I have given some care to a consideration of this case, and unhesitatingly venture an opinion, based upon the examination of all the authority, that the employment by a candidate of special watchers to aid in creating interest in his behalf, in addition to the watchers authorized by certificate, to remain in the voting room, is a legitimate expenditure. [Applause.]

It may be of interest to quote more extensively from the act defining the duties of watchers:

WATCHERS.

WATCHERS.

Each party which has by its primary meeting board, caucus convention, sent to the proper officers a certificate of nomination, and each group of citizens which has sent to the proper office a nominating paper as provided in sections 2 and 3 of this act shall be allowed to appoint three qualified watchers, who must be three elective residents of the division, etc., in each voting place, without expense to the county, one of whom shall be allowed to remain in the room outside the inclosed space. Each watcher shall be provided with a certificate from the county commissioners, stating his name, the names of the persons who appointed him, and the party or policy he represents, and no party or policy shall be represented by more than one watcher in the same voting room at the same time. Watchers shall be required to show their certificates when required to do so.

Until the polls are closed no person shall be allowed in the room outside the inclosed space except the watcher, voters not exceeding 10 at any one time who are awaiting their turn to prepare their ballots, and peace officers when necessary for the preservation of the peace. (This section amends section 23, act of 1893, June 5.)

The watchers appointed by this act have different duties from overseers required to be appointed under act of 1874. (214 Pa., 63, Parrish petition.)

It appears to me that much confusion has arisen in this case owing to the fact that there has been a misconception as to the relationship of a political or party committee to a candidate. The political committee or party has a legal standing as such quite distinct from the candidate, and in no sense can the political committee be considered the agent of the candidate. At primary elections, however, the political committee has no standing, its duties and right to expend money as such begins only when nominations are made. Jonathan D. Davis, according to the testimony in the case, was the manager for Mr. Bowman at the primaries. After Mr. Bowman's nomination he was selected under the party rule to be the chairman of the party of the congressional district, and as such he was not either under the law or under the facts in this case the agent of Mr. Bowman. Mr. Bowman's account of his expenditures was duly filed, and Chairman Davis received contributions from a number of persons in addition to Mr. Bowman, and under the law filed his account. It is only by seeking to place Mr. Davis in the position of agent of Mr. Bowman that the semblance of a case is presented.

The need for special watchers to get out the vote was apparent. The special difficulty which confronted candidates was in getting the voters to vote. The election in 1910, at which thousands of voters failed to vote, establishes this.

The careless but fully explained remarks of witnesses for which Mr. Bowman was not responsible and concerning which he had no knowledge are made the basis of serious attack. It is unsafe to seek to establish conclusions from single sentences torn from their associations. Less money was expended in this campaign than in many which preceded it.

The battling forces of mighty error have ever wrested texts from Holy Writ and sought thereby to prove that right was wrong and wrong was right and to enthrone themselves upon the pedestal of their own unrighteousness

The unseating of Mr. Bowman will disfranchise the voters of the Luzerne district, a majority of whom desire him for their Congressman. But the seating of George R. McLean will be a violent and anarchistic error, the chief purpose of which will be apparent to everyone, and the Treasury of the United States despoiled of fifteen or twenty thousand dollars which George R. McLean will be permitted to draw for his expenses and back override the facts in order to place him in a position to which he was not elected. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. AINEY] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. ANSBERRY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to give notice that we will call this resolution up on Thursday afternoon, after the reading of the Journal, for the finishing of the debate, which will run for about an hour and ten minutes more, and for a vote.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. Littlepage, for three days, on account of illness.

To Mr. LINTHICUM, for three days, on account of important business.

To Mr. SAUNDERS, for two days, on account of illness. ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. ANSBERRY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 52 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Wednesday, December 11, 1912, at 12 o'clock noon.

NATIONAL FOREST RESERVATION COMMISSION (H. DOC. NO. 1158).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report of the National Forest Reservation Commission for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1912, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South. its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed Senate concurrent resolution No. 31, providing for the appointment of a joint committee to make necessary arrangements for the inauguration of the President elect of the United States on the 4th day of March next, and in compliance therewith the House had appointed Mr. Rucker of Missouri, Mr. Garrett, and Mr. McKinley the committee on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House insists upon its amendment to the bill (S. 3436) granting to Phillips County, Ark., certain lots in the city of Helena for a site for a county courthouse disagreed to by the Senate; agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. Robertson, Mr. Gra-HAM, and Mr. Volstead managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 26680) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. OLIVER presented a petition of the Ministerial Association of Beaver Falls, Pa., and a petition of 300 citizens of Masontown, Pa., praying for the enactment of an interstate liquor law to prevent the nullification of State liquor laws by outside dealers, which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of Local Union No. 163, International Union of the United Brewery Workmen of America, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., remonstrating against the enactment of an interstate liquor law to prevent the nullification of State liquor laws by outside dealers, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BRYAN. I present a petition of the Board of Trade of the city of Eustis, Fla., praying for the passage of the so-called Kenyon-Sheppard liquor bill. I ask that the petition lie on the table and be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the petition was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EUSTIS BOARD OF TRADE. Eustis, Fla., December 6, 1912.

Dear Senator: At a meeting of the board of trade of the city of Eustis held this evening it was unanimously resolved to request you to vote for and work for the passage of the Kenyon-Sheppard bill now before Congress. When the subject was introduced it was discussed, and upon motion the resolution was adopted without a dissenting voice. We feel that you could not confer a greater honor upon yourself than by heeding this petition.

AMENDMENT TO LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MYERS submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $10,400 for the maintenance of an assay office at Helena, Mont., etc., intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, etc., appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

H. R. 26680. An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

OMNIBUS CLAIMS BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning business is closed.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I ask that the consideration of House bill 19115, known as the omnibus claims bill, be resumed.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 19115) making appropriation for payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims, reported under the provisions of the acts approved March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and the Tucker Acts.

Mr. CRAWFORD. There is an amendment pending.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The pending amendment, the Chair is informed, is an amendment submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge]. It will be read.

The Secretary. On page 264, after line 17, in the Massachusetts items, insert:

To Thomas B. Flower, of Greenville, Mass, $5,538.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, when the Senator from Massachusetts offered this amendment yesterday he had the findings of the Court of Claims printed in the RECORD, and they are in the Record of yesterday's proceedings. This item was not in the bill as it passed the House. The Senate committee, after examining the items in the bill as it passed the House, proposed an amendment striking out a very large number of claims of the same character and having the same standing as this claim which the Senator from Massachusetts proposes shall be paid. This amendment, which he proposed some time ago, was referred to the committee and received very careful consideration by that committee, and the committee decided against incorporating it in the bill.

Mr. President, I wish to call attention to claims of this class. In the first place, it is for what may be called stores and supplies, although two items in it are for woodland, 163 acres of timber and 133 acres of timber, apparently standing timber, as estimated by the agent. Among the items is a claim for a henhouse and a corncrib and divers items of that kind, which it is claimed were taken by the military forces of the United States for the use of the Army in 1864.

This claim was sent to the Court of Claims under what is known as the Tucker Act. That act required that the court make a finding, giving any excuse which the claimant might have for long delay in presenting his claim. The court, in its findings, say that-

The claim was not presented to the Southern Claims Commission, and no evidence has been offered by the claimant under the act of March 3, 1887, "bearing upon the question whether there has been any delay or laches in presenting such claim or applying for such grant, gift, or bounty, and facts bearing upon the question whether the bar of any statute of limitation should be removed or which shall be claimed to excuse the claimant for not having resorted to any established legal remedy."

It was sent to the Court of Claims under an act which required the court to find what the facts were that might be considered in excusing the claimant for his delay and laches, and the court finds no evidence whatever upon the question why during all these years this claim had not been presented to any department of the Government. It was not presented to the Southern Claims Commission; it was not sent to the Court of Claims under the Bowman Act; but apparently it was allowed to slumber from 1864 until the year 1900, when for the first time it was sent to the Court of Claims under the Now, that is a period or more than a generation. For a period of about 36 years this claim lay dormant and was not presented to any department of the Government. Sir, during that time the claimant died. The court finds in the year 1902 that this claimant was loyal. Mr. President, it can be seen at a glance how difficult it would be, after the expiration of 36 years, the original claimant himself being in his grave, for the Government to get testimony with reference to whether or not he was not loyal.

But it is a notorious fact, which appears all through the omnibus claims bill, that after an ancestor, who during his lifetime was too conscientious and had too much regard for his sense of propriety to come forward and assert a claim, is dead and gone, his children come forward and urge the claim, saying that he was loyal, and this, too, when all the witnesses who lived at the time the claim arose are dead and in their graves and there is no opportunity for the Government to make an issue with reference to the matter. Some of these children come in here and ask damages for corn cribs or for spoliation of timber lands by the hundreds of acres more than a generation ago, and say that the ancestor was loyal. Loyalty is a very general term; it is largely a state of mind; and, as the court has said over and over again, the most competent witness upon the question of loyalty, if he will tell the truth, is the claimant himself who originally had the right to assert the When he is dead, when his lips are forever closed, and when no issue can be made with reference to him, after all the parties are gone and the transaction is a stale one, the children come in and say the ancestor was loyal. That puts the Government of the United States at a very great disadvantage, indeed. Then, when the claimant goes into court under a law which requires the Court of Claims to find what explanation there is for his delay, and under that statute the court takes jurisdiction of the claim and reports it back here without a single explanation, without any facts whatever to explain the long years that have gone by since the facts arose upon which the claim is based, it seems to me we are opening the door in a very reckless and very dangerous way to go into the appropria-tion of money to satisfy claims of such a character.

In war all the residents of the country with which we are at war are enemies-public enemies-they are so regarded: and to bring a claim on account of soldiers going through forests and in the conduct of war laying waste to trees, so that they are estimated by the acre-133 acres of timber-is bringing a claim against the Government which arose during the war of such a character that it seems to me it would be a very dangerous precedent, indeed, to appropriate money to satisfy it.

As I have said over and over again, if this particular claim is allowed upon this state of facts, and we are to load this bill down with such claims, I will say frankly to the Senate that after the bill is so loaded it will not have my support.

I have investigated these claims personally. I have not taken the word of clerks; I have taken the findings, and I have carefully and conscientiously gone through each one of them and reported to the full committee the facts which I found. That committee, after seriously considering them, decided to reject this claim and others of this class. It is for the Senate to say whether they will sustain the committee in that policy or throw the bars down here and go into a discussion of all the multitudinous details and facts in relation to stale claims of this character.

I submit to the Senate that the amendment ought not to be accepted.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I have no desire to protract the discussion of this particular amendment. I am unable to say why there was delay in the presentation of the claim, but I do wish to say a single word in regard to one statement made by the Senator from South Dakota as to the children of the man in whose name the claim is made coming forward and making a statement about his loyalty which he would have been unwilling to make. I happen to know the son of this man who, I think, is the one who has brought the claim. He is a young man of a great deal of talent and ability and of the highest character. He is utterly incapable of making any statement for the purpose of getting money from the Government which he did not thoroughly believe to be true. I think it is only just to him to say that I am sure that he is thoroughly convinced that this is an honest and proper claim and that he never would have alleged the loyalty of his father unless he had been perfectly certain of it. I know this case comes under a class of claims very much disputed, but I felt when I introduced it that it was an honest claim and a good claim, and for that reason I presented it. I do not wish to delay the Senate any further.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Just one word further, Mr. President. I do not wish to start in here on one item with a lengthy discussion, but the Tucker Act, under which this claim was sent to the Court of Claims, provides that that court shall also report whether there are any equitable grounds upon which the claim might be allowed. There is absolutely no report under the Tucker Act that there are equitable grounds upon which this claim should be considered.

Another thing. It is said that this property was taken by the military forces for the use of the Army, but it is not said, as is customary in such cases, that it was taken by authority of the Government. It is simply said that it was taken by the military forces for the use of the Army.

Mr. LODGE. The court says specifically that it was taken by proper authority.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is in the statement of facts, taken from the petition, but not in the findings. The findings are that there was taken from the claimant's decedent in Dinwiddie County

Mr. LODGE. Yes; that is the statement of fact.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Certainly. That is merely the allegation.

Mr. LODGE. Yes; that is true.

Mr. CRAWFORD. But in the statement of facts it does not say that it was by authority of the Government.

That is not all. Under the laws relating to these claims there should have been a receipt issued by the quartermaster, or whoever represented the Government at the time this property was received, if it was taken in that way and for the use of the Government by authority of the Government. There is nothing of that kind here. The most that can be claimed for these facts is that this property was taken by the United States forces and was used for the Army, but there is nothing in the findings to show that it was taken by the authority of the commanding officer or that it was receipted for, so there is not any evidence of that class and character which, under several of the acts, it is contemplated should be produced before the claim would have any standing before an auditor of the War Department.

ask that the amendment be rejected, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH of Georgia in the chair). The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge]. [Putting the ques-The ayes seem to have it.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I call for a division, Mr. President. The PRESIDING OFFICER. A division is called for.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I call for yeas and nays. We might as well go on record on this claim. Some Senators evidently did not understand the question on which the vote was being taken.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts, which the Secretary will state.

The Secretary. On page 264, after line 13, it is proposed to insert the following:

To Thomas B. Flower, of Greenville, Mass., $5,538.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. May I ask the Senator from Massachusetts what the claim is based on?

Mr. LODGE. That is stated in the findings of the court. is a claim for property taken and used during the war. Thomas B. Flower is dead, and the claim is brought by his heirs

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President, my understanding is that this bill is being made up upon the theory that all private claims should be omitted, except such as relate to overtime charges in favor of those who served in the postal department and various other branches of the public service.

The private claims referred to as being eliminated I supposed were private claims growing out of property taken during the war. I understood all those claims would be left over for future consideration and that the bill was to go to conference as amended on the part of the Senate, sufficient being done at this time to take care of school, church, and other undisputed

I am opposed to the amendment going in the bill unless all the other private claims of the same character are also in-serted. There is no reason why there should be an exception made of that one simply because the beneficiary of it happens to reside in Massachusetts.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, the Senate has sustained the committee in practically all of the amendments reported by the committee, striking out of the bill just such claims as this. Now, the Senate will have to reverse itself with reference to two or three hundred claims or else discriminate against two or three hundred claims if it allows this one claim presented by the Senator from Massachusetts. I do not think it would be fair to the committee or wise to do anything of the kind.

Mr. THORNTON. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts whether the claim which he now offers was embodied in the House bill?

Mr. LODGE. I have not examined the House bill to see whether it was included or not, but I think it was not.

Mr. CRAWFORD. It was not.
Mr. THORNTON. It was not in the House bill?

Mr. LODGE. No.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Massachusetts if it has ever been to the Court of Claims. and if there is a finding from the Court of Claims?

Mr. LODGE. Yes; the findings of the Court of Claims have been rendered.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Have they been read? Mr. LODGE. They have been read. I will ask that they be read again, if the Senator so desires.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The Senator from Virginia may not have been in the Chamber at the time, but we have just discussed the issue with reference to the report of the Court of Claims. The claim was sent there under that clause of the Tucker Act which required the court to find what the facts were and to ascertain what explanation the claimant gave for his delay. Under that clause the Court of Claims found no excuse whatever for the delay. In addition to that, I have just called attention to the fact that the court findings, while they say the property was taken by the military forces, do not go to the extent of saying that the property was taken by the authority of the Government. There was no voucher, or anything of that kind produced. So that in many respects it is not as strong as cases which the Senate has sustained the committee in striking from the bill as it passed the House. This claim is not in the bill as it passed the House.

Mr. LODGE. The findings of fact read yesterday are as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. The claimant's decedent, Thomas B. Flower, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from who the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

II. There was taken from the claimant's decedent, in Dinwiddie County, State of Virginia, during the War of the Rebellion by the military forces of the United States for the use of the Army property of the kind and character above described, which was then and there reasonably worth the sum of $5,538, for which no payment appears to have been made. have been made have been made.

III. The claim was not presented to the Southern Claims Commission, and no evidence has been offered by the claimant under the act of March 3, 1887, "bearing upon the question whether there has been any delay or laches in presenting such claim or applying for such grant, gift, or bounty, and facts bearing upon the question whether the bar of any statute of limitation should be removed or which shall be claimed to excuse the claimant for not having resorted to any established legal remedy."

Mr. CRAWFORD. The claim was not sent to the Court of Claims until 1900, 36 years after this property was alleged to have been taken, and the finding that the original claimant was loyal was made in 1902, 38 years afterwards, when the claimant was dead and in his grave. There is not anything in the record to show that up to 1900 relief was asked from any department of the Government or even a bill presented to the Congress of the United States for relief. The Court of Claims, under the Tucker Act which required an explanation of the delay and laches, finds no explanation.

Mr. President, I withdraw my request for the yeas and nays on the amendment, but ask that the question again be put on it.

Mr. LODGE. I ask the Chair to put the question again. The PRESIDING OFFICER. 'The Chair will again put the question. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. ROOT. Mr. President, I wish to offer an amendment covering a longevity claim. I think it is of the same character as others which have been passed upon favorably.

Mr. CRAWFORD. We have been over so many of them that I will not ask to delay the Senate by having the findings read, and I will accept the amendment with this reservation, that I wish to examine the case, and if I find in any way that it differs from the cases that we have allowed, then I am sure the Senator will concede to me that I can ask to have the action reconsidered.

Mr. ROOT. That is entirely satisfactory to me. Mr. CRAWFORD. With that understanding on the part of the committee, I am willing to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.
The Secretary. On page 263, after line 2, in the District of Columbia items, it is proposed to insert:

To Spencer Gordon, administrator of the estate of Charles Harris ester, deceased, of Washington, $1,545.58.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is that an overtime navy-yard claim?

Mr. ROOT. That is a longevity claim.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROOT. I offer another amendment. It does not come under the same head.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The Secretary. On page 268, after line 9, it is proposed to Elizabeth B. Eddy, widow of Charles G. Eddy, deceased, $602.92.

Mr. ROQT. There are findings of the Court of Claims in that case. I ask to have the findings read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. Claimant's decedent, Charles G. Eddy, upon whose service this claim is based, was loyal to the United States, he having served in the military service of the United States from July 26, 1862, until the close of the War of the Rebellion.

II. Said decedent was enrolled in the military service of the United States for three years on the 26th day of July, 1862, at Milwaukee, Wis., and was mustered into said service as sergeant, Company A, Twenty-fourth Wisconsin Infantry, on August 15, 1862. On December 22, 1862, he was detailed as telegraph operator at the headquarters of Gen. A. D. McCook, and served under said detail from December 23, 1862, until June 14, 1863, when the following order was issued:

[Special Field Orders, No. 192.]

[Special Field Orders, No. 192.] HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE CUMBERLAND, Tullahoma, Tenn., June 14, 1863.

[Extract.] 4. Sergt. Charles G. Eddy, Company A, Twenty-fourth Wisconsin Volunteers, is detailed for duty in telegraph office and will report without delay to Capt. J. C. Van Duzer, assistant superintendent military telegraph.

By command of Maj. Gen. Rosecrans:

Captain and Assistant Adjutant General. While serving under said last-mentioned detail the following order was issued:

[Special Orders, No. 93.]

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, Washington, February 26, 1865.

[Extract.]

35. The following enlisted men will be furloughed without pay or emoluments until further orders, to enable them to enter the service of the United States Military Telegraph Corps. They will be borne on their company rolls as on furlough. Sergt. Charles G. Eddy, Company A, Twenty-fourth Wisconsin Volunteers.

By order of the Secretary of War.

By order of the Secretary of War.

W. A. Nichols,

Assistant Adjutant General.

III. Said Charles G. Eddy was carried on the pay rolls of the Quartermaster Generals Department of civilian employees of the United States Military Telegraph Service for the months of January, February, and March, 1864, at $70 per month, for the months of April, May, and June at $80 per month, and from July, 1864, to May 31, 1865, at $100 per month, a total of $1,550, and he receipted to various assistant quartermasters for the payments to him of said amounts.

It does not appear that said Charles G. Eddy received any pay for services as a telegraph operator for any time prior to January 1, 1864.

IV. No general or special orders were issued by the War Department during the Civil War relative to the granting of furloughs to enlisted men to enable them to be employed in the United States Military Telegraph Service on the civilian rolls prior to October 30, 1863.

V. Said Charles G. Eddy was reduced to private September 1, 1864, and was mustered out with his company June 22, 1865. Including a net overpayment of $5.93, he has been paid by Army paymasters the pay and clothing pay of a sergeant from July 26, 1862, to August 31, 1864, and of a private from September 1, 1864, to June 22, 1865, and $200 bounty under the acts of July 22, 1861, and July 28, 1866.

VI. The salaries paid to civilian employees of the United States Military Telegraph Service in the Department of the Cumberland during, the months of January of the years 1862, 1863, and 1864 varied from $15 per month to $100 per month, as follows: $15, $20, $27, $30, $33, $35, $37, $38, $40, $47, $50, $55, $38.20 ($1.94 per day), $60, $65, $70, $75, $76, $80, and $100 per month, as follows: $15, $20, $27, $30, $30, $75, $76, $80, and $100 per month, as follows: $15, $20, $27, $30, $30, $75, $76, $80, and $100 per month, as follows: $15, $20, $27, $30, $30, $35, $37, $38, $40, $47, $50, $55, $38.20 ($1.94 per day), $60, $65, $70, $75, $76, $80, and $100 per month, as follows: $15, $

JOHN RANDOLPH,

Assistant Clerk Court of Claims. Mr. ROOT. Mr. President, this little claim has heretofore passed the Senate, and I know of no reason why it should not be put into this bill, unless it be the general consideration relating to the kinds of claims to go into the bill.

Mr. CRAWFORD. May I ask the Senator when the bill passed the Senate?

Mr. ROOT. I think it was in the last session of the last Congress—the Sixty-first Congress.

Mr. CRAWFORD. It was not reported by the committee.

Mr. ROOT. It reached the House too late to be acted upon. I want to appeal to the chairman of the committee and to the Senate not to apply that rule to this claim, for this reason: This man was a veteran of the Civil War. He was mustered into the service of the United States in April, 1862, with a Wisconsin regiment, and shortly after, the officers ascertaining that he was a skilled telegrapher, he was ordered to duty as a telegrapher at headquarters and was kept there. He had become a sergeant. He was deprived of the opportunity for promotion, deprived of the opportunity for distinction in the military service, which as a young man he was seeking, and was obliged to stay at a desk and do the work of a telegrapher, side by side with civil telegraphers who were paid the salaries that were mentioned in the findings of the Court of Claims, while he was receiving the pay only of a private in the Army.

He brought to me an autograph letter of Gen. Sherman to him containing the highest encomiums upon his fidelity and value of his service. If this just claim is deferred, it never will be of any use to the claimant. As the Senate has once passed upon the case and as the Court of Claims has passed upon it, I hope the Senate will put it in this bill.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, I remember quite distinctly talking with the Senator from New York about this claim and reading the letter from Gen. Sherman, which, of course, appeals to anyone who reads it; but I have no recollection of this claim having been reported by the Committee on Claims. I remember we had it before us and there was objection to it, and, as I recall it, the committee did not make a report upon it. It may have come through some other committee, but I doubt very much if that bill was reported favorably by the Committee on Claims.

I do not know. I have a memorandum that it passed the Senate in the Sixty-first Congress, but too late to

Mr. CRAWFORD. If the Senator will permit me, I wish to call attention to some facts disclosed in the findings of the to can attention to some tacts disclosed in the findings of the Court of Claims with reference to Mr. Eddy's compensation. He received pay and clothing pay of a sergeant from July 26, 1862, to August 31, 1864, and of a private from September 1, 1864, to June 22, 1865, and $200 bounty, under the acts of July 2, 1861, and July 22, 1866. There was $200 bounty. Then in January, February, and March, 1864, Mr. Eddy received $70 a month as a theoryth operator, while during the same time. a month as a telegraph operator, while during the same time he drew pay as a sergeant. That is, he got pay as a sergeant as well as pay as a telegraph operator.

Mr. ROOT. I think that is all charged against him in the findings of the Court of Claims, and this $600 is the difference between all he received and what he would have received if he had been paid what the men working side by side with him were receiving.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I want to get that clearly before the Senate. He drew for April and May and June $80 a month as an operator; at the same time he drew pay as a sergeant. My sympathy is naturally with the claimant, particularly because of the letter of Gen. Sherman, but I discovered that he drew pay as an operator, and they did not cut him off from that, and at the same time he drew pay as a sergeant. From July, 1864, to September, 1864, he drew a hundred dollars a month as an operator; and then from July, 1864, to August, 1864, covering the same period, he drew pay as a sergeant. He got a hundred dollars a month and at the same time got a sergeant's pay; and from August, 1864, to May 31, 1865, he drew a hundred dollars a month as an operator, and from September, 1864, to June 22, 1865, he drew pay as a private; and then $200 additional as bounty. So that, after all, there is not as strong a case made out in his favor on the ground that he was unjustly treated by being confined to the duties of an operator while others were drawing salaries in other capacities, because he drew pay as an operator and also pay as a sergeant and got this bounty besides.

Mr. ROOT. But there was a period from 1862, when he was ordered to this telegraph office, until 1864, when there was a general order providing for the pay to men under those circumstances as civilians during which he was receiving only his pay as a sergeant. It was not covered by that general order because it was not retroactive.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, I wish the Senator would allow the matter to lie over until I can ascertain whether, as a matter of fact, the Committee on Claims reported this bill favorably. I have no recollection of their doing it. If the committee committed itself to this bill by a favorable report, that would put the committee in a different attitude from what I think it is in. I think the committee is in the position of having rejected this claim; and, if so, I should not feel that I could do otherwise than oppose it. But I should like to have an opportunity to do that.

Mr. ROOT. It will be quite satisfactory to me to have this amendment lie on the table until the chairman of the committee can make the inquiries he wishes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it will lie on the table.

Mr. MASSEY. Mr. President, I desire to offer the following amendment to the pending bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The Secretary. On page 64, following line 8, insert:

NEVADA

To John Allman, formerly of Virginia City, now a resident of the State of California, $2,358.

To John M. Forsyth, formerly of Carson City, now a resident of the State of California, $2,728.

To Frank J. McWorthy, formerly of the State of Nevada, now a resident of the State of California, $450.

To Thomas Rodgers, formerly of Virginia City, now a resident of the State of California, $440.

To the legal representatives of James M. Thompson, deceased, late of Carson City, $3,736.

Mr. MASSEY. Mr. President, the items covered by the amendment just read were in the bill at the time it passed the House and have been stricken out by the Committee on Claims in the bill as reported to the Senate.

The items grew out of a Piute Indian depredations in 1859 and 1860. It is true that no action was taken toward the presentation of these bills against the Government until many years after, and it is also true that there was no tribunal in the way of a court having power to adjudicate matters of this kind as between claimants and the Government until many years after these claims arose.

It is also true, Mr. President, that these claims were referred to the Court of Claims, and that the court has in each instance made findings of fact concerning the merits of the claims themselves; and as illustrating the facts out of which all of the claims have grown I call the attention of the Senate to and will read from the report sent to the Senate on the 16th day of December, 1904, under the certification of the clerk of the court.

I refer to the claim of John M. Forsyth, covered by the amendment which I have read.

The claimant in his petition-

Reading from the report-

Reading from the report—

The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

1. That he is a citizen of the United States and a resident of the State of California. That in the spring of 1860 he was a resident of the Territory of Nevada and volunteered to serve under Maj. William Ormsby in a volunteer organization raised to repel the attacks of the Piute Indians who were at the time raiding in the Territory of Nevada. That this volunteer organization was raised by the citizens in order to defend the Territory from the attacks of said Indians, there being at the time no United States troops in the Territory or any authorized militia of the Territory.

2. That he furnished for the use of said organization various supplies, as hereinafter set forth, and in a battle with said Indians in the spring of 1860 the Indians repulsed the volunteer organization forces and captured the horses, supplies, saddles, and other equipments furnished by this claimant. That he claims pay from the United States for the following property.

Then follows in the report a list of the property more which Then follows in the report a list of the property upon which he bases his rights against the Government of the United States, which I shall not read.

3. That a claim for said property, with evidence therein, was on the 24th day of October, 1890, presented to the State board of examiners of Nevada, the items of said claim being as hereinbefore recited and being for sum of $6,850, under the act of the legislature of said State as follows, to wit, an act entitled "An act relative to the proving of Indian war claims," approved February 27, 1885, and February 13, 1889, respectively. (State Statutes of Nevada for 1885, p. 47, and for 1889, pp. 32, 33.)

pp. 32, 33.)

That final action was not taken upon this claim by the State board of examiners of Nevada, but the same was reported to the governor of Nevada, being one of a list of cases marked "Action deferred." (Rep. Secretary of State, 1889-90.)

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel of both sides, make the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. In 1859 and early in 1860 the Indians of the Piute Tribe inaugurated a series of raids and massacres of settlers on the Curson River, Nevada Territory, and in April, 1860, they drove off a large amount of stock and killed several people and threatened the whites with extermina-

I. In 1859 and early in 1860 the Indians of the Pinte Tribe inaugurated a series of raids and massacres of settlers on the Carson River, Nevada Territory, and in April, 1860, they drove off a large amount of stock and killed several people and threatened the whites with extermination.

II. It became necessary, for the protection of the life and property of the settlers in and about Carson City, Virginia City, and the country intervening, to organize a company of volunteers to proceed against the Indians, and a company was organized composed of recruits from Carson City, Virginia City, and other smaller settlements, aggregating 125 or 130 men, under the command of Maj. William Ormsby. This company proceeded against the Indians, numbering several hundred; met them in a fight at Pyramid Lake. Nev., where the volunteer company was defeated with great loss. Whatever property, provisions, and supplies the company took into this campaign were used by the volunteers or abandoned or destroyed at or near Pyramid Lake, the survivors returning to their homes.

Immediately after these events home guards were formed and a regular force of volunteers was formed, recruited from residents of Carson and Virginia City, and other neighboring places, and requests for aid were sent to California, and in response several companies of volunteers and one of the regular United States soldiers were sent across the mountains and the whole force was placed under the command of Col. John C. Hays. This force, composed of several hundred men, moved against the Indians, who speedily retreated and after some small fights surrendered and sued for peace, which was granted.

III. These forces under Maj. William Ormsby and Col. Hays were provisioned and equipped by contributions from citizens of both Nevada and California. It was necessary to the success of the expeditions that the soldiers should be furnished with horses and feed, arms, ammunition, clothing, and provisions, all of which were either contributed by citizens upon request or impressed

I read from the findings of the court, Mr. President, that the Senate may know what the facts are as to each of the particular items covered by the amendment which I have proposed. These Indians were the wards of the Government. The Government had invited people to settle in the valleys in the neighborhood of these Indians. It was the duty of the Government to protect the settlers there both in their lives and property. When the trouble arose they were without that protection, and they took upon themselves, necessarily and in response, of course, to the inherent law of nature, to do that which the Government should have provided for-that is, the protection of their own lives and their own homes and their own property-and they gave this aid to the country for that purpose, although at a subsequent date, as shown, a portion of the Regular Army was sent across the mountains from California to assist in suppressing the uprising of these Indians.

Mr. President, in addition to that these items were covered in the bill as it passed the House. In addition to that fact these same items have passed the Senate in other bills covering the same items for the same purposes. They have been passed by the Senate twice, if I have read the RECORD correctly, in January, 1909, as shown by Senate bill 7971 of the Sixty-first Congress, second session, and on the 20th of December, 1910.

Not only that, Mr. President, but the Senate of the United States and the Congress of the United States, in fact, have recognized a number of claims of similar and like character, some of which, if my recollection serves me correctly, grew out of the same transaction, and have passed bills reimbursing citizens of the State of Nevada on account of the same losses or losses growing out of Indian depredations of the same character.

There were 39 of these claims, many of which have been paid, and when the House evidently deemed the claims of sufficient importance to embody it in the bill as carrying with it that equity which appealed to the conscience of the House in the passage of the bill as it came to the Senate, I think the Senate can not afford to reject at this time these claims.

There was a moral obligation upon the part of the Government as well as a legal obligation, especially under the conditions existing in the Territory of Nevada in 1859 and 1860 to afford that protection of life and property from these marauding tribes to which the settlers were entitled. The Senate well remembers as a part of the history of this country that in those days the trails of that western country across those deserts were crowded with emigrants who were seeking the gold fields of California and settling wherever land could be found at that time upon which to settle in the western country, to build the nation that we have in the western country.

As a matter of fact, the Government did not give to these people that protection which they should have had. They were compelled to make this sacrifice for the protection the Government should have given.

While these claims may be stale the mere question of their being stale ought not to be determinative of these rights where the facts are clear and undisputed. There is no doubt in my mind but that the Senate, in order to act justly regarding these claims, should adopt the amendment and give to the people making the claims what is due under the conditions and facts I have stated.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President, the claims of certain citizens of Nevada are claims which arose among the people who were taking voluntary steps in their own way to protect their settlements. That has been done in every pioneer community in every State in the United States at some time or another. The Maj. Ormsby who is mentioned was not an officer of the Regular Army of the United States. In fact, he was not connected with the Federal military establishment in any manner, shape, They were going out from Carson City and Virginia or form. City to engage in a contest with these Piute Indians, and the citizens contributed toward the fund with which they purchased the provisions and procured the horses and the equipment which these volunteers used. It seems that a fight occurred in which the settlers were defeated, and they lost a number of their horses and the provisions were consumed or

If this had ever had any standing whatever as a claim against the Government, it would be a claim to be presented to the Committee on Indian Depredations, and it would have to proceed under the statutes that have provided for the settlement of claims of that character. Now, that attempt was made. This claim was presented as an Indian depredation claim and it was rejected. That is the entire history of this It dates away back in 1859. It never came here for reference to the Court of Claims until in the year 1900.

It seems to me that the Territory of Nevada and the State of Nevada that was evolved from it might with more propriety than the Federal Government take care of a claim no larger than this. It is less than $20,000. If their own citizens or the decedents of their own citizens there, away back the fifties, in a voluntary movement in no way connected with any action of the Federal Government, sustained some loss, they are better prepared to know what the merits are than we at long range for a claim of this kind. Coming to the Capital of the Federal Government as late as 1900, when the transaction was in no way associated with the Federal authorities, and coming here in an omnibus claims bill in 1912, it seems to me opens a door of too great laxity in appropriating money out of the Federal Treasury to satisfy claims. I think there ought to be some responsibility fastened upon the Federal Government to justify taking money out of the Treasury and handing it over to citizens of the United States. I see no connecting link in this case whatever, and I ask that the action of the committee be sustained.

Of course, the court finds no conclusion of law. The Court of Claims finds nothing except the facts which I have recited.

I wish to say to the Senator from Nevada, in all kindness, that if the Senate rejects this amendment there will be a conference in which the views of the two Houses may be presented. The theory upon which the House puts this item in and the theory under which the Senate leaves it out will be therefore adjusted. I think it is fairer to the country, it is more in keeping with the responsibility that rests upon us in connection with the payment of money and the satisfaction of claims of this character, that we take that course rather than sustain the action of the House by placing this item in the bill.

I ask that the amendment be rejected.

Mr. MASSEY. Mr. President, just one or two words more, if I may, in response to the suggestions of the chairman of the Committee on Claims.

In the first place, Mr. President, the settlers on the Carson River in 1859 and 1860 did not voluntarily give up this property which they are now asking compensation for. As to the necessity of the donation, if the chairman wants to term it such, it was compelled by the action of the Piute Indian Tribe, were wards of the Government, under conditions where the Government was bound to protect those citizens from their raids. There was nothing voluntarily done so far as any citizen made any contribution at that time.

The further proposition that the claims are old, I grant; but that does not militate to any extent against the justice of the claim as based upon the facts found by the Court of Claims in each of these particular cases.

It is true, as the chairman has stated, that there is no conclusion of the court as to whether these claims ought or ought not to be paid upon the facts stated in the findings. very frankly to state to the Senate that when I know what the facts are—and there seems to be no dispute as to the facts in either of the cases presented to the Senate-I do not ask any court or any other person to form my conclusion as to the justice or the injustice of the claim, believing that I am capable of drawing my own conclusion as well as the court would be capable of drawing its conclusion, if conclusions were necessary under the facts stated.

Not only that, Mr. President, but I desire to repeat that the Senate in the Sixty-first Congress and in a session prior thereto passed a bill upon these facts compensating these people for these losses. Not only that, Mr. President, but a large amount of money was paid under a prior appropriation act, an act of Congress of the United States, to various claimants for claims of an exactly similar kind and character, and where the facts were no clearer than they are now.

Not only that, but I desire to call the attention of the Senate to the further fact that the House-I am simply repeating because I want to emphasize the fact-following the precedent established by the Senate heretofore, deemed these claims of sufficient character and justice to include them in the bill as it passed the House, and sent the bill here for the action of the Senate upon the same line and under the same direction.

Simply because the claims are old does not militate against a just claim of any kind, and it is only a question in my mind as to whether or not these claims are just. It is not a question whether or not the transaction out of which they arose occurred in 1859 or 1899. The question is whether the Government under the undisputed facts ought to compensate them. as to whether or not these claims are just. It is not a question people for this property that they contributed in protecting their lives and their property under the conditions named. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MASSEY].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I desire to offer a single amendment covering two claims, and I will ask to have the findings of fact read in each case, as that will put the cases most briefly before the Senate.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Have the amendments ever been referred

Mr. CRAWFORD. Have the amendments ever been referred to the committee, I will ask the Senator from Massachusetts?
Mr. LODGE. The Selfridge Board has dealt with them.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert:

Velma C. Williams, administrator of the estate of Paul Curtis, $4,128.39.

The Secretary read the findings of fact in the case, as follows: TINDINGS OF FACT.

The Secretary read the findings of fact in the case, as follows:

Indicate the collimant, Nelson Curtis, is the executor of the estate of Paul Curtis, who died about the year 1872. Edwin Wright, who was the coexecutor under the will, died in the year 1899. Paul Curtis, deceased, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout the war for the suppression of the rebellion.

It. Said Paul Curtis entered into a contract with the Navy Department September 9, 1862, to build and equip the hull of a paddle-wheel gurboat, known as a wooden double-ender and subsequently called the Chicopee, for $75,500. He completed the vessel, and the defendants by their proper officers paid him the contract price of $75,500, together with $3,304.20 for extra work resulting from changes and alterations during the process of the work, making a total payment to him of $78,804.20. By the contract the vessel was to be launched January 18. 1863, 126 days from the date of the contract, but was not launched until March 4, 1863. The contract lowed 50 days more for completing the vessel, but instead of being completed March 4, 1863, as was not finished until April 1, 1864, the principal cause of this delay being the delay of the machinery contractor in completing and installing the machinery of the vessel.

III. Changes in the plans and specifications and alterations of work were ordered by the Government and performed by the contractor throughout the progress of the work, many changes being made after the delivery of the vessel in New York City, some 200 miles distant from the contractor's place of business, which made such work more expensive to the contractor than it would otherwise have been. The vessel remained in New York over a year awaiting completion and installation of the steam machinery before the contractor could finally complete the work on the hull, during which time the prices of labor and materials very greatly increased, thus adding to the cost of the work performed during the period of delay.

IV. In consequence of 1866.

V. No evidence has been adduced to either impeach or confirm the allowance made by the Selfridge Board as aforesaid.

VI. The facts bearing upon the question whether there has been delay or laches in the presentation and prosecution of this claim appear to be that the contractor presented his claim to Congress March 16, 1864; to the Selfridge Board August 3, 1865, and to the Marchand Board in 1867. The claim was also presented to Congress in January, 1901, and later referred to the court by the United States Senate June 17, 1902, as hereinbefore mentioned.

By The Court.

BY THE COURT.

Mr. LODGE. I will state, Mr. President, that Velma C. Williams has been substituted as administrator for Nelson Curtis, owing to the death of the latter. I now ask that the findings be read in the other case—the Sampson case. The two cases stand on the same ground.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Does the Senator insist on the findings being read? They cover exactly the same conditions as to facts.

Mr. LODGE. I have made the request only to get the facts

Mr. CRAWFORD. They can be printed.
Mr. LODGE. I will, then, ask to have them printed, as the time for the meeting of the Court of Impeachment arrives in a few moments

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts will be stated.

The Secretary. It is also proposed to insert the following

To George T. Sampson, survivor of the firm of George T. & Augustus Sampson, $4,015.38. Mr. LODGE. I ask that the findings of fact in that case be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, they will be printed in the RECORD.

The matter referred to is as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. George T. Sampson and his brother Augustus Sampson resided in oston, Mass., and were associated in business from the year 1862 to 75. They gave no aid or comfort to the rebellion, but were loyal to the Government of the United States throughout the war—from 1861 to 1865. Augustus Sampson died about the year 1894, and neither his estate nor his heirs are represented in this suit as parties claimant.

II. The said George T. Sampson and Augustus Sampson entered into a contract with the Navy Department, dated September 9, 1862, to build, launch, deliver to the engine contractor in New York City, and thereafter complete, the hull of the wooden double-ender gunboat Mattabessett, for the sum of $75,590. Under the contract the vessel was to be launched within 126 days from the date of the contract, or by January 18, 1863, and promptly thereafter delivered at the premises of the contractor for the steam machinery; but the vessel was not launched until April 3, 1863, 206 days after the date of the contract, and was not delivered to the machinery contractor until May 2, 1863 (reply of Navy Department, filed July 19, 1905, pp. 13, 84, 1383. The contract called for the completion of the vessel within 50 days after its delivery to the machinery contractor in New York, May 2, 1863; but it was not completed until eight months thereafter, the principal cause of this delay being the delay on the part of the machinery contractor in completing the installation of the engines and machinery of the wessel.

tractor in completing the installation of the engines and machinery of the vessel.

III. During the construction and equipment of the hull of said vessel by the contractors there were numerous alterations and additions ordered by the Navy Department and made by the contractors, for which the contractors, upon the completion of the vessel, presented a claim to the Navy Department, upon which claim they were allowed and paid the sum of $3,723.70, this being the full amount of the claim, with the exception of an item of $487 for cost of awnings for hurricane deck and an item of $1,325 for additional compensation for delivery of vessel at New York. This allowance and payment of $3,723.70 was in addition to the contract prices of $75,000 for the construction of the vessel and $500 for its delivery to the machinery contractor in New York, thus making a total payment to the contractors and builders of Government vessels during the war having asked additional compensation for the construction of such vessels on the ground that they had cost the contractors more than they had received for them, the Senate of the United States on March 9, 1865, passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of the Navy be requested to organize a board of not less than three competent persons whose duty it shall be to inquire into and determine how much the vessels of war and steam machinery contracted for by the department in the years 1862 and 1863 cost the contractors over and above the contract price, and the allowance for extra work, and report the same to the Senate at its next session, none but those who have given satisfaction to the department to be considered."

The Navy Department thereupon appointed a board consisting of Commodore Thomas O. Selfridge, Chief Engineer Henderson, and Paymaster Eldridge, commonly known as the Selfridge Board; and the contractors in this case presented to said board a sworn statement of claim alleging the entire cost to them of the said vessel, Mattabessett, to have been $83,239.8, the vessel.

III. During the construction and equipment of the hull of said vessel representations and additions or-

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, these cases relate to certain claims of contractors for building vessels during the Civil War. There is no pretense that there was laches at the time. They both presented their claims immediately. They took their claims before the board known as the Selfridge Board, which was established by the Government for the purpose of dealing with such claims, and that board made awards in both cases. Like so many of the claims against the Government, the boards or commissions established by the Government make the award and then Congress does not pay the debt. The matters have dragged along until finally they were referred to the Court of Claims, and the findings of the Court of Claims have been It seems to me that nothing could be stronger, according to mere justice, than these claims. They made their claims at once. The Government said, "All these claims shall be submitted to a board," admitting the liability. The board thereupon was convened, heard the claims, made the awards, and ever since Congress has refused to pay the awards. It seems to me that if any claim is a just one it is a claim of that character.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Let this amendment be considered the pending amendment, and I will ask to-morrow, after the routine morning business, to resume consideration of the bill.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama. I want to put into the RECORD an amendment that I shall offer to this bill and the explanation of facts upon which I propose to offer it. It is very brief, and I merely desire it printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the request of the Senator from Alabama will be granted.

The matter referred to is as follows:

On page 267, at the end of line 16, after the words "this act," insert the words "and section 3480 of the Revised Statutes, so far as applicable to these claims, is hereby repealed."

STATEMENT IN REFERENCE TO AMENDMENT BY SENATOR JOHNSTON OF ALABAMA TO H. R. 19115, ON PAGE 267.

The provision now in the bill, lines 3 to 16, page 267, removes the restriction placed upon accounting efficers by decisions of the comptroller in cases where the claim has once been presented and denied.

At one time the Comptroller of the Treasury decided adversely to longevity claims. Later this decision was reversed. Since that time numbers of officers who had never previously had their longevity claims passed upon presented their claims, and these claims the comptroller has allowed, but upon the principle of res adjudicata has refused to reopen and allow similar claims that his predecessors had disallowed.

There are certain other claims barred from consideration by the accounting officers by section 3480, Revised Statutes. These are all claims for services in the Army previous to April 13, 1861; that is, claims that had accrued or existed prior to the commencement of the war. In 1807, just after the war, section 3480 was enacted restricting pay officers from allowing claims or demands existing prior to April 13, 1861, in favor of any person who was not known to be opposed to and distinctly in favor of the suppression of the rebellion.

At the close of our Civil War this recognized principle of international law would have applied except for the direct prohibition upon the allowance of such claims by section 3480, enacted in 1867, before the bitterness and passion of the war had passed and as a punitive statute. The repeal of that section now in no way affects existing limitations upon the payment of claims which arose out of the war, as the section affects only debts due before the war commenced.

THE SECTION HAS BEEN REPEALED IN PART SEVERAL TIMES.

THE SECTION HAS BEEN REPEALED IN PART SEVERAL TIMES.

1. By an act of March 3, 1873 (17 Stat, L., 528), claims of the census takers of 1860 were exempt from the operations of this section.

2. By an act of March 3, 1877, provision was made for payment of claims of mail carriers for services performed prior to the outbreak of the Civil War, and provision made that this section should not be applicable to the payments therein authorized.

3. By "An act to repeal, in part, and to limit section 3480, Revised Statutes of the United States," approved March 11, 1898 (30 Stat, L., 274), proof of loyalty was dispensed with "in any application for bounty land where the proof otherwise shows that the claimant is entitled thereto."

STATUS OF SECTION 3480 NOW.

As above stated, the bill has already been repealed in part three times. Besides this, a bill to totally repeal the section has been twice favorably reported to the Senate by the Judiciary Committee, once by the late Senator Pettus, of Alabama, in the Fifty-ninth Congress, and in that Congress the bill passed the Senate. The second time on a report by Senator Dillingham, of Vermont, in the Sixtieth Congress. A bill to repeal the section in whole is now pending in this Congress. If claims which are now barred from consideration because they have been disallowed by the accounting officers are now going to be opened for consideration, these claims also should be so opened which have been barred from consideration by this statute.

The purpose of this amendment is to open to audit these claims of officers of the Regular Army serving in the Confederate Army. No appropriation is asked, and that question would arise after the audit.

IMPEACHMENT OF ROBERT W. ARCHBALD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (Mr. Bacon) having announced that the time had arrived for the consideration of the articles of impeachment against Robert W. Archbald, the respondent appeared with his counsel, Mr. Worthington, Mr. Simpson, and Mr. Robert W. Archbald, jr.

The managers on the part of the House of Representatives appeared in the seats provided for them.

The Sergeant at Arms made the usual proclamation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the Journal of the last sitting of the Senate as a Court of Impeach-

The Secretary read the Journal of Tuesday's proceedings of the Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there any inaccuracies in the Journal? If not, it will stand approved.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we will ask to have Mr. W. P. Boland recalled, as his cross-examination has not been concluded

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will be recalled.

TESTIMONY OF W. P. BOLAND-RESUMED.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Have you talked with anybody about the case or your evidence since you were on the stand yesterday?—A. Only my brother and Miss Boland and Miss Blackmore, when I went back to the hotel.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Speak louder; we can not hear you.

The Witness. I say only to my brother and my niece, Miss Boland, and Miss Blackmore, who is with her here as a witness. Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) You said yesterday that Judge—A. (Interrupting.) I might say that I spoke to Mr. Webb. I said, "How do you do?" out here in the corridor.

Q. In the corridor?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said yesterday that Judge Witmer laughed you out of his court?-A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would tell us a little about that, so we will know to what you refer.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, I object to that on the ground that it is wholly immaterial. Counsel for the respondent brought it out on cross-examination, and we care nothing about testimony of that character. It is not cross-examination, and it has nothing to do with the case. We think that in order to shorten the trial and to get through with the testimony matters that are wholly irrelevant and immaterial and not properly the subject of cross-examination ought to be omitted from this

Mr. WORTHINGTON. We make no quarrel with the honorable managers about the rule that should be applied; but this witness has testified that Judge Archbald and Judge Witmer and his own attorney and others had formed a conspiracy to ruin the Marian Coal Co.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, I think that statement is hardly justified. I do not think the witness said that. Mr. WORTHINGTON. Well, Mr. President, if the Chair Well, Mr. President, if the Chair does not recall that, we will have to stop a moment to see what the witness did say.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not consider the question whether or not that particular language was used material to the decision of this question. So we will not pause for the purpose of examining the notes as to that.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Shall I ask the question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No, sir. The Chair would like to hear from counsel.

cross-examination

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I say the witness has testified, and said with great emphasis yesterday, that Judge Archbald and Judge Witmer together, Judge Witmer at the dictation of Judge Archbald, entered a decree in the case of Peale versus the Marian Coal Co., and otherwise took action in the case which ruined that company.

Now, I submit we ought to have the right to find out what is the foundation for such charges; or, as we contend, to determine that there is no foundation for them and that the witness is laboring under hallucinations in his talk about Judge Archbald and Judge Witmer and his own counsel.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. So far as the Chair remembers, in the articles of impeachment there is no charge of conspiracy between Judge Archbald and Judge Witmer. There. fore the testimony would be utterly irrelevant, and the Chair would not consider it admissible.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. But, if you will permit me, Mr. President, the articles of impeachment charge Judge Archbald with being engaged in improper practices, and especially with reference to this particular suit, and the witness who was called to substantiate the charge says the conspiracy was one to which Judge Witmer was a party.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If that testimony had been brought out by the managers, the Chair would recognize the right of counsel to cross-examine the witness upon it; but that was testimony brought out by the respondent, and the Chair thinks it is entirely irrelevant.

Mr. WORTHINGTON.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Very well. Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) I wish you would repeat— I do not recall now just what you said—about the case of Peale against The Marian Coal Co. remaining idle for a great many months. You said from the 13th of October, 1908, if I remember right, to some date.—A. On the 13th of October the Marian Coal Co. suspended further shipments of coal to Mr. Peale, and somewhere along in 1909 there was a suit started in the Federal courts; but there was not much of a movement to that suit until after or about the time we started proceedings against the railroads before the Interstate Commerce Commis-That is what I meant. sion.

Q. And what was the time you started proceedings before the Interstate Commerce Commission?-A. I think that was about August 12, 1910.

Q. Are you aware of the fact that the Peale suit was not begun until March, 1909?-A. I only know from what I have seen of the records of that case.

Q. You do not doubt that the record is correct about that?-A. I have no reason to doubt that; no.

Q. Did you not, before the Attorney General in February, 1912, assent to this statement made by Mr. Cockrell?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we object to that unless it is for the purpose of contradicting something that the witness has said in his examination in chief. We did not go into that matter at all. We recognize the right of counsel to refer to it to contradict anything we may have brought out on examination in chief in which the witness has sworn contrary to statements there, but not otherwise.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does counsel desire to say anything on that?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I was looking for what the witness stated yesterday on that subject, Mr. President. The honorable manager says he did not bring that out. [Addressing witness.] You testified yesterday, did you not?-

Q. How many months do you say the case lay idle?—A. From the 13th of October to about December, 1910.
Q. When?—A. From October, 1908, until about December, 1910, there was scarcely anything done with it.

Now, surely, Mr. President, when the main point of this witness's testimony has been the conduct of Judge Archbald with reference to the case of Peale against The Marian Coal Co., we ought not to be restricted in our cross-examination of him as to just what is charged against Judge Archbald or just what are the facts in reference to the charges so far as we can get them from this witness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will ask that the question be repeated.

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. Did you not, before the Attorney General in February, 1912, assent to this statement made by Mr. Cockrell?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. That the demurrer was overruled and the case lay idle for about 26 months?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is as to the witness having assented-

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. To a statement made by another?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Yes, sir. That would be supposed to be the same thing as if he had said it himself.

Mr. President, what I want to bring out is that this witness, whose statements brought on these proceedings, and who is now brought here as a witness to support them, told the Attorney General and told the Interstate Commerce Commission just what has been said here, that the suit referred to lay idle for 26 months, it being the suit of Peale against the Marian Coal Co.; that nothing was done about it until the Marian Coal Co. ventured to bring a suit before the Interstate Commerce Commission against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co. in the fall of 1910; and that then immediately, as the witness has said, the machinery of the courts was set to work. He has stated here distinctly that he charges that Judge Archbald and Judge Witmer together then undertook to start the Peale case and ran it to a decree against him for the purpose of interfering with the prosecution before the Interstate Commerce Commission of his suit against the railroad company.

Now, I want to bring out what the facts are to show that indeed, the suit was brought in March, 1909, and that it went along regularly about the way an equity suit in a Federal court usually goes along, and that there was no hurrying up of the case, and that it is not true that there were no steps taken until about the time the case before the Interstate Commerce Commission was begun, and that his whole story about that made to the Interstate Commerce Commission and made to the Attorney General and made here is in fact a delusion; that there is not the slightest foundation for it in fact.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question of the admissibility of that evidence, if offered, would be a distinct question. The question which the Chair understands counsel to propound is as to the witness having agreed and tacitly consented to what he heard another witness testify. Is that the question?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. No; not another witness; Mr. Cockrell was not a witness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will not say a

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. Cockrell, if I may say so to you, Mr. President, is an officer in the commission-I think he is private secretary to Commissioner Meyer, of the Interstate Commerce Commission—and he was present when Mr. Boland was examined by the Attorney General-in what capacity I do not know-but not as a witness.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Now. Mr. President, our objection to this testimony is that counsel has no right to ask the question unless it is for the purpose of contradicting-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the manager will permit the Chair, in order that we may proceed promptly the Chair will for the present exclude this testimony, and if afterwards counsel offer to prove that, which can be done by the record, the question will come up again. But it will possibly be an economy of time to give it that direction at this time without finally concluding the right of counsel to prove those facts.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Then I will ask you, Mr.

Boland, whether before the Judiciary Committee, when you were examined there, this did not happen in your examina-

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we object, unless it is for the purpose of contradicting testimony that the witness has given here, because we did not ask him a single question about what he said before the Judiciary Committee, as I remember it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the statement counsel now proposes to read relates to matter that the witness testified to on direction examination, of course that would bring it within

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. President, is there not another ground on which I may ask the witness this question? Is it not competent to show the bias of any person who is brought into court as a witness? Is it not always proper for the op-posing counsel to show, if they can do so, that a witness is biased against the person against whom his testimony is di-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks so.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I propose to show that this witness is not only biased against Judge Archbald in the ordinary way, but that he is responsible practically for this whole prose-cution or proceedings, and that he did it by making statements which are absolutely false and groundless.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Counsel will recognize the correctness of the rule that on cross-examination a witness can be examined only on matters brought out on direct examination.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. And also the rule as to a witness's bias. Mr. President, if I had witnesses who had heard this witness say yesterday that he was going to come in here and tell a whole lot of things that would hurt Judge Archbald, whether they were true or not, could I not prove that, although he did not testify to it on direct examination? Anything that would tend to show his bitterness and feeling toward Judge Archbald, or anything that he may have stated falsely about Judge Archbald, would be competent as showing bias.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Undoubtedly, but the Chair does not know what the particular evidence is.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I am proposing to bring out clearly that before the Interstate Commerce Commission, before the Attorney General, and before the Judiciary Committee this witness said distinctly that his case lay idle for 26 months—that was the case of Peale against the Marian Coal Co.—that it lay idle until he ventured to bring suit before the Interstate Commerce Commission against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., and that then Judge Archbald, who had not been in the court for several months, got Judge Witmer to take up the case and push it along and make a decree, which he says ruined him. Is not that competent on the question of bias?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does counsel propose to examine the witness about testimony which he gave before the Judiciary Committee, and which testimony has not been brought out in the examination here?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Certainly; for the purpose of showing his bias.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks counsel is entitled to show bias, but not in that way. It would open the door widely to the examination of this witness upon every subject connected with this case, whether it be a matter that has been brought out by the managers or not. There would be no limitation whatever under the rule as suggested by counsel for the respondent. The door would be absolutely thrown wide open without any restrictions or limitations as to the whole subject matter of the case if that rule is correct.

The Chair does not wish to be understood as ruling against the right of counsel to show those facts, but not in this way.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Very well. Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Now, I understood you to testify on your direct examination that when this silent-party paper was prepared, which gave you a one-third interest, you did expect to have an interest in this Katydid purchase and sale, and that afterwards you notified Williams that you released him. Is that right?—A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. When was it you released him?-A. I do not remember the exact date.

Q. Was it before you came down before the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Attorney General?-A. It was.

Q. It was?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now I will ask you whether this took place before the Attorney General, when Mr. Cockrell was there, on or about the 12th of February?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I object to anything that took place before the Attorney General, because I did not ask the witness any questions about that, unless counsel will say that he means to contradict some statement that the witness did make.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I do mean to show that he then stated that he still had the one-third interest.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I object, on the statement of counsel, because he is asking this witness certain questions and is then trying to contradict statements which he himself has brought out, not that we brought out.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. That was brought out by the mana-ers. That is my recollection and that of my associates here.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will have to have information on that point-by whom it was elicited. If it was elicited by the managers, counsel undoubtedly have the right to cross-examine the witness on it.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I desire to state further that what counsel proposes to show is wholly immaterial. Counsel can only contradict the witness upon material matters, and so far as the purposes of this case are concerned, we regard that proposed testimony as wholly immaterial. What happened before the Attorney General or the statements that counsel proposes to quote that he expects to prove the witness then said, we regard as absolutely immaterial to the issues in this case.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Let me read from the proceedings in this case, page 429. He was asked by Mr. Manager Floyd:

Then did you afterwards claim any interest under that contract? The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who asked the question?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. This is a question put to him by the manager who is now objecting to my going on.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. From what page are you reading, Mr. Worthington?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Page 429, just a little above the middle of the page:

Q. Then did you afterwards claim any interest under that contract?—A. When I found—

Then there was an objection, and a discussion followed which I will not read. Then Mr. Manager Flord said:

I think the whole transaction should come out. Even if it does not affect him, the Senate ought to have the full transaction in order that it may be understood.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Chair understands the purport of the question, it is legitimate.

Mr. Manager Floyd. I might explain—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not necessary. The Chair has ruled with the manager.

Q. (By Mr. Manager Floyd.) Answer the question.—A. I afterwards withdrew or released Mr. Williams from any interest that I might have in the sale of that property.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks the question can be asked

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) I will ask you whether or not, before the Attorney General, on or about the 12th of February last, this did not occur— Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we do not question the right of counsel to cross-examine the witness upon that proposition, but we do question his right, unless the witness has made some contrary statement here, to read that book.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I have just brought out that upon the question asked him by Mr. Manager Floyd, the witness said he told Williams he had released him. He told him that was before he came down here. I want to prove that when he came down here he then made the statement that he still had the one-third interest.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The counsel will ask the question.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) Reading from the bottom of page 138 of volume 1 of the proceedings before the Judiciary Committee of the House:

The ATTORNEY GENERAL. What was the sum placed on the other option?

Mr. Boland. $4,500. Now, I put myself in this proposition because I wanted to know where I stood—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks that counsel ought to confine himself to the particular point ruled by the Chair, that he has a right to show it by cross-questioning upon the particular evidence elicited by the managers.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I thought it was only fair to the witness and to the Senate that I should read the immediate question which led to it. It is the next question which is based on this.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Mr. Boland says:

Now, I put myself in this proposition because I wanted to know where I stood, so that I could talk and wouldn't be talking from hear-say, as I knew how utterly helpless I was with the influence I was up against.

Mr. COCKEELL. In other words, you and Mr. Williams and Judge Archbald were three partners in the sale of this culm bank?

Mr. BOLAND. Yes.

(To the witness:) Did you so testify?-A. I did.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, I do not understand that that contradicts anything this witness has said here in any particular.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the counsel claim that that contradicts the former statement of the witness?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I do.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the counsel claims that it does, it is proper evidence.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) How was it that Judge Archbald took away your trial by jury?—A. By taking into his court the case which should be brought in the local courts, which he

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we object. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair's attention was diverted for the moment. What was the question?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. The counsel asked the witness how it was that Judge Archbald took away his trial by jury.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The stenographer will read the question.

The Reporter read as follows:

Q. How was it that Judge Archbald took away your trial by jury? Mr. WORTHINGTON. I base that upon this, which happened yesterday

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The counsel will ask the question. The question is legitimate. The Chair understands, of course, that it was elicited by the managers. Was it not?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. It was not elicited by the managers.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I was about to call the attention of the President to what did happen on cross-examination. read from page 377 of the Congressional Record.

Q. You hold Judge Archbald responsible for the delay before the suit was brought in his court?

That was my question. Then he said:

I hold Judge Archbald responsible for taking away our trial by jury. He had no right to do so.

That was volunteered by the witness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is not material at all to this case. It is not stated in the articles of impeachment that he had deprived anybody of the right of trial by jury.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. It is on page 377 of the Record. should like to have the paper on page 489; the "To whom it may concern" paper.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. What page is it in the record? Mr. WORTHINGTON. Page 489 of the hearings before the House Judiciary Committee.

(Mr. Manager Floyd handed the paper to Mr. Worthington.) Mr. WORTHINGTON. This is a photographic copy. It is just as good. [To the witness:] Will you look at this paper, which is dated July 31, 1911?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Mr. President, we object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is the objection of the manager?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. My objection is that the paper was not in evidence and was not mentioned by the managers in any way in the examination in chief, and the counsel himself brought out whatever reference has been made in the testimony upon the cross-examination. We do not desire to offer that testimony in evidence. We consider it immaterial and irrelevent. I do not think the counsel has a right to cross-examine upon it.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. It is a paper that has not yet been referred to, I submit.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Then we object because the counsel is not confining himself to a proper cross-examination.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I offer this evidence for the purpose of showing, in connection with the other matters in the case, that this witness is biased against Judge Archbald, and to show that he was concocting papers in his office to his detriment. I do not see how the President of the Senate can judge about the competency of it without having it read. I recollect that when there was a paper offered by the managers early in these proceedings we objected to its going into the record, but it was decided that it must be read so that the question could be passed upon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The paper may be read if desired. The Senate has the same right to hear it as the Presiding Officer. It is now being read simply for the information of the Senate.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Certainly; I understand that. The Secretary read as follows: SCRANTON, PA., July 31, 1911.

To whom it may concern:

This is to certify that I, Edward Williams, called on W. P. Boland about December 15, 1910, with a note of R. W. Archbald, judge of the Interstate Commerce Court, for $500, to have said note discounted. I did not tell Boland at the time that the judge knew that I was going to call on him to discount the above-mentioned note. I only informed him about July 25, 1911, that he made a mistake in not discounting said Archbald note, as he was interested in the case of John W. Peale v. Marian Coal Co., which was then before the United States court, and he would have saved all of the costs had he discounted the note.

A. M. BLACKMODE.

A. M. BLACKMORE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is the question that the counsel asked with reference to this paper?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. The question is whether that paper was concocted in his office under his direction.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. I do not think it is fair to the witness to use that language, that it was concocted in his office. I think the counsel ought to use some other language.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. You ought to treat the witness with respect.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Certainly.
Mr. WORTHINGTON. I will substitute the word "prepared" for "concocted" if that pleases my honorable friend and if that will be more consistent with my duty to the witness, who does not seem to be worrying himself.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Chair remembers correctly, the managers brought out the fact as to the presentation of this note for discount and the refusal of the witness to discount it, and the reason he gave for so refusing. Am I correct in that?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Yes, sir; that is correct.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under those circumstances it seems to the Chair that the counsel is entitled to go fully into that question to show all the motives of the party and throw light

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON, handing paper.) Do you recognize the signature of Mr. Williams to that paper?—A. (Examining.) I do; yes, sir.

Q. And of Miss Blackmore, the witness?—A. I do.

Q. Do you know anything about the creation of that paper?-A. I do.

Q. What?—A. Mr. Williams was making several statements to me regarding his influence on Judge Archbald, what he could do and have the judge to do, and where I made a mistake in not going along with the request of the judge to discount this note. I knew it was dangerous for me to say anything about Judge Archbald when I had to prove it by a friend of his unless I got it reduced to writing. I consequently told Mr. Williams that if he was telling me the truth the only way he could prove it to me was to put it in writing; if he was making those charges against his friend, Judge Archbald, that he had to substantiate me with a written statement so that I might be fortified if I did say something detrimental to Judge Archbald. That is why I asked Mr. Williams for this paper.

Q. You dictated it to a stenographer?-A. Mr. Williams told me in his way where I made the mistake, and he recited that to the stenographer, and she put it in the shape that was satisfactory to him and as he wanted to convey that to me. That is how it was concocted, Mr. Worthington.

Q. Who was the stenographer?-A. I think Miss Mary Boland.

Q. Do you not know?-A. No; it was Miss Blackmore there who wrote this paper.

Q. Were you there?--A. I was in that neighborhood; I was around there; but could not exactly say, because so many things have been on my mind. I can not right off tell you just what occurred two years ago or a year ago.

Q. If you are not sure you were there, how can you tell how it was prepared?—A. I was there, because the paper was delivered to me.

Q. Were you in the room when it was typewritten?would not deny it. If I could answer that clearly I would not deny that. I do not know whether I was or not. There is deny that. I do not know whether I was or not. nothing about this paper I want to deny of its origination or its possession.

Q. You kept it until when?-A. I kept it until I came to Washington.

Q. And you had a photographic copy made of it, did you not?-A. Yes; I wanted to be sure I would not lose it-if I lost the original that I would have a photographic copy.

Q. Look at this paper [handing paper] and state whether that is the photographic copy; or were two of them made?-A. (Examining.) I had photographic copies made. Whether this is one or not, I know I had. I think this is one.

Q. When did you have that done?—A. Immediately after I got this letter. I think I did.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. This photographic copy had better be marked in evidence. It is not necessary to read it. It is the same as the original, of course.

(The original was marked "Exhibit K," and the photographic copy was marked "Exhibit L.")

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) In the letter to Mr. Cockrell, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which was read yester-day, you referred to "the date you mention." It is on page 379 of the RECORD. Let me remind you of the letter, Mr. Boland, dated February 1, 1912, at Scranton, under the heading of the Marian Coal Co., addressed to Mr. Allen V. Cockrell, Esq., Washington, D. C. It is as follows:

MARIAN COAL Co., Scranton, Pa., February 1, 1912.

ALLEN V. COCKBELL, Esq., D. C. Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I have secured additional information along the lines that I spoke to you and the other parties about and will be ready on the date you mention.

Did Mr. Cockrell mention the date to you by letter, telephone, conversation, or how?—A. I am not clear on what that date meant. I do know that I told Mr. Cockrell, and I told the Attorney General and I told Commissioner Meyer and I told Commissioner Clements that I had a lot of information that I had not time to close up. I had a lot of information that would involve others with the judge, and I felt I might be misunderstood at that particular time as using it for political purposes, and consequently there was a lot of things that were kept out for that purpose. I did not want to injure any man, because I was not in politics only so far as to vote for a good candidate.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. We object to that. Mr. WORTHINGTON. It has not the slightest reference to the question asked the witness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will rule it out and request the witness to answer.

Q. (By Mr. WORTHINGTON.) You say you can not tell what you refer to in that letter when you said "Will be ready on the date you mention"?—A. I can not give it to you now. I am not clear on that.

Q. Do you know whether or not, after Mr. Watson had ceased his efforts in the matter about which you have testified. he returned any papers to you or to your brother?—A. I do not remember getting any paper back from Mr. Watson. I gave him none.

Q. Do you know what paper was referred to in the letter of Judge Archbald to your brother dated November 13, in which he said he returned the paper?-A. I do not think I ever gave Mr. Watson any paper.

Q. Mr. Boland, you do not understand my question entirely. There is already in evidence a letter from Judge Archbald to your brother beginning "My dear Christy," dated November 13, 1911, and at the end of it he said, I return you papers or certain papers. I am asking you what those were or where they are?

they are?—A. I can not answer that question. I do not know. Q. You will correct me if I am wrong, but I think in your testimony before the Judiciary Committee, in referring to this conspiracy which you told us about yesterday, in which Judge Archbald and the railroads were a party, you referred to it as the Black Hand and the Mafia.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. We object, Mr. President. We did not bring out any testimony of that kind.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. On page 1734, I will ask you whether you said-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Wait a moment.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. We object to the question put in that way.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. May I read it?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will ask the counsel if it relates to matters brought out on direct examination?

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I confess, Mr. President, that after the cross-examination of this witness had proceeded as far as it did yesterday without any objection being made by the man-agers or by anybody else, I had supposed we would be per-mitted to go on and proceed on those lines to-day. So I did not examine his direct examination to see as to which of those lines he had testified on his direct, but he certainly did give testimony which the managers claim tends to show that Judge Archbald was engaged in a conspiracy with Mr. Williams and with Mr. Watson afterwards. I cross-examined him yesterday for the purpose of showing, or trying to show, as I thought, that his views on this subject of Judge Archbald and a conspiracy generally were absolutely unfounded and originated in a disordered brain.

Now, I want to pursue that for the purpose of showing that he has got into his head that they are black-hand people of the same order as the Italian organization which is called the Mafia and which I understand to be a collection of cutthroats; and I was about to read from his testimony before the Judiciary Committee, where he used that very language in reference to

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not think, unless it is in rebuttal of testimony elicited by the managers, that it is, under the rule in Federal courts, admissible to pursue a cross-examination which has no connection with anything brought out by the direct examination. The Chair will state that yesterday a good many things were asked by counsel on cross-examination which, if they had been objected to, the Chair would have ruled out; but the fact that they were not objected to does not warrant the examination of the witness Mr. WORTHINGTON. Very well.

Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will be disposed to recognize the right of examination to the utmost as to anything which was elicited by the managers in the direct examination.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I leave that subject, Mr. President. understand now the Chair to rule that this is a repetition of his ruling, and where I wish to cross-examine this witness to show his bias against Judge Archbald I can not ask about that unless there is some reference to it in the direct examination; but I may bring it out in another way at a later stage in the case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not think it would be competent to lay down the rule suggested by the counsel. For the reason previously given it would absolutely destroy the rule which prohibits the examination of witnesses upon matters not brought out in direct examination, and there would be no limitation thereafter, and counsel, upon cross-examination, could go to the utmost extent in the examination of a

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I do not wish to be persistent about it, but certainly I have a right at some time or other to show that this witness has a deadly bias and prejudice, an unreasonable bias, as I think, against Judge Archbald.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is no question about the counsel's right in the matter.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. The President holds that I can not do it on cross-examination, and the question is how it may come up

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not rule on that, but the Chair rules that the counsel can not do it by the infraction of another rule. The counsel can cross-examine the witness in any way that may disclose that fact without going into subjects matter relating to this case which were not brought out in the direct examination. Counsel are not concluded by that. There are two ways in which counsel can reach all that is wanted. One is by proving the same by other parties, and the other by introducing the witness as his own.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I think we will reserve these questions, then, until we come to introduce our own witnesses, when we will offer his declarations and statements as independent evidence on our own part. [To the witness:] Who was it gave you the information about the Pennsylvania Central Brewing to the information about the Felmsylvania Central Brewing Co.'s estimate of the value of the Katydid dump?—A. I think it was the man in charge of the coal department. I do not know his name, but I think I got that information from him, that the bank was not large enough to consider; that they were not prepared at that time to take the thing over.

O. Was he the man who told you that the value of the dump or the quantity of coal in it had shrunk after it was found you had something to do with it?—A. No, sir; he did not tell me anything of that kind.

Q. Where did you get that information?-A. I got that information from the statement he made to me and the statement Mr. Robertson made to me and the personal knowledge I had of the bank myself. I was on it. I found, in talking with Mr. John M. Robertson at one time, that he claimed there was about 100,000 tons of coal there, and when this man told me that the Pennsylvania people or the Hillside Coal & Iron people had only estimated 35,000 tons I felt that that was not right, and I told Mr. Williams then that I believed the reason of the shrinkage was on account of my connection with it.

Q. Did you know that the contract Judge Archbald had prepared to be executed in the matter of the sale to Mr. Conn was in Judge Archbald's name?—A. I did.

Q. How did you know that?—A. Mr. Williams told it to me. Q. That is all you know about it?-A. That was all I knew about it; yes. Q. Did Mr. Williams tell you that Judge Archbald was going to have it in his own name and not have Williams's name in it?—A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. And that Williams objected to it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then it was prepared with Judge Archbald's name and Williams's name both in it?-A. Yes, sir; he told me those

Q. You said yesterday something about Williams showing you a paper from the window of Judge Archbald's office, and you said that was something in connection with this lighterage matter, as I understood you. I wish you would explain that for my benefit .-- A. He told me about how Judge Archbald felt when Capt. May refused to give him this bank.

Q. Mr. Boland, I am only asking you about Williams exhibiting that paper at the window. What window was it, and where?-A. He showed that paper at the window. I want to tell you how he came to show it to me.

Q. I do not care about that. What I want to know is where the window was .- A. The post-office building and the Republican Building are side by side. There is a space of about 30 feet between them. The office of Judge Archbald was on the second floor and my office was on the second floor in the Republican Building, directly opposite Judge Archbald's office, and we could see people coming in and see each other at all times of the day.

Q. Was the window of Judge Archbald's office directly opposite your office, or was it-A. It was just about like that door there [indicating] on the south side.

Q. The Federal building, in which the judge's office was, fronts on what street?—A. It fronts on Washington Avenue and Linden Street. It is on a corner. There are entrances on both streets.

Q. On what side of that building is Washington Avenuenorth, south, east, or west?—A. On the east side.

Q. 'The window of the judge's office you speak of is on what side?-A. On the south side.

Q. How far from the east end of the building is the window on the south side where this paper was exhibited to you?—A. I should say it was about 40 feet.

Q. About 40 feet from the front of the building?-A. No; from Judge Archbald's office window to my office window.

Q. I am asking you how far it was from the window where this paper was exhibited to you to the east line of the Federal building?-A. I could not say that. I could not say which one of the two windows he showed it to me from.

Q. How far was the nearest window from that street?-A.

From the street?

Q. Yes; from the east front of the building on that street you mentioned .- A. I could not say whether it was 10 or 12 feet or less than that.

Q. It was very close to the street, was it?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you give us any description of the paper that Mr. Williams exhibited to you from the window?-A. It seemed to be a paper—if I am permitted to handle this paper—it seemed to be in the form of loose leaflets that was not prepared—that is, what was in typewriting form—the paper he showed me. I was not near enough to recognize the contents of the paper, but he held the paper up in that shape before the window.

Q. And you arranged that with him in advance?-A. No; he told me what the judge was doing, and then I wanted to see in what shape it was in—if it was in book form.

Q. He had told you before this that it was something about the lighterage case, I understood you to say?-A. Yes: I knew that it was not unusual for Judge Archbald to have a brief, but I thought it was unusual for Judge Archbald to prepare a brief.

Q. Do you remember that at the time of this conversation that you had with Williams in reference to this lighterage case your niece and stenographer, Mary Boland, was making notes of the conversation and what Williams said about it.—A. I told Mary Boland to be careful and take note of everything said, because I knew it was a case of life and death-

Q. You are not answering the question.-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she make a memorandum of that conversation had with Edward J. Williams about the lighterage case in the judge's office?-A. I did not quite understand that question.

Q. Did Mary Boland make a memorandum and in this way note all the conversation you had with Williams in reference to what was going on in the judge's office about the lighterage case?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. We object, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On what grounds?
Mr. Manager FLOYD. Because it is immaterial. We brought out nothing about anything of that kind, and it is not a crossexamination. The counsel is asking this witness about something that would be within the knowledge of another witness, even if it is material.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks that counsel is entitled to sift the witness as to the truth of the statement which he has made. That is along the line that counsel asked that question. The question is admissible.

The WITNESS. I can only say that she can answer that best herself, but my instructions to her were to take

Q. I do not care about your instructions to her. I want to ask if you know whether she did or did not?-A. I do not know; I could not swear to that, Mr. Worthington, I am only telling you that I told her to do it.

Q. Did this conversation with Mr. Williams about the lighterage case in the judge's office occur after you had told her to keep memoranda of theses things?-A. I would say I think it did

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Very well. That is all, Mr. President, I can now ask this witness under the rulings of the Chair, but would ask that he be not discharged after his examination is finished to-day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will retire, subject to recall. Is there further question for this witness?

Mr. Manager FLOYD. One moment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness will remain for the present.

Q. (By Mr. Manager FLOYD.) Mr. Boland, you said that Mr. Williams showed you certain papers. Could you tell now about what those papers were from the distance you were when you saw them when he held them in the window?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will suggest to the manager that the witness has already expressly answered that question.

Mr. Manager FLOYD. That is all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The witness may retire. Call the next witness

Mr. Manager FLOYD. Our next witness is Mr. Loomis.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. Mr. President, while the next witness is coming, I desire to offer a certified transcript of all the proceedings in the case of the Marian Coal Co. against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., docket No. 3592, and reports and orders filed by the commission in said case on June 8, 1912, and October 19, 1912, the originals of which are now on the files and records in the office of the Interstate Commerce Commission. This is one of the cases in the Interstate Commerce Commission.

I also introduce in evidence a certified copy of the record and all the papers, including all the orders, in the case of Henry E. Meeker and Caroline H. Meeker, copartners, trading as Meeker & Co., against the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., docket No. 1180; the complaint and answer in the case of Henry E. Meeker against the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., docket No. 3235; and also the report and order of the commission, dated June 8, 1911, in said docket, No. 1180, and joint report and orders dated May 7, 1912, in said cases, the originals of which are now on file and in the records in the office of the Interstate Commerce Commission. I do not desire that they be read, Mr. President, but that they be printed in the record.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection on the part of counsel-

Mr. WORTHINGTON. I should like to have an opportunity to look at those papers before they go in to see whether they are complete. I make that suggestion because, looking at the first one, it does not appear to be complete.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. I thought they were complete.

They purport to be complete, Mr. President.

Mr. WORTHINGTON. Yes; the certificate is all right. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. They will be withheld for that examination.

Mr. Manager CLAYTON. If they are not complete, the deficiency can be supplied, and I am quite willing that counsel may have a reasonable opportunity to examine them. Then, if he agrees that they are complete, they should be printed in the record as having been introduced at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That direction will be given, if it is agreeable to counsel.

The papers were subsequently ordered printed in the record.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON.

I, John H. Marble, secretary of the Interstate Commerce Commission, do hereby certify that the papers hereto attached are true copies of the complaint and answer in the case of Henry E. Meeker and Caroline H. Meeker, copartners, trading as Meeker & Company, against the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, Docket No. 1180, and complaint and answer in the case of Henry E. Meeker against the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, Docket No. 3235. Also report and order of the commission dated June 8, 1911, in the said Docket No. 1180 and joint report and orders dated May 7, 1912, in said cases, the originals of which are now on file and of record in the office of this commission.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed the seal of the commission this 9th day of December, 1912.

JOHN H. MARBLE,

(Before the Interstate Commerce Commission. Henry E. Meeker and Caroline H. Meeker, complainants, v. Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, defendants.)

To the Interstate Commerce Commission:

Before the Interstate Commerce Commission. Henry E. Meeker and Caroline H. Meeker, complainants, v. Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, defendants.)

The petition of the above-named complainants respectfully shows, on I. At all the times hereinafter mentioned the complainants were and still are copartners, engaged in the business of buying, slipping, and selling antiractic coal, under the firm name of "Meeker & Co." and still are copartners, engaged in the business of buying, slipping, and selling antiractic coal, under the firm name of "Meeker & Co." and still gantiractic coal, under the firm name of "Meeker & Co." and still gantiractic coal, under the history of the complainants were and still gantiractic coal over the lines operated by the defendant from mines and collieries situated in what is known as the "Wyoming" coal region. In Pennsylvania, to tidewater, at Perth Amboy, New Jersey, and thence the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, and a common carrier engaged in the interstate railroad transportation, and a common carrier engaged in the interstate railroad transportation, and a common carrier engaged in the interstate railroad transportation, and a common carrier engaged in the interstate coal as well as over other lines owned, leased, controlled, or operated by it. About 50 per cent of the defendant's entre business is the transportation of anthractic coal. III. In addition to the complainants there have been a number of other shippers engaged in shipping anthractic coal as interstate commenced by the coal company", a corporation and engaged in the basiness of mining and buying anthractic coal and engaged in the basiness of mining and buying anthractic coal and engaged in the basiness of mining and buying anthractic coal and engaged in the basiness of mining and buying anthractic coal and engaged in the basiness of mining and buying anthractic coal and engaged in the basiness of mining and buying anthractic coal and engaged in the basiness of mining and buying anthractic coal and engaged in the basiness o operators, which determined the price paid for coal at the breakers in the said Wyoming coal region, shipped subsequent to November 1, 1900, whereby it was provided that the breaker price should be 65 per cent of the tidewater price for prepared sizes, 50 per cent thereof for pea coal, and 40 per cent thereof for buckwheat coal; and thereupon the coal company accordingly paid the said additional percentages, respectively, for each ton of coal purchased by it at the breakers from said owner, and peators in the said part of the coal company accordingly paid the said additional percentages, respectively, for each ton of coal purchased by it at the breakers from said owner, and the defendant and the independent shippers of anthractic coal, including the complainants, as to the rate to be paid for carrying their coal, as hereinbefore stated; but it was well understood between the complainants and the defendant that the usual allowances should be additional price paid at the breakers for coal shipped during the said period; and for a part of the said period between November 1, 1900, and April 1, 1901, before the said prices had been definitely determined and when the difference between the tidewater price and the price at the breakers represented a sum in excess of the amount paid on the said so the complainants, showing such difference, some of which the complainants paid.

XI. Before November 1, 1900, and August 1, 1901, the complainants is hipped about eighty-eight thousand three hundred and thirty-six (88,336) tons of coal over the defendant is line between the Wyoming such difference and sixty-five (165) miles, and paid it, for such service, an average of about 9 40/100 mills per ton per mile for prepared sizes of coal and about 7,5740 mills per ton per mile for prepared sizes of coal and about 7,5740 mills per ton per mile for prepared sizes of coal and about 7,5740 mills per ton per mile for maler and the respective prices for the same coal prevailing at the breakers, was only one hundred and twenty-nine thous culm size of such coal, all of such prices being greatly in excess of one dollar per ton, the reasonable charge therefor, and constituting a total overcharge of about $210,351.00.

XV. The complainants were unable to continue their shipments of anthracite coal except by complying with the demands of the defendant as to rates; and all their said payments were made under dures, and the complainants, in each and every case, made the said payments under protest, asserting that the rates charged were unreasonable and excessive, and notified the defendant that they reserved the right to recover back from it the amount of excess over the reasonable rate.

XVI. Since August 1, 1901, the Coal Company has been and still is selling anthracite coal at Perth Amboy at such prices that, after deducting therefrom the price at which the coal was purchased at the breakers in the Wyoming coal regions, and a reasonable and proper allowance for shipping and selling expenses, there remains, as revenue or receipts to be paid to the railroad company for the transportation of the coal, a less sum than that charged by the railroad company for the transportation of the said coal between the said Wyoming coal region and Perth Amboy.

XVII. The fact that the Coal Company, in nominally paying the tariff rates prescribed by the railroad company, has paid an excessive amount for the transportation of its coal and has done so only at a loss, is evident from the annual reports of the said companies. The Coal Company would have been unable to transact its business in the manner above mentioned and to pay the railroad company the said charges for the transportation of anthracite coal from the Wyoming coal region to Perth Amboy, except for the fact that the railroad company has furnished to it the capital and means to make good the losses which have necessarily resulted in the payment to the railroad company by the Coal Company of the said transportation charges.

Wherefore the complainants respectfully request the commission to make an order fix spective payments made by the complainants in excess of a reasonable rate, from the dates of such payments, respectively, and to award to the complainants such other relief as they may show themselves entitled to receive.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILEOAD COMPANY, By E. B. THOMAS, President.

FRANK H. PLATT, Counsel, 2 Rector Street, New York City.

To the Interstate Commerce Commission:

The petition of the above-named complainant respectfully shows, on information and belief:

I. The plaintiff is engaged in the business of buying, selling, and shipping anthractic coal, under the trade name of Meeker & Co., having duly succeeded to the business which for many years was carried on by himself and Caroline II. Meeker, under the same name. The said business involves the shipping of large quantities of anthracite coals over the lines operated by the defendant from mines and collieries situated in what is known as the "Wyoming" coal region, in Pennsylvania, to tidewater at Perth Amboy, New Jersey, and thence to the New York market.

market.

II. At all the times herein mentioned the defendant was and still is a railroad corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, and a common carrier engaged in the interstate railroad transportation of passengers and property between points in the States of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York, over its own lines of road, as well as over other lines owned, leased, controlled, or operated by it. About 80% of the defendant's entire business is the transportation of anthracite coal and other merchandise, and about one-half of such percentage of its business is the transportation of anthracite coal.

of road, as well as over other lines owned, leased, controlled, or operated by it. About 80% of the detendant's entire business is the transportation of anthracite coal and other merchandise, and about one-half of such percentage of its business is the transportation of anthracite coal.

III. In addition to the complainant there have been a number of other shippers engaged in shipping authracite coal, as interstate commerce, over the said lines operated by the defendant from mines and collieries situated in the said Wyoming coal region to tidewater at Perth Amboy, one of whom was and still is the Lehigh Valley Coal Company (hereinafter called the "Coal Company"), a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania and engaged in the business of mining and buying anthracite coal, at mines and collieries in the said Wyoming coal region, and shipping the same as interstate commerce over the lines of the defendant to tidewater at Perth Amboy. New Jersey, and there selling it. Since the incorporation of the Coal Company the defendant has owned or controlled, and still owns and controls, its entire capital stock, and the two companies have had, and still have, virtually the same officers, and at least 75% of the anthracite coal transported by the defendant since 1850 was owned by the Coal Company.

IV. Substantially all the unmined anthracite coal in the United States is contained in a small area, consisting of about 496 square miles, in the northeastern part of Pennsylvania, in three localities known as the "Wyoming," the "Lehigh," and the "Schuylkill." Only a small portion of such coal is consumed in the immediate neighborhood of the mines. The greater portion of it is consumed in the Enstern and Middle States, and more than twenty per cent of it is shipped to the harbor of New York City and there marketed.

V. The only means of transporting coal from the anthracite region to New York Harbor is over the line of the defendant and of the following other railroad Company, the Philadelphia

VII. For several years prior to August 1, 1901, there was in operation between the defendant and the various shippers of anthracite coal, including the complainant and his said copartner, an arrangement by which it was provided that the rate which should be paid for transporting their coal to tidewater should be the difference between the market price at tidewater and the price prevailing at the breakers, the latter being definite percentages of the former; and although the defendant published nominal tariff rates and drew sight drafts each week upon its shippers for transportation at such tariff rates, which the shippers paid, yet the charges actually made to the shippers prior transporting their coal were, in all cases, approximately, the difference between the market price at tidewater and the price prevailing at the breakers, and the accounts between the defendant and the various shippers were adjusted accordingly a few days after the expiration of each month; and, in case the defendant had been overpaid upon the said sight drafts, it immediately returned the amount of such overpayment to the shippers, respectively.

VIII. From August 1, 1901, the Anthracite Companies, including the it immediately returned the amount of such overpayment to the shippers, respectively.

VIII. From Angust 1, 1901, the Anthracite Companies, including the defendant, which, prior to 1901, as hereinbefore alleged, had not charged for transporting coal more than the difference between the market price of the coal at the breakers and the price at tidewater, although they had been publishing nominal tariff rates, began to exact from all independent shippers a fixed charge per ton for carrying coal to tidewater, in excess of such difference in prices, amounting to $1.55 per ton for prepared coal, $1.40 per ton for pea coal, $1.25 per ton for buckwheat coal, and $1.10 for coal smaller than buckwheat coal; and the said charges have ever since been continued, except that the rate for buckwheat coal was reduced from $1.25 to $1.20 per ton on January 10, 1905. The said charges were and are unjust, unreasonable, and discriminatory and are forbidden by the act to regulate commerce and particularly by sections one and three thereof. During the said period any charge in excess of one dollar per ton made by the defendant for transporting anthracite coal between the said points constituted an unreasonable and excessive charge; and the said charges to the complainant were not only far in excess of the difference between the amounts realized for the coal at New York tidewater, after deducting expenses of selling, and the prices paid for it at the mines, and constituted an excessive, unreasonable, unlawful, and discriminatory charge for the said services.

IX. As a result of the said excessive and unreasonable charges, the independent dealers and shippers, including the complainant has been obliged to pay excessive rates upon all coal shipped by him to tidewater over the lines of the defendant.

X. In July, 1907, the complainant's said firm submitted a petition to the Interstate Commerce Commission, requesting it to make an order has been obliged to pay excessive rates upon all coal shipped by him to tidewater over the lines of the defendant.

X. In July, 1907, the complainant's said firm submitted a petition to the Interstate Commerce Commission, requesting it to make an order fixing the rate for the transportation of anthracite coal by the defendant between the Wyoming coal region in Pennsylvania, and Perth Amboy, New Jersey, at not more than one dollar per ton, and ordering and directing the defendant to make reparation to said complainant for charges exacted by the defendant from the said complainant in excess of the said rate of one dollar per ton prior to July 1, 1907. The said proceeding has been diligently prosecuted, but is still pending and undetermined before the said commission.

XI. From July 1, 1907, to April 1, 1910, the complainant shipped 126,673 tons of anthracite coal over the lines of the defendant from the breakers at the mines and collieries in the Wyoming region to tidewater at Perth Amboy, New Jersey, and paid to the defendant for such services, but under protest, $1.55 per ton for 68,405.02 tons of the prepared sizes of such coal, $1.20 per ton for 24,428.06 tons of the buckwheat size of such coal, $1.10 per ton for 2,512.09 tons of the rice and barley sizes of such coal, all of such prices being a great deal in excess of $1 per ton, the reasonable charge therefor, and constituting a total overcharge of about $55,290.73.

XII. The complainant was unable to continue his shipments of anthracite coal except by complying with the demands of the defendant as to rates, and all his said payments were made under duress; and the complainant, in each and every case, made the said payments under protest, asserting that the rates charged were unreasonable and excessive, and notified the defendant that he reserved the right to recover back from it the amount of excess over the reasonable rate.

XII. Since August 1, 1901, the Coal Company has been, and still is selling anthracite coal at Perth Amboy at such prices that, after Since August 1, 1901, the Coal Company has been, and still is, selling authracite coal at Perth Amboy at such prices that, after deducting therefrom the price at which the coal was purchased at the breakers in the Wyoming coal region, and a reasonable and proper allowance for shipping and selling expenses, there remains, as revenue or receipts to be paid to the railroad company for the transportation of the coal, a less sum than that charged by the railroad company for the transportation of the said coal between the said Wyoming coal region and Perth Amboy.

XIV. The fact that the Coal Company, in nominally paying the tariff rates prescribed by the railroad company, has paid an excessive amount for the transportation of its coal, and has done so only at a loss, is evident from the annual reports of the said companies. The Coal Company would have been unable to transact its business in the manner above mentioned and to pay to the railroad company the said charges for the transportation of anthractic coal from the Wyoming coal region to Perth Amboy except for the fact that the railroad company has furnished to it the capital and means to make good the losses which have necessarily resulted in the payment to the railroad company by the Coal Company of the said transportation charges.

Wherefore the complainant respectfully requests the commission to make an order requiring the defendant to answer the charges herein; that after due investigation an order may be made commanding said defendant to case and desist from the aforesaid violations of the said act to regulate commerce, and that an order may be made fixing the rate for the transportation of anthracite coal by the defendant between the Wyoming coal region, Pennsylvania, and Perth Amboy, New Jersey, at not more than $1 per ton; and ordering and directing the defendant to make reparation to the complainant in the sum of $55,290.73, with interest, on the respective payments made by the complainant in excess of a reasonable rate from the date of such payments, respectively; and to award to the complainant such other relief as he may show himself entitled to receive.

The above-named defendant, saving and reserving its objections hereinafter stated to the jurisdiction and power of this commission to grant the relief prayed for in the petition, answers the petition in the above-entitled proceeding as follows:

I. Defendant alleges that this commission possesses no jurisdiction or power to make an order fixing the rate for transportation of anthracite coal, as prayed in the petition, and defendant alleges that section 15 of the act to regulate commerce, approved February 4, 1887, as amended by section 4 of the act of June 29, 1996, attempting to confer such jurisdiction and power upon this commission, is unconstitutional and void.

of the act to regulate commerce, approved February $4$, 1887, as amended by section 4 of the act of June 29, 1906, attempting to confer such invisidiction and power upon this commission, is unconstitutional and void.

H. Defendant denies knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the allegations contained in Paragraphs II, III. and IV of the petition.

H. Defendant admits the allegations contained in Paragraphs II, III. and IV of the petition. IV. The defendant admits that the only means of transporting coal from the anthractic region to New York Harbor is in the way and manner averred in Paragraph V of the petition. Defendant has not sufficient knowledge to answer as to whether the railroad companies named in the petition, other than this defendant, have owned and controlled, or do now own and control, large tracts of coal lands, or are and have been engaged in mining and dealing in anthractic coal. Defendant denies that it has owned or controlled, or now owns or controls large tracts of coal lands, and also denies that it has engaged, or is now engaged, directly or indirectly, in mining and dealing in anthractic coal. Defendant admits the ownership of shares of capital stock of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, a corporation of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and avers that such ownership is in accordance with the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the State in which defendant is incorporated. Defendant denies that it controls the eastern market for a very large proportion of the anthractic coal annually mined, and, so far as it has knowledge, the railroad companies mentioned in Paragraph V of the petition do not control said eastern market for a very large proportion of said anthractic coal.

V. Defendant denies the allegation contained in Paragraph VII of the petition that for several years prior to August 1, 1901, there was in operation between the defendant and the various shippers of anthractic coal, including the complainant, an arrangement by which it was provided that the rate t of the other allegations contained in Paragraph VIII of the petition.

VIII. Defendant denies the allegations contained in Paragraph IX of the petition.

IX. Defendant admits and states that on or about July 17, 1907, a complaint was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission in a proceeding entitled "Henry E. Meeker and Caroline H. Meeker, complainants, against Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, defendant," which proceeding is designated by the commission as Docket No. 1180. Defendant further admits that the petition in said action, Docket No. 1180. contains the following prayer:

"Wherefore the complainants respectfully request the commission to make an order fixing the rate for the transportation of anthracite coal by the defendant between the Wyoming coal region, in Pennsylvania, and Perth Amboy, New Jersey, at not more than one dollar per ton, and ordering and directing the defendant to make reparation to the complainants for the sum of eleven thousand one hundred twenty-one dollars and ninety-seven cents ($11,121,97), with interest thereon from August 1, 1901, and for the sum of two hundred and ten thousand three hundred fifty-one dollars ($210,351), with interest on the respective payments made by the complainants in excess of a reasonable rate from the dates of such payments, respectively, and to award to the complainants such other relief as they may show themselves entitled to receive."

Defendant further admits that said proceeding is still pending and undetermined before the Interstate Commerce Commission. Defendant denies knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to any of the allegations contained in Paragraph XI of the petition, except that it denies that one dollar per ton would be a reasonable or compensatory charge, and further denies that there has been or is any overcharge.

XI. Defendant denies the allegations contained in Paragraph XII of is any overcharge, XI. Defendant denies the allegations contained in Paragraph XII of e petition, except that it admits that complainant has notified the defendant that as to payments made subsequent to July 1, 1907, he reserved the right to recover such amounts as he might be entitled to. XII. Defendant denies each and every allegation contained in Paragraph XIII of the petition.

XIII. Defendant denies each and every allegation contained in Paragraph XIV of the petition.

XIV. Defendant alleges that as to all payments made by the complainant on account of the transportation of anthracite coal over lines of the defendant as alleged in the petition prior to the 20th day of April. 1908, the petition herein not having been filed with this commission within two years after the cause of action accrued, or within one year after the passage of the act of June 29, 1906, all claims for recovery of any damages based upon said payments are barred by virtue of the provisions of section 5 of the act of June 29, 1906, amending section 16 of the act to regulate commerce.

XV. Defendant further alleges that the act to regulate commerce, approved February 4, 1887, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, does not confer jurisdiction or power upon this commission to make or determine upon any reparation whatsoever to the complainant; and further alleges that any interpretation of said act, as amended, or any part thereof, purporting to give such jurisdiction or power to the commission would render said act, as amended, in so far as it relates to claims for reparation, unconstitutional and void.

Wherefore defendant prays that the petition be dismissed.

SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT OF THE COMMISSION.

MCCHORD, Commissioner:

The original report in No. 1180, 21 I. C. C., 129, disposed of all the questions at issue except the claim for reparation, and the case was held open for the purpose of securing further information regarding that feature. A further hearing has been held, and complainant has presented exhibits showing the total number of tons of each variety of coal shipped and the amount of reparation due on such shipments. These exhibits have been examined by defendant and admitted to be correct.

of coal shipped and the amount of reparation due on such shipments. These exhibits have been examined by defendant and admitted to be correct.

In our original report we found that the rates charged complainant for the transportation of anthractic coal from the Wyoming coal region in Pennsylvania to Perth Amboy, N. J., during the period from November 1, 1900, to August 1, 1901, were unjustly discriminatory in violation of section 2 of the act to the extent that they exceeded the rates contemporaneously charged the Lehigh Valley Coal Company under the contract then in effect between that company and defendant; and we further found that the rates in effect from August 1, 1901, to July 17, 1907, were unreasonable to the extent that they exceeded rates of $1.40 per gross ton on prepared sizes, $1.30 on pea, and $1.15 on buckwheat.

On basis of our conclusions in the former report, and upon consideration of the evidence adduced at the hearing upon the question of reparation, we now find that during the period from November 1, 1900, to August 1, 1901, complainant shipped from the Wyoming coal region of Pennsylvania to Perth Amboy, N. J., 55.257.75 tons of coal of prepared sizes, 57.75 ms of pea coal, 11.445.93 tons of buckwheat coals, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, 1907, filing of the complaint. The present proceeding, however, was instituted more than one year subsequent to the passage of that law, and is therefore subject to the two-year limitation of the statute. Complainant's prayer for reparation on shipments moving more than two years prior to the filing of the complaint in this case must be denied.

On basis of our decision in No. 1180, and upon consideration of the evidence submitted at the hearing of the present case regarding the amount of reparation due complainant, we now find that the rates exacted by defendant for the transportation of anthractic coal from the Wyoming coal region in Pennsylvania to Perth Amboy, N. J., during the period from April 13, 1908, to April 13, 1910, were unreasonable to the extent that they exceeded rates of $1.40 per gross ton on prepared sizes, $1.30 on pea, and $1.15 on buckwheat; that complainant shipped from said point of origin to said destination during the period above set forth, 46,772.02 tons of coal of prepared sizes, 26,972.06 tons of pea coal, and 22,004.00 tons of buckwheat coal; that complainant paid charges thereon amounting to $136.663.41 at the rates herein found to have been unreasonable, and was damaged to the extent of the difference between the amount which he did pay and $125.849.81, the amount which he would have paid at the rates above found reasonable; and that he is therefore entitled to an award of reparation in the sum of $10,813.60, with interest, amounting to $1,526.53, upon the individual charges comprising said sum from the dates of payment thereof to September 1, 1911, together with interest on said sum of $10,813.60 from the 1st day of September, 1911.

The exhibits showing details respecting the shipments upon which reparation is asked are too extensive to be set forth in this report. But inasmuch as the accuracy of the figures in said exhibits respecting the shipments made, freight charges paid, and reparation due is conceded of record by defendant, we deen it unnecessary to make detailed findings resp orders will be issued in accordance with the transformation of the Interstate Commerce Commission, held at its office in Washington, D. C., on the 7th day of May, A. D. 1912.

1. Upon shipments of anthracite coal made by complainants from the Wyoming region in Pennsylvania to Perth Amboy, N. REPORT OF THE COMMISSION.

McChord, Commissioner:

Henry E. Meeker and Caroline H. Meeker, copartners, trading as Meeker & Company, complainants in this proceeding, were, when the complaint was filed, engaged in the business of buying, shipping, and selling anthracite coal over the lines of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company from mines and collieries situated in the Wyoming coal region of Pennsylvania to tidewater at Perth Amboy, N. J., and thence to the New York market.

During the pendency of the proceeding Caroline H. Meeker died, and it has been continued to be prosecuted in the name of the surviving partner, Henry E. Meeker.

Complainants were not mine operators, but merely dealers on the New York market. The coal shipped by them to Perth Amboy was purchased from the Stevens colliery, which is situated near the city of Wilkes Barre, Pa., on the West Pittston branch of defendant's Wyoming division, I.5 miles from Coxton and 165 miles from Perth Amboy.

Practically all the anthracite coal deposits in the United States are in nine counties in the eastern portion of Pennsylvania in an area comprising about 496 square miles. The different coal fields are as follows: The northern, commonly called the Wyoming, from which the shipments involved in this proceeding were made; the eastern middle and western middle, which together are known as the Lehigh regions; and the southern, which also bears the name of Schuykill. All three regions are reached by the Lehigh Valley Railroad. The northern field is some 55 miles in length, has a maximum width of about 5 miles, and lies northwesterly of the Pocono Mountains in the valley of the Lackawanna and Susquehanna Rivers. From this valley the carriers find comparatively easy outlets to points north and west, along the rivers mentioned, but coal shipped to the east over defendant's line has to be carried over the mountains at a maximum elevation of 1,750 feet. The lowest portions of the valley are about 500 feet above the level of the sea.

The coal mines are usually located at points separated from car and is marketed for use either in thradees or foccondries, but the following:

Broken or grate, which goes through a mesh 4 inches square and over a mesh 2½ inches square.

Egg, which goes through a mesh 2¾ inches square and over a mesh 2 inches square.

Stove, which goes through a mesh 2½ inches square and over a mesh 1¾ inches square.

Chestnut, which goes through a mesh 1¾ inches square and over a mesh finches square.

Pea, which goes through a mesh three-fourths inch square and over a mesh one-half inch square.

Buckwheat No. 1, which goes through a mesh one-half inch square and over a mesh one-fourth inch square.

Buckwheat No. 2, or rice, which goes through a mesh one-fourth inch square and over a mesh one-fourth inch square and over a mesh one-eighth square.

Smaller sizes are known as buckwheat No. 3 and culm.

The sizes above pea are known as prepared sizes and are used principally for domestic purposes. The smaller sizes are used almost entirely for steam purposes.

The sizes above pea are known as prepared sizes and are used principally for steam purposes. The smaller sizes are used almost entirely for steam purposes.

Formerly the smaller sizes had no commercial value and were allowed to accumulate as waste product in banks at the mines. But changes made in the grates of furnaces have facilitated their use for steam purposes, and such use has been increasing rapidly during recent years. By means of "washeries" large quantities of the smaller sizes have been recovered from these waste or culm banks and sent to market to satisfy this increased demand. However, only comparatively small prices can be obtained for these smaller sizes.

The cars are loaded directly from the breakers by means of chutes. The loaded cars are then hauled to a convenient place of concentration along the main track designated a gathering or assembly point, where they are drilled into trains according to destination and with some reference to the sizes. The coal destined to tidewater points is hauled in trains to yards adjacent to the docks, where a more particular separation takes place; that is to say, coal of particular qualities and sizes is placed on separate tracks and afterwards transferred to the boats or storage bins in accordance with the requirements of different purchasers.

is placed on separate tracks and afterwards transferred to the boats or storage bins in accordance with the requirements of different purchasers.

For the year ended June 30, 1908, the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. carried altogether 11,206,774 gross tons of anthracite coal, upon which its gross revenue was $14,908,923,08, showing an average revenue of $1,2411 per gross ton, or $0.00737 per net ton per mile. During the same period the Lehigh Valley's entire freight revenue amounted to 23,643,001 gross tons, its gross revenue to $30,186,581,72, its average rate per gross ton to $1,277, and its average rate per net ton per mile on all traffic, including anthracite coal, to $0.00630. It will thus be seen that during 1908 anthracite coal constituted approximately 47 per cent of the defendant's freight tonnage and produced approximately 49 per cent of its freight revenue. Complainants shipped between August 1, 1901, and June 30, 1907, 499,901.47 gross tons of anthracite coal, upon which they paid total freight charges of $709,637.67, resulting in an average rate per net ton per mile (based on the average mileage from the Wyoming region to Perth Amboy of 170 miles) of $0.00745.

It appears that prior to 1900 various anthracite coal carrying railroads in Pennsylvania, in their endeavor to control the output and sale of anthracite coal, had formed other and distinct corporate organizations, usually known as "coal companies," but which through stock ownership were owned, officered, and controlled by the railroads which brought them into existence. Such was the relation that existed between the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company and the Lehigh Valley Coal Company. The function of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company was to acquire, hold, and operate vast tracts of anthracite coal lands and to make contracts with independent operators for their entire output. In connection with the purchase of coal from independent operators, there came into existence what are known as "percentage contracts." The Lehigh Valley Coal Company agreed to p percentages of the average market prices of the various grades of anthracite coal at tidewater. An accurate check was kept on the tidewater market prices, and monthly settlements were made. Under the contract which was in effect during the greater part of the year 1900 the agreement by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company was to pay the coal operator 60 per cent of the tidewater price on the highest grade of anthracite coal and lesser percentages on the lower grades. This contract was therefore called the "60-per-cent contract," due to the fact that that percentage figure applied on the highest grade of coal.

Although the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company was not nominally a party to any of the percentage contracts entered into by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, yet it made a practice of settling for the freight charges on coal purchased and shipped by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company at the differences between the amounts paid to the coal operators and the average market prices at tidewater. The result, therefore, was, taking the highest grade of coal as an illustration, that if the Lehigh Valley Coal Company paid the independent operator 60 per cent of the tidewater price the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company transported the coal for 40 per cent of said tidewater price. It will thus be seen that although the matter of freight rates was not mentioned in the contracts made by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company with the independent operators, yet the freight rates were directly dependent upon said contracts. It appears that if an independent coal operator lacked established business connections or capital, it was to his interest to enter into the percentage contract with the Lehigh Valley Coal Company. Meeker & Company, however, had been in business as sales agents for coal since 1880, and their facilities for selling were adequate. They therefore made a contract with the Stevens Coal Company for practically their entire output of coal. There were also a number of other shippers of anthracite coal over the lines of the Lehigh Va pany they were accorded the same rates as were accorded to that company.

It was the custom of all shippers, including the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, to pay the tariff rates on the various grades of anthracite to tidewater, and then by means of monthly settlements be given the benefit of the rates upon the percentage basis, which rates were known as "adjusted rates," and were usually considerably lower than the tariff rates; but which at certain periods, owing to advancing prices of anthracite coal, were higher than the tariff rates. The general purpose of the adjusted rates was, however, to give the shippers the benefit of rates lower than the tariff rates, and upon the whole they accomplished this result, and the evidence shows that they were impartially applied on all shipments during the greater part of the time that they were in effect.

of the adjusted rates was, however, to give the shippers the benefit of rates lower than the tariff rates, and upon the whole they accomplished this result, and the evidence shows that they were impartially applied on all shipments during the greater part of the time that they were in all properties of the time that they were in all properties of the time that they were in all properties of the time that they were in all properties of the time that the subject was not of easy solution, and that the negotiations dragged along for nine months, until August 1, 1901, at which time an agreement was reached whereby the price of the highest grade of coal at the breakers was to be 65 per cent of the tidewater market prices, instead of 60 per cent as formerly in the time an agreement was reached whereby the price of the highest grade of coal at the breakers was to be 65 per cent of the tidewater market prices, instead of 60 per cent as formerly in the same agoliations it seems to have been the understanding of all parties that whatever arrangement was finally reached would be made retroactive until November 1, 1900, the date of the beginning of the negotiations, and that the Lehigh Valley Raliroad Company would readjust its freight charges retroactively in conformity with the new scale of prices not only upon shipments made by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company took the position that the train rates had some particular to the price of the time of the scale counsel for the Lehigh Valley Raliroad Company took the position that the train rates had some particular to the price of the coal on this basis was paid by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company to the coal operators. Hence it was argued that the Lehigh Valley Raliroad Company, having charged its full tariff rates to all, and the coal company having paid the increased price, there had been no discrimination against Meeker & Company during said nine months. As the evidence in support of this argument was meager and unsatisfactory, a supplemental learning was had at values of the Coal Company, such amounts as may have been paid during the period November 1, 1900, to August 1, 1901, in excess of the tariff rates. There was not, however, at that time any attempt made to collect back from shippers refunds which may have been made to them from month to month when the "adjusted rates" were lower than the tariff rates. It thus appears that the attempted readjustment to basis of tarlif rates which the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company sought to make upon the adoption of the 65 per cent contract was only partial. Meeker & Company were offered refunds of the excess over tariff rates which had been paid in November and December, 1900, but refused to accept the same, stating in a letter of refusal that they would insist upon settlement of freight rates upon the basis of the newly adopted 65 per cent contract. This brings us to the contention of complainants that the payment of the increased retroactive prices to the coal producers by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company was in fact a payment by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company as in fact a payment by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company as in fact a payment by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company as in fact a payment by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company during the period from November 1, 1900, to August 1, 1901.

Investigation of the books of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company during the period from November 1, 1900, to August 1, 1901.

Investigation of the books of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, and one of the purposes of the supplemental hearing was to ascertain whether said cash advances included the sum which the Lehigh Valley Coal Company paid to the coal operators under the 65 per cent contract which was made retroactive for the nine months from November 1, 1900, to August 1, 1901.

On that hearing it developed that at the end of the year November 30, 1898, the Lehigh Valley Coal Company so wed the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company is 1, 1901, the excession of the coal company to the coal company on November 30, 1899, to November 30, 1890, the accounts receivable due f

"The suspension of mining during the period of the strike last year and the sale of the greater portion of coal in stock enabled the coal company to repay to the railroad company a large proportion of the amount advanced by the latter company for this purpose."

And counsel for the complainant was permitted to read into the record the following additional extract from the same report, viz:

"The uninterrupted continuance of operations during the fiscal year just closed (i. e., the year ending November 30, 1901) restored normal conditions, necessitating advances by the railroad company of a million dollars, which amount is more than represented by the increased tonnage and value of the coal in stock as compared with November 1st last."

nage and value of the coal in stock as compared with November 1st last."

The general auditor of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company testified that the amount which the Lehigh Valley Coal Company had to pay the coal operators under the 65 per cent contract, which on August 1, 1901, became effective retroactively to November 1, 1900, was $231,090.19. He further testified that the deficit of $491,576.05 shown in the operations of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company for the year ended November 30, 1901, would have been less by $231,090.19 had it not been for the payment by the coal company to the operators of the increased prices under the retroactive 65 per cent contract.

In view of the admissions upon the supplemental hearing the conclusion seems inevitable that the financial condition of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company was not such as to have enabled it to pay the $231,090.19 to the coal operators out of its own treasury, and that not only this amount but much larger sums were advanced by the railroad company to the coal company during the year 1901 for the purpose of enabling the latter to carry on its operations.

It is alleged in the petition that between November 1, 1900, and August 1, 1901, complainants, Meeker & Company, shipped 88,336 tons of coal from the Wyoming region to tidewater at Perth Amboy, N. J., a distance of about 165 miles, on which they paid a sum total as freight charges amounting to $120,989.18, whereas upon the 35 per cent basis which complainants contend was the necessary result of the 65 per cent contract entered into by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company on August 1, 1901, the freight charges should have been only $11,121.07.

From the facts disclosed it is apparent that the payment of the $231,090.19, which was ostensibly made by the Lehigh Valley Coal $11,121.97.

From the facts disclosed it is apparent that the payment of the $231,090.19, which was ostensibly made by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company to the coal operators from which it had purchased coal during the period from November 1, 1900, to August 1, 1901, was in fact made from funds advanced as cash by the Lehigh Valley Raliroad Company to the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, and was therefore the equivalent of a readjustment of the freight rates upon the basis of the 65 per cent contract on such coal as was purchased by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company and shipped to tidewater during the period from November 1, 1900, to August 1, 1901. We are of the opinion, and so hold, that complainants have sustained the allegation of unjust discrimination under the second section of the act. Reparation, with interest from August 1, 1901, will be awarded on this account.

Since August 1, 1901, complainants and other shippers have paid full tariff rates on coal from the Wyoming region to Perth Amboy, which rates are as follows:

Let gre	so for.
Prepared sizes	$1.55
Pea coal Buckwheat coal	1.40
Aug. 7, 1904, to Jan. 10, 1905	1. 25
All sizes below buckwheat	1. 10

It is alleged in the complaint that any charge in excess of $1 on all grades subsequent to August 1, 1901, is unreasonable, and reparation is asked by complainants upon the basis of the suggested rate of $1 upon all shipments made by them over the Lehigh Valley Rallroad during the period August 1, 1901, to July 1, 1907, the aggregate amount of reparation sought during said period being $210,351.

In a later complaint, filed April 13, 1910, No. 3235, styled Henry E. Meeker v. Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, complainant seeks reparation on the basis of a rate of $1 on all grades of coal shipped during the period July 1, 1997, to April 1, 1910, alleging a total overcharge during said period of $55,290.73.

As the subject matter of the two complaints is the same, in so far as the reasonableness of the rates is concerned, the disposition of the later case will perhaps be determined by the conclusions reached in this case.

as the reasonableness of the rates is concerned, the disposition of the later case will perhaps be determined by the conclusions reached in this case.

When complainants filed their complaint in July, 1907, they elected, as to the period from November 1, 1900, to August 1, 1901, to rely entirely upon a violation of the second section of the act, and therefore claimed reparation only to the extent of $11,121.97, on the ground of discrimination during said period in favor of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, claiming that the effect of the retroactive 65 per cent contract of August 1, 1901, was to readjust upon a lower basis the freight rates which had been paid by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company during said period.

When the case came on for hearing in March, 1909, complainants counsel announced orally before the commission, and not by way of amendment of their petition, that they desired to claim additional reparation in the sum of $41.644.82—the excess paid over $1 per ton during the period from November 1, 1900, to August 1, 1901.

Complainants' counsel stated in his brief filed with the commission but not by way of amendment to his petition, that by reason of the fact that the commission may not be convinced that $1 per ton is a reasonable rate on all grades of coal to tidewater he desired to put his claim for reparation in an alternative form, viz, that in event the commission should not approve the suggested rate of $1 per ton on all grades of coal, complainants are entitled to reparation in the amount of $156.144.92, the amount by which the freight charges which they have paid exceed what said charges would have been upon the basis of the average rate per ton per mile on all freight transported by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company. In support of this claim for reparation he sets forth an exhibit in his brief which covers the calendar years 1902 to 1907, inclusive. This claim therefore does not extend back to November 1, 1900, as do his other claims; but it includes the latter half of 1907, and therefore ext sears 1902 to 1907, inclusive. This claim therefore does not extend back to November 1, 1900, as do his other claims; but it includes the latter half of 1907, and therefore extends six months beyond the period evered by his larger claim for reparation on the basis of the proposed. Complainants insist that the average rate per ton per mile upon coal ought not to exceed the average rate per ton per mile upon all freight traffic and base their claim for reparation in large part upon the assumption that the higher rate per ton-mile on coal is proof of the unreasonableness of the rates in question. Defendant answers this contention by asserting that the initial service in connection with the tremator of the rates in question. Defendant answers this contention by asserting that the initial service in connection with the tremator of the rates in question. Defendant answers this contention by asserting operating expenses, as well as the permanent investment of a large amount of capital, which are not incurred in the transportation of other classes of freight. The transportation of coal from the mining regions of freight and the deal in the record and may be summarized as follows:

Coal from the Wyoning region around Wilkes-Burge, after being considered to the work of the property of the coal from the work of the coal from the work of the coal from the coal from the coal from the Lehigh region is collected from the various branches in the neighborhood of Halzelton, Lumber Yard, New Boston, and Mount Caruel, and carroid to Per the Wyoning coal. Coal from the Schuylkill region reaches the main line at Lizard Creek Junction from the recharging tregion reaches the main line at Lizard Creek Junction from the recharging tregion reaches the main line at Wyoning and New Jersey & Lehigh divisions. The Wyoning division extends from Sayre to Mauch Chunk and includes the territory known as the Wyoning coal region, or the Schuylkill region reaches the main line at Pern Haven Junction.

Coal is brought from the collectes to assembly ley, such as supplying additional motive power to push trains over grades, furnishing coal to Delaware, Susquehanna & Schuylkill locomotives, repairing cars at Perth Amboy, and similar incidentals.

The contract of January, 1894, remained in force until April, 1994, when it was replaced by another contract, substantially similar in all material respects and providing for the same compensation to the Lehigh Valley and which was to have remained in effect for a period of 15 years. It remained in effect, however, only until 1905, when the Coxe properties were purchased by the Lehigh Valley Railroad.

During the period prior to the absorption of the Delaware, Susquehanna & Schuylkill Railroad by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, L. C. Smith, manager of the Delaware, Susquehanna & Schuylkill Railroad Company, and J. H. Pennington, superintendent of motive power of said railroad, and J. Brinton White, vice president and treasurer of Coxe Brothers & Company, made certain calculations as to the cost to the Delaware, Susquehanna & Schuylkill Railroad of transporting anthracite coal to Perth Amboy, based on various elements of operating expense, including the aforementioned trackage charge of the Lehigh Valley Railroad.

J. C. Smith, manager of the Delaware, Susquehanna & Schuylkill Railroad and J. Brinton White, vice president and treasurer of said railroad, and J. Brinton White, vice president and treasurer of said railroad, and J. Brinton White, vice president and treasurer of the Delaware, Susquehanna & Schuylkill Railroad of transporting anthractic coal to Perth Amboy, based on various elements of operating coal from the Cheligh Valley Railroad Company for the Lehigh region and the coal for compainants has introduced the testimony of these three men relative to the cost of transporting coal from the Lehigh valley Railroad Company to make the same rates from the Wyoming region to Perth Amboy as from the Lehigh region and the Lehigh valley Railroad Company to make the same rates from the Wyoming region to Perth Amboy as from the Lehigh region and the Lehigh valley Railroad Company to make the same rates from the Wyoming region both in the Wooming region has the advances over the Lehigh region both in the Wooming region has the advances over the Lehigh valley Railroad Company, the Shipping charges of that company at Perth Railroad Company, the Shipping charges of that company at Perth Railroad Company, the Shipping charges of that company at Perth Lollain region while the Railroad Company, and frequent calculations as total as Schuylkill Railroad Company, made frequent calculations as total school of the Railroad Company, made frequent calculations as total school of the Railroad Company, made frequent calculations as total school of the Railroad Company, made frequent calculations as total school of the Railroad Company, made frequent calculations as total school of the Railroad Company, made frequent calculations as total school of the Railroad Company, and frequent calculations as total school of the Railroad Company, and frequent calculations as total school of the Railroad Company, and frequent calculations as total school of the Railroad Company, and the return of the Charley Railroad Company of the Railroad Company of

This offer was, however, not found satisfactory by Coxe Brothers & Company, and the transportation of their coal has therefore been almost entirely lost to the Reading Company."

The following extract from the annual report of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company to its stockholders for 1894 was also read into the record:

Railroad Company to its stockholders for 1894 was also read into the record:

"On January 31, 1894, a contract was entered into with the Delaware, Susquehanna & Schuylkill Railroad Company whereby that company was granted the privilege of running its own trains coal laden to the tidewaters of New York, thus assuring to this company for a term of 15 years from July 1, 1894, an important traffic, that of the Cross Creek Coal Company, formerly Coxe Brothers & Company, for which several outlets existed, and which had been in contention for some time previously. It also removed an incentive for the construction of new lines into the territory tributary to the Lehigh Valley system. Local coal received from the line of that company continues to be hauled in our trains as it was previously."

It appears that when the contract with the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company was entered into the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company tore up its 10-mile extension, which it had built to connect with the Delaware. Susquehanna & Schuylkill, because there was no longer any use for it.

For the purpose of showing the effect of the trackage contract of January, 1894, upon the movement of anthractic coal over the Lehigh Valley Railroad counsel for that company at the supplemental hearing put in evidence the following exhibit, viz:

It was also shown that the Central Railroad of New Jersey had a track into Drifton, a point located on the Delaware, Susquehanna & Schuylkiil Railroad, and that the Delaware, Susquehanna & Schuylkiil Railroad also had a connection with the Pennsylvania at Tomhicken. Defendant has endeavored to show the actual cost of transporting coal from the Wyoming district to the barges at Perth Amboy. Three civil engineers, William J. Wilgus, J. F. Stevens, and John F. Wallace, were engaged by defendant to investigate the transportation of coal from the anthracite region to tidewater for the purpose of ascertaining the cost thereof. They were assisted in their investigation by officers and employees of the road and by engineers in Mr. Wilgus's office. Mr. Wilgus prepared an estimate of the cost of carrying coal based upon theories and formulæ which were approved by the other engineers. His estimate is set forth in a voluminous exhibit known as "Defendant's Exhibit F.-3." The exhibit contains all the details from which the final estimate of cost is deduced. The recapitulation of Exhibit F.-3 is as follows:

There are many circumstances, however, connected with the preparation of this exhibit, which seriously impair its value as evidence on the question of cost.

Mr. Wilgus testified that the figures which he used in preparing said exhibit as to the value of the roadbed, track, and structures and value of equipment were based on an examination of the road and an examination of the equipment, and that he had attempted to estimate the cost of reproduction. This work he states was done by himself and assistants in his employ. The assistant in his employ, who undertook to make an examination of the road with a view to determining the cost of reproduction, was T. A. Lang, and Mr. Wilgus testified that his calculations are absolutely dependent upon the information furnished him by Lang.

The story of Mr. Lang's investigation as to cost of reproduction, as told by Lang himself, was as follows:

He left Perth Amboy at 1.20 p. m. on a passenger train for Easton, arriving there about 3.20 or 3.30 p. m. In going to Easton he stood on the rear platform of the train. After arriving at Easton he did nothing more that day, as it was Sunday. The following morning at 9 a. m. he left Easton on a pony engine, which had a coach on top of the boiler. On this engine he traveled at the rate of 15 or 20 miles an hour, stopping at various points. About 5.30 p. m. of the same day he arrived at Wilkes-Barre and stayed there all night, all the next day, and the next night. While there he made computations in the railroad company's office. On the following day he left Wilkes-Barre at 8.30 a. m. on a passenger train and arrived at Easton about 11 or 12 o'clock. He remained in Easton until that afternoon and then took a train for New York. While at Easton he devoted a "few minutes" to an examination of the Delaware bridge and the Easton steel viaduct. Based upon this examination, he furnished Mr. Wilgus the data which he required as to estimated cost of reproduction of the Lehigh Valley Railroad.

This examination by Lang was made in the latter part of April, he required as to estimated cost of reproduction of the Lehigh Valley Railroad.

This examination by Lang was made in the latter part of April, 1909. Mr. Wilgus accepted his estimates and gave his testimony on April 29, 1909. Mr. Lang, however, was not called as a witness until May 25, 1909. Evidently feeling that his first superficial examination of the road would become the subject of attack, he undertook early in May to make a more thorough examination of the road. On this second trip he consumed eight and one-half days going over the road on a hand car, and the results of his work on the second trip he terms his "check estimate." The cross-examination of Mr. Lang developed that his check estimate was also a very superficial piece of work. He testified that he "could see" the thickness of the ballast "very easily," and that he measured it "at one place" only; that it was from 18 to 20 inches in thickness. He also testified that he started out to count the number of switches and frogs, but did not carry it all the way through. He further says that there never had been any examination of the ties and ballast or going over the road in a hand car at the time that Mr. Wilgus made his estimate.

Based upon information thus furnished. Mr. Wilgus undertook to determine the cost of carrying a ton of coal from the Wyoming district to Perth Amboy, and Messrs. Wallace and Stevens were called as witnesses to confirm the reliability of his figures.

Mr. Wilgus testified that on the trip which he made over the Lehigh Valley Railroad he started from New York at 6 p. m. in an observation car with Messrs. Wallace and Stevens were carried as of the Lehigh Valley Railroad and some of its branches. It appears never to have been the intention that Messrs. Wilgus, Wallace, or Stevens should personally do any of the detail work incidental to the determination of the cost of carrying coal to Perth Amboy. All of that was to be done for them by subordinates, and they were then to testify whether they believed the work of these subordi mate of the cost.

Mr. Stevens testified in substance that he believed it possible for a competent engineer to get a correct approximate idea of the value of a railroad by riding over it, and that he has done considerable work in estimating values by traveling over railroads. He stated that he was not prepared to dispute Mr. Wilgus's figures, and that he would not guarantee them; and "that it would be worse than foolish for him to say that he had time to undertake to make a mile-by-mile estimate of the cost of reproducing the Lehigh Valley Railroad." The most that he had to say concerning Mr. Wilgus's estimate was that it was "probably conservative."

Mr. Wallace frankly admitted that his testimony given in corrobora-he had to say concerning Mr. Wilgus's estimate was that it was "probably conservative."

Mr. Wallace frankly admitted that his testimony given in corroboration of Mr. Wilgus's figures was a matter of purely personal judgment, based on his experience and observation. He testified that men in his line of business were continually drawing comparisons and making "estimated judgments," and that sometimes they were correct and sometimes wrong. He further stated that it was his custom to value railroad property very much as a farmer would value a horse.

The estimate of cost made by Mr. Wilgus is based on the fundamental assumption that the cost of carrying coal is equal to the average cost of carrying all traffic. If this proposition be sound, it follows that by far the greater part of tariffs covering the transportation of coal are improperly constructed, for the rates upon coal are generally much below the average rates.

Again, as a basis of apportioning expenses for which no actual division could be obtained, the engineers used the relation of passenger-train ton-mileage to freight-train ton-mileage, finding that of the total the former was 7.8 per cent and the latter 92.2 per cent. This arbitrary basis of apportionment seems to be unwarranted when we take into consideration the relation which exists between freight revenue and passenger-train revenue on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. Those revenues were as follows for the years shown:

	1901	1905	1908	1910
Total freight revenue	$19,829,363	$25,962,920	$30,186,582	$30,579,597
Passenger-train revenue	3,400,528	4,116,847	4,842,652	5,097,118

It thus appears that upon the basis of relative earnings at least 14 per cent of the value of the road could properly have been assigned to passenger traffic, whereas in the estimate made by Mr. Wilgus but 7.8 per cent has been so assigned.

Moreover, it will be noted that the estimate of cost shows that the average cost of carrying anthracite coal from the Wyoming region to Perth Amboy is $1.49. An exhibit filed by the Lehigh Valley shows that its average receipts per gross ton of anthracite coal to Perth Amboy for the 10 years ending June 30, 1908, were $1.46. It would therefore follow that all anthracite coal which has been hauled by the Lehigh Valley to tidewater has been carried at a loss of about 3 cents per ton. But it is shown by reports on file with the commission that the operations of the Lehigh Valley Raiiroad Company for a number of years past have been exceedingly profitable, and as anthracite coal has constituted almost half of its tonnage, it is fair to assume that it has made a profit upon the handling of that commodity.

There are other matters contained in the record which go to show that the cost of transporting coal as estimated by Mr. Wilgus is excessive.

cessive.

Henry B. Ely, who was formerly general eastern agent for Coxe Brothers & Company, testified that after the decision in the case of Coxe Brothers & Co. v. Lehigh Valley Railroad Company 4 I. C. C. Rep., 535. in 1891, and up to the 31st of January, 1894, the rates paid by Coxe Brothers & Company were the tariff rates of the Lehigh Valley, less a discount of 35 per cent. The tariff rates which were in effect during this period are contained in an exhibit filed by the Lehigh Valley, and deducting said discount therefrom, it appears that the rates actually charged Coxe Brothers & Company were as follows:

Defendant has also filed in evidence an exhibit, which shows the adjusted rates to Perth Amboy on the various grades of anthracite coal, by months, during the period from January, 1895, to October, 1990, inclusive, a period of five years and nine months, immediately preceding the discontinuance of adjustments upon the percentage basis. An average of the rates contained in said exhibit shows the following:

Defendant answers that the tidewater rate of the Pennsylvania Rall-road, cited by the complainants, is entirely inconsistent with the other anthracite rates charged by the Pennsylvania, whereas the Lehigh Valley tidewater rate is in line and consistent with its other anthracite rates. An exhibit in this connection shows that the Pennsylvania Rallroad Company's rate on prepared sizes to Harrisburg, a distance of 110 miles, is $1.50; to Philadelphia, a distance of 164 miles, $1.80; to Reading, a distance of 111 miles, $1.80; to Perth Amboy, a distance of 226 miles, $1.80; to South Amboy, when not for transshipment, $1.80. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company is a bituminous rather than an anthracite road.

The defendant also introduced evidence tending to show that the market for anthracite coal on the lines of the Pennsylvania Raliroad exhausts the supply originating on the road, and for this reason a 15-cent lateral was allowed on coal assembled on other roads and turned over to the Pennsylvania. On such shipments the Pennsylvania was relieved of the gathering cost; and in view of the high line rates on anthracite coal over the Pennsylvania, the arrangement was favorable to the raliroad. As has been noted, the Pennsylvania has since withdrawn the lateral allowance the sathering cost; and in view of the high line rates on anthracite colar the Fennsylvania, the arrangement was ravorable to the railroad as the Fennsylvania, the arrangement was ravorable to the railroad as the fennsylvania, the arrangement was ravorable to the railroad as the fennsylvania, the arrangement was ravorable to the railroad as the fennsylvania, the property of the colar and the tent of the defendant calls attention to the fact that bituminous rates are generally less than anthracite rates, due in the distinction of the colar with the carriage and shipment of bituminous and anthracite col which render the transportation of anthracite coll more expensive. About 95 per cent of the coal shipped from the bituminous regions is run of mine, and no such elaborate classification is necessary in the assembling regions as in the anthracite regions. Bituminous coal is not stored at tidewater, and the carriers are therefore relieved of the expense of building storage bins and of placing the coal in the bins and removing it therefrom. It is also claimed that the carriage of bituminous coal involves less empty car mileage, but upon that point the record is rather indefinite. At any rate, the conditions relating to the transportation of anthracite and bituminous coal have not been shown to be similar to such a degree that the existence of a lower rate on bituminous would warrant a conclusion that a higher rate on anthracite on a different road is unreasonable.

It is carnestly contended that any such comparison disregards the fact that the Lehigh Valley Railroad was built and is maintained primarily as a coal-carrying road, that as such it has the right to receive a return upon the coal transported sufficient to enable it to operate profitably, and coal carrying road, that as such it has the right to receive a return upon the coal transported sufficient to enable it to operate profitably, and that a successful search of a substring and carrying coal for a comparison improper and misleading.

In connection with it

As to the limited life of the anthracite railroads, counsel for defend-return."

As to the limited life of the anthracite railroads, counsel for defendant say in their brief:

"The evidence establishes the fact that when the railroad shall be deprived of the tonnage from the collieries along its lines and the incidental tonnage involved in and dependent upon the production of coal the traffic on the Mahanoy and Hazleton Division and the Blackwood Branch will for all intents and purposes be nil.

"As to the Wyoming Division, the investment in everything but the main line will have been destroyed and the continued existence of the road will depend upon whether or not the through traffic is sufficient to pay the operating expenses and the interest charges.

"There are many instances where, on account of closing up breakers for one reason or another, portions of the Lehigh Valley Railroad have already become useless."

They then cite the following instances of abandoned tracks in the Wyoming region, viz:

"Crescent breaker, 1 mile long, abandoned 1900.

"Babylon breaker, 1 miles.

"Lawrence track, partially abandoned, length not given.

"Phoenix track, 1 mile long.

"Heidelberg breaker, No. 2, tracks abandoned; length not given.

"Henry breaker, tracks 1\(\frac{1}{2}\) miles long; will soon be abandoned.

"Wyoming breaker, \(\frac{1}{2}\) mile long.

"Midvale track, \(\frac{1}{2}\) miles long:

"Mosier mine, track 1\(\frac{1}{2}\) miles long.

"Mosier mine, track 1\(\frac{1}{2}\) miles in miles, abandoned.

"Butler colliery, tracks taken up; length not given."

In addition, it is stated that many collieries have been abandoned which have not involved the taking up of tracks, the tracks remaining in partial use in connection with other breakers.

It will be noted that while the list of abandoned tracks in the Wyoming district has the appearance of being quite large, yet the sum total of such of the mileages as are specified shows that a fraction more than 8 miles has been abandoned.

Counsel also in their brief give quite a list of names of breakers which have been abandoned on the Mahanoy and Hazleton Division, but it is found that the total of abandoned mileage on this division is only 9.5 miles.

15 found that the total of abandoned mileage on this division is only 9.5 miles.

As to the kindred subject, namely, the exhaustion of anthracite coal supply, counsel in their brief thus state the result of the testimony of W. F. Dodge, an expert mining engineer, introduced as a witness on behalf of the defendant:

The total future shipments from the Wyoming Division, starting with the year 1999, will amount to 91,230,000 tons. The lives of the various collieries will vary from 5 to 50 years. The annual output is estimated for the first five years to be 19,395,000 tons, and will diminish gradually until, from the twenty-fifth to the thirtieth year, the annual output is estimated at only 7,055,000 tons, dwindling down in the period between the forty-fifth and fiftieth years to 500,000 tons per annum. At the end of 25 years, according to the testimony of Mr. Dodge, the output of the Wyoming region will be less than half what it is now, and at the end of 50 years will cease altogether.

On the other hand, the following more optimistic view of the situation appears from the Report of the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission, rendered to the President of the United States March 18, 1903, viz:

tion appears from the Report of the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission, rendered to the President of the United States March 18, 1903, viz:

"What is of some importance, however, in connection with the discussion of the past production is a consideration of what is to be expected in the future in the way of production and the probable duration of the anthracite coal supply. The original deposits of the anthracite coal field have been ascertained with a reasonable degree of accuracy.

"According to the estimates of the Pennsylvania geological survey, the amount of workable anthracite coal originally in the ground was 19,500,000,000 tons. The production to the close of 1901, as previously stated, amounted to 1,350,000,000 long tons, which would indicate that there remained still available a total of 18,150,000,000 tons. Unfortunately, however, for every ton of coal mined and marketed one and one-half tons, approximately, are either wasted or left in the ground as pillars for the protection of the workings, so that the actual yield of the beds is only about 40 per cent of the contents. Upon this basis the exhaustion to date has amounted to 3,375,000,000 tons. Deducting this from the original deposits, the amount of anthracite remaining in the ground at the close of 1901 is found to be, approximately, 16,125,000,000. Upon the basis of 40 per cent recovery, this would yield 6,450,000,000 long tons. The total production in 1901 was 60,242,560 long tons. If this rate of production were to continue steadily, the fields would become exhausted in just about one hundred years.

"Mr. William Griffith, in a series of articles contributed to the Bond."

"Mr. William Griffith, in a series of articles contributed to the Bond Record in 1896, considers that the estimates upon which the foregoing computations have been made were too liberal. His estimate of the amount of minable coal remaining at the close of 1895 was 5,073,786,750 computations have been made were too liberal. His estimate of the amount of minable coal remaining at the close of 1895 was 5,073,786,750 tons.

"In the six years from 1896 to 1901, inclusive, the production has been, approximately, 308,570,000 tons, which would leave still available for mining 4,765,216,750 tons. This supply, at the rate of production in 1901, would last a little less than 80 years. But as indicating how susceptible to error are human predictions, it is well to state that in his carefully prepared statement, published in 1896, Mr. (riffith assumes the limit of annual production would be reached in 1996 and would amount in that year to 60,000,000 tons.

"This amount of production was reached in 1901, in just half the time predicted by Mr. Griffith, and the production of January, 1903, as recently reported, shows that the anthracite mines are capable of producing at a rate of 72,000,000 tons annually in their present state of development. It is not to be supposed, however, that the annual rate of anthracite production will continue practically uniform until the mines are exhausted and then suddenly cease. Portions of the fields have already been worked out, others are rapidly approaching total exhaustion, while others at the present rate of production will, it is calculated, last from 700 to 800 years. If we can assume the annual production will have reached its maximum limit at between 60,000,000 and 75,000,000 tons, and that the production will then fall off gradually as it increased, we may expect anthracite mining to continue for a period of from 200 to 250 years." (Report of Anthracite Coal Strike Commission, pp. 21, 22.)

Defendant claims the right to earn enough out of its coal rates to provide for a return of the principal of the investment in that part of the railroad company devoted to the carriage of coal, when and as this principal becomes reduced and extinguished by exhaustion of the coal. We have noted the estimate of defendant's witnesses to the effect that shipments of anthracite ject by the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission to the effect that production may last for 250 years. Probably the truth lies somewhere between the two extremes. During the years 1903 to 1910, the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company under the rates in controversy succeeded in accumulating an unappropriated surplus of $27,210,780. If the company could accumulate this sum for every eight-year period during the next 30 or 40 years, it would have a surplus in the neighborhood of $125,090,000. It seems, therefore, that the present rates are more than sufficient to meet defendant's idea of an annual income sufficient to the carriage of anthracite coal loses its earning capacity through the exhaustion of that commodity. This matter, however, is too speculative to be of much value in determining the reasonableness of present rates. By the time anthracite coal is exhausted other traffic may have become so dense that the present value of the road will not be impaired. It requires no extended argument to sustain the proposition that the maintenance of an unreasonably high rate operates to the advantage of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company as a dealer in coal. The record shows that the only line of demarcation between the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company and the Lehigh Valley Coal Company is one of bookkeeping. Assuming for purposes of illustration that the cost of mining anthracite coal is $2 per ton and the cost of coal at tidewater would be $3 per ton; and if the published rate were $1 the independent operator and the railroad coal company would be on a fair competitive basis so far as the cost of mining and transportation are concerned. But as between the railroad company and its coal company it matters not whether the profit comes from mining or transporting the coal. So, therefore, if, instead of the $1 rate above mentioned, the railroad company were to establish a rate of $1.50 per ton, the railroad and its coal company. It is obvious that such an advantage would enable the railroad company and its each of the salled compan shipments to Perth Amboy decreased from 147,811 tons for 1901 to 40,562 tons for 1908.

Coming now to the question of the reasonableness of the rates, counsel for defendants asserts that the rates on coal must be sufficient to produce four results, viz: (1) An income sufficient to make up for past deficiencies in current return on investment. (2) A reasonable current annual return upon the investment in the railroad and transportation adjuncts. (3) An amount sufficient to provide reasonably for keeping the property up to constantly modern standards—i. e., such improvements as are necessary for public convenience and safety and to enable the railroad to get business in competition with other roads. (4) An amount sufficient to provide for a return of the principal of the investment, when and as this principal becomes reduced and extinguished by the exhaustion of coal freight.

Under the first proposition defendant argues that the present rates should be sufficiently high to enable it now to earn the amount by which it has fallen short of paying a 6 per cent annual dividend in the past, or at least as far back as 1894. It shows that a dividend rate of 6 per cent applied to its common stock of $40,441,100 for the period from November 30, 1894, to June 30, 1908, would amount to $35,091, 276; that during this period the dividends paid amounted to $7,260,264; and argues that upon a 6 per cent basis the common-stock shareholders suffered a deficiency in dividends during this 14½-year period of $27,860,264; and argues that upon a 6 per cent basis the common-stock shareholders suffered a deficiency in dividends during this 14½-year period of $27,881,112. In the Wilgus estimate above mentioned 10 cents per ton is added to the assumed cost of carrying coal to Perth Amboy for the purpose of "making good the deficit of over $20,000,000 in dividends" for past years.

Assuming, without conceding, that the present producers and consumers of anthracite coal must bear the burden of the misfortunes of for past years.

Assuming, without conceding, that the present producers and consumers of anthracite coal must bear the burden of the misfortunes or mismanagement of a previous generation, it is worth while to inquire whether this claim does not amount for the most part to a declaration, not that the shareholder is entitled to a fair dividend, but rather to an assertion that he may invest his dividends in improvement of the property and have it in cash also.

Certain aspects of the financial condition of the Lebigh Valley for the years 1901 to 1910, inclusive, are set forth in the following table:
